Commemorative Observances: A Chronological List

Summary

Historically, national commemorative observances were often recommended by Congress through the legislative process. This practice was for the most part discontinued by the House of Representatives in January 1995, although the Senate continues to issue sense of the Senate resolutions recommending the establishment of commemoratives. It has now become standard practice for special observances to be designated by a proclamation issued by the President. A noteworthy departure from current congressional policy is P.L. 107-89, which designates September 11 as Patriot Day and allows the President to issue an annual proclamation calling on the American people to commemorate Patriot Day. This report is a chronological list of proclamations for the years 2004 through early 2006, indicating the proclamation number and its Federal Register citation. This report will be updated periodically during the year. This report was previously authored by JoAnne O'Bryant.

Commemorative Observances: A Chronological List

Introduction

Historically, national commemorative observances were often recommended by Congress through the legislative process. This practice was for the most part discontinued by the House of Representatives in January 1995, although the Senate continues to issue sense of the Senate resolutions recommending the establishment of commemoratives.

The President has always had the authority to declare by proclamation any commemorative event or national observance. It has now become standard practice for special observances to be designated by a proclamation issued by the President. A recent noteworthy departure from current congressional policy is P.L. 107-89, which designates September 11 as Patriot Day and allows the President to issue an annual proclamation calling upon the American people to commemorate Patriot Day. Generally these observances are limited to a one-time celebration only, on a designated day, week, or month of a particular year.

The following is a chronological list of these proclamations for the years 2004 through early 2006, indicating the proclamation number and its Federal Register (FR) citation.

Except for the perpetual commemoratives indicated in italics below, with their citations to the U.S. Code (U.S.C.), these proclamations (Proc.) must be reissued each year if they are to have continued effect. Most are issued only shortly before the observance of the event. For this reason, we are unable to provide a complete advance calendar indicating these days. The listing continues through mid 2006 to show proclamations issued by the President in the current year. This report will be updated as a series of official proclamation notices are made available.

Please note that some proclamations have both Federal Register and United States Code citations while others do not. A proclamation that has a U.S.C. citation has continuing authority so a proclamation may be issued each year. For example National Pearl Harbor Remembrance Day has been proclaimed each year since 1994.
