When their group arrived at the bar, they were seated at a long table near the band. Governor Daniel was a Baptist and a teetotaler, and he never drank, but he liked Cokes. And every once in awhile he would say well, Jake, I will take a Coke.

Jake said he would go up to the bartender and ask the bartender to go ahead and put a shot of bourbon in it. He always asked for Cokes.

Anyway, the funny part of the story is that everything went fine for a few minutes and the band having played some lively tunes from Mexico suddenly stopped and they had a drum roll. The governor looked around and looked at Jake and the band leader then announced on the mike, we are proud to have with us tonight the governor of the State of Texas, and another drum roll, the Honorable Price Daniel. Amid the fanfare, the light swept the bar and came to rest on their table, and nobody moved.

Obviously, the governor did not want to stand up and be recognized in that bar in Mexico. Again, the announcer announced, damas y caballeros, another drum roll and still no movement from Governor Daniel.

With the spotlight still on us the third time, the announcer said, please, will the governor of Texas stand and be recognized. Finally, the governor's wife, Jean, leaned over and whispered, Jake, for goodness' sakes, will you do it?

The governor said, Jake, I bet you always wanted to be governor. Now here is your chance.

So Jake Pickle stood up in that bar in Juarez and was recognized as the governor of Texas, and the band struck up ''The Eyes of Texas.''

That is just one of Jake's stories. Obviously, we miss him from Texas and all over Congress. He was a great Member.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 118, designating the J.J. "Jake" Pickle Federal Building in Austin, Texas. This is a fitting tribute to a unique Texan and former Member of Congress.

Congressman Pickle is a legend even by Texas standards. He put himself through college during the Depression, worked for President Roosevelt's National Youth Administration, served in the Pacific during World War II, started a radio station in Central Texas, and represented Texas' Tenth Congressional District from 1963 to 1995. During his long and distinguished career in the Congress, Jake Pickle prided himself as a protector of small businesses and a specialist in the Social Security system.

Over the years, Congressman Pickle managed to involve himself in every major issue that confronted the Ways and Means Committee, from Social Security to trade to the complete revision of the Tax Code.

During the 98th Congress, Jake Pickle chaired the Ways and Means Social Security Subcommittee. As chairman of that subcommittee, he was convinced that the way to save the Social Security system from a long-term collapse was to raise the retirement age. Democratic leaders, including Thomas P. O'Neill and Claude Pepper, wanted to solve long-term financing problems with eventual increases in the payroll tax. Few expected Pickle would prevail on the floor, but he did.

Through months of argument over what to do about Social Security, Pickle and Pepper were the spokesmen for two diametrically opposite points of view. During floor consideration, the House chose Jake Pickle's approach, which later became law. This victory represents the culmination of a long personal struggle for Jake Pickle to put the Social Security system on a sound personal footing.

Most everyone knows Jake Pickle as a political protege of President Lyndon B. Johnson. Congressman Pickle was a campaign manager and a Congressional aide to Johnson before World War II and an advisor in Johnson's 1948 Senate campaign. Jake always speak reverently about President Johnson and his commitment and dedication is a testament to their friendship.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have served with Congressman Jake Pickle and will be forever grateful for his friendship and his leadership. This designation is only a small token of our appreciation to a dedicated public servant.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS).

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) for graciously giving me this moment to speak.

Mr. Speaker, I love Jake Pickle. He is a man of courage, a man of compassion, and someone who loves life, every day of it.

He was a man of compassion as a freshman Member of this House when, in 1965, as a young southern representative he voted in favor of the Civil Rights Act, an act that made major changes in allowing equal opportunity for American citizens of all colors.

He was a man of compassion in everything he did, especially in his leadership and saving the Social Security system back in the 1980s. We could all talk about the many accomplishments of Jake Pickle but, frankly, the reason I love Jake Pickle, in addition to respecting him for his legislative accomplishments, is because he personifies the biblical passage of, this is the day the Lord hath made. Let us rejoice and be glad in it.

Jake Pickle brought light into any room, into anyplace where he came. He loves life and we love him. We miss Mr. Pickle of Texas, our dear friend.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to our colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. I appreciate my colleague bringing this up and naming the Federal Building after J.J. Jake Pickle, a very appropriate honor for a man serving on the Committee on Ways and Means, and I think that all of his colleagues on both sides of the aisle would agree with me when I say that there have been very few Members that have ever taken their job more diligently, more seriously, in looking at the questions from social security reform to any tax bill that has ever come before us.

He also was a man of responsibility. One thing that I noted, and we try to emulate but cannot come close to Jake, when he says he is going to be at a dinner party for the Texas delegation or any other place, he is always there. Very seldom did he ever miss. When he said he was coming, he came.

I think one appropriate remark that I have not heard, maybe it has been mentioned, but to me, this building could be better named if it were named the J.J. Jake and Beryl Pickle Building, because so many times those of us recognize our spouses do not nearly get the credit that they deserve when we get honored in ways in which we honor Jake today.

I think of the story that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GENE GREEN) was telling, and there was no better storyteller to ever occupy a seat in this House. He was great at it.

But all of the times that Beryl listened to those stories, which were repeated not one, ten, one hundred, but for the thousandth time, and still laugh when her husband told that joke, I think Beryl ought to be somewhere in the name of this building. I know she will be in spirit by those of us who knew and loved her as well as Jake Pickle.

Jake was born in my district. Therefore, I have always had to take somewhat responsibility for the actions that Jake has taken, and I have done it proudly.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). The gentlewoman from Texas

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 2 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. SHOWS) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) for yielding time to me, and for guiding us through a very welcomed event this evening, and that is to properly give recognition to J.J. Jake Pickle, and of course, his wife, Beryl. They are Texas heroes, both of them, and today I hope with the naming of this Federal Building that it will be forever grounded in our memories that they are American heroes as well, both.

I have great pleasure in acknowledging the leadership of Jake Pickle. I was talking to my colleague, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CHARLIE STENHOLM), and I was trying to claim the fact that I had served with Jake Pickle, I guess because I viewed him as such an historic but as well such an institutional person with such great leadership.

I was trying to claim having been here with him, but he retired in 1994 and I came to this Congress in 1995. But we can be assured that Jake Pickle's legacy, his smile, his genuineness, his gentlemanliness was here on the premises. In fact, I think the reason why I thought I served with him is because right after he retired from this Congress, he spent a lot of time with us. I enjoyed lunching with him and, again, hearing some of the stories.

But Jake Pickle, the man, is someone that I admire, in particular because he served 31 years and he served with a commitment to this country. He was someone, as the chair of the powerful Subcommittee on Oversight of the Committee on Ways and Means, that cared about a good Medicare system, a good health care system, and worked hard to guarantee all Americans receive basic health care. As chairman of the Subcommittee on Social Security, his work is credited with extending the life of the social security system.

I remember him telling me of his friendship with the Honorable Barbara Jordan, one of the predecessors of this particular congressional district, the Eighteenth Congressional District. I guess I remember him most by looking at a picture of the signing of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, and saw a number of Texans who were Congresspersons at that time gather in the room with President Lyndon Baines Johnson to sign that historic act.

But I am most mindful of the time that that occurred and the courage that was taken. I heard my colleague from Texas make a statement about his father, Henry Gonzalez. But I am reminded about the courage of Jake Pickle to sign the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and to give opportunities to those who did not have them. He was courageous in that, he was courageous in his service. Mr. Speaker, he is truly a great Texan and truly a great American. This building will truly be a very historic building by being named after J.J. Jake Pickle, H.R. 118. I ask my colleagues for support.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 118. This bill designates a federal building in Austin, Texas as the "J.J. Jake Pickle Federal Building." It is fitting, Mr. Speaker, that the building in which he worked for 28 of his 31 years in Congress, bear his name.

It is an appropriate memorial to a man who dedicated himself to his community and to his constituents. The residents of Austin remember Representative Pickle for his tireless dedication to the community he loved. When asked to describe his career as a Member of Congress, all sight his effective and efficient constituent service. I know that Representative Pickle gave selflessly of his time and energy. His 31-year career stands as a memorial to current and future Members, on how to conduct constituent relations.

During his 31-year tenure Congressmen Pickle took on several legislative challenges. In spite of the political risk he voted in favor of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. This vote was to be the first in the line of a career dedicated to ensuring civil rights and equal opportunity for both minorities and women.

As chair of the powerful Ways and Means Oversight Subcommittee, Congressmen Pickle recognized the value of the Medicare system. He worked to guarantee that all Americans would receive basic health care. As Chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee his work is credited with extending the life of the Social Security system.

Mr. Speaker, it is clear from his 31-year career in Congress, his selfless dedication to his country and to the State of Texas, that the federal building in Austin should bear his name. J.J. "Jake" Pickle has set a proper example for this body to emulate and as testimony to that example I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 118, legislation that would name the federal building in Austin, Texas in honor of former Representative Jake Pickle.

The building is located at 300 East 8th Street in Austin. It houses district offices for Congressman Pickle's successor, Representative LLOYD DOGGETT, and Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON, as well as local offices for the IRS, FBI and other federal agencies.

It is all together appropriate that these offices be named for Representative Pickle since they are where he worked for 28 of his 31 years in Congress.

For those of us fortunate enough to know him, former Representative Pickle is a very skilled storyteller and a man steeped in Texas and U.S. history. One can not speak with him for any amount time without departing having heard one of his "yarns" about the legislative process or his work with President Johnson.

James Jarrell "Jake" Pickle was born in 1913 in Big Spring, a small town in the northwest part of Texas represented today by Congressman CHARLIE STENHOLM. He is a product of the Big Spring public schools and the University of Texas at Austin, where he received his BA in 1938.

After working as Area Director for President Roosevelt's National Youth Administration, Jake served 3½ years in the Navy in the Pacific during World War II. Upon returning to Austin, he entered the radio and public relations business, later serving as director of the Texas State Democratic Executive Committee and as an appointee to the Texas Employment Commission. He resigned from the TEC to run for Congress in a special election called after the resignation of Homer Thornberry. He began his Congressional career in December, 1963.

Congressman Pickle wasted little time in demonstrating what sort of Member of Congress he intended to be. Despite well-founded fears that his actions might end his fledgling political career, Representative Pickle joined only five other Southern members who voted in favor of Lyndon Johnson's Civil Rights Act in 1964. Looking back on it, Representative Pickle says that is the one vote of which he is most proud and recalls with great fondness a personal phone call at 2:00 a.m. after the vote from President Johnson to thank him. Jake followed this vote a few months later with a vote in support of the Voting Rights Act and then spent the next 30 years working on behalf of civil rights and equal opportunity for minorities and women.

This was not the first or last time Representative Pickle faced the challenge of being the President's Congressman. He was a close friend and ally of both President Johnson and Lady Bird Johnson. His friendship with the former First Lady remains strong to this day.

Naming this federal building in Jake's honor is particularly appropriate because it houses his friend LBJ's apartment and office suite, preserved in all its early 1970's splendor. Jake's stories of working with Johnson on the Great Society, often in these rooms, are the stuff of Texas political legend. Jake stands as one of the few remaining personal historians of one of the greatest American Presidents.

Representative Pickle also distinguished himself as Chairman of the Ways and Means Oversight Subcommittee. From that post, Jake worked tirelessly to rid the Medicare system of waste and fraud, constantly laboring on behalf of those who rely on the Medicare system for their basic health care.

In addition, former Congressman Pickle served as Chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee in the 98th Congress and is widely credited with shepherding through Congress a legislative package that has extended the life of the Social Security system by decades. His work on behalf of the poor and the elderly complements perfectly his long-time commitment to civil rights.

Based on his long service to Texas and the nation, I believe H.R. 118 is a fitting tribute to Representative Pickle's legacy. I urge all Members to support its passage.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, it was an honor to preside over the House during the consideration of a bill naming a Federal building in Austin, TX, after Congressman J.J. (Jake) Pickle.

Congressman Pickle served in the House for more than 31 years. For 30 of those years he served with either my father or me.

In their service on the Ways and Means Committee, he and my father became the closest of friends.

I remember being told that on the plane returning from my father's funeral in Louisville, Congressman Pickle led the plane's passengers in singing some old-time hymns.

In fact Congressman Pickle was famous within the Congress for the stories he used to tell about the hymns sung at the Thursday morning House prayer breakfasts. Some people wondered if the stories were totally accurate or were, at least in part, made up by Congressman Pickle as he went along.

At any rate, Congressman Jake Pickle was a great and dedicated Member of the House. His love for others and for this institution shown through in everything he did.

I join my colleagues in supporting this bill, a very fitting tribute to a very kind man and great American, Congressman Jake Pickle.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I have no other speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 118.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

JOSÉ V. TOLEDO UNITED STATES POST OFFICE AND COURTHOUSE

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 560) to designate the Federal building located at 300 Recinto Sur Street in Old San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''José V. Toledo United States Post Office and Courthouse,'' as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 560

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION.

The Federal building and United States courthouse located at the intersection of Comercio and San Justo Streets, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, shall be known and designated as the ''José V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse''.

SEC. 2. REFERENCES.

Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the Federal building and United States courthouse referred to in section 1 shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''José V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) and the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. SHOWS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS).

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 560, as amended, designates the Federal Building and United States Courthouse in Old San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''José V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse.''

José Toledo was born in Arecibo, Puerto Rico. He received a Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Florida and a Juris Doctor in law from the University of Puerto Rico Law School. Judge Toledo served on the Federal bench in the United States District Court, District of Puerto Rico, from December 1, 1970 until February 1980, when he died in office at the age of 49. At the time of his death, Judge Toledo was the chief judge for the Puerto Rico District.

Prior to his appointment to the Federal bench, Judge Toledo served as an Assistant United States Attorney, as a lawyer in local government in Puerto Rico, as a partner in private law practice, and served in the United States Army as a member of the Judge Advocate Corps. This legislation is a fitting tribute to honor the career and judicial contributions of the late Judge José V. Toledo.

Mr. Speaker, I support this bill, and I encourage my colleagues to support it as well.

Mr. Speaker I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 560 is a bill to name the Federal facility in Old San Juan as the ''José V. Toledo United States Post Office and Courthouse.'' The gentleman from Puerto Rico (Mr. ROMERO-BARCELÓ) introduced this bill in February of 1999 and is to be commended for his diligence in ensuring its passage.

Judge Toledo served the District of Puerto Rico with great distinction from 1970 to February 1980, when he died an untimely death at the age of 49 years.

Integrity, loyalty, patience, fairness, keen intellect and perseverance are words used by Judge Toledo's friends and colleagues to describe him. Judge Toledo was born in Puerto Rico in 1931. He received his Bachelor's Degree from the University of Florida and his law degree from the University of Puerto Rico Law School.

In addition to private practice, Judge Toledo served as an Assistant United States Attorney and in the local government of Puerto Rico. Judge Toledo also served in the U.S. Army as a member of the Judge Advocate Corps.

The building in old San Juan to bear Judge Toledo's name is an imposing structure, signifying solidarity and safety, and has guarded the entrance to Old San Juan for more than 300 years. It is fitting and proper this building then bear the name of Judge José V. Toledo, and I am proud and pleased to support this legislation.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Puerto Rico (Mr. ROMERO-BARCELÓ), the sponsor of H.R. 560.

Mr. ROMERO-BARCELÓ. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS), and the ranking member, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. WISE), as well as the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for pushing this bill through the committee and getting it on the floor for consideration today, and I would like to commend the clerk for his excellent Spanish accent. Very few people here pronounce those words the same.

Mr. Speaker, in recognition of the outstanding service of the late Judge José V. Toledo, today I am asking all of my colleagues to support this bill to designate the United States Post Office and the Courthouse in Old San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''José V. Toledo United States Post Office and Courthouse.'' Judge Toledo served on the United States District Court for the District of Puerto Rico from December of 1970 to February 1980, when he died at the early age of 49. He rose to the position of Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court, and he served with great distinction in that capacity until the moment of his untimely death.

Pepe Toledo, as he was known to his family and friends, was regarded as a man of paramount integrity and a loyal public servant. He was born on August 14, 1931, in Arecibo, Puerto Rico, and he received his Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Florida in 1952. In 1956, he received his Juris Doctor from the University of Puerto Rico Law School, where I had the good fortune and the privilege of studying and graduating with him. During our law school years we became very close friends and studied together for our bar exams, and that close friendship lasted until his premature death.

Prior to his appointment to the Federal bench, Judge Toledo served as the Assistant United States Attorney. He was a partner in several law firms, one of which he and I and another fellow started, and an attorney within the local government of Puerto Rico. He also served in the U.S. Army as a member of the Judge Advocate General Corps. Judge Toledo was also a distinguished leader of the Exchange Clubs of Puerto Rico. He demonstrated his value to the organization through his involvement and commitment at both the local and the national levels.

As expressed by the Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court in Puerto Rico, the Honorable Carmen Consuelo Cerezo, on behalf of the judges of the Federal Court of Puerto Rico, Judge José V. Toledo earned the respect of the public, the bar and the bench for his patience, impartiality, fairness and decorum in the adjudication of the controversies brought before him. Judge Toledo set high standards for himself, yet he had a refreshing humility and capacity to understand the problems of others. His hallmarks were learning and wisdom, tempered by a tremendous feeling for people.

The U.S. Post Office and Courthouse in Old San Juan, built in 1914, stands above the foundations of the ancient city wall that has guarded the harbor entrance to the city for more than 300 years. As a matter of fact, San Juan is the oldest city under the American flag.

Built only 15 years after Puerto Rico became a U.S. territory, it is listed in the National Register with the U.S. Department of Interior's National Park Service. The site represents the eclecticism of American architecture of the late 19th and early 20th century as it integrates American-Spanish Revival architecture, Sullivanesque and Beaux Arts Neoclassical Revival styles. It has a 6-story annex which was built in 1940. It also demonstrates influences from the Vienna School and the Avant Garde movement. The Correo, as it has been known to generations of Puerto Ricans, is an imposing and beautiful structure which has stood magnificently within the old city walls as a symbol of greatness in times past with the importance of the U.S. Postal Service in Puerto Rico.

It is fitting that this structure so dear to us should carry the name of Judge José V. Toledo. The judges of the United States District Court, District of Puerto Rico, voted unanimously to recommend the naming of the Federal Courthouse in Old San Juan, Puerto Rico, in honor of José V. Toledo, referred to the late judge as a learned jurist, outstanding citizen and an excellent human being.

Mr. Speaker, I am immensely proud to honor his memory and with this bill to designate the U.S. Post Office and Courthouse in Old San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''José V. Toledo United States Post Office and Courthouse.''

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 560, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: ''A bill to designate the Federal building and United States courthouse located at the intersection of Comercio and San Justo Streets, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the 'José V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse'.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GARZA-VELA UNITED STATES COURTHOUSE

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 686) to designate a United States courthouse in Brownsville, Texas, as the ''Garza-Vela United States Courthouse''.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 686

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION.

The United States courthouse located at the corner of Seventh Street and East Jackson Street in Brownsville, Texas, shall be designated and known as the ''Garza-Vela United States Courthouse''.

SEC. 2. REFERENCES.

Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the United States courthouse referred to in section 1 shall be deemed to be a reference to the ''Garza-Vela United States Courthouse''.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) and the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. SHOWS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS).

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 686 designates the United States Courthouse in Brownsville, Texas, as the Garza-Vela United States Courthouse.

Reynaldo Garza and Filemon Vela are two distinguished judges who sit on the Federal bench in Brownsville, Texas.

Judge Garza began his distinguished career in public service with the Air Force during World War II. Upon his return from the war, Judge Garza returned to private practice until 1961, when President Kennedy appointed him to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas.

In 1974 he became the Chief Judge for the Southern District, until he was appointed by President Carter to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. In April of 1997 Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist appointed him Chief Judge of the Temporary Emergency Court of Appeals of the United States.

Judge Vela, whose career in public service is equally distinguished, served in the United States Army, was the Commissioner for the city of Brownsville, and Judge on the 107th Judicial District, Cameron-Willacy County, Texas.

Judge Vela was a member of the Judicial Conference Committee on the Administration of the Magistrate Judges System until 1991, a member of the Judges Advisory Committee to the United States Sentencing Commission, and active in a number of local and State associations associated with civic and community activities.

This is a fitting way to honor two great judges who have dedicated their lives to serving their community and their country. I encourage my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join with the gentleman from Brownsville, Texas (Mr. ORTIZ) in supporting H.R. 686, a bill to name the courthouse in Brownsville, Texas, as the Garza-Vela United States Courthouse.

Mr. Speaker, this bill honors the life and works of two extraordinary Mexican-Americans. Judge Reynaldo Garza was born in Brownsville in 1915. He graduated from Brownsville Elementary School as well as Brownsville High School. After graduating from Brownsville Junior College, he attended the University of Texas, where he received a combined degree of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Law.

Judge Garza served his country during World War II in the Air Force. After the war he returned to Brownsville to practice law. In 1961 President Kennedy appointed Judge Garza to the District Court for the Southern District of Texas. President Carter appointed him to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in 1979.

In addition to his judicial duties, Judge Garza has long been interested in educational issues. He served former Governors John Connelly and Governor Mark White on commissions to improve the quality of education in Texas. Judge Garza recognized the importance of education in judicial proceedings and his concern for the uneducated man at the mercy of the unscrupulous people.

Judge Garza is very active in his church, and has served the Knights of Columbus in the Brownsville area for many years. Pope Pious XII twice decorated Judge Garza for his work on behalf of Catholic Charities. In 1989, Judge Garza was honored by the University of Texas with the Distinguished Alumnus Award.

His record of public service includes work with the Rotary Club, the Latin American Relations Committee of Brownsville, trustees at his law school, the Advisory Council for the Boy Scouts, and he was elected as City Commissioner of the city of Brownsville.

It is fitting and proper to honor Judge Garza's outstanding, rich life, his commitment to excellence, and his numerous public contributions.

Judge Filemon Vela is also a native of Texas and a veteran of the United States Army. He attended Texas Southmost College and the University of Texas. His law degree is from St. Mary's School of Law in San Antonio.

Judge Vela served as Commissioner of the city of Brownsville. He was an active member of the Judges' Advisory Committee to the U.S. Sentencing Commission. Judge Vela is a former law instructor and an attorney for the Cameron County Child Welfare Department.

His civic activities include being the charter president for the Esperanza Home for Boys and cosponsor of the Spanish radio program Enrich Your Life, Complete Your Studies.

Judge Vela's other civic activities include membership on the Independent School District Task Force and membership in the General Assembly of the Texas Catholic Conference. He is also an active member of the Lions Club. Judge Vela was nominated by President Carter for the Federal bench, and was confirmed by the United States Senate in 1980.

Judge Vela's career is filled with successes, commitment to his family, devotion to his religion and his church, love for his work, and respect for his colleagues. It is most fitting to honor Judge Vela with this designation. I join the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ) in supporting H.R. 686.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, Texas is known for many things—among them is an embarrassment of riches in the Southern Judicial District of Texas.

In South Texas, we have two judicial giants in the Rio Grande Valley for whom citizens throughout the area have asked that the new federal courthouse in Brownsville be named.

Judge Reynaldo Garza was appointed to the federal bench by President John F. Kennedy in 1961 and Judge Filemon Vela was appointed to the federal bench by President Jimmy Carter in 1980.

Both of these men have become legends in the South Texas area by virtue of their commitment to education and community.

Each have shown their respective dedication to the betterment of the next generation of South Texans by working actively with schools and young people.

Judge Vela has focused on the young people who have made mistakes or erred, by working with the Esperanza Home for Boys, heading activities to keep young people in school called ''Enrich Your Life, Complete Your Studies,'' being part of the Texas Business and Education Coalition, and working with the Texas Young Lawyers Association Dropout Prevention and Literacy Committee.

Judge Garza has served on the Brownsville Independent School Board, and turned his attention to the cause of higher education by serving on the Texas Education Standards Committee, the Coordinating Board of Colleges and Universities, and the Select Committee on Higher Education.

He is revered for a story he relates about his father, while dying, who told the Judge and his siblings that while he did not leave them with wealth, he left them with the gift of education, one which no one can ever take away.

Both these legends have schools named in their honor.

When construction began on the federal courthouse, all across the Valley, people wondered whose name would grace the courthouse upon completion.

I was moved at the number of letters that came to my office relating personal stories about one or the other and advocating naming the courthouse after either Judge Vela or Judge Garza.

After reading all the heart-felt expressions on behalf of both judges, and listening to people who sought me out while I was in the District, I realized how rich we were in judicial talent and thought that the only way to satisfy the concerns of all South Texans was to name this courthouse after both judges.

This name is a reflection of the will of those people whose interests will be served in the new courthouse, and of those people for whom justice will be dispensed there.

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 686.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 1121, S. 453, S. 460, H.R. 118, H.R. 560, as amended, H.R. 686 and H.R. 1162, the measure just considered by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

COMMENDING THE REVEREND JESSE L. JACKSON, SR., ON SECURING THE RELEASE OF U.S. SERVICEMEN FROM CAPTIVITY IN BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 156) commending the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., on securing the release of Specialist Stephen Gonzalez of Huntsville Texas, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez of Los Angeles, California, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone of Smiths Creek, Michigan, from captivity in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 156

Whereas, on March 31, 1999, Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone were captured while patrolling the Kumanovo area;

Whereas the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., on April 29, 1999, led a delegation of religious and civic leaders from the United States in a faith-based effort to secure the release of Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone;

Whereas against great odds and in the face of grave personal risks, the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson Sr. and his party successfully secured the release of Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone;

Whereas the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr. is recognized around the world as a humanitarian, an advocate for civil and human rights, and an ambassador of freedom; and

Whereas, as a highly respected world leader, the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr. has acted many times as an international diplomat in sensitive situations and in October 1997, he was appointed by President Clinton and Secretary of State Albright as Special Envoy of the President and Secretary of State for the Promotion of Democracy in Africa: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) commends the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr. for securing the release of Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone from captivity in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; and

(2) joins with the people of the United States in celebrating the return to freedom of Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this measure.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to support this resolution introduced by the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) which accords proper credit to the recent efforts of Reverend Jesse Jackson and his accompanying delegation of clergymen in successfully securing the release of our three POWs held in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

□ 1900

The Reverend Jackson has a distinguished record of utilizing his considerable powers of persuasion in the service of humanitarian objectives. When American citizens and others find themselves held in captivity in a hostile country as a result of circumstances beyond their control, Reverend Jackson has proven on several occasions against the odds that he can secure their release.

Our Nation should be grateful to the good Reverend for his special skills in that regard. We are also grateful that our three young service people who were unjustly held by the government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia have finally been returned to their families, to their friends and fellow countrymen. We salute their dedicated service to our Nation.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues in the House to support H. Res. 156 commending the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson and his fellow clergymen for acquiring release of Specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Resolution 156 offered by the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK). Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 156 provides for a special commendation and tribute to Reverend Jesse Jackson, Sr., for his services and leadership, whereby he led a special delegation of religious leaders and even one of our fellow Members, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. BLAGOJEVICH) to travel to Belgrade, Yugoslavia to meet with President Slobodan Milosevic with the hope of trying to break the stalemate and crisis in Kosovo through a negotiated peace settlement or agreement, and with the hope that the three men, soldiers who had been held captive, could also be released from prison.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to offer my commendation also to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the chairman of the House Committee on International Relations, for his endorsement and support of this resolution; also, the ranking Democrat of the Committee on International Relations, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. GEJDENSON), both gentlemen, for supporting and endorsing this resolution.

Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, Reverend Jackson has done it again. Following an intensive 3-hour-long meeting with President Milosevic with a good amount of praying and heart-to-heart discussions, President Milosevic decided to release our three soldiers. Mr. Speaker, I am certain that our Nation, the families and friends of our three soldiers, we all owe a debt of gratitude and appreciation for Reverend Jackson's commitment and devotion to the cause of peace. And, more especially, his ability to properly negotiate and persuade parties with varying views to come to the table and seek solutions to the problems certainly is most commendable.

Mr. Speaker, Reverend Jackson deserves our gratitude for his successful efforts to secure the release of our soldiers, Steve Gonzales, Andrew Ramirez and Christopher Stone. I might add, Mr. Speaker, those soldiers showed tremendous courage and loyalty to our Nation.

I need not remind my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, that the crisis in Kosovo is far from over. The debate in this Chamber last week, I submit, Mr. Speaker, is indicative of the seriousness of the issues and with so very many varying opinions and claims of facts of the truth and the crisis in the Balkans, definitely in my humble opinion, Mr. Speaker, has proven one basic fact: Our leaders and the American people simply do not know enough about the history and legacy of the Balkans. Almost like a repeat of a ritual that America went through when we were confronted with a crisis in Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, we do not need and we do not want another Vietnam in the Balkans. We must remember that President Milosevic is continuing to wage a brutal campaign against the Kosovar Albanians. Thousands of Kosovar Albanian refugees continue to stream into the neighboring countries. Many of these refugees have terrible tales to tell of rape, of beatings, of atrocities and murder at the hands of Serbian forces. The NATO campaign is designed to deny Milosevic the ability to wage his brutal repression against the Kosovar Albanians.

Mr. Speaker, we must remain steadfast in our resolve to see our mission through. Again, I want to commend the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) for his support of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of House Resolution 156 offered by the gentlelady from Florida, Mrs. MEEK.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 156 provides for a special commendation and tribute to the Reverend Jesse Jackson, Sr., for his services and leadership—whereby he led a special delegation of religious leaders and one of our fellow Members, the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. BLAGOJEVICH, to travel to Belgrade, Yugoslavia—to meet with President Slobodan Milosevic—with the hope of trying to break the stalemate in the current crisis in Kosovo through a negotiated peace settlement or agreement, and with the hope also that the three American soldiers who have been held captive could also be released from prison.

Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, Reverend Jackson has done it again. Following an intense three-hour long meeting with President Milosevic, with a good amount of praying and heart-to-heart discussion, President Milosevic decided to release our three soldiers.

Mr. Speaker, I am quite certain that our nation, the families and friends of our three soldiers, we all owe a debt of gratitude and appreciation for Reverend Jackson's commitment to peace, but more especially his ability to properly negotiate and persuade parties with varying views to come to the table and seek solutions to the problems, is most commendable.

Mr. Speaker, Reverend Jackson deserves our gratitude for his successful efforts to secure the release of our soldiers, Steve Gonzales, Andrew Ramirez, and Christopher Stone. I might add, Mr. Speaker, these soldiers showed tremendous courage and loyalty to our nation.

Mr. Speaker, I need not remind my colleagues that the crisis in Kosovo is far from over. The debates in this Chamber last week—I submit, Mr. Speaker—is indicative of the seriousness of the issues and with so many varying opinions and claims of "facts," or "the truth"—the crisis in the Balkans definitely has proven one basic fact: our leaders and the American people simply do not know enough about the history and legacy of the Balkans; almost like a repeat of the ritual that America went through when we were confronted with the crisis in Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, we don't need and we don't want another Vietnam in the Balkans.

DAYS OF JOY, PAIN AND HOPE

(Los Angeles Times Editorials.—May 3, 1999)

Finally, in a period of missteps and accidental NATO attacks in Yugoslavia and confusion on Capitol Hill over whether the House supports or opposes the air war, there is good news: the release Sunday of the three American prisoners of war. The sight of the smiling faces of Army Staff Sgt. Andrew Ramirez, 24, of East Los Angeles, Spc. Steven Gonzales, 21 of Huntsville, Texas, and Staff Sgt. Christopher J. Stone, 25, of Smith's Creek, Mich, provided a temporary respite from the hard decisions that lie ahead and that, we hope, will set the stage for further diplomatic progress.

Full credit in securing the release of the three soldiers should go unbegrudgingly to the Rev. Jesse Jackson and a private delegation of religious leaders, including Los Angeles' Rabbi Steven Bennett Jacobs and Dr. Nazir Uddin Khaja of the American Muslim Council.

The religious leaders had been publicly urged not to go to Belgrade by the Clinton administration and had been warned that the mission was dangerous and ill-timed. No one can know the cynical reasoning that might well have motivated President Slobodan Milosevic to release the soldiers. But the point is that Jackson delivered, winning the release of the prisoners without apparent conditions.

For the families of the soldiers, seized on the Macedonian border March 31, the nightmare is over. Relatives of Ramirez, Gonzales and Stone are on their way to Germany to be reunited with their sons, husbands and brothers.

For the Kosovars, however, the future does not look so bright. ''This gesture on his [Milosevic's] part cannot overcome the stench of evil and death on the killing fields of Kosovo,'' Defense Secretary William S.

Cohen said Sunday. The White House already has rebuffed Jackson's call for direct talks between Clinton and Milosevic, and we agree that such a meeting is at best premature. The air bombing campaign in Yugoslavia is a NATO operation. Beyond that, Milosevic first would have to lay the groundwork necessary for success. In short, that means the end of Milosevic's pogrom in Kosovo, the safe return of the refugees and some form of autonomy for the Kosovars that is diplomatically secured.

Today we celebrate the release of U.S. soldiers from captivity. The diplomatic avenues toward peace appear to be opening up, through the increased interest of the Russians and others. Americans must not forget, however, that diplomacy was tried and failed for many months in the absence of a military campaign. In the presence of a military campaign, the diplomatic approach might finally have been given the incentive it needed.

___

[From the Los Angeles Times, May 3, 1999]

JACKSON TRIP IS LATEST IN SERIES OF SUCCESSFUL, RISKY ONE-MAN MISSIONS

WASHINGTON.—The White House asked him not to go and said it couldn't guarantee his safety in a city under attack by NATO bombing.

But the diplomatic coup by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, winning the release of three U.S. soldiers held captive in Belgrade, highlights the kind of risky, personal diplomacy that sometimes works where White House action cannot.

Jackson, who has acted as Clinton's special envoy in the past, went to Yugoslavia as a private citizen to negotiate with Slobodan Milosevic. It's a role he's played before in Syria, Cuba and Iraq dating to the mid-1980s.

The administration had ruled out official negotiations for the soldier's release since their capture near the Yugoslavia-Macedonia border on March 31, and vowed to press forward with the air war aimed at stopping hostilities in Kosovo.

While the White House has cautiously welcomed Jackson's success, the administration may still worry his mission may further Milosevic's efforts to soften his image, said Barnett Rubin, the director of the Center for Preventive Action at the Council on Foreign Relations.

''The danger is that a free-lancer like that, unauthorized, dilutes your message,'' Rubin said. ''They portray Milosevic as a war criminal, but this could show him he has alternatives.''

Rep. Floyd Spence (R–S.C.), chairman of the House Armed Service committee, said the Jackson maneuver gave a ''diplomatic victory'' because ''the world is going to look upon him in a different way, to some extent, by releasing the prisoners this way.''

Spence said on CNN's ''Evans, Novak, Hunt & Shields'' that a temporary bombing halt ''would be appropriate.'' He added that ''I don't think we should be there in the first place,'' noting that he was among the 213 House members voting last week against a resolution backing the bombing. Jackson has a history of private intervention in international crises.

He went to Syria in 1984 to arrange the release of a Navy pilot whose bomber was shot down by Syrian antiaircraft guns in Lebanon. Several months later, he worked out arrangements with Cuba for the release of 48 American and Cuban political prisoners. And he played a similar role helping foreign women and children in Iraq in 1990.

Sometimes this type of citizen diplomacy works, and sometimes it doesn't.

Former President Carter helped diffuse a crisis over North Korean efforts to develop nuclear weapons in 1994 by personally intervening with that country's late leader, Kim Il-Sung. When Carter said he want to go, Clinton reportedly told him to go ahead, as long as Carter understood he was acting as a private citizen and not an official emissary.

But a similar Carter visit with Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in 1995 failed to produce a lasting cease-fire, and Carter was later criticized for meeting with an indicted war criminal.

Clinton has often favored using high-profile, one-man diplomatic missions to resolve international crises, counting on the reputation and clout of his messenger.

He employed Bill Richardson—a congressman from New Mexico and later U.S. ambassador to the United Nations—as a diplomatic firefighter, trying to extinguish problems in Iraq, central Africa and North Korea.

He asked a former rival, Republican Bob Dole, to travel to Kosovo to convince the Kosovar Albanians to sign a settlement Molosevic eventually rejected.

And he teamed Carter with former Sen. Sam Nunn and retired Gen. Colin Powell in 1994 to persuade Haiti's military rulers to back down and allow a peaceful U.S.-led military intervention that restored ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

One of Clinton's most frequent emissaries is Richard Holbrooke, the former State Department official, ambassador, and architect of the 1995 Dayton accord that ended the war in Bosnia. Holbrooke, now the nominee to succeed Richardson as ambassador to the United Nations, negotiated with Milosevic seeking a peaceful solution to Kosovo right up until the NATO bombing began.

But Rubin said Jackson's mission differs greatly from that of official envoys.

''Holbrooke was representing the United States and NATO, saying, 'If you don't agree, we're going to bomb you.' That's the same message whether you're alone in the room or if you're with 10 other people,'' Rubin said.

Mr. Speaker, I am privileged to yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK), chief sponsor of this resolution

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA), my colleague, for giving me this opportunity to express my feelings about the Reverend Jesse Louis Jackson.

When the history of the world is written, Mr. Speaker, the name of Jesse Louis Jackson will head the name of those who loved peace. I am pleased that the House is today considering a resolution introduced yesterday commending the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Jr., for his extraordinary efforts in securing the release of our three brave American soldiers from captivity in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Reverend Jesse Louis Jackson gives us something for all of us to be proud of: leadership, bravery, courage.

I particularly want to thank Speaker HASTERT; the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) our minority leader; the gentleman from New York (Chairman GILMAN); the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. GEJDENSON) ranking Member; and the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) of the Committee on International Relations, who worked together in a bipartisan effort to bring this resolution to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, as we all know, last Thursday Reverend Jackson led a delegation of religious and civic leaders from the United States, including our colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. BLAGOJEVICH), to Yugoslavia in a faith-based effort to secure the release of Specialist Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Stone. Against great odds and in the face of grave personal risk, Reverend Jackson and his party entered the war zone and on Saturday May 1, Reverend Jackson, with the help of God, secured the release of these brave American soldiers.

Mr. Speaker, I and millions of Americans and others around the world, we watched with pride, we watched with joy and amazement as Reverend Jackson and his delegation emerged with our three brave soldiers. It was at that point that I decided to introduce this resolution.

On this floor today we celebrate Reverend Jackson's achievement and our soldiers' return to freedom. We want the world to know, Mr. Speaker, that we are extremely proud of the Reverend Jesse Louis Jackson.

This is not the first time that Reverend Jackson has successfully secured the release of prisoners in other countries. In 1984 he secured the release of United States Navy Flyer, Lieutenant Robert O. Goodman, Jr., from Syria. Again in June of 1984 he secured the release of 22 Americans and 26 Cubans from Cuba; and in 1990 he secured the release of 700 women and children who were being detained in Iraq.

Jesse Louis Jackson is certainly a man of peace. Mr. Speaker, he is recognized around the world as a humanitarian, an advocate for civil and human rights, and an ambassador of freedom. Time and again he has been willing and able to enter into difficult situations and to go into harm's way that very few of us would go into. His diplomacy has been effective when conventional diplomacy has not been effective. He has achieved success due to his determination and the strength of his beliefs.

Reverend Jackson is a soldier for peace and freedom with deep roots in the nonviolence movement. For over a generation he has acted in the highest tradition of Gandhi and Martin Luther King.

Reverend Jackson has proven time and time again that he will go anywhere and to any lengths to help those in need, especially those who are unable to help themselves. It is a great honor and privilege to know him and to have him as a friend, and to know that this House does itself proud by honoring someone who has done so much to help so many.

Mr. Speaker, the Bible said: ''Blessed are the peacemakers.'' The Reverend Jesse Jackson, Sr., is indeed blessed. God has given him great gifts and he has used them fully to help his fellow men and women. He deserves our thanks and our praise. We are so proud.

Mr. Speaker, we all serve with his son, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JESSE L. JACKSON, Jr.), and I know that he is even more proud of his father than we are. I am very proud to offer this resolution honoring this great American, an outstanding leader, and I urge all of my colleagues to give it their enthusiastic support.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of our time.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes and 40 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON), my friend and colleague.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by thanking the distinguished gentleman from New York (Chairman GILMAN) and the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) for this opportunity, and I certainly want to begin by commending and thanking the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) for sponsoring today's resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I am overwhelmed that the gentlewoman would be so kind as to think of Reverend Jackson and all of the members of this delegation who sought to bring about an opportunity for peace in this crisis. I am only troubled in that the present signals that we are getting are not ones that indicate that we are going to take advantage of the opportunity that Reverend Jackson has created.

I could talk about Reverend Jackson, my father, for hours. Maybe for a lifetime. But I want to take the few minutes that I have, that has been given me, just to mention the names of those ministers who participated in this event.

The Reverend Jesse Jackson, Sr., founder and president of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition. The Reverend Dr. Joan Brown Campbell, general secretary, National Council of Churches. Mr. Nazir U. Khaja, medical doctor, chairman of the board of the American Muslim Council, head of the Islamic Information Service.

Father Leonid Kishkovsky, Orthodox Church of America. The Reverend James Meeks, Salem Baptist Church, Chicago, Illinois. The Reverend Father Irinej Dobrijevic, Serbian Orthodox priest, International Orthodox Christian Charities. Landrum Bolling, Senior Advisor, Conflict Management Group, Director-at-Large, Mercy Corps International.

John Wyma, chief of staff to Congressman ROD BLAGOJEVICH. Father Raymond G. Helmick from Boston College in Boston, Massachusetts. Amy Toensing, photographer. Walter Rogers from CNN. Yuri Tadesse, the director of International Affairs at Rainbow/PUSH Coalition.

David Steele, Center for Strategic and International Studies of Washington, D.C. James George Couchell, His Grace Bishop Dimitrios of Xanthos, Greek Orthodox Archdiocese of America. His Grace Right Reverend Bishop Mitrophan, Serbian Orthodox Bishop of Eastern America. Bishop Marshall ''Jack'' Meadors of the United Methodist Church.

Rabbi Steven Bennett Jacobs, Temple KOL Tikva from Los Angeles, California. Mr. Zoran S. Hodjera, president of the Saint Luke Serbian Orthodox Church in Washington, D.C. Our colleague, Congressman ROD BLAGOJEVICH from the Fifth Congressional District in Illinois. Obrad Kesic, Director of Governmental Affairs, IGN Pharmaceuticals. Reverend Roy Thomas Lloyd, Broadcast News Director of the National Council of Churches.

Jonathan Alpert from HBO. Susan Sachs from the New York Times. Bryan Puchaty, CNN. Marie Nelson, the director for Africa Policy, Rainbow/PUSH Coalition.

Mr. Speaker, this interfaith delegation made it possible to bring our prisoners of war home.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON) for listing all the clergymen. I had not seen that list published any place and it was certainly a wonderful delegation. And I commend him for giving them the proper attributes for their work.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the chairman of the Committee on International Relations, for his generosity and for his constant advocacy for peace. And I thank the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA), the ranking member, for his leadership. I also thank the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) for bringing this to a point when we could acknowledge a great man of peace.

Mr. Speaker, ringing throughout the halls of many places over the weekend, and particularly in our houses of worship, were the words, ''glory, glory, hallelujah,'' for it was that which caused the efforts of Reverend Jesse Louis Jackson to be put at the pinnacle of our eyesight in terms of what he accomplished. We had always known him as a man of peace who was courageous, but as he brought forth the three young men and presented them to us this past Sunday there was a ringing of celebration, one long overdue.

I rise to support this resolution and support Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., and as noted by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. JACKSON), all of the others, part of the delegation, the religious and civic leaders, including our colleague from Illinois (Mr. BLAGOJEVICH).

It is important to acknowledge the fact that there can be peace.

□ 1915

I am grateful that specialist Steven Gonzales, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone, who were captured on patrol along the border of Kosovo and Macedonia, are now free. I am delighted that Reverend Jackson, in prayer and with courage, left the shores of this land and went forth to deliver them.

As I traveled in Albania and Macedonia this weekend, it was clear that all eyes were on Reverend Jackson and his delegation. First, we were offering up prayers, Mr. Speaker; and then, of course, we were hoping for the very best.

We know that President Milosevic has brutally murdered many of the ethnic Albanians. We know that women and children have been displaced, along with their husbands and men. We know that the men have been murdered and taken off to war. We know the refugee camps are in terrible condition in terms of the living conditions, and we know we must prevail to stop ethnic cleansing. But Reverend Jackson rose above those issues to proceed to declare peace and to receive these individuals back.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply take my hat off, if I had one, to salute Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr., for being a courageous man of peace.

Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD Reverend Jackson's entire resume and bio.

REVEREND JESSE L. JACKSON, SR., PRESIDENT AND CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER, RAINBOW/PUSH COALITION, INC.

The Reverend Jesse Louis Jackson, President and founder of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition, is one of America's foremost political figures. Over the past thirty years he has played a pivotal role in virtually every movement for empowerment, peace, civil rights, gender equality, and economic and social justice.

Reverend Jackson has been called the ''conscience of the nation'' and ''the great unifier,'' challenging America to establish just and humane priorities. He is known for bringing people together in common ground across lines of race, class, gender, and belief.

Born on October 8, 1941 in Greenville, South Carolina, Jesse Jackson attended the University of Illinois on a football scholarship and later transferred to North Carolina A&T State University. He attended Chicago Theological Seminary until he joined the Civil Rights Movement full time in 1965.

Reverend Jackson began his activism as a student leader in the sit-in movement and continued as a young organizer for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference as an assistant to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. He went onto direct Operation Breadbasket and subsequently founded People United to Save Humanity (PUSH) in Chicago in 1971.

PUSH's goals were economic empowerment and expanding educational and employment opportunities for the disadvantaged and communities of color. In 1984, Reverend Jackson founded the National Rainbow Coalition, a national social justice organization devoted to political empowerment, education and changing public policy. In September 1996, the Rainbow Coalition and Operation PUSH merged into the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition to continue both philosophies and maximize its resources.

Long before national health care, a war on drugs, dialogue with the Soviet Union and negotiations with the Middle East were popular positions, Reverend Jackson advocated them. By virtue of Reverend Jackson's advocacy, South African apartheid and the fight for democracy in Haiti came to the forefront of the national conscience.

Reverend Jackson's two presidential campaigns broke new ground in U.S. politics. His 1984 campaign won 3.5 million votes, registered over one million new voters, and helped the Democratic Party regain control of the Senate in 1986. His 1988 candidacy won seven million votes and registered two million new voters and helped to sweep hundreds of elected officials into office. Additionally, this civil rights leader won a historic victory, coming in first or second in 46 out of 54 contests. His clear progressive agenda and his ability to build an unprecedented coalition inspired millions to join the political process.

As a highly respected world leader, Reverend Jackson has acted many times as an international diplomat in sensitive situations. In 1984, for example, Reverend Jackson secured the release of captured Navy Lieutenant Robert Goodman from Syria, as well as the release of 48 Cuban and Cuban-American prisoners in 1984. He was the first American to bring hostages out of Kuwait and Iraq in 1990.

In 1990, in an impressive victory, Reverend Jackson was elected to the post of U.S. Senator from Washington, D.C., a position also known as ''Statehood Senator.'' The office was created to advocate for statehood for the District of Columbia, which has a population higher than five states yet has no voting representation in Congress.

A hallmark of Reverend Jackson's work has been his commitment to youth. He has visited thousands of high schools, colleges, universities, and correctional facilities encouraging excellence, inspiring hope and challenging young people to award themselves with academic excellence and to stay drug-free. He has also been a major force in the American labor movement—working with unions to organize workers and mediate labor disputes. It is noted, Reverend Jackson has probably walked more picket lines and spoken at more labor rallies than any other national leader.

A renowned orator, Reverend Jackson has received numerous honors for his work in human and civil rights and for nonviolent social change. In 1991, the U.S. Post Office put his likeness on a pictorial postal cancellation, only the second living person to receive such an honor. He has been on the Gallup List of Ten Most Respected Americans for the past ten years. He has also received the prestigious NAACP Spingarn Award, in addition to honors from hundreds of grassroots and community organizations from coast to coast. Reverend Jackson has been awarded more than 40 honorary doctorate degrees, and frequently lectures at Howard, Yale, Princeton, Morehouse, Harvard, Columbia, Stanford, and Hampton Universities, among others.

Since 1992, Reverend Jackson has hosted ''Both Sides With Jesse Jackson'' on Cable News Network. He is the author of two books: Keep Hope Alive (South End Press, 1989) and Straight From the Heart (Fortress Press, 1987). In 1996, Reverend Jackson co-authored the book Legal Lynching: Racism, Injustice, and the Death Penalty (Marlowe & Company) with his son, U.S. Representative Jesse L. Jackson, Jr.

In October 1997, Reverend Jackson was appointed by President Bill Clinton and Secretary of State Madeleine Albright as ''Special Envoy of the President and Secretary of State for the Promotion of Democracy in Africa.'' In his official position as Special Envoy, Reverend Jackson traveled to Kenya and Zambia in November 1997. Reverend Jackson met with His Excellency Daniel T. Arap Moi of Kenya and President Frederick J.T. Chiluba of Zambia during his trip.

Reverend Jackson married college sweetheart Jacqueline Lavinia Brown in 1963. They have five children: Santita Jackson, Cong. Jesse Louis Jackson, Jr., Jonathan Jackson, Yusef DuBois Jackson, Esq., and Jacqueline Lavinia Jackson, Jr. The Jacksons reside in Chicago.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues in support of H. Res. 156, a resolution to honor not only the work of the Honorable Reverend Jesse Jackson but also the work of the entire delegation who traveled with him against insurmountable odds and came back victorious.

Especially would I like to single out the work of our colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROD BLAGOJEVICH), and the Reverend James Meeks, whom I happen to know and have a tremendous amount of respect for.

I think, once again, Reverend Jackson has demonstrated his astuteness, his ability, his agility. Some of us thought maybe Reverend Jackson was getting a little bit older, and somebody else said, no, Jesse is not getting older, he is just getting better. And so he has gotten better, he is better, and we commend and congratulate him once again on a tremendous piece of humanitarian work for all of the world to see.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. NAPOLITANO).

Mrs. NAPOLITANO. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues on both sides of the fence for bringing this today to this floor.

I especially want to thank my colleague, the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. CARRIE MEEK), for authoring House Resolution 156, which commends the Reverend Jesse Jackson for his wonderful and great work in securing the release of our brave servicemen, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone, and Specialist Steven Gonzales.

I am proud to be a cosponsor of this resolution and honored to have the opportunity to address the Nation about it today.

Reverend Jesse Jackson has once again proven himself a man of great ability, of great compassion and of great faith. His mission to Yugoslavia brought relief and joy to the families of these three servicemen and to all Americans who prayed for their freedom.

Our Nation owes Jesse Jackson a great debt of gratitude. His skillful diplomacy in this case, as well as his other successful missions to free hostages and prisoners throughout the years, serves to remind us of Reverend Jackson's steadfast dedication to peace and freedom.

With regard to Staff Sergeant Steven Ramirez, I am especially thankful to Reverend Jackson for his courageous mission and am proud to join the Nation in honoring this exemplary American today.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 156, to commend, thank and congratulate the Reverend Jesse Jackson and his delegation and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROD BLAGOJEVICH) for securing the release of the three American soldiers.

There has been great discussion criticizing independent diplomatic efforts as dangerous, out of line and inappropriate. I stand to commend the efforts of this faith-based delegation made up of more than 20 religious leaders as the right move at the right time and in the best interests of the soldiers and this Nation.

I am the mother of a 16-year-old man-child named Mervyn Jones, the love of my life. I place myself in the shoes of the mothers of these three American soldiers, experiencing the anxiety, loneliness, regret, love, longing and desperation of not being able to remove my son from the arms of Milosevic. Thanks to the efforts of Reverend Jackson and his delegation, I stand in the shoes of these same mothers exuberant, relieved, happy, proud, grateful and blessed that God allowed the Reverend Jackson to speak for me and my son.

In the midst of apprehension, discouragement, criticism and mistrust, this faith-based delegation had the courage and most of all the faith, hope and belief that they could accomplish that which others had been unable to accomplish—the release of three young American soldiers.

There comes a time when all criticism should cease and all voices should now be heard in unison, thanking these great Americans for their efforts, thanking these great Americans for their belief, thanking them for their audacity to believe that they could, thanking them for their service.

Reverend Jackson, Representative BLAGOJEVICH and other members of the delegation, I join with the United States Congress and the American people to laud, commend, congratulate and praise your good work.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for having this, and I want to thank the leadership of the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) for offering this resolution.

I rise in support of H.R. 156, a resolution to commend Reverend Jesse Jackson, Sr., for securing the release from captivity of three United States soldiers: Specialist Steven Gonzales of Huntsville, Texas; Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez of Los Angeles; and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone of Smiths Creek, Michigan.

For 5 weeks these soldiers reportedly were held isolated from each other and their units and held captive in a hostile land. Members of their families, people in their home communities and concerned citizens around the world prayed for their safe return. We were disappointed by the unsuccessful diplomatic efforts to secure their release.

In answer to the call of conscience, who will go to seek the release of these young men, Reverend Jesse Jackson boldly and courageously answered, I will. Despite the risk of failure, despite the risk of danger to his personal security, despite the risk of criticism from those who would say he had no business whatsoever, Reverend Jesse Jackson and his faith-based mission answered the call.

And, indeed, we want to commend our colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. BLAGOJEVICH), to go to this foreign country and to urge the country of that Nation to let our soldiers go home.

He succeeded and we are glad. Perhaps this humanitarian gesture by the Yugoslavian President, to set free our soldiers, will be followed by more substantial concessions on his part to hasten an end to the destruction of that region and the suffering he has caused in so many lives there. However, today, we should take time, on behalf of a nation that is grateful and very relieved by the safe return of our soldiers, to say thank you to Rev. Jesse Jackson for answering the call of conscience and for a job well done.

Rev. Jesse Jackson, by his bold actions, displayed the wisdom implicit in the old maxim that we should live, learn, love and leave a legacy. By his actions, Rev. Jackson displayed courage to go into a dangerous situation to accomplish his mission, to seek the release of our soldiers. He did it and we say thank you.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much more time do I have on this side?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). The gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) has 4¾ minutes remaining.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time; and though 1 minute is not enough, I will try.

I simply want to, first, thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the chairman, and our ranking member, as well as the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. CARRIE MEEK) for stopping and focusing us and getting us together to give our thanks to Reverend Jesse Jackson.

Reverend Jesse Jackson is truly a remarkable man. He is a man who truly believes in the power of prayer and the ability to argue the moral and humane position, no matter how difficult it looks, no matter how difficult it seems.

He was criticized. They said, do not go, Jesse; do not mess up our diplomatic relations, even though we had none. But Jesse went in spite of that, with a faith-based coalition and our own Congressman, to say to Mr. Milosevic, let them go.

And despite the fact that we all believe that Mr. Milosevic is without a moral center, that this is a man who has been involved in ethnic cleansing, that this is a man who had lost his moral compass a long time ago, Jesse convinced him.

He did not stop on the first try. They told him it was not on the agenda. Jesse Jackson went to bed; and he said, it is on my agenda. And he got up the next morning, and he continued with the mission, and he made it happen.

We are pleased. The mothers of these young men are pleased. We are so glad we have a Jesse Jackson. The world should thank Jesse Jackson.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. RUSH).

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Speaker, I want to also thank the sponsor of this outstanding resolution, H.R. 156. I also want to thank the chairman of the subcommittee and also the ranking member of the subcommittee for this occasion.

Today, I would like to commend Reverend Jesse Jackson and the entire Jackson peace delegation, which included the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROD BLAGOJEVICH) and the Reverend James Meeks, both who reside in the City of Chicago, for their heroic efforts in bringing our soldiers back home.

It took people of monumental strength and enormous moral courage to accomplish such a noble feat. I know that all of America, including the parents of our soldiers, thanked God when on Sunday it was announced that our soldiers were released.

One word about Reverend Jackson. Reverend Jackson is, indeed, a remarkable man, a man of enormous courage and enormous talent and abilities. Reverend Jackson's moral plea to Milosevic for the release of our soldiers was not an easy task. However, once again, Reverend Jackson has demonstrated to us the power of diplomatic negotiations.

Reverend Jackson certainly deserves every word, every symbol, every indication that we have giving him thanks.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. HILLIARD).

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I commend the Reverend Jesse Jackson. For many years, the Reverend Jesse Jackson has served the cause of peace and human dignity. Once again, Reverend Jackson has traveled to the battlefields of a world at war to return captive servicemen. Once again, he has brought a message of peace and human unity to a situation many thought was beyond hope. Once again, Reverend Jackson has put his faith to the test, opened his heart in love and brought hope to the hopeless. Once again, Reverend Jackson has made himself an example of a committed American and an international peacekeeper.

Leading a delegation of Christian, Muslims and Jewish representatives, Reverend Jackson made a way where there seemed to be none. It is my hope that we may use the relationships which he has developed to find a way to end this war but, more importantly, that we find a way to end the oppression which caused it. It must always be our goal to establish a peace not based on oppression and to rebuild an arc of the covenant between all people. Reverend Jackson has done his part. Let us now do ours.

Mr. Speaker, I commend Reverend Jackson for his efforts.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. KILPATRICK).

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank our ranking member and the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) and my very dear friend, the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. CARRIE MEEK), for bringing this resolution forward.

People can say what they want about this country. This is the greatest country in the world. Men like Reverend Jesse Jackson, as well as my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. ROD BLAGOJEVICH), who have the courage to risk their lives, and the other delegation, and to go on foreign soil to free three heroes are to be commended.

I want to add my voice to all those who have spoken before me in thanking Reverend Jackson and our colleague and their delegation. This world will be a better place. We hope we can end this war and bring peace to our Nation.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. BLAGOJEVICH), the gentleman who accompanied Reverend Jackson and made it possible for Reverend Jackson to visit in Yugoslavia.

Mr. BLAGOJEVICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Sergeant Ramirez and Sergeant Stone and Specialist Gonzales are soon to be home with their families due to the hard work and effort of Reverend Jesse Jackson. He worked very hard. He was constant in his pursuit of negotiations to achieve this mission. There were peaks, and there were valleys. I know, because I was there with him.

□ 1930

Reverend Jackson did it in Iraq and Kuwait. He did it before in Cuba with hostages. He did it before and was successful in Syria with Robert Goodman. And he did it again in Yugoslavia. Reverend Jesse Jackson is four for four, and Jesse Jackson is the man.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DUNCAN). The gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 35 seconds to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. FORD).

Mr. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

I just want to the add my voice of congratulations to Jesse Jackson, who in many ways is like a father figure to me. I have known the family for so long. I am not surprised what Jesse Jackson was able to accomplish. And I say to my dear friend who came with me in the same class in 1996, that great Congressman from Chicago, he was one heck of a wing man and the Reverend could not have done it without him.

Congratulations, Reverend Jackson. And to the Ramirez, Stone and Gonzales families, I thank them for producing three great men like they have.

God bless America.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) has 25 seconds remaining.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

I certainly want to commend and thank my colleagues for the statements that have been presented to pay this very special tribute and this resolution to Reverend Jesse Jackson for the performance and for the contributions that he has made, especially in bringing home these three soldiers who had been imprisoned for the past 31 days.

In saying that, I certainly thank my good friend the gentlewoman from Florida for her sponsorship of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of the time to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from American Samoa has 1 minute remaining. That 1 minute is yielded to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN).

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 156.

I want to thank the Reverend Jesse Lewis Jackson for the wonderful job he has done getting the three American prisoners released. Our Nation and the families of the three soldiers who were held for a month are very grateful to Reverend Jackson's work.

Reverend Jackson has only recently been named as a diplomat, but he has been doing this work for a very long time. I am very hopeful that Reverend Jackson's success will encourage the two sides to find a peaceful end to the crisis.

On that note, I want to say that I joined several of my colleagues this weekend in Vienna, where we had meetings with the Russian Parliament. We tried to set a framework for peace negotiations between the two sides, and I am very pleased with our results. We cannot underestimate the power of negotiators like the Reverend Jackson, and I am very encouraged that his efforts, along with the discussions with the Russian officials, will lay the groundwork for peace and end this conflict.

God bless America. And, of course, we all love the Reverend Jesse Lewis Jackson.

I would like to congratulate the Reverend Jesse Jackson in his successful efforts in bringing home the three United States servicemen, Staff Sergeant Christopher J. Stone, Staff Sergeant Andrew A. Ramirez and Specialist Steven M. Gonzales, who were abducted in Macedonia near the Yugoslav border where they were on patrol while participating in a NATO force that was to move into Kosovo as peacekeepers in case of a settlement. Mr. Jackson's trip to Yugoslavia as a negotiator on behalf of the soldiers was indeed courageous, and his diplomatic talents are more than commendable.

Indeed, in obtaining the release of the captured soldiers, Reverend Jesse Jackson succeeded where no one else could through his immeasurable perseverance, faith, and persistent negotiating with the Serb leader. It is interesting to note that this was not the Reverend's first success as an international mediator. In 1984, he won the freedom from Syria of a U.S. Navy flyer, Lt. Robert O. Goodman, Jr., who had been shot down in a raid on anti-aircraft positions in Lebanon. I also recall that in June of that same year he persuaded Fidel Castro to release 22 Americans and 26 Cubans from Cuban prisons. Additionally, Jesse Jackson has participated in numerous domestic ''missions,'' and has mediated in several disputes on behalf of African Americans, labor and the poor. One example of his efforts was his success in prodding the aircraft maker Boeing into a $15 million settlement of two class action lawsuits that accused the firm of discriminating against its African American workers. I wholeheartedly admire the Reverend for his tactics in dispute resolution, for his siding with the underdogs, the poor, minorities, and the oppressed.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Again, I want to commend the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) for bringing this resolution to the floor. I want to thank our senior member of our committee, the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) for his participation, and thank all of those who participated in this tribute to Reverend Jesse Jackson, and to his fellow clergymen who participated with him in this admirable undertaking in releasing our prisoners.

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, the Rev. Jesse Jackson is truly one of America's unsung heroes, and today I stand before you to sing his praises.

For many years, conservatives have held Jesse Jackson up as the poster child for liberal causes.

They have chastised him and demonized him.

They have cursed him and mocked him.

And at the same time they wear their version of Christian values on their lapels, they look down on everyone that does not conform to their narrowly interpreted set of rules.

However, if ever there was a person who exemplified the morals and the values espoused by Christ, that person is the Rev. Jesse Jackson. In the Book of Matthew, Chapter 5, our Savior, Jesus Christ tells us which values will be looked upon favorably in the kingdom of Heaven. Some of the ones he mentions who will be blessed are:

''The poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.''

The Rev. Jackson has dedicated his life to representing the most marginalized, disenfranchised members of American society.

''Those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they will be filled.''

The Rev. Jackson has made filing the souls of Americans as important as filing the bellies of the hungry.

''The merciful, for they will be shown mercy.''

The Rev. Jackson has stepped into the chasm of propaganda and demonization to meet with the leaders of our nation's ''enemies'' and bring America's sons and daughters back from captivity in foreign countries.

''The pure in heart, for they will see God.''

The Rev. Jackson's approach to solving problems clearly illustrates the innocence and humility of his altruistic intentions, his love of all people, and his dedication to making the world a better place for everyone.

''The peacemakers, for they will be called sons of God.''

The Rev. Jackson has been a strong, outspoken advocate of diplomacy and nonviolent conflict resolution.

''Those who are persecuted because of righteousness, for their is the kingdom of heaven.''

The Rev. Jackson has stood on the front lines of our nation's struggle to recognize the civil rights of all its citizens.

Rev. Jackson, we appreciate you and the work you are doing to walk the path. We commend you for your tireless efforts to bring home American soldiers who have become prisoners of war. However, your selflessness does not stop there. On a number of occasions, your intervention has freed citizens being held as human shields by Saddam Hussein and political prisoners from Cuban jails. Hold your head up Brother Jackson. You are somebody! Keep the faith! When you are feeling a little unappreciated, just remember.

Blessed are you when people insult you, persecute you and falsely say all kinds of evil against you because of me. Rejoice and be glad, because great is your reward in heaven, for in the same way they persecuted the prophets who were before you. You are the salt of the earth. But if the salt loses its saltiness, how can it be made salty again? It is no longer good for anything, except to be thrown out and trampled by men. You are the light of the world. A city on a hill cannot be hidden. Neither do people light a lamp and put it under a bowl. Instead they put it on its stand, and it gives light to everyone in the house. In the same way, let your light shine before men, that they may see your good deeds and praise your Father in heaven.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thought that I should go to Andrews Airport Air Force Base yesterday to welcome Jesse Jackson home. Reverend Jackson had helped raise the consciousness of the nation to freedom concerns in the District of Columbia when he was statehood senator and lived here a few years ago. I thought that I should be there to greet him for bringing a freedom message to President Slobodan Milosevic, who heard Jesse Jackson and freed the three American servicemen.

I listened intently to Rev. Jackson's comments at the airport. He detailed how he had managed to free the three soldiers, and it was clear that he had done it with great care and skill without undermining U.S. foreign policy concerns and military aims. Reverend Jackson carried the NATO four conditions and urged them on Milosevic at the same time that he urged our country to look for diplomatic openings. Through the efforts of the former Russian Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin, who coincidently arrived at Andrews shortly after the Jackson delegation, these openings are beginning to appear now. Rev. Jackson's work has not hurt our goals, and may have helped in ways we cannot yet know. What we do know is what Jesse Jackson, through an act of will and skill, has produced the three young men before the war's end. Jesse Jackson deserves credit not only for what he did but for the way he did it. Today's special order is a well deserved tribute.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to recognize my good friend and colleague, Reverend Jesse Jackson, for his diplomacy in Yugoslavia and his work to bring an end to the crisis in Kosovo. Thanks to the work of Reverend Jackson and his delegation, three servicemen who had been held in Yugoslavia have been freed and allowed to return home safely. We must continue to take every measure possible to ensure the safe and expeditious return home of all the men and women of the United States Armed Forces who have been dispatched to Yugoslavia.

In the same spirit, I hope that we can seize upon this moment to further these diplomatic efforts to bring about an immediate end to Slobodan Milosevic's campaign of terror. At this juncture, I am convinced that our best hope for peace and stability in the region is the negotiation of an immediate cease fire and the dispatch of an international peace keeping force. It is my strong belief that the United States and NATO must reach out to the United Nations, Russia, China, and others to work together toward a new internationally negotiated peace agreement and to secure Serb compliance with any and all of its terms.

As a person who strongly believes in the teachings and work of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., I profoundly subscribe to the principles of nonviolence and implore us to consider the teachings of Dr. King as we address the crisis in Kosovo. In speaking about the Vietnam war in his speech A Christmas Sermon on Peace found in his last book, The Trumpet of Conscience, Dr. King wrote: ''But one day we must come to see that peace is not merely a distant goal we seek, but that it is a means by which we arrive at that goal. We must pursue peaceful ends through peaceful means. All of this is saying that, in the final analysis, means and ends must cohere because the end is pre-existent in the means and ultimately destructive means cannot bring about constructive ends.''

Based upon these principles of non-violence, it is with enthusiasm and pride that I applaud Reverend Jackson and his delegation for opening important, new diplomatic channels. While I have not seen Milosevic's letter to President Clinton, I am very hopeful that our President will view the letter as a possible opportunity to renew dialog to seek a political settlement to this horrific crisis. I pray that this will set in motion a process that ends the bloodshed in Yugoslavia and leads to sustainable and long-term peace in the Balkans.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, House Resolution 156, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

The title was amended so as to read: ''Resolution commending the Reverend Jesse L. Jackson, Sr. on securing the release of Specialist Steven Gonzales of Huntsville, Texas, Staff Sergeant Andrew Ramirez of Los Angeles, California, and Staff Sergeant Christopher Stone of Smiths Creek, Michigan, from captivity in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.''.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

''WE, THE PEOPLE, CITIZEN AND CONSTITUTION PROGRAM''

(Mr. HILL of Montana asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILL of Montana. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week more than 1,200 students from across the United States were here in Washington to compete in the national finals of the ''We, the People, Citizen and Constitution Program.''

I am proud to announce that a high school class from Polson High School in Polson, Montana, represented the State of Montana in this national event. These young scholars have worked diligently to reach the national finals and, through this experience, have gained a deep respect and a greater knowledge and a greater understanding of the fundamental principles and the values of our constitutional Republic.

''We, the People'' is the most extensive education program in the country that was developed to educate young people about the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. This program has provided classroom materials at elementary and middle and high school levels for more than 26½ million students across the country.

I am proud of the students from Polson, Montana, and I commend them for their dedication to a better understanding of their Government.

Mr. Speaker, I include the following newspaper article for the RECORD:

NONTENURED TEACHERS CUT: BOARD VOTES TO SLICE 60 POSITIONS TO HELP SAVE $1M

(By Leslie McCartney)

The teaching contracts of more than 60 nontenured teachers will not be renewed, Helena School District trustees reluctantly voted Tuesday night.

The district is facing serious financial problems. The district is seeking ways to slice $1 million expenses from its 1999–2000 school year budget.

''This is an unpleasant task,'' said Bill Rasor, personnel program manager for the district.

Many of the trustees lamented the necessary move—by contract the district must give teachers notice—but it was not unexpected.

Tuesday's meeting included more proposed considerations for reductions as part of the ongoing budgeting process that has been consuming the district and the trustees for at least a month.

A new consideration presented to the board Tuesday included eliminating a $15,000 contract for high school students with the Montana Science Institute, based at Canyon Ferry Lake.

Also discussed were a few revised proposals, including that of the gifted and talented program. The program would not be completely eliminated as was suggested earlier this month.

Under a new model, the district would retain two gifted and talented staff members to coordinate services and consult with classroom teachers.

''We're regrouping . . . maybe we're not quite ready to hand it off entirely.'' Superintendent Bruce Messinger noted.

Also revised was the issue of increasing class size, which of district hoped to boost to save money. Under a new proposal, class sizes in the early primary grades (kindergarten through second grade) (kindergarten through second grade) would stay small.

However, class sizes would be raised to 26 students in third grade, 28 in fourth grade and 30 in fifth grade. The changes in staffing, coupled with savings in physical education and the music program, could save $116,000, according to district projections.

Trustees also mulled a revision in the ''significant writing'' program to cut four full-time positions at a savings of $116,000.

This year's budget crunch is not an anomaly. Messinger presented a glimpse of a budget picture for the next four years that points to a further decline in enrollment. Enrollment in Montana is directly linked to the amount of funding a district receives.

''It's not going to get any prettier,'' said trustee Brenda Nordlund.

Many trustees also had strong words for the Legislature, which they accused of not paying attention to the plight of many of the state's larger districts that are unable to legally raise additional funds.

''We're pushing hard against the ceiling and it's coming down on us,'' Messinger noted.

The district's difficulties—along with the hours spent poring over numbers and finances—brought at least one trustee to near tears at the board meeting.

''I find this a tremendously humbling experience,'' said trustee Julie Mitchell.

She added that she realizes the district must pare its expenses, but the task is unpleasant and unavoidable.

''In the end we have to decide and someone's going to be mad,'' she said.

But she admonished both the public and trustees to remember that the district delivers a quality education and will continue to do so, in spite of the financial crunch.

''There are some incredibly cool things going on . . . we give our kids a fantastic education.''

Trustees also reminded the public that none of the proposed reductions have been decided and urged continued public input.

''This is not set in concrete,'' Trustee Rich Moy said.

A public hearing on the budget is set for March 16.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that time allocated to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON) and the time allocated to me be reversed on the schedule.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There was no objection.

IDEA FUNDING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. THUNE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. THUNE. Mr. Speaker, today the House passed House Concurrent Resolution 84, which I think is important for a number of reasons. There is no higher priority, I believe, than our children's education.

I have a third grader and a fifth grader who attend Oscar Howell Elementary, the public school system in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, in the Sioux Falls School District. The school board election is coming up in June. There are no fewer than 12 people running for one position on the school board, and we will have the opportunity to choose a very qualified member of the school board. I am delighted to have that many people who are interested in seeking and holding that very important position.

The concurrent resolution that we passed today in the House was a nonbinding resolution. But, nevertheless, I think is important, for several reasons. It compels the will of this House that special education be funded before any other new education initiatives are funded. That makes basic sense. The special education mandate, IDEA funding, is a Federal mandate and, therefore, should be federally funded.

Twenty years ago the Congress committed to fund special ed at 40 percent of the total funding level. We are not even close to that today, not even close. I am pleased that the Republican Congress in the last years has begun moving in that direction. In fact, we have backed up our rhetoric with our action.

If we look at where the President's budget has been in the last several budget years, in fiscal year 1997 the Republican Congress upped the President's request for IDEA funding for special ed by 19 percent. In 1998 we increased the funding level for special ed by 17 percent over the President's request. And in 1999 the Congress increased the level of spending over the President's request by 13 percent.

There is a pattern and a history and a commitment on the part of this Congress to see that the Federal Government honors the commitment that it has made to local school district across this country. So it is very important, I think, that this resolution expresses the will of the House that we will fully fund special ed and move in that direction.

The other thing I think is important with respect to this resolution is that whenever the Federal Government imposes mandates on local school districts and school boards, we take away and deprive them of critical decisionmaking authority.

I just mentioned that we have 12 people seeking the school board position for one position in the Sioux Falls School District. Using the resources that they have to fund the special ed mandate deprives them of using resources that could be allocated for other important things like building new schools, hiring new teachers, reducing class sizes, or buying more computers.

I will use my State of South Dakota as an example. If we were fully funding the mandate on special education today, we would be looking at an additional $18 million coming into South Dakota. And if each State would look at their own statistics, I think they would find similar types of relationships between the current funding levels and where it should be if the Federal Government was living up to the mandate.

As I said earlier, there is no higher priority than providing quality education to children with disabilities and at the same time freeing up resources that local decision-makers can use to improve the quality of education for all of our students across this country.

And so I believe that the vote that we made today in the House is important, as we move down that direction and look at what we can do to further increase the funding level, to honor the commitment that the Federal Government has made to the local school boards across this country, to see that those Federal mandates that we impose upon local school boards are fully funded so that our school districts and those decision-makers at the local level have an opportunity to do what they do best, and that is try and give our children the very best education possible.

And I again would simply say that, as a matter of principle, I believe that this Republican Congress is committed to seeing that more of that decisionmaking authority is retained at the local level and that our parents, our teachers, our administrators and our school boards are those who are in the best position to make decisions about the quality and the funding of our children's education. And that frankly, in my view, is where we ought to put the point of control.

And so the resolution that we acted upon today, I think, speaks loud and clear that this Congress will continue to move in the direction of seeing that the Federal mandate special education, which we have a responsibility for 40 percent of, that we continue to move in the direction, as we have here in the past few years in this Congress, to see that we honor that commitment to all of our students across this country and particularly to those who have disabilities.

I look forward to working toward that end and as we go through the appropriations process within the confines of a balanced budget agreement to see that that gets done.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 833, BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1999

Mr. SESSIONS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 106–126) on the resolution (H. Res. 158) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 833) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

COMMENDING OAK PARK, ILLINOIS, ON 150 YEARS OF TOWNSHIP GOVERNMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, 150 years ago in 1849, Oak Park, Illinois was just 10 years old, with a total population of less than 500 people.

There were no streets lined with Frank Lloyd Wright architecture. There was no elevated train system for rapid transit to the City of Chicago. There was no light bulb, no telephone or automobile. No one had heard of the computer, Internet, or e-mail.

□ 1945

In 1849, township as a local form of government was established in Illinois, and since then, voters in 85 of Illinois' 102 counties have benefited from this most intimate form of government.

Today, Oak Park is a thriving community of more than 53,000 people, known for its architectural heritage. Within its 4.5 square miles lives a diverse mix of people with different cultures, races and ethnicities, professions, lifestyles, religions, ages and incomes.

Primarily a residential community bordering the city of Chicago, Oak Park is the birthplace and childhood home of novelist Ernest Hemingway. An annual festival has traditionally been held to celebrate his July birth date.

Architect Frank Lloyd Wright lived in Oak Park from 1889 to 1909, and 25 buildings in the village were designed by him, including his first public building, Unity Temple, a Unitarian Universalist church. His restored home and studio is open for daily hours, and there are many architecturally significant homes ranging from Victorian to prairie style in the village's two historic districts.

Other famous Oak Parkers include Edgar Rice Burroughs, the creator of Tarzan; Dr. Percy B. Julian, an outstanding African American chemist whose research led to the development of cortisone; Joseph Kerwin, an astronaut on the first NASA Skylab team; Ray Kroc, the founder of McDonald's; and Marjorie Judith Vincent, the 1991 Miss America.

Oak Park is also home to former president of the Illinois Senate and recently appointed chairman of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the honorable Phillip Rock.

The Oak Park River Forest High School is recognized as one of the best public high schools in the Nation, Fenwick is an outstanding Catholic school, and the city is currently involved in the redevelopment of downtown Oak Park with new retail anchors and an intermodal transportation facility.

In 1968, the village board approved one of the Nation's first local fair housing ordinances outlawing discrimination. In 1973, the board approved its first Oak Park diversity statement; and, in 1976, Oak Park was designated an all-American city.

One thing that has not changed in Oak Park during the past 150 years is the person-to-person service provided by township officials and township government in Illinois. When Illinois voters chose township government, they chose the oldest form of government on the North American continent. The Pilgrims brought the concept of township government with them when they landed on the eastern seaboard in 1636. More than a century before the Revolutionary War, townships were giving communities a local and independent voice in matters of government and order.

Today, as we prepare to move into the 21st century, government in Illinois still thrives. More than 8 million Illinoisans are served by the 1,433 townships in the State. This year, on April 3rd, townships held their annual meetings, which is unique to this form of government, where any citizen can step up to the plate and voice any concern that they have about the government. In this regard, townships are truly the government closest to the people they govern as they continue to provide functions and services which are vitally important.

I take this moment after 150 years to commend and congratulate the people of Oak Park, Illinois, for demonstrating that democracy can be made real and that township government can in fact and does in fact work.

EXCHANGE OF SPECIAL ORDER

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be given the time of the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. HULSHOF) and that he be given my time on the list so that I can resume my place in the chair following the 5-minute special order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

AIR FORCE BOONDOGGLES COST TAXPAYERS BILLIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. DUNCAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, last week it was reported by the Associated Press that an Air Force communications satellite worth $800 million had ended up in the wrong orbit. This was the third failure in a row for the Air Force Titan IV program, at a total loss to the taxpayers of over $3 billion. This latest satellite not only ended up in the wrong orbit, it ended up in a lopsided orbit thousands of miles below its intended orbit.

I have taken the floor many times over the years to point out examples of wasteful or exorbitant Federal spending. John Martin has for several years had a segment called It's Your Money on the ABC national television news, pointing out almost every week some example of horrible Federal waste. He has performed a great service to this Nation in bringing this series to the attention of the American people.

The examples, unfortunately, are far too easy to find. Examples of ridiculously wasteful Federal spending are everywhere. It has made me wonder if the Federal Government can do anything in an efficient or economical way.

But this Titan IV program really takes the cake. Three failures at a cost of $3 billion; $3 billion down the drain.

What really adds insult to injury, Mr. Speaker, is that, because this is the Federal Government, no one will really be held accountable for this. In the private sector if a company had three major failures like this, heads would roll in a big way. Of course, in the private sector, no company could afford $3 billion in failures unless possibly it was a big-time Federal contractor subsidized by the taxpayer.

The Appropriation Committees of the House and Senate should demand accountability here. They should not stand for $3 billion from three failed launches.

But the easiest thing in the world, Mr. Speaker, is to spend other people's money. So what are we going to do? Thursday we are going to give big increases in pay and pensions and funding for the same Air Force that has sat around and allowed this $3 billion in failures to occur.

Federal employees are great at rationalizing or justifying even ridiculous losses. I am sure that the Air Force will have some great excuses, and everyone connected with this will be able to explain why it was not their fault. Well, somebody is at fault and probably several people, and they should lose their jobs over this.

Even though we talk about a billion dollars up here like it was very little, $3 billion is still an awful lot of money. This satellite, as I said earlier, cost $800 million. Last Friday's mission alone cost $1.23 billion. Just think how much good could have been done with the total $3 billion in losses in this Titan IV Air Force program.

Now, I favor a strong military and I believe we should have a strong Air Force, but I do not believe we should just sit back and allow any part of the military to throw away $3 billion. We should not just cavalierly accept this.

Several years ago, Edward Rendell, the Democratic Mayor of Philadelphia, said at a congressional hearing, ''Government does not work because it was not designed to. There is no incentive for people to work hard so many do not. There is no incentive for people to save money so much of it is squandered.''

How true this statement was and is. This is why it has been proven over and over and over again all over this world that the more money that can be left in the private sector, the better off everyone is; the lower prices are, the more jobs that are created, the better the economy is.

Competitive pressures force the private sector to spend money wisely, to spend it in economical, efficient, conservative, productive ways. Private companies do not have the luxury the government has of being able to waste billions with almost no meaningful repercussions.

The Air Force should publicly apologize for dropping this $3 billion down this Titan IV rat hole. The Congress should be assured that nothing like this will ever happen again.

It is really sad, Mr. Speaker, to take $3 billion from the families and children of this country, many of whom are barely getting by, to give to highly paid bureaucrats and Air Force officers to just blow in this way. What would be even sadder would be if the Air Force and everyone associated with these failures is not deeply embarrassed and ashamed.

CRISIS IN KOSOVO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, last week we had a historic symbolic vote on the war. This House voted against ground troops. We also voted against, in a tie vote, a resolution to support the air war. This week we have the real vote. Are we going to fund the war? Are we just talk or are we going to actually cut off the funds for the war?

There are three goals that have consistently been stated by NATO and by our government. One is to degradate the military forces or sufficiently degrade the military forces of the Yugoslav government so that we can move hundreds of thousands of refugees back, and then manage it with a peacekeeping force. I would put forth that anybody who has listened to any of the military briefings we have had, who have listened to the public reports, understand fundamentally that this is an unachievable goal. Milosevic understands that. When are the American people going to be told the truth, that our fundamental goals are unachievable?

First off, the military has been saying all the way along, this cannot be accomplished just by an air war. They are hopeful that they can bring him to the table, but what do they mean when they say this cannot be accomplished just by an air war?

He has dug in, he is fighting in mountainous terrain, he has supplies that are going to last him an extended period of time, and we read just last week that our military says that after 30 days of bombing, we have a net degradation of his military forces of zero. That does not mean that we have not impacted his long-term ability to wage war, we have blown up a lot of factories so he cannot reproduce, we have reduced some of the supply of gasoline into the country but he only needs 10 percent and they are saying currently that 75 percent of their oil supplies are still there, we have only degraded 25. Three weeks ago they told us we had degraded 35, 2 weeks ago 30, now it is 25. We are headed the wrong direction.

They say, well, that is because of bad weather. The Balkans, when you read history books, always has bad weather. Furthermore, mountains in this time of year always have bad weather. This was no surprise. The Apache helicopters were not designed to go in to take out tanks. They were designed to go in with American forces on the ground as support. We are going to lose a lot of pilots and not accomplish our goal if we are not careful with how we use Apache helicopters.

The American people need to understand the air war cannot solve the problem of getting the refugees back. The ground war cannot, either. A fundamental map, and you cannot see a lot of the details with this map but fundamentally you can tell one thing right away, there is lot of brown and yellow down here. This is Albania, this is Macedonia, and here is Kosovo.

Now, to force your way in there, you have to go through mountains of 8,000 feet. That is why the Ottoman Empire stopped when it came in here. That is why Hitler could not make it through this part. There is no way we can put ground troops in through Albania or Macedonia or come in through Thessaloniki because, A, they do not want us to go through there but, B, even if they wanted to and even if we rebuilt airports and even if we built more roads through the mountains, we are not going to dislodge him through the mountains. It does not work.

Our military understands. Any general who has ever looked at this understands that if you have a ground war, you are coming through the top where all this green area is. That is where invasions of the Balkans have always occurred. But now we are not just talking a few thousand troops, we are talking potentially 400,000 troops, potentially all or mostly American troops, a minimum, according to estimates, of 20,000 dead up to 50,000 dead, and having to fight our way through Belgrade and Yugoslavia.

The people need to understand this is not just a magic little war where we are going to drop a few bombs and he is going to surrender. The truth needs to be told. Those who advocate a ground war and those who advocate an air war need to explain, it is not going to deliver. The only hope is to get him to the table. We have to have the courage. Before we pass a bill this week, if we do, we should first try to take the funds out. I will have a series of amendments and other Members will, too, to take the funds out to continue this war.

I know some people are concerned that the President is then going to blame Congress for having lost the war. I tried to explain, we did not lose the war. It was an ill-conceived war. We bluffed something that we cannot deliver. We saw this in Vietnam. We saw it with the Russians in Afghanistan. We cannot win this on the ground or in the air alone without multiple years and destruction beyond imagination, and then we are still just bogged down.

The bottom line is this. If we give him $12.9 billion, this current President, then he could potentially, without a lot of protection for this bill, divert it to the ground war without ever coming to Congress. This is not just the $3.3 billion to continue the war. While our intent is to rebuild a military that he has devastated, our good intent could be used to fund a war, an expanded war where thousands of lives are lost, where the negotiated settlement in the end is just like the negotiated settlement we would have roughly had in the beginning.

If we get blamed this week because we stopped the funding and the President of the United States says the Republicans stopped the war, which would be untrue because it was an ill-conceived war in the first place, so what? If we saved American lives, that is what we are here to do, not to play politics.

At this point it is the job of this Congress to stand up and say, we know, both from the public statements and our private briefings that this cannot be accomplished. It is time to get to the table, because at most what we are arguing about is how to divide Kosovo at this point. It is not even clear in the end that we are going to have a better arrangement than we had in the beginning because now after all this bombing, after the Kosovars are legitimately upset about the slit throats, the massacres and so on, they want to be independent.

What are we going to tell the Palestinians when they want to be independent? And what are we going to tell the Kurds when they want to be independent? And what about the subsections of India? And what about the Chechnya area of Russia?

□ 2000

Are we going to intervene all over and, all of a sudden, have a new international policy because we got in a bad war with an ill-conceived strategy? And if we continue this, and we continue to fight this and we continue to put the money in, we only dig ourselves deeper in more graves.

It is time for this Congress to stand up and say:

''Get to the table now. We're not going to fund this war. It's unwinnable. The settlement you are going to get now is probably as good a settlement as we're going to get later, only with fewer Americans' lives lost, with fewer dollars spent and with less international problems than if we settle it right now.''

WE ARE SPREADING OUR MILITARY TOO THIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, later this week we are going to be asked to take a very, very difficult vote, and it will involve how much should the Congress authorize to spend for this war in the Balkans, and as a previous speaker, my colleague from Indiana, just said, there are many of us, not only here in Congress but around the country, that have serious concerns about this war. What my colleague from Indiana did not mention is history, and there is an old expression, and I think it is from Montezuma, who said that those who refuse to learn from history are doomed to repeat it.

Mr. Speaker, let me give the Members a very important history lesson that the Germans learned in the 1940s, in World War II. In World War II the Germans sent 400,000 troops into the Balkans, they suffered 70,000 casualties, and at the end of the war they controlled less ground than the day that they marched in.

Mr. Speaker, this is a war that I think we need to think long and hard before we get even more deeply involved, but we had the debate last week on that, and we had our votes, we had a chance to vote. This week, though, we are going to get a chance to vote on whether or not we should fund the war; and then secondly, if the Republican leadership is successful in the Committee on Rules, whether or not we should vote for even more funding than the President requested.

I want to talk a little bit about history as well because we are continually told that we have spread our military too thin, and I agree with that. The truth of the matter is we have spread our military too thin, but I think the best analogy is an analogy of peanut butter and jelly. We have spread our peanut butter and jelly entirely too thin, but it is not because we are not giving our military enough money.

I want to talk a little bit about what is happening. We have been told, for example, in the last several weeks that we are about 14,000 sailors short in terms of our Navy, but do my colleagues know what? We are not short a single admiral, we are not short any generals. In fact, as this chart indicates, in 1945 when we had 12.1 million Americans in uniform, we had 31 generals above the rank of four star. Today we have 1.3 million Americans in uniform, and we have 33 generals. So, we may be short on Army personnel, we may be short on people in the Navy, but we are certainly not short on generals.

Let me point out another chart, and this is really for the benefit of my Republican colleagues.

As my colleagues know, just 4 years ago we passed a 7-year balanced budget plan, and in that balanced budget plan we said that in Fiscal Year 1999, the year that we are in right now, we said that we would spend $267 billion on defense. That is what we said we would spend this year. Well, according to the Congressional Budget Office, we actually will spend this year $273 billion. So, in other words, we are already spending $6 billion more on defense than we said we were going to be spending.

Now despite that we are being asked this week to fund an additional $13 billion. Now I go back to my analogy of the peanut butter and jelly. It is not that we are not giving the military enough money or enough peanut butter and jelly, the problem is that we are spreading it far too thin. We currently have troops in 135 different countries. We are prepared to fight a war in Korea, we are prepared to fight a war in the desert, and now we are apparently going to have to fight a war in Kosovo. The problem is, Mr. Speaker, we are spreading ourselves too thin, and at some point we in the Congress have to say the problem is not that we do not give enough money to the Pentagon, the problem is that the administration wants to spread that money too thinly.

I simply want to ask my colleagues and the Members of the House a couple of very simple and straightforward questions, and frankly as it relates to defense policy, as it relates to foreign policy and ultimately as it relates to budget policy. We ought to get clear and simple answers to tough questions, and I would like to propose two questions to my colleagues in the House:

First of all, should we borrow from Social Security to pay for a war in Kosovo? My answer is no.

The second question is: Should defense spending get preferential treatment in the appropriations process, or should we give them a special appropriation now? And again my answer is no, and I think the numbers speak for themselves.

Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, we are going to be asked, Republicans and Democrats alike: Is this such an important policy, is this such an important war, that we are going to take money out of the Social Security Trust Fund? I hope we will say no.

Now my proposal will be that we give the President exactly what he asked for. He is asking for $6.05 billion in emergency supplemental appropriations, but I believe we ought to offset that with spending cuts in other parts of the government, and that can be done. In fact, if we do that, it means that every other department will have to cut its appropriations in the next several months by about 1 percent.

Now that is a big cut, but we are talking about a $6 billion cut out of a $1,700 billion budget. I think we can tighten those belts, and that will mean that we will not be stealing money from Social Security.

It was only a couple of weeks ago that we here on the House floor said we are going to pass a budget for the first time in American history or for the first time in recent history that actually balances the budget, and for the first time saying that every penny of Social Security taxes will go only for Social Security. That was just a few weeks ago. Well, I meant it when I said it then, and I think most of my colleagues meant it, and I think we ought to make the tough choice when we have to vote on this emergency supplemental where we will already be spending more money than we said we were going spend just a few years ago in defense. I am willing to give defense the extra money the President has requested, but I think it ought to come out of other parts of the budget.

CENSUS 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, once again I rise to point out that the experts support the use of scientific methods to correct the census for undercounts and overcounts. Yesterday the National Academy of Sciences released the first report from the fourth panel to review the Census Bureau's plans for the 2000 census. Yet again, the experts convened by the Academy endorsed the Census Bureau's plan to use science to evaluate and correct the census counts.

At the end of 1998 the Census Bureau asked the National Academy of Sciences to convene a fourth panel to evaluate the Census Bureau's design for Census 2000. This independent panel, like the three that preceded it, has unequivocally stated that statistical methods work. The Academy panel stated yesterday that the design of the quality control survey represents, and I quote from the panel, ''good, current practice.'' In fact, the panel explained, and I quote:

''Because it is not possible to count everyone in a census, a post-enumeration survey'' using modern scientific methods ''is an important element of census planning.''

Currently the Census Bureau intends to use a post-enumeration survey entitled the Accuracy and Coverage Evaluation or A.C.E. The A.C.E. Survey was designed in light of the Supreme Court decision regarding the use of statistical methods for the purpose of apportionment. Mr. Speaker, we are beginning to hear criticism of the A.C.E. This Academy report should finally put that criticism to rest.

Yes, the A.C.E. is a different program in its design and size than the survey that had been planned for Census 2000 prior to the court case. Those who are critical of these differences are not reviewing the details of A.C.E. As the Academy reports, changes in sample size as a result of the Supreme Court decision, quote, should not affect the quality, end quote, of the results. In fact, the panel comments that since the Bureau will no longer be using statistical methods for apportionment, there is no need for the larger survey envisioned prior to the court decision. In addition, the Academy notes that it is appropriate to combine information across States.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday's report demonstrates the professional community's continued strong support for the Census Bureau's plan for the year 2000 census. In 1994 the Academy issued its first report which laid the foundation for the current plans. In 1995 a second panel reviewing Census Bureau plans at the request of Congress in a bipartisan way reported that spending more money on traditional methods would not improve the accuracy of the counts or the census. Earlier this year a third panel of experts convened by the National Academy of Sciences said that it strongly supports the use of a quality control survey to correct for errors in the census.

I support counting everyone. The National Academy of Sciences has stated for the fourth time that the best way to count the population is to use modern scientific methods. I am going to rely on the opinion of these independent, impartial scientists at the National Academy of Sciences. These experts say the plan devised by the professionals at the Census Bureau will give us the most accurate count. That is the plan that I support.

If my colleagues agree with me, that we should count everyone, then they should join me in getting out of the way of the professionals at the Census Bureau. Let us let the professionals do what they are hired to do, count people, and let us let them do it in the best way they can. We should be encouraging the use of modern scientific methods in Census 2000, not preventing them.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to put into the RECORD the report from the National Academy of Sciences, the fourth report that has come out in support of the use of modern scientific methods for the most accurate count in counting all Americans.

The report referred to as is follows:

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL, COMMISSION ON BEHAVIORAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCES AND EDUCATION,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1999.

Dr. KENNETH PREWITT,
Director, U.S. Bureau of the Census, Washington, DC.

DEAR DR. PREWITT: As part of its charge, the new Panel to Review the 2000 Census offers this letter report on the Census Bureau's plans for the design of the Accuracy and Coverage Evaluation (ACE) survey, a new post-enumeration survey. This survey is needed in light of the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling regarding the use of the census for reapportionment.

In general, the panel concludes that the ACE design work to date is well considered. It represents good, current practice in both sample design and post-stratification design, as well as in the interrelationships between the two. In this letter the panel offers observations and suggestions for the Census Bureau's consideration as the work proceeds to complete the ACE design.

BACKGROUND

Because it is not possible to count everyone in a census, a post-enumeration survey is an important element of census planning. The survey results are combined with census data to yield an alternative set of estimated counts that are used to evaluate the basic census enumeration and that can be used for other purposes. For 2000, an Integrated Coverage Measurement (ICM) survey had been planned for evaluation and to produce adjusted counts for all uses of the census.[1] The recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling against the use of sampling for reapportionment among the states eliminates the need for a post-enumeration survey that supports direct state estimates, as was originally planned for the ICM survey. (The state allocations of the ICM sample design deviated markedly from a proportional-to-size allocation in order to support direct state estimation. Specifically, the ICM design required a minimum of 300 block clusters in each state.) Alternative approaches are now possible for both sample and post-stratification designs for the 2000 ACE survey. As a result, the planned ACE post-enumeration survey will differ in several important respects from the previously planned ICM survey.

PLANS FOR ACE SAMPLE AND POST-STRATIFICATION DESIGN

Our understanding of the current plans for the ACE survey is based on information from Census Bureau staff.[2] Building on its work for the previously planned ICM, the Census Bureau will first identify a sample of block clusters containing approximately 2 million housing units and then will independently develop a new list of addresses for those blocks.[3] In a second stage, a sample of block clusters will be drawn from the initial sample to obtain approximately 750,000 housing units, which was the number originally planned for the ICM. (Larger block clusters will not be drawn in their entirety; they will first be subsampled to obtain sampling units of 30–50 housing units. Because the costs of interviewing are so much greater than the costs of listing addresses, this subsampling approach allows the interviewed housing units to be allocated in a more effective manner.) Finally, in a third stage, a sample of block clusters will be drawn from the second-stage sample to obtain the approximately 300,000 housing units required for the ACE sample. The target of 300,000 housing units for the ACE, which may be modified somewhat, will be based on a new set of criteria that are not yet final.

The Census Bureau is considering three strategies for selection of the 300,000 ACE subsample from the 750,000 sample: (1) reducing the sample proportionately in terms of state and other block characteristics from 750,000 to 300,000; (2) reducing the sample by using varying proportions by state; or (3) differentially reducing the sample by retaining a higher proportion of blocks in areas with higher percentages of minorities (based on the 1990 census).[4] These options for selection of the 300,000 ACE housing units from the 750,000 units first selected will be carefully evaluated. The plans include three evaluation criteria for assessing the options: (a) to reduce the estimated coefficients of variation for 51 post-stratum groups (related to the 357-cell post-stratification design discussed below); (b) to reduce the differences in coefficients of variation for race/ethnicity and tenure groups; and (c) to reduce the coefficients of variation for estimated state totals. (Option (3) above is motivated by criterion (b)). Without going into detail, it is also useful to mention that the Census Bureau has instituted a number of design changes from the 1990 post-enumeration survey for the ACE that will reduce the variation in sampling weights for blocks, which will reduce the sensitivity of the final estimates to results for individual blocks. This represents a key improvement in comparison with the 1990 design.

The current plan to produce post-strata involves modification of the 357-cell post-stratification design suggested for use in 1990-based intercensal estimation. Current modification under consideration by the Census Bureau include expansion of the geographic stratification for non-Hispanic whites from four regions to nine census divisions, adding a race/ethnicity group, changing the definition of the urbanicity variable, and adding new post-stratification factors, such as mail return rate at the block level. Logistic regression, modeling inclusion in the 1990 census, is being used to help identify new variables that might be useful, as well as to provide a hierarchy of the current post-stratification factors that will be used to guide collapsing of cells if that is needed. (In comparison, the analysis that generated the 357-cell post-stratification was based on indirect measures of census undercoverage, such as the census substitution rate.)

The Census Bureau plan demonstrates awareness of the interaction of its modification of the 750,000 housing unit sample design with its modification of the 357 post-strata design. (On the most basic level, the sample size allocated to each post-stratum determines the variance of its estimate.) The plan also makes clear that even though much of the information used to support this modification process must be based on the 1990 census, it is important that the ultimate design for the ACE survey (and any associated estimation) allows for plausible departures from the 1990 findings. For example, significant differences between the 1990 and 2000 censuses could stem from the change in the surrounding block search for matches, the planned change in the treatment of ACE movers, or changes in patterns and overall levels of household response.

[1] Footnotes at end of attachment to the letter.

OBSERVATIONS AND COMMENTS

Sample design to select the 300,000 housing units

Because of the need to keep the ACE on schedule by initiating resource allocations that support the independent listing of the 2 million addresses relatively soon, as well as the need to avoid development and testing of new computer software, the Census Bureau has decided to subsample the 300,000 ACE housing units from the 750,000 housing units of the previously planned ICM design. The panel agrees that operational considerations support this decision.

The cost of the constraint of selecting the 300,000 ACE housing units from the 750,000 ICM housing units, in comparison with an unconstrained selection of 300,000 housing units, is modest. While the constrained selection will likely result in estimates with somewhat higher variances, the panel believes that careful selection of the subsample can limit the increase in variance to that it will not be consequential. (By careful selection, the panel means use of the suggested approaches of the Census Bureau, or new or hybrid techniques, to identify a method that best satisfies the criteria listed above.) This judgment by the panel, although not based on a specific analysis by itself or the Census Bureau, takes into account the fact that a large fraction of the 750,000 housing units of the ICM design are selected according to criteria very similar to those proposed for the ACE design.

In addition, the panel notes that the removal of the requirement for direct state estimates permits a substantial reduction in sample size from the 750,000 ICM design in sparsely populated states, for which ACE estimates can now pool information across states. As a result the ACE design could result in estimates with comparable reliability to that of the previously planned, much larger ICM design.

Given the freedom to use estimates that borrow strength across states, the final ACE sample should reduce the amount of sampling within less populous states from that for the preliminary sample of 750,000 housing units. However, there is a statistical basis either for retaining a minimum ACE sample in each state, or what is nearly equivalent, for retaining a sample to support an ACE estimate with a minimum coefficient of variation. The estimation now planned for the ACE survey assumes that there will be no important state effects on post-stratum undercoverage factors. In evaluating the quality of ACE estimates, it will be important to validate this assumption, which can only be done for each state if the direct state estimates are of sufficient quality to support the comparison, acknowledging that for some of these analyses one might pool data for similar, neighboring states. (Identification of significant state effects would not necessarily invalidate use of the ACE estimates for various purposes but would be used as part of an overall assessment of their quality.)

This validation could take many forms, and it is, therefore, difficult to specify the precise sample size or coefficient of variation needed. We offer one approach the Census Bureau should examine for assessing the adequacy of either type of standard. Using the criteria for evaluating alternative subsample designs (i.e., the estimated coefficients of variation for 51 post-stratum groups, the differences in coefficients of variation for race/ethnicity and tenure groups, and the coefficients of variation for state totals), the Census Bureau should try out various state minima sample sizes to determine their effects on the outputs. It is possible that a moderately sized state minimum sample can be obtained without affecting the above coefficients of variation to any important extent. There are a variety of ways in which the assumption of the lack of residual state effects after accounting for post-stratum differences could be assessed, including regression methods. We encourage the Census Bureau to consider this important analytic issue early and provide plans for addressing it before the survey design is final.

The panel makes one additional point on state minima. The state minima will support direct state estimates that will be fairly reliable for many states. The Census Bureau should consider using the direct state estimates not only for validation, but also in estimation—in case of a failure of the assumption that there will be no important state effects on undercoverage factors. Specifically, the Census Bureau should examine the feasibility of combining the currently planned ACE estimates at the state level with the direct state estimates, using estimated mean-squared error to evaluate the performance of such a combined estimate in comparison with the currently planned estimates. We understand that the necessity of prespecification of census procedure requires that the Census Bureau formulate an estimation strategy prior to the census, which adds urgency to this issue.

Finally, the panel has two suggestions with respect to the criteria used for assessing the ACE sample design. First, there should be an assessment of the quality of the estimates for geographical areas at some level of aggregation below that of states, as deemed appropriate by the Census Bureau. (This criterion is also important for evaluating the ACE post-stratification design, discussed below.) Second, the importance of equalizing the coefficients of variation for different post-strata depends on how estimates for specific post-strata with higher coefficients of variation for post-strata that do not have much effect have less need to be controlled, assuming that the estimates for these post-strata do not have other uses.

Post-stratification plans

The 1999 census adjusted counts used 1,392 post-strata, but post-production analysis for calculating adjusted counts for intercensal purposes resulted in the use of 357 post-strata. The panel believes that the use of these 357 post-strata (and the hierachy for collapsing post-stratification cells) was a reasonable design for 1990, and that, in turn, the 1990 design is a good starting point in determining the post-strata to be used in the 2000 ACE. The Census Bureau is considering four types of modifications to the 357 post-strata design, although it has not yet set the criteria for evaluating various post-stratification designs. Logistic regression will be used to identify new variables and interactions of existing variables that might be added to the post-stratification. Finer post-strata have the advantage of greater within-cell homogeneity, potentially producing better estimates when carried down to lower levels of geographic aggregation. Some gains with respect to the important problem to lower levels of geographic aggregation. Some gains with respect to the important problem of correlation bias might also occur. However, stratifying on factors that are not related to the undercount will generally decrease the precision of undercount adjustments. The tradeoff between within-cell homogeneity and precision needs to be assessed to undermine whether certain calls should be collapsed and whether additional variables should be used.

It is also important to examine the effects of various attempts at post-stratification on the quality of substate estimates, especially since certain demographic groups are more subject to undercoverage, and so substate areas with a high percentage of these groups will have estimates with higher variances. (This argument is based on the fact that, as in the binomial situation, the mean and the variance of estimated undercounts are typically positively related.) We believe it is extremely important that analysis at substate levels of aggregation be conducted to inform both the sample design and the post-stratification scheme. Furthermore, this issue needs to be studied simultaneously with that of the effect of the design and post-stratification on the post-stratification on the post-stratum estimates. The fact that analysis of substate areas appears in both sample design and post-stratification design is an indication of the important interaction between these two design elements and justifies the need for studies of them to be carried out simultaneously. The panel encourages the Census Bureau to work on them at the same time.

The panel notes that the decision to use a modification of the 357-strata system from 1990 for the ACE post-stratification design will probably not permit many checks against estimates from demographic analysis that use direct estimates from ACE. This limitation may increase the difficulty of identifying the precise source of large discrepancies in these comparisons. However, the panel does not view this is a reason not proceed, since the precision of direct estimates at the finest level of detail of post-stratification (using 1,392 strata in this context) could make such comparisons more difficult to interpret, and the estimates from demographic analysis are not extremely useful for this purpose (except for blacks, and then only nationally).

As work on both the sample design and post-stratification design progresses, the Census Bureau should not rely entirely on information from the 1990 census: substantial differences might occur between the 1990 and the 2000 censuses that would lead to either a sample design or a post-stratification design that was optimized for 1990 but that might not perform as well in 2000. Instead, the Census Bureau should use a sample design that moves toward a more equal probability design than 1990 information would suggest. Similarly, the Census Bureau, using whatever information is available since 1990 on factors related to census undercoverage, should develop a post-stratification design that will perform well for modest departures from 1990.

Finally, when considering criteria for both sample design and post-strata, it is important to keep in mind that the goal of the census is to provide estimated counts for geographic areas as well as for demographic groups. Since the use of equal coefficients of variation for post-strata will not adequately balance these competing demands, the Census Bureau will need to give further attention to this difficult issue. The balancing of competing goals is not only a post-stratification issue, but also a sample design issue. For example, if block clusters that contain large proportions of a specific demographic group are substantially underrepresented in the ACE sample, the performance of the estimates for some areas could be affected.

Documentation

Given the importance of key decisions and input values for the ACE design, it is important that they be documented. In particular, the Census Bureau should produce an accessible document in print or in electronic form that (1) gives the planning values for state-level, substate level, and post-stratum level variances resulting from the decisions for the sample and post-stratification designs and (2) provides the sampling weights used in the ACE selection of block clusters.

SUMMARY

From its review of the Census Bureau's current plans for design of the ACE survey, the panel offers three general comments;

The panel concludes that the general nature of the Census Bureau's work on the ACE design represents good, current practice in sample design and post-stratification design and their interactions.

The panel recognizes that operational constraints make it necessary for the Census Bureau to subsample the ACE from the previously planned ICM sample. The subsampling, if done properly, should not affect the quality of the resulting design if compared with one that sampled 300,000 housing units that were not a subset of the 750,000 housing units previously planned for the ICM.

The panel believes that removal of the constraint to produce direct state estimates justifies the substantial reduction in the ACE sample size from the ICM sample size. The planned ACE could result in estimates with comparable reliability to that of the larger ICM design.

The panel offers three suggestions for the Census Bureau as it works to finalize the ACE design, some of which the Census Bureau is already considering: (1) a method for examining how large a state minimum sample to retain; (2) some modifications in the criteria used to evaluate the ACE sample design and post-stratification, namely, lower priority for coefficents of variation for excessively detailed post-strata and more attention to coefficents of variation for substate areas; and (3) a possible change in the ACE estimation procedure, involving use of direct state estimates in combination with the currently planned estimates. In addition, the Census Bureau should fully document key decisions for the ACE design.

The panel looks forward to continuing to review the ACE design and estimation as the Census Bureau's plans are further developed. The panel is especially interested in the evolving plans for post-stratification design, including the use of logistic regression to identify additional post-stratification factors; plans for the treatment of movers in ACE; and the treatment of nonresponse as it relates to unresolved matches in ACE estimation. In addition, after data have been collected, the panel is interested in the assessment of the effect of nonsampling error on ACE estimation and the overal evaluation criteria used to assess the quality of ACE estimates.

We conclude by commending you and your staff for the openness you have shown and your willingness to discuss the ACE survey and other aspects of the planning for the 2000 census.

Sincerely,

JANET L. NORWOOD, Chair,
Panel to Review the 2000 Census.

Attachment: Panel Roster.

PANEL TO REVIEW THE 2000 CENSUS

Janet L. Norwood (Chair), Urban Institute, Washington, DC

Robert M. Bell, RAND, Santa Monica, CA

Norman M. Bradburn, National Opinion Research Center, Chicago, IL

Lawrence D. Brown, Department of Statistics, University of Pennsylvania

William F. Eddy, Department of Statistics, Carnegie Mellon University

Robert M. Hauser, Department of Sociology, University of Wisconsin

Roderick J.A. Little, School of Public Health, University of Michigan

Ingram Olkin, Department of Statistics, Stanford University

D. Bruce Petrie, Statistics Canada, Ottawa, Ontario

Andrew A. White, Study Director

Constance F. Citro, Senior Program Officer

Michael L. Cohen, Senior Program Officer

FOOTNOTES

[1] See National Research Council (1999), Measuring a Changing Nation: Modern Methods for the 2000 Census. Michael L. Cohen, Andrew A. White, and Keith F. Rust, eds., Panel to Evaluate Alternative Census Methodologies, Committee on National Statistics, National Research Council. Washington, D.C.: National Academy Press.

[2] See Kostanich, Donna, Richard Griffin, and Deborah Fenstermaker (1999), Accuracy and Coverage Evaluation Survey: Plans for Census 2000. Unpublished paper prepared for the March 19, 1999, meeting of the Panel to Review the 2000 Census. U.S. Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C.

[3] The use of the term block cluster refers to the adjoining of one or more very small blocks to an adjacent block for the purpose of the ACE sample design. Large blocks often form their own block clusters.

[4] The Census Bureau is aware that mixtures of strategies (2) and (3) are also possible, although such mixtures are not currently being considered.

END THE HOSTILITIES BEFORE OUR MILITARY RESOURCES ARE FURTHER DEPLETED

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHERWOOD) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I am grateful for this special order today so that we may share with the American people and all the Members of Congress the results of our peace mission this past weekend to Vienna which was led by my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON). As a member of the House Committee on Armed Services, I felt a special responsibility to our service men and women to find a way to end the hostilities before their lives are further endangered and before our military resources are further depleted.

□ 2015

As a Member of Congress, I felt that the people of my congressional district wanted me to pursue a peaceful and diplomatic end to a conflict that could escalate into wider hostilities.

I believe that the eleven Members of the House delegation significantly increased the opportunity for a diplomatic settlement to the current hostilities in Kosovo without further loss of life. We did so in a way that will help accomplish the U.S. and NATO goals of ending ethnic cleansing and providing for the return of the refugees to an autonomous Kosovo.

We met extensively with our counterparts this weekend in the Russian Duma who are also committed to bringing a peaceful resolution to this conflict. Russia is a key player in finding a diplomatic resolution, and we must keep in mind that our continued involvement in the bombing campaign threatens future relations between the United States and Russia.

The members of the Russian Duma we met with agree that the Balkan crisis poses a tremendous threat to international security, and they share our desire for a diplomatic solution rather than military escalation. Failure to find such a solution not only will undermine Russian-American relations but will further exacerbate the human suffering caused by the terrorism, the ethnic cleansing and massive refugee problems in the region.

The end product of our sessions with the Duma provides a realistic framework for the administration to negotiate an end to the Balkan crisis. We call for practical measures to achieve three equally important tasks: withdrawal of Serbian armed forces from Kosovo, an end to the NATO bombing of Yugoslavia and a cessation of the military activities of the KLA. All three of these goals must be accomplished to recognize a lasting peace.

We can accomplish these tasks by allowing a voluntary return of all refugees and the unhindered access to them by humanitarian aid organizations. NATO would be responsible for policing Yugoslavia's borders to ensure that weapons do not reenter Yugoslavia with the returning refugees. An armed international force, not composed of the major combatants, would administer the peace in Kosovo, and the Russians are very willing to participate in that armed international force.

A sense of the Congress resolution is being finalized which would put Congress on record in support of our framework for peace. It is our hope that such a resolution will be voted on later this week and that the administration will also pursue the diplomatic route to peace, including further discussions with the Russians.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution when it comes to the House Floor for a vote. Neither our congressional delegation nor the members of the Russian Duma were negotiating on behalf of our respective governments, but we are confident that the framework we jointly developed clears the path for a solution to the crisis that will both end the ethnic cleansing and stop the bombing.

I am proud to have been a part of this bipartisan peace mission. The eleven Members of Congress who sat at the same table for 19 hours with members of the Russian Duma are committed to finding a diplomatic avenue acceptable to all parties that will bring peace to the region. I am convinced that the framework we established will pave the way for a lasting peace.

Unlike some of my colleagues, I am very confident in the ability of our Armed Forces to win this war. But I believe that we must continue to prepare for all-out war, and we must fund our Armed Forces, but we must also search for peaceful solutions.

The time is ripe. The Russians will help, and the Serbs are ready to avoid a wider war that will totally destroy their country and also sacrifice the lives of our brave young men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces.

GIVE PEACE A CHANCE IN THE BALKANS WAR

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, this evening I join my colleagues down here in the well of the House on the floor to join myself with their remarks. My colleagues, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHERWOOD) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN), I am sure are going to speak eloquently on this very subject that we are talking about this evening and that is that our hope as we stand here this evening is an opportunity to give peace a chance in the Balkans war.

No war, no conflict and certainly no humanitarian crisis has ever been resolved by bombing a country into oblivion. May I say that, as a veteran of two wars myself, that diplomacy is always preferable to war. And I am sure that we all recognize that this Balkan crisis, the war over there in Yugoslavia, the ethnic cleansing, the terrorism, the human tragedies, are an enormous crisis that this world faces; and military escalation by itself will not end, nor will it solve, this crisis. In fact, it may even precipitate an increase with the threat of proliferation of weapons of mass destruction.

Perhaps I can explain that in just a few words. Whenever a small country is opposed by an organization of 19 other nations, the propensity of that country to defend itself may reach extremes. To that end, it may reach for those arsenals that it could acquire from some other country of a weapon of mass destruction, whether it is chemical, whether it is biological or even whether it is nuclear, in order to defend itself from the onslaught of an attack.

I urge this administration and I urge my colleagues here this evening to seriously consider the efforts and the recommendations of the U.S. Congress and the Russian Duma meeting that was held in Vienna, Austria, this last weekend. I urge them to consider the recommendations in order to bring about a fair, an equitable and a peaceful settlement between the warring factions in Yugoslavia.

This meeting that was held with the leaders of the Russian factions in their Duma, which is our equivalent of the House of Representatives here in Congress, reached consensus, reached an agreement, on areas that we thought would form a framework for the resolution, the peaceful resolution, I might add, of the Yugoslavia crisis.

Those include, first, ending the ethnic crisis, the ethnic cleansing and terrorism; an end of the NATO bombing; an absolute removal of the Serbian military forces; an emplacement of an international peacekeeping force that will ensure the peaceful repatriation of the refugees back into Kosovo, and wide autonomy is the final goal for Kosovo.

I think all of us here in this room this evening can agree that these are elements that we can all consider as a solution for this crisis, elements which will allow us to resolve this.

May I say that later this week my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will have an opportunity to deal with the concurrent resolution that is the result of the recommendations of this meeting in Vienna, Austria, a historic meeting, and now this resolution will simply state a sense of Congress as to the meaning that diplomacy is always better than warfare.

I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will give peace a chance as we debate this issue and vote on it later this week.

May I also say that it has been a great pleasure to work with my friends on both sides of the aisle when we have a common goal, a common goal of peace, not only in the Balkans but peace in the world.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to have stood down here to associate myself with my colleagues' remarks as we go forward in this process of seeking an alternative to an escalated war in Yugoslavia. I would like to thank them for the bipartisanship and the friendship and the collegiality that was demonstrated throughout this meeting. It is indeed a great honor for me to stand here, arm in arm, shoulder to shoulder, in this effort to bring peace to this world.

VIENNA PEACE TALKS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Duma-U.S. Congressional Study Group, I want to take a moment to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) for his leadership in this area.

I traveled with my colleagues to Vienna, Austria, last weekend to help bring cooperation between members of the Russian parliament and the United States Congress.

The United States-Russian Duma Study Group was created 5 years ago, and I have been an active participant in the organization for the last 3 years. As a group, our members meet to discuss national security, military affairs, housing, economic development and social welfare policies.

The importance of the working group cannot be overstated, since personal relationships by members of each of the respective governments are created, thus permitting for greater openness and increasing trust between the two governing bodies of each country.

Because Russia and Serbia have close ethnic and historical ties, I believe that members of the Russian Duma can play an important role in convincing the Serbian government to put a halt to the ethnic cleansing and help stop the refugee crisis.

I believe that the humanitarian crisis cannot be solved by just a bombing campaign and that a diplomatic solution is much more desirable than military escalation. A spread of the violence will only bring about increasing division, hatred and resentment and violence, but a diplomatic solution could lead to the increase of communication and understanding between the two sides and save countless lives.

As a Member of Congress, I feel that it is my responsibility to do everything I can within my capacity to help end this war.

I would like to point out that the congressional delegation's discussions with the Duma were not meant as a slight to the administration nor an undermining of NATO's authority. Rather, members of our group traveled to Austria to increase communication between the warring sides and act as a conduit to the present talks taking place between President Clinton, foreign policy experts and members of the Russian Government.

The main point of contention which I brought to the talks with the Russian Duma was that ethnic cleansing is, in essence, the root cause of the conflict. As the only mother in the room during the talks, I felt that it was necessary to recognize the tragedies of the refugee families.

The Russian delegation originally refused to acknowledge that it was the ethnic cleansing that began this conflict and not the NATO bombing, but before they walked away from our discussion they acknowledged that it was the ethnic cleansing that began this conflict.

Our discussion resulted in a framework for peace negotiations. One of the guidelines I would like to see during the peace negotiations is a cease-fire, a time-out from the fighting, so that both parties can refrain from fighting in order to negotiate with one another in a diplomatic fashion.

In order to smooth out the road to diplomacy, the Congressional-Duma Study Group suggests a threefold approach to resolving the conflict. This includes a temporary end to the NATO bombing, along with the withdrawal of the Serbian Armed Forces from Kosovo and the KLA military activities.

We demand a recognition of the basic principles of the territorial integrity of Yugoslavia, including greater autonomy for Kosovo and just treatment of all Yugoslavian people.

□ 2030

We also support efforts to provide international assistance to rebuild the destroyed homes of the refugees, as well as other humanitarian assistance.

This was a productive meeting, and I am hopeful that it will not be our last. We are all in agreement that we want a quick and peaceful end to the crisis, while keeping positive relationships between Russia and the United States.

A FRAMEWORK FOR SETTLING THE KOSOVO CRISIS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, some of us have recognized for a long time that it was terribly important that Russia become increasingly involved in the crisis in Yugoslavia.

Russia is, I think as everybody knows, Yugoslavia's major ally and major supporter. If Russia could be brought into the process supporting the humanitarian goals of the stopping of ethnic cleansing, it would be a major step forward in solving what is increasingly becoming a very, very horrible situation in the Balkans.

Within that light, I was very delighted to learn about a trip to Vienna, Austria, that was being organized by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. CURT WELDON), who has done an excellent job in trying to improve relations between the United States Congress and the Russian Duma. He was organizing a trip which would involve 11 Members of the United States Congress to meet with the leaders of the Russian Duma.

On that trip, in addition to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON), were the gentleman from New York (Mr. MAURICE HINCHEY), the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. NEIL ABERCROMBIE), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. DENNIS KUCINICH), the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORINNE BROWN), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. DON SHERWOOD), the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. ROSCOE BARTLETT), the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON), the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. JIM GIBBONS), and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. JOSEPH PITTS). There were six Republicans, four Democrats, and myself, who is an Independent.

Mr. Speaker, in arriving in Vienna and meeting with the Russians, I think we were all delighted that the Russians shared our strong concerns about bringing peace to Yugoslavia. We were able, after a lot of discussion, to come up with an agreement.

As others have said, we were not there to negotiate the fine points of a treaty. That was not our job. But we were there to see if we could come together on the broad outlines of what a peace process would mean for the Balkan area, and I think we did that.

Mr. Speaker, let me just touch on some of the important points that the Russians and our delegation agreed upon.

''We call on all of the interested parties to find practical measures for a parallel solution to three tasks, without regard to sequence;'' in other words, to do it in a simultaneous manner. That is, ''the stopping of the NATO bombing of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; the withdrawal of Serbian Armed Forces from Kosovo, and the cessation of the military activities of the KLA.''

What we have said is that these steps should be accomplished through a series of confidence-building measures, which include but should not be limited to the following:

A, the release of all prisoners of war. When we stated that, our three POWs were, of course, still being held by Yugoslavia, and a few hours after this agreement was reached Milosevic, as it turns out, released our three POWs.

My own view is that, consistent with this agreement, in an act of good faith on our part, we should release the two Serbian POWs that we are holding. But our agreement called for the release of all prisoners of war.

Second of all, what we said is the voluntary repatriation of all refugees in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and unhindered access to them by humanitarian aid organizations. In other words, what we were agreeing to is that the people who have been driven out of their homes whose villages were burned by Yugoslavia should be allowed to return to their homes and be allowed all of the humanitarian help they can receive.

Thirdly, and on a very important point, there was agreement on the composition of the armed international forces which would administer Kosovo after the Serbian withdrawal.

The composition of the group should be decided by a consensus agreement of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, in consultation with Macedonia, Albania, the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and the recognized leadership of Kosovo.

This is a very important step forward, because what this means is the Russians are saying very clearly that there should be armed international forces, something that many of us understand is absolutely necessary if the people of Kosovo are to return safely and with protection to their homes.

I think increasingly, within our own administration and all over the world, there is an understanding that that armed international force need not strictly be NATO. That is what we are saying here, and that is what the Russians have agreed to.

Then we said that the above group would be supplemented by the monetary activities of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I think that this trip was a significant step forward in bringing the Russians into the peace process. I was very proud and delighted to be there with my fellow representatives from the United States Congress.

AGREEMENT REACHED IN VIENNA PROVIDES A FRAMEWORK FOR RESTORING PEACE IN YUGOSLAVIA AND KOSOVO

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewomen for giving me the opportunity to go forward.

Mr. Speaker, I, too, had the opportunity to join my colleagues in the trip to Vienna to meet with leaders of the Russian Duma.

Mr. Speaker, in this audience tonight we have some young people who are visiting our Nation's Capitol, and as I was looking up there getting ready to speak, I was reminded of the time when I was in school at that age, and we had in this country a different type of relationship with Russia.

It was the height of the Cold War, and at school they used to do drills. Some people will remember the drills. They were called duck and cover drills. We would have to, anticipating there would be a nuclear attack, we would actually have to get down under our desks, cover our heads, and close our eyes so we would not see the flash that was supposed to be a nuclear attack.

Mr. Speaker, that was an era of terror. It was an era when the United States and Russia were at odds over the great global consequences of whether capitalism or communism would rule the earth.

Have we come a long way from those days? Yes. We worked throughout the seventies to build down nuclear arms, we worked throughout the eighties to reestablish a relationship with Russia, and in the nineties we have in the United States been responsible for helping Russia rebuild itself economically, and assisted in so many ways as partners in peace.

But yet, Mr. Speaker, that very peace and that partnership has been threatened by the Balkan conflict, because Russia has seen this conflict in other terms, and only a week ago the leader of the Yablako faction in Russia, Vladimir Luhkin, was quoted in worldwide news reports as saying a blockade of the port in Montenegro would be a direct path to nuclear escalation, setting aside years and years of progress that we made and launching us right back into the Cold War.

How important it was to have Members of this Congress go to Vienna, Austria, to sit down with that very same leader and other leaders of the Duma, the leader of Mr. Chernomyrdin's party, one of the leaders of the Communist party, to sit down with those individuals face-to-face, sharing our common human interest in protecting the life of this planet and sharing our interest in relieving the suffering of the Kosovar Albanians and of the people who are being bombed throughout the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

So we came together as brothers and sisters in search of peace. We came together hoping to create a framework for peace which we could bring back to our Nation and give our nations an opportunity to reconstruct, in this fragile and even grim climate, an opportunity to set the world on the path of light instead of the path of might, on the path to negotiation instead of the path of annihilation; to create for the world a new opportunity towards peace.

We came in peace, and we departed as brothers and sisters in search of peace, with a framework which I am pleased to have a copy of here.

Mr. Speaker, I include this framework for the RECORD.

The material referred to is as follows:

REPORT OF THE MEETINGS OF THE U.S. CONGRESS AND RUSSIAN DUMA

VIENNA, AUSTRIA

30 April—1 May 1999

All sessions centered on the Balkan crisis. Agreement was found on the following points

I. The Balkan crisis, including ethnic cleansing and terrorism, is one of the most serious challenges to international security since World War II.

II. Both sides agree that this crisis creates serious threats to global and regional security and may undermine efforts against nonproliferation.

III. This crisis increases the threat of further human and ecological catastrophes, as evidenced by the growing refugee problem, and creates obstacles to further development of constructive Russian-American relations.

IV. The humanitarian crisis will not be solved by bombing. A diplomatic solution to the problem is preferable to the alternative of military escalation.

Taking the above into account, the sides consider it necessary to implement the following emergency measures as soon as possible, preferably within the next week. Implementation of these emergency measures will create the climate necessary to settle the political questions.

1. We call on the interested parties to find practical measures for a parallel solution to three tasks, without regard to sequence: the stopping of NATO bombing of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, withdrawal of Serbian armed forces from Kosovo, and the cessation of the military activities of the KLA. This should be accomplished through a series of confidence building measures, which should include but should not be limited to:

a. The release of all prisoners of war.

b. The voluntary repatriation of all refugees in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and unhindered access to them by humanitarian aid organizations. NATO would be responsible for policing the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia's borders with Albania and Macedonia to ensure that weapons do not reenter the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia with the returning refugees or at a later time.

c. Agreement on the composition of the armed international forces which would administer Kosovo after the Serbian withdraw. The composition of the group should be decided by a consensus agreement of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council in consultation with Macedonia, Albania, the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and the recognized leadership of Kosovo.

d. The above group would be supplemented by the monitoring activities of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE).

e. The Russian Duma and U.S. Congress will use all possibilities at their disposal in order to successfully move ahead the process of resolving the situation in Yugoslavia on the basis of stopping the violence and atrocities.

2. We recognize the basic principles of the territorial integrity of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, which include:

a. wide autonomy for Kosovo

b. a multi-ethnic population

c. treatment of all Yugoslavia peoples in accordance with international norms

3. We support efforts to provide international assistance to rebuild destroyed homes of refugees and other humanitarian assistance, as appropriate, to victims in Kosovo.

4. We, as members of the Duma and Congress, commit to active participation as follows:

Issue a Joint U.S. Congress-Russian Duma report of our meetings in Vienna. Concrete suggestions for future action will be issued as soon as possible.

Delegations will agree on timelines for accomplishment of above tasks.

Delegations will brief their respective legislatures and governments on outcome of the Vienna meetings and agreed upon proposals.

Delegations will prepare a joint resolution, based on their report, to be considered simultaneously in the Congress and Duma.

Delegations agree to continue a working group dialogue between Congress and the Duma in agreed upon places.

Delegations agree that Duma deputies will visit refugee camps and Members of Congress will visit the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

Mr. Speaker, this agreement begins with stopping the bombing, a withdrawal of the Armed Forces from Kosovo, a cessation of military activities of the KLA, releasing all prisoners, returning all refugees, providing for their safekeeping with an international peacekeeping force, rebuilding their shattered homes, and helping to rebuild their shattered lives.

This is such a great country with such a great heart, because we care about people all over this world. We want to bring peace to those who are suffering.

Our delegation, Mr. Speaker, gave us a chance, at a moment when it looked like escalation was the only recourse, with the leadership of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. CURT WELDON), with the participation of our leader, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. NEIL ABERCROMBIE), we finally had the opportunity to begin anew to look at each other as brothers and sisters in search of peace, to come up with a framework which we would all hope would be the start of a new opportunity to look forward to perhaps a cease-fire, to a cessation of bombing, to restoring the refugees and rebuilding the war-ravaged area.

Let us continue to pray for peace, and let us continue to act in consonance with our prayers.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair must remind all Members that it is not permissible to introduce or bring to the attention of the House any occupant of the gallery.

BIPARTISAN DELEGATION TRAVELS TO BRUSSELS TO SEEK PEACE IN THE FORMER YUGOSLAVIA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the other Members who are here this evening. I will not take the full time, but I will merely read a brief excerpt as an addendum to the remarks that have been made at this point.

We are very grateful to our colleagues who are here on another matter tonight who have graciously consented to allow this interruption because of the serious nature of the business that was conducted this past weekend.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read just some excerpts from a letter addressed to the ranking member of the Committee on Armed Services, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. IKE SKELTON), a letter sent to him today in conjunction with the report that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) just cited and the activities that we engaged in in Vienna this past weekend.

The letter was a cover letter also containing the resolution that we expect to bring forward to all of our colleagues here on the floor shortly that we hope will provide a path towards reconciliation and resolution of the crisis in Kosovo.

Mr. Speaker, I will just read briefly from the letter:

Dear Ike, as you are aware, I recently returned from a trip to Vienna as the senior Democrat on a congressional delegation that met with the leadership of the Russian Duma. My earlier trip to the region prompted me to lead a group comprised of Corinne Brown, Maurice Hinchey, and Dennis Kucinich. Since you are the ranking member on the Committee on Armed Services, I wanted you to have a copy of the report of the meetings to review.

Not only did we arrive at a viable framework around which the Congress and the Duma can facilitate an end to the violence in the Balkans, we learned much from our Russian colleagues. Our Duma counterparts represented the full spectrum of ideology and Russian politics. Together we reached agreement on three important components of peace and a possible road to implementation.

More than ever, I am convinced that the road to peace is through Moscow. Without movement towards peace, I see escalating costs, increasingly convoluted options, and unacceptable casualties just over the horizon.

Undermining the Administration's objectives was certainly not our desire, and I wish to reiterate that the delegation was not on a mission to negotiate peace. Instead, we were on a mission to reach out to our Russian counterparts. Because of her unique historic and cultural ties to Serbia, Russia has the credentials to act as an intermediary in achieving a negotiated peace in the Balkans.

Mr. Speaker, I submit this letter for the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, May 4, 1999.

Hon. IKE SKELTON,
Rayburn House Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE SKELTON: As you are aware, I recently returned from a trip to Vienna as the senior Democrat on a Congressional delegation that met with leadership of the Russian Duma. My earlier trip to the region prompted me to lead a group comprised of Corrine Brown, Maurice Hinchey, and Dennis Kucinich. Since you are the ranking Member of the Committee on Armed Services, I wanted you to have a copy of the report of the meetings to review.

Not only did we arrive at a viable framework around which the Congress and the Duma can facilitate an end to the violence in the Balkans, we learned much from our Russian colleagues. Our Duma counterparts represented the full spectrum of ideology and Russian politics. Together we reached agreement on three important components of peace and a possible road to implementation. More than ever, I am convinced that the road to peace is through Moscow. Without movement toward peace, I see escalating costs, increasingly convoluted options, and unacceptable casualties just over the horizon.

Undermining the administration's objectives was certainly not our desire, and I wish to reiterate that the delegation was not on a mission to negotiate peace. Instead, we were on a mission to reach out to our Russian counterparts. Because of her unique historic and cultural ties with Serbia, Russia has the credentials to act as an intermediary in achieving a negotiated peace in the Balkans.

The bipartisan delegation prepared a resolution expressing the sense of Congress in supporting the recommendations of the Vienna meeting to bring about a fair, equitable and peaceful settlement in Yugoslavia. That draft resolution is attached. Additionally, I have attached a letter I sent to minority Leader Gephardt. I ask that you also support a bipartisan caucus so that the delegation can brief all members of Congress. Absent a bipartisan caucus, I ask your support for the delegation to brief the Armed Services Committee.

This meeting with members of the Duma represents a singularly important step toward a negotiated solution. I seek your counsel and recommendations on how to best proceed.

Sincerely,

NEIL ABERCROMBIE,
Member of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to conclude my remarks by merely saying that the road to the resolution of this crisis is not in Belgrade and is not in Brussels, but is in fact in Moscow.

□ 2045

The 11 of us, the bipartisan delegation which went to Vienna, had as its sole purpose the reaching out to the Members of the Russian Duma in an attempt to bring resolution to this crisis and bring it to a resolution at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. Speaker, thank you for the time and I thank my colleagues for their generosity in providing it.

MOTHER'S DAY: A TIME TO REFLECT ON THE IMPACT OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND MEDICARE ON AMERICAN WOMEN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, as we embark upon Mother's Day this coming Sunday, distinguished women of the House thought it was really fitting to come and talk again on women and Social Security and Medicare and how these two critical issues will impact women leading into the 21st century. I have gathered with me tonight a distinguished core of women of the House to speak on these critical issues.

As the Co-Vice Chair of the Women's Caucus, I think it is vitally important that we ensure retirement security for women as we work to strengthen Social Security and Medicare.

Mr. Speaker, I would be remiss if I did not acknowledge the two women who have been in the forefront on these issues, the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO) and the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. THURMAN). Each will speak to these issues as we progress tonight.

Social Security has played a very vital role in ensuring financial security for most elderly women; however, there are still far too many elderly women living in poverty. In our work here in the House to establish a better and more secure retirement system, we must not exacerbate this situation but rather do all we can to resolve the discrepancy now and for all future generations.

Mr. Speaker, tonight is the night for women to speak to the two issues and to voice their concerns from their constituents in their respective states. So I will call on them tonight as they come to speak to this issue as we embark upon Mother's Day this coming Sunday.

I have tonight the great gentlewoman from the State of Florida (Mrs. MEEK), who will speak to this issue as she relates to it in the State of Florida.

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank very much the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) my colleague, friend, and sister who is the Co-Vice Chairman of the Women's Caucus for yielding me this time, and acknowledge my associates in the Women's Caucus.

Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to be a member of the Women's Caucus. It gives me a special chance to come before this body and talk about not only the contributions of women, but the issues and concerns of all women. Therefore, being a Member of Congress gives us a special platform where we can say to the Nation that as women we do have special concerns and special problems that this Congress should address.

Mr. Speaker, our government has a Social Security system. It is affecting women and it affects them in terms of their security and their retirement. But the truth is Social Security provides benefits on a gender-neutral basis. Benefits are based on an individual's earning record, employment history, and family composition.

Mr. Speaker, I am an older woman so I do know the benefits of Social Security and the benefits of retirement. I am not so sure the younger women who are in here tonight will be able to benefit from the Social Security system as I have. Hopefully, they shall. If it is up to this Women's Caucus, the women will get a chance to benefit.

Thus, while women tend to collect benefits over a longer period than men do because we live longer, our life expectancy is longer, women on an average have lower monthly Social Security benefits since they have lower earnings, more frequent breaks in employment because of our childbearing years, and we are more likely to be widowed or unmarried in retirement.

This occurs despite Social Security's inclusion of certain safety net provisions that generally narrow the gap in benefits between men and women. Some of the Social Security reform options currently being contemplated will change or eliminate the social adequacy components of the program, thus disproportionately affecting women relative to men.

It is important to note that women are generally paid less than men and women are more likely than men to leave the workforce. Our government must do everything possible to preserve Social Security. That is why the Women's Caucus is focusing on this.

And it is very fitting. It is near Mother's Day. It is our day coming up.

We know that Social Security is perhaps the most important and the most successful antipoverty program ever adopted. Without Social Security, over 50 percent of the elderly would be in poverty. Social Security is a major source of income for 65 percent of beneficiaries over age 65.

Mr. Speaker, it is sort of important that we stress the many good benefits of Social Security. We are not saying that the Social Security system is the best in the world and it is the only thing and it cannot be improved on. The Women's Caucus is not saying that. They are saying to take a look at it to be sure that it does what it purports to do and it continues to keep women out of poverty.

The problem many times in Social Security is worse for minority women because of our earnings over the years, and we are much poorer than white women, particularly white women age 65 years of age or older. As a Member of the Women's Caucus, particularly one over the years that has stressed older women, I ask my dear colleagues to consider the unique issues of women: Lower earnings, longer life spans, shorter work histories, greater dependency on spouses, divorce, and outliving their spouse. The current Social Security system contains provisions that mitigate but do not eliminate these concerns.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the women in the caucus and I want to thank our cochair, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) for putting together this special order so they we could come tonight near Mother's Day in this fitting time and say that we want to help America understand that the unique issues of women should be carefully studied because women are extremely important to this country.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. MEEK) for her comments. Now we will hear from the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) and our cochair.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank my dear friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from California, for organizing this special order and calling attention to the plight of older women as we approach Mother's Day this weekend. I also thank the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO) for working on putting this special order together.

Social Security is tremendously important to all Americans, but particularly to women. Many women come to rely heavily on the Social Security system when they retire for a number of reasons. First of all, women earn less than men. For every dollar men earn, women earn 74 cents, which translates into lower Social Security benefits. I remember when I began working, it was 52 cents to the dollar. We got a raise. We are now at 74 cents to the dollar, but it is still terribly unfair and our Social Security benefits in our elderly years reflect this unfairness.

In fact, women earn an average of $250,000 less per lifetime than men. Considerably less to save or invest for retirement. Therefore, they rely more on Social Security.

Women are half as likely than men to receive a pension. Twenty percent of women versus 47 percent of men over age 65 receive pensions. Further, the average pension income for older women is $2,682 annually compared to $5,731 for men.

Women do not spend as much time in the workforce as men. In 1996, 74 percent of men between the ages of 25 and 44 were fully employed full-time compared to 49 percent of women in that same age group. Women spend more time out of the paid workforce than do men in order to raise their families and to take care of their aging parents.

Women live longer than men by an average of 7 years. Social Security benefits are the only source of income for many elderly women. Twenty-five percent of unmarried women, widowed, divorced separated or never married rely on Social Security benefits as their only source of income. Not only will these women find themselves widowed, they are likely to be poor.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office showed that 80 percent of women living in poverty were not poor before their husbands died. The ''feminization'' of poverty is another reason why Social Security must be there for our senior citizens, particularly women in their elderly years.

The financial outlook for elderly women is pretty grim. The poverty rate among elderly woman would be much higher if they did not have Social Security benefits. In 1997, the poverty rate among elderly women was 13.1 percent. Without Social Security benefits, it would have been 52.3 percent. For elderly men, the poverty rate is much lower at 7 percent. If men did not have Social Security benefits, the poverty level among them would increase to 40.7 percent.

Social Security's family protection provisions help women the most. Social Security provides guaranteed inflation protected lifetime benefits for widows, divorced women, and the wives of retired workers. Sixty-three percent of female Social Security beneficiaries aged 65 and over receive benefits based on their husband's earning records, while only 1.2 percent of male beneficiaries receive benefits based on their wives' earning records. These benefits offset the wage disparity between men and women.

As we move forward with reform of our Nation's Social Security system, we must remember that women face special challenges. It is my hope that many of the contributing economic factors, particularly pay inequity, will soon be eliminated. In the meantime, Congress must take the economic well-being and security of women into account when discussing reform. Women clearly are at a disadvantage when facing retirement and poor elderly women have the most at stake in the Social Security debate. Any reform that is enacted must keep the safety net intact. Our mothers, our daughters and our granddaughters are counting on us.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to put into the RECORD a story, a story about the life of one of my constituents. Her many years of work, the many things that she did in her life, and how much she now depends on Social Security for a safety net in her own life.

Mr. Speaker, I join my colleagues in calling upon Congress on both sides of the aisle to be very cautious in the reforms in Social Security to make sure that this safety net for men and women continues.

I am glad to be here tonight to remind my colleagues that it is critical that we take the different circumstances of women into account as the 106th Congress considers proposals to reform the current Social Security system.

Lucy Thomas' story illustrates many of the key issues.

Mrs. Thomas is 83 years old. She worked for 35 years as a waitress, earning less than minimum wage. At the same time, she reared two daughters, and cared for both her father as he became increasingly disabled with rheumatoid arthritis, and for her grandmother, a farm woman who had virtually no income. She now depends solely on Social Security—$650 a month. At age 71, she moved in with her daughter, Marilyn, because she could no longer work outside the home to supplement her Social Security income.

As a waitress and a bartender, Thomas and her husband barely made enough money to pay for their daily living expenses. Mrs. Thomas does not have a pension, nor does she have income-generating savings. Her current income consists of about $8,000 a year from Social Security. She is one of the nation's elderly poor. Of that amount, $1,600 is used for secondary health coverage. Last year she paid an additional $1,000 in medical costs and another $1,400 for a hearing aid. In the fall, a bout with stomach ulcers forced her to pay over $200 for prescription drugs. Her daughter purchased most of her clothing and paid for her room and board for the past 12 years. Social Security is a real factor in her ability to survive with some dignity in her old age.

Mrs. Thomas' story is not unique. Many women come to rely heavily on the Social Security System when they retire, for a number of reasons.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) the distinguished cochair of the Women's Caucus, for her comments tonight.

Mr. Speaker, indeed America's older women do depend upon Social Security and Medicare for their security and their well-being. We have now another distinguished Member of the House who we will hear from as she voices her concerns for the women of North Carolina, the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commend my colleagues, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) and the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO) for having this special order, and the leadership of the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) as the President of the Women's Caucus. Indeed they will bring the awareness to an issue that should be given and be a major concern to all women, because it is of economic value to us.

Mr. Speaker, Social Security provides an important base for the economic security of American women. Women represent 60 percent of all Social Security recipients. Today, the Committee on the Budget in their task force hearing shared with us that women actually receive 53 percent of all the benefits because, in fact, we live longer and how the Social Security progressivity is structured so that women who earn lower wages actually get a greater benefit because it is designed to be that kind of bridge.

□ 2100

However, because women live longer on average than men, they represent 70 percent of Social Security recipients after the age of 85. Unmarried women, including widows aged 65 and older, receive just about half of their total income from Social Security. So, indeed, Social Security is very, very important, but it is also the survivor's safety net for a large number of women who are on Social Security.

Women also have a different work pattern. Many of them work part-time. Some of them, indeed, do not work at all for a period of time. Nearly three-fourths of 4 million older poor persons in this Nation are women, and older women are twice as likely as older men to be poor.

In 1996, older Caucasian women had a median personal income of $9,990, while older black women's median income was $7,110, and older Hispanic women's median income was $6,372. One-fifth of older black women received less than $5,000, and nearly three-fourths had an annual personal income under $10,000 in that same year.

Women are also more likely to work part time and take out time from the work force. Therefore, they do not build up as much investment in Social Security. In fact, women are more likely to be out of the work force an average of 11.5 years to raise their children or to attend to ailing relatives.

Social Security has been a tremendous success in reducing the number of women in poverty since 1940. Now, this is not to say Social Security does not have problems, but it is to recognize that Social Security has been a safety net for women. And as we reform Social Security, we certainly need to make sure that the structure that aids in securing women, and particularly those women who are disadvantaged by receiving less money and disadvantaged by not being in the work force, are, indeed, protected.

Again, as I referred to the hearing in the Committee on the Budget today, there are several proposals out there, some looking to the private sector, some providing some transitional costs, talking about consumer taxes, and we need to make sure that those transitional costs are taken into account both for women with disabilities as well as those who are indeed at the end of the lower economic ladder.

Again, as we have this special order we want to bring to everyone's attention the value Social Security has been to women; and as we reform Social Security we want to urge those individuals looking at the various options to certainly understand that we should not have any less protection for women who have depended on this safety net being there. And, indeed, Social Security has been the one program that has worked for all Americans but particularly for women.

I want to commend, Mr. Speaker, again the Women's Caucus for bringing this issue and allowing us to bring to the Nation's attention how important Social Security is to the economic vitality of all women in this country.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman.

A woman who has kept the focus on women as it relates to Social Security is a former co-chair herself. I would like to now yield to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California for her leadership; and I commend her and the gentlewoman from Connecticut for their work in organizing this special order to draw attention to the various special needs of women in Social Security.

We are told that there may well be no Social Security reform this year. I would regret that, though I want to go on record to say that it is certainly not true that Social Security is going bankrupt. We really do have more than a quarter of a century before that. Nevertheless, it certainly would be better if we could get a bipartisan consensus this session.

Let me say that I would rather see nothing, however, than see a new model based on some of the ideas that have come from the majority on Social Security. We do not need a new model for Social Security. We need a revitalized model.

The reason we do not need a new model is because the present model is a feminized model. It is literally organized around the needs of women, around longer lives, around those with lesser earnings, and, if I may say so, around housewives. In particular, the notions for personal savings accounts do not take into account this feminized model.

Most of the time when we talk about Social Security reform, we have reference to the elderly. I want to talk for my few minutes not about the elderly but about women whose Social Security is most endangered, because we are talking about Social Security in 2030, not Social Security in the year 2000.

Older women have been grandfathered in. Neither the Republican majority or anybody else in his right mind would dare touch Social Security today. They would not dare recommend personal savings accounts for Social Security today, not when 53 percent of those receiving Social Security would be at the poverty line without it; not when it is a major source for two-thirds of today's beneficiaries.

I want to focus on the baby boomers and the younger women whose earnings today translate into pensions or Social Security tomorrow. Those are the women who are not secure.

The last time women Members came to the floor to talk about Social Security, I spoke from my past work as chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, because it is from that work that I learned to focus on women's earnings. It is by focusing on women's earnings today that we have any idea of their pensions or their Social Security tomorrow. Only by looking at younger women in particular can we evaluate the notion of personal savings accounts.

I want to be clear that we should all be saving, and we should be doing more in this Congress to encourage more saving: 401(k)s, IRAs, IRAs for homemakers. There is ever so much more we must do to encourage savings. And, indeed, savings in the United States is going down, and that is itself very serious. But the focus on earnings now is how we figure what workers will have tomorrow.

Let us look at women. Women today earn $24,000, the average woman, year-round worker, $24,973. For a man, it is almost $10,000 more, $33,674. What does a woman who earns less than $25,000 have to put into a personal savings account? Something, I hope, but I guarantee it is too little. Social Security, as we know it, needs to be there for that woman. She cannot afford to put all of her eggs in a personal savings account basket.

No matter how we look at earnings, we draw the same conclusion. The progressive Social Security model now in place must be there especially for women.

First, for the large number of women with no earnings, what are they supposed to do with a personal savings account? Look at who they are. There are only 7 percent of men who spend time out of the work force; 21 percent of women spend time out of the work force. Look at part time. Seventy-four percent of men work full time; only 49 percent of women work full time. What are they going to put in personal savings accounts? What will their Social Security look like, for that matter?

That is why it has to be progressive, because they will have too little earnings in even to get out enough of Social Security unless we have the present system which benefits low earners.

Look at the labor force participation: 73 percent of men in the labor force, 63 percent of women. This translates into no pensions or pensions that are too small, and it certainly leaves very little for personal savings accounts.

Personal savings accounts are not progressive. They go with the market, not with need. I am with the market. I am in the market. I want more women to be in the market. But I would not want my future, if I earned under $25,000 a year, to lie with the market.

By all means, go into mutual savings. But women cannot afford to leave Social Security as we know it today behind.

The Republican majority would attribute the difference in wages between men and women to the fact that women are out of the work force more than men, and they tell us that all the time when we complain about women's wages. That is true, but not entirely. And there is a debate between us as to what accounts for that gap.

But let us assume for the moment that they are indeed correct, for purposes of argument, that the difference is because women spend more time out of the work force; and may I ask them to please carry that thinking over to the needs of women into old age. If they spend less time in the work force, they should be subject to less risk when it comes time for old age.

What will housewives contribute to personal savings accounts? What will part-time workers contribute to personal savings accounts? What will mothers who go into the work force later, who took time out, contribute to personal savings accounts? Where are the family values when it comes to security for today's young mothers?

I am not talking about my mother. Her Social Security is intact, and I think mine will be. But what about my daughters? That is who we must concentrate on now. What about the young mothers who are staying at home? And there are more of them because of the absence of a child care system, and many more are going back home rather than go where they would like to go, to work.

Retirement becomes and is a burden in the thoughts of these women, and we must make it less of a burden by encouraging them to save but also by assuring them that Social Security will be there in the progressive way that their mothers and grandmothers have known it.

Young women are most at risk. They are most in doubt. We cannot restore confidence in the Social Security System by dismembering it. We must look far more closely at the President's plan, where 62 percent of the surplus goes to Social Security and 15 percent to Medicare. Then, of course, we have a balanced notion of means tested personal savings accounts. We encourage savings and help people to save and encourage them to save.

If my colleagues do not like the President's plan, they should draw their own plan, but plan it around women who are the Americans who will most need the security our country has guaranteed for their mothers, for their grandmothers and for their great grandmothers.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California and the gentlewoman from Connecticut for their important work in drawing these issues to our continuing attention.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, Medicare and Social Security, as we know, will be two very important issues here in 1999. I cannot think of a more deserving person to come before us now to talk about these issues as discussion intensifies about the ways to strengthen Social Security and Medicare for the future for women. She has been in the forefront on these issues.

Certainly we recognize now that Medicare is required to cover screenings for osteoporosis and breast cancer. She has been in the forefront to make sure that this took place. We have with us now one of the leaders of the House, the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. ROSA DeLAURO), who will come and speak to us on these two very critical issues as we broach Mother's Day.

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, I truly am honored to stand here tonight with my colleague from California (Ms. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD), who has taken a leadership role in our Women's Caucus, along with the Congresswoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), who spoke as well this evening, in trying to forge a unified coalition on two of the most important issues that face this Nation, and that is Medicare and Social Security.

□ 2115

Quite frankly, we cannot talk about one without the other because of their importance in terms of what they have done in lifting older Americans out of poverty in this country, what they have done to change the face of health care for older Americans. They have come to be two programs that working families rely on in retirement security. They have become, if you will, the twin pillars of retirement security.

As my other colleagues who have joined on the floor tonight, they too understand the effect that the Social Security system and Medicare have had on all Americans, and most particularly for tonight's discussion, for the stability and the financial well-being of women in their later years.

They also understand the need to protect these programs, to strengthen these programs, to view them as successful programs upon which we need to build, and to expand so that not only people today who are eligible and women today who are eligible for these programs, but those in my generation and the generation of my children and their children can utilize for their retirement security. That is what is at stake.

I might just say, with regard to Medicare, that what we need to continue in that effort is to make sure that, in fact, there are defined benefits that people know they can avail themselves of in Medicare and that primarily we can build on the Medicare system so that, in fact, we can offer some opportunity for some relief on prescription drugs.

I think all of us today who are talking with seniors with regard to Medicare and their health benefits would tell us that the single biggest difficulty that they have and where they put their health and their safety at risk is because they cannot afford prescription drugs today, and if we are going to strengthen and protect Medicare, that we must not turn it into a voucher program where people are told, ''Here is a sum of money, you go out and find it on your own, ferret out a program, you are on your own, my friend,'' when what we ought to be doing is making sure that this program allows for the benefits to be there that they need and for them to be able to purchase and get some kind of relief for the costs of prescription drugs.

Let me turn, if I can for a moment, to Social Security. Because, as I have said, it is really our country's success story. More than half of the elderly population would live in poverty today in this country were it not for Social Security.

Now, I have an 85-year-old mother and she said to me, ''Rosa, these are supposed to be the golden years, but in many instances they turn out to be the lead years.'' And what she is doing is expressing the frustration, she gives a voice to that frustration that so many elderly women feel that in their older years. They face all kinds of obstacles to stability and to security, and without Social Security these obstacles would be even greater.

My colleagues have focused tonight on talking about the plight of women and how, in fact, Social Security does work for women today. And it is because they live longer, they are in and out of the work force, they make less money, they are often dependents, they rely on a cost-of-living increase, they rely on a month-to-month lump sum of money which they receive.

Much of that goes away if we follow a program which people are talking about today, and that is to get us to privatize the Social Security system. Those pieces of cost-of-living increases, benefits if you are a spouse, getting a month-to-month lump sum, consideration of less money earned by women, consideration of their being in and out of the work force, all of that is taken into consideration in the Social Security program today. That all goes away if we privatize Social Security.

I will speak for just a moment on my State of Connecticut. Social Security has lowered the poverty rate among elderly women from 46 percent to 8 percent. That means over 100,000 women are lifted out of poverty by Social Security in my State of Connecticut.

I want to mention one proposal that is on the table now that has been offered by the majority party, by the Republican leadership, and that is the Archer-Shaw plan which was promoted last week. I just want to say a few words about this plan, and I want to caution people to look at it very, very carefully.

This plan may be cloaked in the rhetoric of reform, but if we take a closer look at it, it is a risky scheme that will end Social Security and put millions of elderly women and men in jeopardy. We cannot let this happen. This is a delayed execution of the Social Security plan.

Let me just say that that is the goal. But even if the true goal of my colleagues or some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle was to improve retirement security, this plan does not get it done. It is flawed from a policy perspective. It claims to use the budget surplus to create individual retirement accounts. These accounts are personal in name only.

The CATO Institute, which is a very conservative organization, has talked about this proposal, and Michael Tanner of the Institute told the Washington Post last week, and I quote, that ''The individual accounts are phoney accounts. They are made up of a tax credit equal to 2 percent of each person's Social Security taxable wages. It would flip Social Security on its head by allocating, if you will, more money and resources to the wealthiest in our society.''

It hurts women particularly. The claim is that the plan would extend Social Security further than the President's plan to protect the program. They hold up a Social Security actuary report that estimates that their plan would keep Social Security solvent for 75 years.

But, my friends, the devil is in the details. They do not talk about the specifics of the program. They hide the fact that ultimately this plan eliminates all the surpluses, it forces the Federal Government to have to increase taxes, cut spending in necessary programs, such as domestic programs that benefit women elsewhere in the budget. They evade the fact that if the rate of return on these individual accounts drops by just one percentage point, that the whole plan goes up in smoke and Social Security will fall short by about 10 percent.

The long and the short of it, one needs to look at it very carefully and very closely. What it attempts to do is deal with, as I talked about earlier, privatizing Social Security in the long run, which in fact is a detriment to the Social Security program, in my view, in general and in particular with regard to women.

One of the purposes of why we are here tonight is to talk about it, is public education. We need to let people know what is at stake and that, in fact, when we take a look at some of the schemes that are on the table, they are meant to turn Social Security on its head, to change the focus and the nature of this program that has meant so much in the lives of families today, and our specific topic, for women's lives today.

Again, we cannot afford to let it happen. I know that my colleagues are committed not only to speaking on the floor of this House but taking this message to the country to start to talk about women and Social Security, what it means, what it has meant in the past, what it means for the present, and what it means in the future, and that we are not going to allow this program, which has meant so much to the safeguard of women and the independence of women in their later lives, be jeopardized in any way.

The American public needs to know what is at stake. The American women need to know what is at stake. And I am proud to join with my colleagues tonight as we begin that program of public education.

I cannot thank my colleagues enough for letting me participate in this effort tonight.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I cannot thank my colleague enough for the leadership that she has provided for us in this House to ensure that we have Medicare and Social Security as the top issues for women in 1999 and leading into the millennium.

I would like to echo what she said, because public education is important. We must make sure those who are today's citizens in this country, more of them are women and the elderly, do not get hooked and locked on this privatization of Social Security and Medicare, especially Social Security. We must ensure their well-being, their safety, their security by not having privatizing and not privatizing with these private accounts that is being discussed as we move into the discussion of Social Security and Medicare.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to now yield to a person who has been on point, who is one of the senior Members of the House, and she has just done a yeoman's job in talking about the unique effects that this proposal, Social Security and Medicare, will have on women. The distinguished gentlewoman from the State of Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) will now speak to us on Social Security and Medicare.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD) for championing this effort this evening and so many of the other initiatives that she has taken as a sparkling Member of this House, certainly the cause of women in this case, in her role as co-Vice Chair of the Democratic Women's Caucus to bring us all to the floor this evening to talk about Social Security, Medicare, and women in America.

I also want to acknowledge the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. ROSA DeLAURO), the assistant Vice Chair of our caucus, and so many of the other women that have joined us this evening, our good friend the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. CARRIE MEEK), the gentlewoman from Florida (Mrs. KAREN THURMAN), the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. EVA CLAYTON), the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. CAROLYN MALONEY), and it literally goes from coast to coast.

Without question, Social Security is the lifeboat for a majority of seniors in our country and certainly for women. And even with Social Security, the poorest people in America today are women over the age of 80. So even the current program, as critical as it is to families and to citizens across our Nation, could be made stronger.

Certainly for women, we know that in the way that the formulas were written in past years they do not always receive as much as men because, when they did work, their pay was less. Others this evening have talked about women spending more time out of the work force raising their children, caring for their families, often caring for sick relatives. Women often work in jobs that have no pensions.

I was amazed to go into a little cookie shop in an airport in Chicago a couple years ago and I approached someone who worked there and I said, ''How much do you pay?'' And they said, ''Minimum wage.'' And I said, ''What are my health benefits?'' They said, ''You would not get any of those or retirement. Only management gets that.'' I said, ''I guess I would not want to work here.''

But often one of the young women I was talking to did not know the answers to those questions. She had to go back and ask the manager back behind the swinging doors. So many women who are working do not ask the important question, ''What are my pension benefits?''

We know that most women who have lost their jobs as a result of ill-fated trade agreements, like NAFTA, lose their pensions as a result and, in fact, most of those who have lost their jobs under trade agreements like this, because they are minimum wage jobs and entry level jobs, are mainly minority women across this country.

We also know that most women do not begin saving for their retirement and they think it will not matter to create a savings account that would be a supplementary account to Social Security. And if they do have a little savings account or an investment account, they do not hold it long enough so that it would grow in a little bit of a larger nest egg. I want to say something about that this evening.

□ 2130

We also know that women who do manage to have a little bit of cash, if they have any at all, often do not look at other investments that they might make during their working years, for example, in buying a home.

Today, with interest rates the way they are, many, many people, if they check it out, this is not just women but people working across this country and paying rent, you would be surprised if you really looked at all the available programs, through your city, through your county, through your locality. You would find you could buy a home today cheaper probably than you could rent it. You ought to check that out. Because a home can become a very important source of equity. You own it. It does not belong to someone else.

It is very important this evening that all of us participate in this session to help educate the American people, and certainly women, about retirement planning. It is important if you are applying for a job to find out if that employer has a pension plan. Is it just Social Security? Or Social Security plus something else, like a 401(k) or an individual retirement account. If they do have a retirement account, what kind of plan is it? And are you, in fact, participating in that plan? Were you asked about it? Did you ask about it?

You really also, if you are married, need to know what your spouse's plan is. I cannot tell you how many women have come to me after the death of their husband and they say, ''He didn't check the little box.'' That means that my retirement pay from the company, putting Social Security aside for the moment, is less. And they, of course, do receive lower payments from Social Security on the death of a spouse.

So it is very important to know what your benefits are. You need to know which Social Security benefits you are entitled to. And the Social Security Administration will tell you that if you fill out the little card, they will be able to tell you how many quarters you have in, what your potential benefits might be, and you can get ready for that moment ahead of time. One of the biggest mistakes women make is not asking and not finding out soon enough.

Another issue women have to be concerned about, and the American Association of Retired Persons recommends these tips for women in addition to Social Security, think of your retirement security as a necessary expense, and no matter how small your check, take a few pennies or dollars out of that every month and put that in a pension program that is separate from Social Security, that can augment Social Security, which should be your base plan.

Think about setting up an Individual Retirement Account. Your banker, your credit union preferably, your employer can help you do this. But make sure that you control that money and that the employer does not control that money. Make sure you have a voice in that.

Also, figure out ways to try to control your spending. Create a budget with savings in mind, cut unnecessary expenses and pay credit card balances. If you can, think about resoling your shoes rather than buying new shoes or moving up or down the hem in your skirt rather than buying a new one. There are lots of ways to put a little bit of money aside for the future.

Really, it is a good idea to have a budget. Then you will come close to it or perhaps meet it, and you will begin to set up this little extra nest egg.

Whatever you do, invest with inflation in mind. When women tend to invest, they do so in very low-yielding assets. They find out that the income from those assets in later years really does not cover inflation and taxes.

So I think this evening is very important in helping women to think a little bit about planning for retirement. I know when I hold sessions in my own district on women and money, it is the most popular session that we have. Actually, more people attend that than the sessions we do on health. That is because women, though they have tremendous financial responsibilities in our schools, we do not always teach how to manage personal finances anymore. They used to have courses called home economics. Those are sort of outdated now, but we really need to have financial planning for all of our citizens, including women. I know every woman in this country has the ability to do that.

So I think my message tonight as a part of this excellent session that the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) has organized along with the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO) is that Social Security is your base plan, and those of us here will make sure that Social Security remains sound as a promise between generations. It is an insurance program, a program of promise to the Nation.

If there are seniors listening this evening, do not get high blood pressure, do not worry about Social Security. You do not have to contribute to any of those groups that make you pay money to say they will lobby for you here in Washington. We are your best lobbyists. Use us. You pay us through your tax dollars to do your work for you. Save those dollars that you are paying all those lobbying groups. Put it in an investment account for yourself to augment your Social Security.

The most important thing you can do to preserve Social Security and Medicare is to elect the right people to Congress. You know who they are, because they are right at home where you live. You do not have to come here to Washington to meet them.

Then if you have the ability, especially if you are younger or even if you are not that young, to set a little bit of extra money aside in a special savings account that earns interest, get a little bit of advice on that. Talk to some of your friends. Have some sessions where you live, in your neighborhood, in your church, in your senior retirement building. Start little clubs where you talk about investing money and take some of those bingo chips and take some of those little earnings that you have from bridge, even if it is a few dollars, and think about putting those dollars away and seeing what they will earn. Maybe you can do it as a group working with some of your credit union advisers, let us say, in your area.

It is important for you to learn about money. As you learn more, your children will learn, your grandchildren will learn, and the best teachers in America are our mothers and grandmothers. So they can do a lot to help those who are younger than they are to plan for their own retirements.

I really believe you can start saving at a very early age and you can start thinking about your future years, whether it is saving for education or saving for your retirement.

I want to compliment the gentlewoman from California (Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD) for holding this special order this evening. She is doing a big favor to all the women and families of our country.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) for the outstanding contribution she has made tonight and the ongoing leadership and support that she gives to these critical issues.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of this special order today.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, as we continue to talk about both Social Security and Medicare, we know that the faces of Medicare are really the faces of women you know. They are your mom, your grandma, your wife, your sisters. They might even be the person whom you see in the mirror.

Medicare, being an important issue, is very timely that we speak about it today and we talk about this critical issue as it relates to women age 65 and older. Women are 58 percent of the people who receive Medicare. At the age of 85, that number will rise to 71 percent. At age 85, women outnumber men in the Medicare program two to one. Women's average life expectancy is 6 years longer than men. At every age, women are at greater risk of poverty than men.

There are many gaps in the Medicare program, Mr. Speaker, and there are a number of gaps in this program, most notably the absence of coverage for prescription drugs and long-term care. Also, in Social Security, we know that, on average, women are in the workforce fewer years than men and earn less than men, yet women tend to live longer. Meanwhile, women's pension benefits are based on such factors as years in the workforce and lifetime earnings relative to those of their husband.

Mr. Speaker, we must remember that just 33 percent of women retirees 65 and older versus 53 percent of retired men at that age receive a private pension annuity fund. In fact, in 1994 those were the numbers. Women simply cannot rely on other forms of retirement savings to the extent to which men can. Women must continue to have a strong, secure Social Security and Medicare system that recognizes the need of widows and divorced women to receive their spouse's benefits.

Lastly, any effort to strengthen our retirement system must resolve this vast economic chasm that exists between women and men in America.

SECURITY, PROTECTION, SAFETY NET

Mr. Speaker, tonight Congresswoman DELAURO and I have gathered our colleagues to address two critical issues concerning women. As Co-Vice Chair of the Women's Caucus, I think it is vitally important that we ensure retirement security for women as we work to strengthen Social Security and Medicare. Social Security has played a pivotal role in ensuring financial security for most elderly women, however there are still far too many elderly women living in poverty. In our work to establish a better and more secure retirement system, we must not exacerbate this situation but rather, do all that we can to resolve the discrepanacy now and for all future generations.

Mr. Speaker, the Social Security rules provide critical income security for women. The progressive benefit formula provides proportionately higher benefits for low earners than for high earners, which is important for women who continually earn less incomes than men. In 1997, the median annual earnings yearround for full-time workers was approximately $33,000 for men and $24,000 for women, which means women are earning 74.1% of the wages men earn.

For working women in their fifties, who should be earning close to their peak salaries, the income differential is equally disturbing. These women earned just 63 percent of what men of the same age earned in 1996. The entire group of older women have less than three-fifths the personal income of older men. In 1996, older women had a median personal income of approximately $10,000.

Providing higher benefits for women through the current Social Security system helps compensate for the countless paychecks that are at most 73 percent of their male counterparts. Social Security also places the necessary emphasis on the value of raising children by helping homemakers establish retirement security. For these women, Social Security provides a retirement benefit equal to 50 percent of their spouses' benefits. For the homemaker who becomes divorced after at least 10 years of marriage, Social Security provides a retirement benefit based on her former spouse's benefits. In addition, Social Security provides widow's benefits equal to 100 percent of her husband's benefits for the older woman whose husband dies. Social Security survivor's benefits are even provided for younger widows whose children receive survivor's benefits while the widow is caring for them and not working.

For all of these reasons: the pay gap, the fact that women live longer than men, and the current Social Security benefit rules, is why a significant proportion of older unmarried women are solely dependent on Social Security. In 1994, 40 percent of unmarried women 65 and older who received Social Security depended on it for at least 90 percent of their income—and more than one-fifth had no other income. Even more alarming, half of older unmarried women of color relied on Social Security for 90 percent of their incomes, and for more than one-third of these women, Social Security was their only source of income. In real terms, this means that most elderly women are living on just $10,000 to $12,000 per year. Social Security clearly serves as a vital safety net for women who are divorced or become widows.

As strong as this system is, however, too many women fall through the cracks. Nearly three-fourths of the nation's four million who are elderly poor are women. Older women are twice as likely as older men to be poor. In addition to the consistently lower income women earn per year as compared to men, the disparity in other retirement options contributes to the feminization of poverty among our elderly women.

In the Nation's pension system, men benefit significantly more than women since most mothers do not have a consistent work history due to the time off for raising children. Just 33 percent of women retirees 65 and older versus 53 percent of retired men that age received a private pension annuity in 1994.

Women simply cannot rely on other forms of retirement savings to the extent to which men can. Women must continue to have a strong, secure Social Security system that recognizes the need for widows and divorced women to receive their spouses' benefits. Any effort to strengthen our retirement system must resolve this vast economic chasm that exists between women and men in America.

I would like to thank the women and men of the House who are joining us tonight to address women's retirement security.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, the subject, Social Security, is on the minds of our constituents. Citizens want to know if there will be a system when they need it, and they want to know how the system impacts them as individuals, as family members, and as tax payers. They're asking good questions that require good answers.

It is especially encouraging to see the emphasis being given to the concerns of women. Comparing women to men, statistics demonstrate that women live longer, are paid less, and are more likely to depend on Social Security for retirement benefits. All women, whether or not they have been in the workforce, need to know how the system works.

I am pleased to join in supporting you on Tuesday May 4th as you discuss ''Women and Social Security/Retirement''. I know that there will be information disseminated that I will be able to share at the 11th District Forum, ''Social Security & You'', which I will host in Cleveland on May 22nd.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, recently, leaders of the National Council of Women's Organizations came to Washington. Foremost on their agenda was the impact of Social Security reform proposals on women.

These women said ''Don't forget about us.''

Our nation's social security system has had a successful tradition of providing ''assistance'' to our seniors and disabled. However, changes in our society's economic and social conditions warrant structural revisions.

Although there is no immediate danger to the system, the threat of insolvency has moved us to take action to preserve Social Security for the ''baby boom'' generation. As such, this debate is not about whether reform is necessary, but what structural revisions would best suit our seniors.

Mr. Speaker, I submit to you today that as we evaluate these revisions, I will not forget that Social Security benefits are essential to the women of America.

I will not forget that without Social Security, more than 50% of all women over age 65 would be living in poverty today.

I will not forget that during their most employable years, women earn only about 74% of what men are paid.

And, I will not forget that women are less likely to work full-time and more likely to spend time outside the paid labor force while raising children. As a result, only 26% of women over age 65 received a pension of annuity payment in 1995.

Our current Social Security benefits structure protects workers with lower lifetime earnings—including most women and minority workers. Social Security provides an inflation-protected benefit that lasts as long as the beneficiary lives. Since women tend to live longer than men, they are in greater danger of outliving their other sources of retirement income; but it is impossible to outlive one's Social Security benefit.

The current system also provides extra benefits to spouses with low lifetime earnings which helps many women, even if they did not work at all outside the home.

Further, Social Security provides benefits to spouses of any age who care for children under 16 if the worker (other spouse) is retired, becomes disabled, or dies. Women represent 98 percent of recipients receiving benefits as spouses with a child in their care.

In the future, Social Security will continue to be important for women. As the labor force participation rates of women rise, women will reach retirement with much more substantial earnings histories than in the past. Therefore the percentage of women receiving benefits based solely on their own earnings history is expected to rise from 37 percent today to 60 percent in 2060. However, this means that 40 percent of women will continue to receive benefits based on their husband's earnings.

These aforementioned provisions allow us to claim that our current retirement system is equitable and just. Significantly, both financial necessity and social justice demand that to maintain this claim, a new system must retain minimum, guaranteed benefits and critical protections so that women are not penalized for inequity in pay and for taking care of the rest of us.

As Franklin Roosevelt stated: ''* * * [this] law will take care of human needs.'' Let's not forget women's needs.

I urge my colleagues to remember women and support social security reform that would bring their real life needs and circumstances into account.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Congresswoman MILLENDER-MCDONALD and Congressman DELAURO for arranging this special order tonight. We must bring attention to the exceptional circumstances of women as we examine the Social Security issue. As other Members of Congress have mentioned tonight, there are a few simple facts that show why women are effected by changes made to Social Security more than their male counterparts. First of all, most women earn a lower salary than men and therefore put a smaller amount into the Social Security Trust Fund with every paycheck. They are also more likely to spend a portion of their lives out of the workforce than men and women are half as likely as men to receive a pension which means they depend on their Social Security check as their sole source of income. Finally, women live longer than men and depend on Social Security for a longer period of time.

Therefore, changes made to the Cost of Living Adjustment and the idea of converting Social Security funds in private accounts will have a drastic effect on the way that retired women live. These factors must be taken into consideration when we decide how to resolve the issue of the potential insolvency of the Social Security Trust Fund. While limiting COLA's may cut costs, it will lower the standard of living for retired women because they rely heavily on Social Security as their only means of income and they live longer and need these adjustments to stay out of poverty. Private accounts may also have a negative effect on the retirement income of women because they may outlive their accumulated funds. Private accounts may put many women in a position where they live the later half of their retired years in poverty.

While Social Security is the economic mainstay for many women, we must also make a better effort to educate working women today about the benefits of investing in a pension plan. We must give them an opportunity to invest so they do not have to live out their golden years on an annual Social Security income that amounts to less than the minimum wage for most recipients. This coupled with making changes to the Social Security system that helps not harms women will improve the lives of all women in their retirement years.

Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD. Again, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank all of the women who were here tonight. We did not cover this as extensively as I would have wanted to. We will be back, because as we embark upon Mother's Day we must remember the elderly women in this country and their need for Medicare and Social Security.

REGARDING SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS BILL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I serve here in Congress as the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military, a subcommittee of the Committee on Armed Services. Before I move into remarks regarding the supplemental appropriation that will deal not only with the funding shortfalls in Kosovo and the funding shortfalls to fund our national military strategy, along with disaster assistance and humanitarian aid, I would like to comment on some remarks made by one of my own Republican colleagues here tonight during the 5 minutes. He put up a chart and on the chart he had lists that in World War II, with a 13 million force, we had 31 four-star generals and with our force of today, we have 33 generals, and that even though we have reduced our force, we still have all of these general officers.

Being responsible for the force structure decisions of the United States military, I would like to advise America that I have held the line on the increase, the demand for the increase out of the Pentagon on general officer strength. The force that fought World War II, that military force, is completely different from the military force of today. We also have encouraged jointness, greater cooperation and interoperability between all the services. When you do that, yes, you end up creating some bureaucracies and an increase in need for general officer strength. But more importantly we are going to maintain the sort of rank-heavy military for a very important reason. Kosovo really is that third scenario, ''third scenario'' meaning we have a national military strategy to fight and win two nearly simultaneous major regional conflicts. So you take a circumstance in Korea, you can take a circumstance in Iraq, and now we have the third circumstance with regard to Kosovo. If, in fact, the United States found itself on a three-front war and we had the necessity to have to build a force rapidly, we could do that when we maintain officer strength in the general officer corps along with senior noncommissioned officers. That is the reason we are going to hold the line on those strengths. So the chart that was used tonight is somewhat misleading, and I wanted to correct the record.

Over the next 1 hour, the gentleman from the 52nd District of California (Mr. HUNTER) chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Procurement and myself will discuss why all of the Members, and to inform America why we should support the emergency supplemental appropriation that we will be voting on here later this week.

Let me be very clear that there are some Members that point to this bill as though it were some form of a referendum on the President's actions in Kosovo, or that if we add additional funding to this supplemental appropriation that somehow we are forward funding the Clinton-Gore war. There is a lot of rhetoric, political rhetoric that is being used around here. So what the gentleman from California and I would like to clarify for everyone is what is the purpose of this emergency supplemental funding and why we have an increase in military funding in this bill that is over and above the President's request.

I believe that this bill is mislabeled. It should not be emergency funding with regard to Kosovo. This bill is necessary to fund the national security strategy of this country. The President has the singular responsibility to lay out the national security interest of this Nation. He then turns to the military planners and said, ''What is the national military strategy to carry that out?'' That is what makes us uncomfortable today.

Let me pose to you this question. Can anyone name this country, a country whereby 709,000 active service personnel, eight standing Army divisions, 20 Air Force and Navy air wings with 2,000 combat aircraft, 232 strategic bombers, 13 strategic missile submarines, with 232 missiles, 500 ICBMs, intercontinental ballistic missile systems, with 1,950 warheads, four aircraft carriers, 121 surface combat ships and submarines. Can anyone name this country with that type of force structure?

□ 2145

Is that country the former Soviet Union?

No.

Is that country Russia?

No.

Is that country China?

No.

Is the country the United Kingdom?

No.

You give up?

That country, the global superpower, no longer exists.

You see, the force structure that I just listed is how much the American military forces have been cut since 1990.

So why does our force structure matter so much?

First, let us look at the success.

In 1990 and 1991, the 45-day Gulf War was highly successful.

Why?

Well, in our active forces in 1990 we had 18 divisions. In the Air Force tactical wings we had 24. Navy ships and submarines, we had 546 as we were coming out of the Cold War era.

Part of the success was not only the force structure, but it was also because we had a highly-trained, well-equipped combat-ready force.

The question that is painful for those of us that serve on the Committee on Armed Services and those who appropriate funds on its behalf, was challenging for the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), and myself and others, is that we have to ask that question:

Could we fight and win a Gulf War today?

You see, that makes us very uncomfortable if you were to ask us that question, because we have forces in Korea on the peninsula, we have our forces in Iraq today, and now the President has us in a third scenario in former Yugoslavia.

So when we look at that force structure in 1990 and we see where President Clinton and Vice President Gore have taken us down to today with those budgets, we today have:

Army divisions, we have 10.

Air Force tactical wings, we only have 13.

And Navy ships and submarines, we only have 315.

The number that is used so often here in Washington is, if we do not hold the line on the Navy, we could dip below a 300-ship Navy, and that is fearful, my colleagues.

What is really concerning about these 10 active divisions: If you were to say, ''All right, Congressman. Of those 10 divisions, how many are ready to go right now?'' Five, only five because the other five divisions are called the follow-on divisions, and they have been hollowed out. They are short over 300 noncommissioned officers per brigade, over 300.

So we have got some anxiety building up between myself, and the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) and others about our present force structure today.

Let me put this into real numbers for my colleagues, divisions, wings, submarines, ships. Let me put it into numbers so my colleagues can relate, for those who are not familiar with the military.

The Army has been reduced. When we say taking down the size of these divisions and those who support them, we have reduced the Army strength by 250,000 personnel. The Navy has been reduced by 200,000 personnel, the Air Force has been reduced by 150,000 personnel, and the selected reserve has been reduced 250,000 personnel. And what is also very difficult today is we are not retaining the qualified personnel, nor are we recruiting the sufficient numbers to meet current service requirements. That is very challenging to many of us.

So why is force structure so important? Why are we talking about that? Force structure is important because earlier when I mentioned the purpose of the military, it is the means to the political objectives laid out by the President with regard to our national security interests.

I am going to read from the annual report to the President and Congress signed by the Secretary of Defense William Cohen here in 1999. He lays out our military strategy. The military strategy is in sum, and says on page 17:

In sum, for the foreseeable future U.S. forces must be sufficient in size, versatility and responsiveness in order to transition from a posture of global engagement to fight and win in concert with our allies two major theater of wars that occur roughly at the same time. In this context they must also be able to defeat the initial enemy advance in two distant theaters in close succession and to fight and win in situations where chemical and biological weapons and other asymmetric approaches are employed.

That is the present national military strategy.

So earlier I used this example of if we are involved in a Gulf War scenario, and North Korea decides to do something foolish, do we have the force structure to fight and win a two-front war? The open secret and the pain that we have to deal with is we do not have the force structure to do that today.

I do not get into the strategy decisions, but I am not going to be just the critic. I want to be the constructive critic. Do my colleagues know what would be different from a Republican administration and the Democrat administration with regard to this military strategy? I would take out where it says in order to transition from a posture of global engagement. I would strike those words from the military strategy. You see, that foreign policy of the President, this engagement around the world is what strains the military force. So the President has our military force stretched so thin in so many different places around the world, that is what makes it challenging, and I am going to speak to that a little bit more here later.

Let me also refer to the difference in the dollars that are used on the defense along with the utilization of the force. You see, the world is not as stable, and this is a paradox. The world is not as stable today as it was during the standoff of the Cold War. So often we hear in this town that the Russian bear has been replaced by a thousand vipers. The enemy today is difficult to define. The force structure that we have, we have to be more mobile and more fluid as we think of how to fight and win the next war. If you plan the next war how you won the last one, you have positioned yourself for failure, so we have to be very smart about our business.

But what is clear here by this chart is there is a mismatch between funding and the use of military force. Now you can look at this force here during the Bush administration, and the dollars, and the procurement, and the funding and the readiness to utilization. Some would be quick to say: Well, look, you have got too much money and you are not using the force. I heard our own Secretary of Defense say:

''Well, what's the purpose of the military if you do not use them?''

I am not sure I can follow her logic.

The purpose of the military is to fight and win the Nation's wars and to protect our interests, not to utilize the war in every corner of the world as though we are the world's policemen. You see, that is what gets us in trouble.

When I think of the paradox, it is almost those who say the B–2 bomber, and this is before the Kosovo incident, never dropped a bomb. That is a good thing, my colleagues. If the military never has to fire a shot, that is a good thing. When we are the finest, the best, the most well equipped military in the world, who wants to take us on? Our enemies are not cooperative. They take us on when we are vulnerable, and we are getting vulnerable.

Look at this one right here. From 1993 to 1999, we have reduced the budgets, and we have increased the utilization. So during the Bush administration the War Powers Act reporting to Congress, there were six. President Clinton's term, and AL GORE, 46 reports have been sent to Congress. That is the utilization. So not only has he taken our military force and stretched them to those 135 countries around the world, he has actually placed our military into harm's way in over 46 places around the world. Over utilization.

So what is happening to the force? The wear and tear on our forces, it is showing. It is showing, and the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) is going to talk about that coming up.

Let me go to this chart for just a second. When I talked about the utilization all around the country, Mr. Speaker, the President has a foreign policy of engagement. Engagement. And he uses our military as though they are diplomats, and military-to-military contacts and everything all around the world. But let us talk about some of the larger ones.

North Korea, we have 40,000 troops.

Bosnia, we have the 10,000.

In Iraq we have 20,200 aircraft, 1 carrier battle group.

Kosovo, 30,000 troops, 800 aircraft, one carrier battle group.

But we have got troops all over the place from Haiti, Honduras, Cuba, Iceland, Portugal, Spain, Netherlands, Panama, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Colombia, Argentina, Egypt, India, Israel, Kenya, Tanzania, Diego Garcia, Russia, Kazakhstan, Japan, Australia, China, Singapore, Thailand. The list goes on, and on, and on. So, we have taken our military force, we have cut down the structure, and we have spread them all around the world, but you see the President in their force structure says we can transition from spreading our forces all around the world, and then all of a sudden we can bring them together and we can fight and win in two near simultaneous major regional conflicts, and, oh, by the way, if we happen to get bogged down in Kosovo, do not worry, we can win.

No, this is very uncomfortable, Mr. Speaker, very, very uncomfortable.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel, I have conducted numerous hearings on the growing problems facing our service men and women. Although pay and benefits is important, there are other equally important issues stressing the force, quality of life issues, health care, lack of spare parts, lack of adequate training time, the aging of equipment, the high depreciation rates on our equipment, increased operational tempo, longer working hours and the family separation, reusing and reusing the same people. Asking them to do more with less is not a strategy for success.

Do not take my word for it, Mr. Speaker. Let me read some excerpts from a letter I received from a young Navy lieutenant:

Honor, courage and commitment are words that are often used in jest. What they should say is honor the sailor, respect the job and the sacrifices that he endures. Have the courage to give those who risk their life every day in the defense of our country and democracy the proper equipment to do their job. Make the commitment to the basic human needs that every human being, even sailors, need for themselves and their families. We need to provide the fleet with all the tools to maintain our assets. Just-in-time manning and ramping up for deployment is ludicrous. People and assets need to be in position and on board to benefit the rigors of the training cycle. Sailors need to be properly trained. They need to have the proper support, equipment to test the systems, be it on a ship or on an aircraft. They need publications that are up to date. They need various hand and automated tools to adequately perform the maintenance and maintain the equipment. I do not know what the fix is, and I do not know all the answers, but I will tell you I have never seen the Navy in such a sad state of affairs. I love this business and have always believed that there is honor in my chosen profession. Every cut back has a cost. In this case I think we cut too deep.

This Navy lieutenant said it in words for which I could not replace. So what have we done? We increased those missions dramatically, we have stressed the force, and this sailor is sending a basic message to the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), and myself, and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BATEMAN), and the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFLEY) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) who chair subcommittees in the Committee on Armed Services that we need to take care of the force as much as we can, and that is the purpose of our supplemental. We have asked for some billions of dollars over and above the President's mark, spending mark, and what we are trying to do is to fund this national military strategy.

This is no attempt by the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) and myself or others to front load some Kosovo war or anything else. We recognize that there are stresses in the force.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) tells a story about some F–16s in the Pennsylvania National Guard that did not have GPS, the global positioning system in the F–16s when they were deployed to Iraq in operation Provide Comfort. So what did the pilots do? They went to Radio Shack, bought it, strapped it onto their legs.

When one is flying an aircraft at high altitude over the desert, there is not much to navigate off of, and one has to have that GPS system. I feel awful, America, that we are not even doing the modernization of our force and pilots are actually going to Radio Shack to modernize their own fighter aircraft.

□ 2200

That is sad.

Let me move now to a quote from Admiral Jay Johnson. He said, we have approximately 18,000 gap billets in the fleet. What does that mean, Mr. Speaker? That means in the Navy today we are 18,000 sailors short.

Navy ships are being deployed at 10 to 20 percent under their strength. What does that mean? That means that when an aircraft carrier or a cruiser, when they leave harbor, they are leaving about 80 percent strength. So when they are deployed at sea and they end up with injuries, a workplace injury, a back or sick call, there are no replacements. They do not send replacements out to sea. Everybody has to then carry the load.

So instead of now working in the boiler room where maybe 10 people are assigned they now have seven. Two people get hurt, five now have to pick up the load. Instead of working 10 hours, they are now working 14 hours. That is what is happening to our force, and it is very, very difficult.

Let me mention Kosovo for a second. Here is something that is also very, very concerning to us. The current Kosovo mission has forced the United States to divert planes from their patrols over Iraq in order to support the ongoing campaign.

This quote here, in the New York Times, in early April, the Navy shifted its only aircraft carrier in the western Pacific and its 75 combat jets out of the region indefinitely to help wage war in the Yugoslavia campaign.

If we have taken our only carrier now out of that region of the world to support this so-called humanitarian war, how can we satisfy the national military strategy? We cannot. We cannot.

The second quote is, the Pentagon briefly suspended enforcement of the no-fly zone over northern Iraq when fighter bombers and radar-jamming planes were dispatched to the air war in Serbia.

Mr. Speaker, if we are having difficulty here at the moment maintaining the front against the forces in North Korea on the peninsula, maintaining the no-fly zone requirements in Iraq, and we have this war now in Kosovo and we cannot even mix and match, that is a very strong signal to us that we have to take corrective action, and it is immediate.

If all we do is fund what the President's request is, all we do is fund the bullet for bullet which they are firing, shame on us. We have to step forward, bite the bullet, that the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) is going to talk about, and do much more than that and go beyond.

I yield to the gentleman from San Diego, California (Mr. HUNTER), a highly decorated Vietnam veteran and well respected in this House, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Procurement.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER), for yielding me this time and for making such a superb presentation on the inadequacies of military funding that exist right now.

I have to protest that I did nothing special in Vietnam. I simply showed up, but I did serve with a lot of great people. I want to commend my friend for his participation in Desert Storm.

I think a good point here that the gentleman made very strongly is the fact that, while the military has shrunk by almost 50 percent, and most people do not realize that but some people realize that, they realize it is smaller, the natural tendency is to feel that since it is 50 percent of the original size it has been cut back so dramatically, over 200,000 people in the Navy and 200,000 people in the Army and so on, the team that is left has to be well paid, well armed and well trained.

One would think, boy, the residual people that we have there after we pared it down from this huge military that we had, a lot of people think we had in 1990, 1991, this military has to really be just in great shape, with lots of new equipment and ready to go.

The tragedy is, we have cut the military almost in half; and the half that we have left is not well paid, number one. The gentleman has really done wonders working as chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel, and he has been pushing hard to get compensation, and we know that the average military personnel today are making about 13.5 percent less than their civilian counterparts. That means if someone is an electronics technician in the Navy, they are making about 13.5 percent less on the average than the guy who is working for a private company out in industry.

The real tragedy of that is that, at the end, the bottom line is we have today about 10,000 military personnel on food stamps.

As I watched the stock market go through the roof the other day, I thought about that. Here we are in one of our most prosperous times and people are commenting on the endurance of this prosperity that we have had, the longevity of this prosperity. We have a military that is half as big as it was a few years ago, and the men and women in that military are underpaid, and 10,000 of them are on food stamps.

So, wrong, the first instinctive reaction is this must be a well-paid military since it has been cut in half. Answer, no.

Second, people must think, well, my gosh, it is half the size it was, it must be really well trained since it is pared down to this smaller force.

I think of Colonel Rosenberg, who was one of the national trainers at the National Training Command hearing that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BATEMAN), chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Readiness, held at Nellis Air Force base in Nevada. Colonel Rosenberg said, and I paraphrase him, he said, it is a real tragedy that this military that we built out of the ashes of the Vietnam War, that won so overwhelmingly in Desert Storm, is being destroyed before our very eyes.

When we asked for particulars from Colonel Rosenberg and others who were testifying there, these are the trainers at the National Training Center, it is kind of like the military college where the infantry goes and the armor goes and the artillery units go to get their upper level training. Once they have graduated from high school, so to speak, they go to this military college, which really is a big training ground out in the desert in the West, and they have to perform against a mock enemy, and they are given points.

The trainers said, among other things, the troops that we get often do not know anything about maneuver with armor. They do not know anything about the basics of calling in artillery fire. They do not know how to handle many, many procedures that have to be handled on the battlefield. In other words, this is like getting people in their first year in college and one realizes that they never should have graduated from the 11th and 12th grades in high school and one feels like they have to send them back for a refresher course.

We have fine young people in the military. So why are not they getting the training that is necessary, at least to get them into the upper training level? Well, the answer is, those dozens of deployments that the gentleman just talked about, that the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) just talked about, where the President has pulled people out of school, and a lot of these military schools are very technical, they have to sit there in a classroom and really learn to know their job, but these people are pulled out of their schools before they can finish it. They are kept from going to their schools.

It is like a kid who is in high school. He is supposed to get good grades his last year in high school. His dad has a farm, and his dad pulls him out of class 3 days out of 5 in the week, so he is only going to class about half the time he should have gone to class in his senior year, and all of a sudden he figures out he is not ready for college.

That is what this President has done with this downsized military. He has stretched it all over the world.

The average person will say, wait a minute. Those people that are in Bosnia, that is training. Well, it may train them for deployment, but it does not train them with the simulators. It does not train them with the test ranges that we have. It does not train them with the classroom work that they need.

So the second fallacy most people believe is that this smaller force is well trained, and it is not.

One last example, talking to the Marines, we talk about the V–STOL aircraft that goes straight up off the ground, the jet aircraft, that the Marines use, instead of going down a runway and lift off; very, very difficult aircraft to fly. When one asks the Marines, how many hours do these pilots really need to maintain proficiency in this very difficult aircraft, they will always say, over 20, 22, 24 hours a month. They have to have that to maintain proficiency.

What are they getting? They are getting about 12. They are getting about 12, because there is no money for training. That is just one of the many, many examples of inadequate training.

So that second fallacy that these people are well trained is, in fact, a fallacy.

Lastly, one would think, my gosh, if we have an Army that is 10 divisions today instead of 18 divisions, we have a Marine Corps that has been cut back, we have a Navy that has been cut back, and I noticed the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) is more precise than I am, we had 546 ships when we started, when we did Desert Storm. When we made up our chart last year, we had 346. When I gave my last briefing, it was 325. Now it is down to 315. We are dropping like a rock.

One would think when this Navy has been compressed to such a small fleet those ships that are there must be bristling with armaments. Wrong. It is not well armed. The reason is, we have starved our ammunition accounts. If anything qualifies, if we are talking about this emergency supplemental, and I hope every single Member of Congress, Democrat, Republican, liberal, conservative, I hope we all vote for it tomorrow. Because if there is anything that is an emergency, it is an inadequacy of ammunition. We have a shortage of ammunition.

One of the most important ammunitions that we have a shortage of is cruise missiles, long-range missiles, like Tomahawks, like conventional air launch cruise missiles. Because what we see today is a very complex and difficult to penetrate air defense in most of the world where we have to operate. We see that in Kosovo right now, but it is not limited to Kosovo. We are seeing the Iraqis continue to strive to build an air defense that is going to be able to take down American aircraft. They have not done it yet, but they import SAM missiles. We see that with the North Koreans.

So anyplace we go, we figured that the air defense over North Vietnam was more intense than it was over Berlin in World War II because of surface-to-air missiles. So we devised a way to allow our pilots, our neighbors who are pilots, to go out there and fly their mission, release a payload and return to their carrier deck or the tarmac of their runway without being killed.

The way we were able to do that is with cruise missiles. That is stand-off missiles. That means a B–52 does not have to fly into all that flak like they did over North Vietnam in December of 1972 when, as I recall, about 10 were shot down the first day.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. JOHNSON) recalled sitting in his prison cell and watching a B–52 get hit in midair by a SAM missile and just explode before his eyes.

We are flying those same B–52s today, but we have missiles on them that are launched from many miles away from the target. The cruise missile takes off, it travels like an unmanned airplane itself, and it hits a target. And, meanwhile, the pilot is hundreds of miles away from that antiaircraft fire; and he returns safely to his base. We are short on those missiles.

It does not make any sense that this country, as prosperous as we are, as devoted to human life as we are, and especially the lives of our service people, should have a shortage in cruise missiles.

I want to tell my friend, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER), who has made just an eloquent presentation tonight, we are short on cruise missiles. We are short several billions of dollars' worth of cruise missiles.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, let me ask the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) this question: I have the sense that the military planners in the Pentagon, in order to maintain readiness levels to their comfort, they have taken money that should have gone to ammunition and they are using it to maintain present operations and they are assuming a risk, are they not?

Mr. HUNTER. That is exactly right.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I would like for the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) to discuss that assumption of risk, how serious is it, how is it measured and what we are going to do about it in the supplemental.

Mr. HUNTER. The gentleman is exactly right. Because every time we have had one of these contingencies where the President wants to send troops, whether it is an operation that we consider justified or not, every time we have one of those operations, to fund the operations initially they take money out of the ammunition accounts. They also take money out of the spare parts accounts. That is why our mission capability rates are dropping below 70 percent on average.

□ 2215

They have dropped more than 10 percent, meaning a plane, out of 100 aircraft that take off that are built to do a particular mission, only about 70 of them now can do that mission.

So the President takes that money, or the military looks around for money, Congress is not giving them any extra money to fund an operation where the President said, you steam over here and do this mission, so they take it out of ammunition. They were going to buy that ammunition, but they will buy it next year, right, when they get the money back?

All of a sudden, they do the mission, they get a little money back, maybe in a supplemental funding bill, but they never get as much as they took out, so the ammunition accounts get lower and lower.

They say, when they appear before us, and the gentleman always asks that great question, and the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. FLOYD SPENCE) asks that question, as well, our great chairman of the Committee on Armed Services, he says, what is going on here, Admiral? What is going on here, General? Can we win these two wars?

They say, well, we can win those wars, but we now are taking on a higher risk. When we ask them to translate what risks means, it means risk of casualties, heavy casualties. Because we cannot win a war now with overwhelming force, like Norman Schwartzkopf did in Desert Storm, where you just crush the enemy, bring all your body bags empty to the United States. There are no dead Americans to put in them, and they all come home fairly quickly.

We no longer have that overwhelming force. What we have is the ability, like two fairly evenly-matched fighters, to slug it out, taking a blow for every blow that we give. That means taking dead Americans for every casualty we inflict on the enemy. And hopefully in the end, because we have a superior industrial base and because we have a democracy with a strong economy, we overwhelm the enemy at some point, maybe the allies come in and help, and we finally win. But when we win, it is like one of those boxing matches where the sportswriter said that after looking at the faces of both of the fighters, it was hard to determine who the winner was. Instead of looking at the faces of the fighters, we are looking at body bags stretched out in front of us of dead Americans who ran out of ammunition.

Right now the Marines are $193 million short of basic ammunition, and the Marines are the 911 force. The Army is $3.5 billion short of basic ammunition.

That is not a standard that I created, and that is not a standard that the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) created or the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. FLOYD SPENCE) or the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILL YOUNG), who is chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, who has done such a great job, along with the gentleman from California (Mr. JERRY LEWIS), chairman of defense appropriations, of putting this supplemental together.

We did not go out and set some standard and say, we have decided that instead of 100 million M–16 rounds, we want 200 million, that is a Republican standard. We took the President's standard. We wrote in to the services and said, how many M–16 bullets do you need to be able to fight that two-war contingency that we might have to fight? How much should we have in reserve?

They answered back. In fact, they answered back across the total line of ammunition. I have a summary of that here. In total ammunition across the board, and I have two pages here, but I will show Members just a summary page, we are $13.8 billion short, according to the President's standard. That is according to President Clinton's own standard of how much ammunition we need.

So when the President says, I do not want you adding extra things to this defense bill, he means that he does not want to give the full load of ammunition to his troops that his own clerks and auditors and generals and admirals have figured out they may need in an extended battle. Somehow, ammunition is no longer a prerequisite to having a strong military.

I would say if there is anything that is an emergency it is ammunition. If I had my way, let me tell the Members, we would have a supplemental tomorrow of not $13 billion, but one that was $28.7 billion, because that is what the services told us they could use right now in ammunition and spare parts and equipment. Because we not only want to have enough ammunition for the soldiers' ammunition pouches, we also want to have planes that can take off and lift off the ground. Today, as Members know, our mission capability rates have been dropping like a rock.

Mr. BUYER. If the gentleman will yield further, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman's concern is as great as mine that we are unwilling to assume a risk that will increase casualties in a war scenario around the world, the funding shortfall if we do not do even a piece of that in the emergency supplemental, I would say to the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), would we not have to wait then until the 2000 budget cycle, which means that the ammunition and the missiles which we are requesting may not even get to the force until about 18 months from now?

Mr. HUNTER. The gentleman is exactly right. In fact, we will have to wait for next year's funding, so we will have to wait at least 4 or 5 months before we can even enact the bill and have next year's funding levels start. That means having the Pentagon ready to start making contracts.

And then most of these ammo lines, some of them are closed, so most of these ammo lines will have to be reassembled, the assembly lines. By the time the soldier actually gets the bullets in the field or the airplanes get the cruise missiles or the Navy gets its particular missiles, 18 to 24 months can go by.

Do Members know what is interesting, some of the administration people have argued, well, we cannot execute this contract in the next 12 months, so we do not think we should do it now. They are saying, it takes a long time to get ammunition, so let us not start now.

Well, when do they want to start? Do they want to start when we have a conflict and we discover that we are out, we are empty? And I think our enemies should make no mistake about it, we still have an enormous nuclear arsenal, but I do not think anybody in this Chamber wants to rely on a nuclear arsenal as a deterrent.

In 1950 we did. One of the arguments for drawing down the force, we had 9 million people under arms in World War II. We just stacked arms. We got out of the military so fast and drew those units down so fast, because Americans wanted to come home and have babies and work on their farms and get jobs and enjoy the prosperity of America. We stacked arms.

General Marshall was asked, how is the demobilization going, in 1948? He says, this isn't a demobilization, it is a rout. We are just throwing our guns away. A few years later the Koreans marched down the Korean peninsula, a third-rate military, and almost pushed us into the ocean past the Pusan perimeter.

We were pretty sure that the Chinese would not mess with us. In fact, we didn't think anybody would mess with us because we had nuclear weapons. In fact, in those days we had the only nuclear weapons.

One reason that we allowed our forces to get so small, and incidentally, the Army was 10 divisions, just like it is today, we had drawn it down that small, but we figured that nobody would mess with us because we had nuclear weapons. We had this high technology that everybody was afraid of.

All of a sudden we discovered this third-rate military pushing our people down the Korean Peninsula. They overwhelmed the 25th infantry division, captured the commanding general, William Dean, our bazookas bounced off the T–64 Soviet tanks, because they had not stood still, they had continued to make and develop their weapons systems, and we lost a lot of people.

In my cousin's home in Fort Worth, Texas, we have a picture of my second cousin, Son Stillwell. Son was a Second Lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps, First Lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps who died in Korea. Lots of us in America have pictures on our mantles of people who lost their lives in wars which we were not prepared to fight.

Probably nobody today knows or can remember what social program took priority over a strong military in 1950, when so many of us lost relatives in the Korean War. But everybody that looks at those pictures on their mantles remembers who they lost.

I would say that our number one obligation as Members of the U.S. Congress to our people, and we do lots of things for people that the Constitution never mandated, we know that, and we all participate in it. But our number one obligation is to defend our people.

We have allowed the military to be bled down so low that we can no longer look our constituents in the eye and say, we can defend you and we have a real good chance of your youngsters coming home alive.

Mr. BUYER. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Speaker, I have heard some comment by Members that some of the emergency supplemental funding will actually be coming out of the social security trust fund. In other words, if Congress had made the pledge that every dollar of the surplus is to go to the social security trust fund, are we not really spending that social security dollar on defense?

We have also recognized that there will be funding in the surplus for payments on the national debt and a tax cut for any dollar that is over and above that allotment towards social security.

I will concur with the gentleman's comment that one of the first requirements of a government is to protect its people. I think what makes me very uncomfortable, the gentleman and I and those that serve in this body, it is easy to be the critic of the President or those in the Pentagon, but we have to become very constructive, because we are responsible.

The Constitution, does it not, I would ask the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), places us with the singular responsibility to build the force and make sure that it has what it needs to meet the legitimate needs of this Nation.

So when the gentleman laid out the scenario of what happened in Korea after World War II, the gentleman almost laid out the scenario that history is about to repeat itself; that those of us, myself and the comrades who served in the Gulf War, America and the world was impressed with our high-tech military force, so much so that no one would dare take on the United States military, especially in an air-land war, and that we could move anywhere in the world we want.

So in the face of such a deterrent, we drew down the force so rapidly and so quickly that now in force structure it is there, we have people. They are not as well-equipped as we would like. They are not as well-trained. And, oh, by the way, if we have to use them, I guess we will try to use what ammo we can, and we will never be in a two-war scenario, anyway. We hear that rhetoric around the town.

But I would say to the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), if we do this plus-up in this emergency supplemental, would the gentleman agree that we can immediately open up these lines for the missiles and begin replacing a lot of the needs?

Mr. HUNTER. Yes. Mr. Speaker, to answer the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER), and he has made such an eloquent presentation and made a great case for increasing our national defense funding, if we do in fact come up with this money, one thing we can do is go to the vendors.

If we have an ammunition line or a spare parts line or a missile line, you may have 25 or 30 major suppliers, companies that used to make little parts for that particular unit. You have to go get them and say, hey, you have to go back into business, because we are low on ammo and we need to get this ammo turned out quickly.

We can work with them, with a partnership of business and government. We can get in there and accelerate those lines and get them up and get producing. I think we can start turning out, for example, cruise missiles and other things a lot faster than the Pentagon thinks we can. I think when the Americans really want to do something, they can do it.

With respect to the senior citizens and their concern about social security, my feeling is, I have no qualms about using this money for an emergency. Lack of ammunition is an emergency. The generation that saved Private Ryan is going to want to help save this country. I am reminded that without national security, there is no social security.

With respect to the other programs, the tax cuts and social programs, whether you are a liberal who loves social programs and thinks tax cuts are terrible, or you are a conservative like myself who thinks that tax cuts increase the economy and increase jobs, no matter where your position is on the political spectrum, we should all agree that ammunition comes first. Let us have ammunition before we have tax cuts and before we have social programs. I do not think anybody would disagree with that.

Mr. BUYER. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask this question, but I am going to lay out a statement first.

If we do not have access to some of our high tech munitions such as laser-guided munitions, where an aircraft can stay miles up and drop a laser-guided munition through the front door of a target, I have heard comments, the hall comments, that we have all types of dumb bomb munitions that we could access.

But if we are to play into this, that we have so much dumb bomb munitions, are we not asking our pilots, who could stay miles above, to assume a risk? Because in order to drop that dumb bomb, they are going to have to come down into radar coverage, pick up the sight of their target, and immediately pull out. So those who are advocating, well, let us just drop dumb bombs, we will assume risks.

□ 2230

It is stunning for me how some people in this body are willing to let soldiers and sailors, airmen and Marines, pilots assume risks and not adequately equip them. Does the gentleman have a comment?

Mr. HUNTER. I would say there is no sight more gratifying I think to the member of a military family, to a spouse and the kids, than to have their dad get off of that airplane or get off of that ship in the good old United States and welcome them with open arms to come home.

Bringing our pilots home is very important to us. And the thing that allows them to come home alive is for them to be able to keep their plane a hundred miles from the target, launch a standoff weapon that can go in and hit the target while they stay out of range of those surface-to-air missiles. And I think one of the greatest agonies that we ever endure is when we have POWs and when we see what happens to some of them. And we have listened their stories when they come home. We have had some great ones on both sides of the aisle, Democrats and Republicans.

Smart weapons, standoff weapons, cruise missiles save lives. It is an absolute disservice to our uniformed people to not give them the very best. They deserve the very best. They are not getting adequate pay right now. We all know that. They are 13 percent below the domestic sector. We are trying to ramp that up. I know the gentleman is leading that charge and he is going to get some fruition to his efforts. That is one reason why the gentleman from California (Chairman LEWIS) and the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) and the other members of the Subcommittee on Defense and the full Committee on Appropriations sat down and added ammunition to this supplemental, they added a lot of smart weapons.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to offer an amendment that I hope is approved by the Committee on Rules that allows us to restart the Tomahawk missile lines, because I think we have got to have a lot of Tomahawk missiles because we cannot tell how fast we are going to have to use them. And I think we should build at least as many as President Clinton's own analysis say we need for the two-war requirement.

But to answer the gentleman's question, standoff weapons mean that Air Force families get to see their daddy. And having to fly over a target and drop a gravity bomb on that target with all that anti-aircraft fire and all of those very sophisticated surface-to-air missiles shooting back means that we of going to have dead pilots and we are going to have prisoners of war.

Mr. BUYER. As the Chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Procurement, I would like for the gentleman to comment on some other questions that Members are asking and some of their comments that increasing this billions of dollars over and above the President's number, that we are putting in things that the Pentagon did not ask for and that it is pork laden. So I ask the gentleman to comment on that, because I know the numbers that I put together for the Guard and Reserve, I spoke to each of the chiefs of each of services for their go-to-war requirements. Period. Operational. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HUNTER. Let me answer the gentleman. I can tell the gentleman that I sent over a request to the services to tell us exactly what they need. I did not ask any contractors what they wanted to sell. And I did not ask any congressmen what they wanted to get for their district.

I think most of the congressmen that I have talked to just want to get what is right for America. They realize we have got to refill the ammunition coffers. This list, it represents a direct response from the services with respect to how much they have right now in terms of cruise missiles and all the other things that we need and how much the President's own analysis says we need and what the shortages are.

So they sent over the shortages. We did not get them from anybody else. We did not set any new standards to try to embarrass the President. We just used his standards. That is what this is.

Incidentally, the cruise missiles I am sorry to say, they used to be built in San Diego in my district. Well, about 10 years they moved out and they are now built in Arizona across the Colorado River, and so Arizonans have jobs building cruise missiles. I do not care. I do not care if they are built in the northeast, the Midwest, wherever. They save pilots' lives. I would like to have them come back to San Diego some day, but I do not think that is going to happen. But I think all Americans just want to see ammunition right now.

Mr. BUYER. Will the gentleman yield? The large request that I put in was in excess of $800 million. My district: Agricultural. A lot of corn, soybeans, wheat, a lot of pork, cattle, chickens, duck production, automobiles. I do not have the big defense contractors. So those who want to say that it is pork laden, I do not sell any of my hogs, none of my hogs out of Indiana for this bill.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, let me say to the gentleman who put together this Guard and Reserve package and does it for the Armed Services Committee, the gentleman has always acted with total integrity and has always met the needs of the services. Unfortunately, we have always had to cut what the services need, cut the supply of resources that we are going to give those shortages by about 50 percent. There are lots of things that the Guard and Reserve need right now on their equipment and in their training and in their ammunition and spare parts to be able to go off and serve in a foreign theater.

Mr. BUYER. One of the examples the Chief of the Army Reserve put on the list, he requested fire trucks. It would be very easy for someone who does not know anything about the military to look at the list of equipment necessities under the emergency supplemental and say why are we funding fire trucks?

The answer is very simple. The Army Reserve has the ground support mission for the Apaches that were sent over to Albania and the present fire trucks from the Army reserves are utilized in Bosnia and they need to have the fire trucks.

Mr. HUNTER. People need to know when an aircraft comes in on fire, and this is one thing I learned in San Diego watching our Federal firefighters who handle the jets out there, they have to have incredible training and great equipment to be able to put out those fires on the aircraft and save lives. So they have to carry a contingent of firefighters with them.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman would yield?, he will be happy to have yielded to me because I am going to extend a great compliment to the gentleman. I have been impressed with the gentleman's chairmanship over the years. With his focus on operational requirements, getting to the services what they need to fight and win the Nation's wars.

I want to compliment the gentleman as one of the strongest advocates to make sure that our ammunition bins are filled. Because I can say that, yes, we all share the responsibility on procurement, but it is singular with the gentleman from San Diego in this body because we have to turn to him as Chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Procurement to tell us what those needs and requirements are. And, actually, we yield to the gentleman's integrity that he will make those proper decisions. That is not just us; America yields to him. America out there whose sons and daughters may be in Korea right now, part of the 37,000 that are right now on the line in Korea or in a ship or in Okinawa or maybe they are in Iraq right now or wherever they are in the world to face a threat they have to be able to sleep in comfort that the gentleman from California has made sure that their son or daughter can access just in time to get that ammunition. And that is why I compliment the gentleman.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I say to my friend, I thank him for that compliment. When I see the gentleman from Indiana up there in the Committee on Armed Services, I see a soldier who has a great integrity and devotion to his country and to his people that he serves with and to the people that are still serving. The gentleman has done a wonderful job.

What I think is a great tragedy is that I do not think we are fulfilling our obligation. I do not think we as a body are fulfilling it. And if we get to a point where we have our Marines and soldiers or sailors or airmen coming up short of ammunition, short of spare parts and more of them die on the battlefield because of that, then we will have failed them.

So I hope that every Member votes for this supplemental appropriation tomorrow and I hope they vote for the amendments. And it is going to be in two days. I hope they vote for the amendments that increase the ammunition supply. Even if we vote for those, we are still going to be about $12 billion short of basic ammunition. So we are not taking care of the problem, but we are taking care of part of the problem.

I really thank the gentleman for his hard work. And maybe the gentleman could share with us his ideas too about how we are going to finally close this pay gap over the next several months and years.

Mr. BUYER. Well, I will close this tonight and reclaim my time that on May 13 we will mark up the Subcommittee on Military Personnel's Chairman's mark and we are going to address the increase in military pay. We are going to change the pay tables to increase retention. We are concerned about the retention not only at the mid-level officer and NCO, but also the retention of general officer strength. They are leaving for other jobs and that is not healthy.

We are going to reform the retirement system. We are looking at creating a Thrift Savings Plan for the military. Part of this emergency supplemental, about $1.8 billion, is for the funding of the pay package, subject to the authorization that we come up with. So we are going to address the pay differential and we are going to take a very serious look at a lot of other things.

I did not totally concur with the Senate's package, S. 4. It became a huge Christmas tree and everybody wanted to throw their arms around the soldier. But the problems are much greater. It is the quality of life issues. It is the housing issues. It is the readiness. It is the lack of spare parts. It is a large issue. So we are going to make sure that we try to address it by the breadth and we are going to be smart about our business.

Let me close with this one story that has always moved me, and I think it will go to the heart of the spirit of why the gentleman from California and others work so very, very hard on these issues. I think of the World War II veteran. It is the World War II veteran I believe is a generation that changed the world and left freedom in their footsteps.

Mr. Speaker, I will conclude by saying that they understand the total sacrifice and they have taught a generation what freedom means. The gentleman's example on Korea here tells us let us do not relive history. Let us accept the responsibility. This is not an emergency supplemental for Kosovo; this is funding our national military strategy and it must be done.

NATIONAL TEACHERS DAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure on behalf of my colleagues today to recognize National Teachers Day and National Teacher Appreciation Week. We know the old bumper sticker that reads, ''If you can read this, thank a teacher.'' Well, tonight I would like to thank teachers.

The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) organized this special order, but was unable to be here tonight because he had to attend a funeral. But on his behalf and my colleagues', I would like to talk a bit about teachers.

According to the National PTA, the origins of National Teachers Day are somewhat unclear but it is known that Arkansas teacher, Mrs. Mattie White Woodridge began corresponding with political and educational leaders around 1944 about the need for a national day honoring teachers.

One of the people Mrs. Woodridge wrote to was Eleanor Roosevelt who persuaded the 81st Congress to proclaim a National Teacher Day in 1953.

In the late 1970s, the National Education Association as well as many of its local affiliates persuaded Congress to create a national day celebrating the contributions of teachers and such a day was established in 1980. In 1985, the NEA and the National PTA established a full week of May as National Teacher Appreciation Week, and to make the Tuesday of that week National Teacher Appreciation Day.

It is only right that we take a moment to honor the dedication, hard work, and importance of teachers in our society. As a teacher myself, I know that teaching is a hard and sometimes unrecognized job. But of all the important jobs in our society, nothing makes more of an impact on our children than a well-trained, caring and dedicated teacher. No job ultimately is more important to our society.

Each of us has had teachers who have made marks on our lives who have pushed us to achieve more and challenged us to excel. While these teachers may not command the celebrity of a sports star, they continue to work every day often under difficult circumstances to guide our children to a better future.

We here in Congress, on both sides of the aisle, continue to debate ways to improve our public schools and to boost the educational achievement of our young people. Experts have suggested all kinds of ways to strengthen our education system. But as we talk about these programs and policies, we may forget that one of the best ways to improve our education system is to show respect and support for our teachers.

Teachers across our Nation are doing an outstanding job. As I have traveled around my central New Jersey district, I have met hundreds of teachers who are working hard every day to prepare students to succeed in this economy and it is not often easy.

□ 2245

Compared with many professionals, teachers are underpaid and overworked. The Education Testing Service pointed out in a recent report that despite the importance of the work they do, teachers still earn less in median weekly wages than doctors, lawyers, accountants, public relations professionals and even many service workers.

Studies consistently show that teachers earn less than other professionals with similar educational requirements, and that is just not right. As long as this country continues to pay teachers less than it pays others, we will not get all we need. In the next decade we Americans must hire two million new teachers to fill vacancies and to keep up with student school growth, and we need the best people.

Teachers often perform miracles in the classrooms, which too many of us take for granted. We forget many times teachers are called on to undertake other tasks in addition to teaching. Teachers today often have to enforce discipline and guide troubled children to the help they need. Our Nation can improve its education system by showing respect for teachers and by letting them know how much we value their work. All of us should take time to thank our teachers.

Later this week, when I return home to New Jersey, I will visit a teacher at West Windsor Plainsboro School on Friday morning, the first morning I am back, and I will teach a class in physics. But we need to do more than simply reflect on teachers' contributions and drop in occasionally. We need to undertake policies that will make their jobs easier. We need to work together to find ways to support teachers, to help them continue to grow professionally, to help our school districts hire more qualified teachers, to help our school districts modernize and update their classrooms with technology. That is how we thank our teachers. That is how we show respect for our teachers. That is how we show respect for our children.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Ms. CARSON (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today on account of personal business.

Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma (at the request of Mr. ARMEY) for today on account of inspecting tornado damage in Oklahoma.

Mr. TIAHRT (at the request of Mr. ARMEY) for today on account of inspecting tornado damage in Kansas.

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma (at the request of Mr. ARMEY) for today and May 5 on account of inspecting tornado damage in Oklahoma.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. LIPINSKI, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BAIRD, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. PALLONE, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BLUMENAUER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. SMITH of Washington, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. WOOLSEY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ALLEN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. KUCINICH, for 5 minutes, today.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. BROWN of Florida, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. SANDERS, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. THUNE) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. MORAN of Kansas, for 5 minutes each day, today and on May 5th.

Mr. DEMINT, for 5 minutes, on May 5th.

Mr. HILL of Montana, for 5 minutes, on May 5th.

Mr. SCHAFFER, for 5 minutes, on May 5th.

Mr. BATEMAN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BURTON OF Indiana, for 5 minutes, on May 11th.

Mr. GUTKNECHT, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina, for 5 minutes, on May 5th.

Mr. DUNCAN, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BRADY of Texas, for 5 minutes, on May 5th.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. SHERWOOD, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. GIBBONS, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. SAXTON, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. THUNE, for 5 minutes, today.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 47 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 10 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1822. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Dimethomorph; Extension of Tolerance for Emergency Exemptions [OPP–300842; FRL–6075–2] (RIN: 2070–AB78) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

1823. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Oxyfluorfen; Extension of Tolerance for Emergency Exemptions [OPP–300834; FRL–6073–4] (RIN: 2070–AB78) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

1824. A letter from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Changes in Flood Elevation Determinations [Docket No. FEMA–7268] received April 6, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

1825. A letter from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Final Flood Elevation Determinations—received April 6, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

1826. A letter from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Final Flood Elevation Determinations—received April 6, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

1827. A letter from the General Counsel, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Changes in Flood Elevation Determinations [Docket No. FEMA–7277] received April 6, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

1828. A letter from the Assistant Secretary, Office of Postsecondary Education, Department of Education, transmitting the Department's final rule—Gaining Early Awareness and Readiness for Undergraduate Programs (RIN: 1840–AC59) received April 23, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

1829. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Authorization to Implement Section 111 and 112 Standards; State of Connecticut [A–1–FRL–6325–3] received April 12, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

1830. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Approval and Promulgation of Air Quality Implementation Plans; Pennsylvania; Approval of VOC RACT Determinations for Individual Sources [PA129–4083a; FRL–6323–6] received April 12, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

1831. A letter from the General Counsel, Information Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Exchange Visitor Program—received April 7, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on International Relations.

1832. A letter from the General Counsel, Information Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Exchange Visitor Program—received April 7, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on International Relations.

1833. A letter from the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting notification that funding under title V of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended, will exceed $5 million for the response to the emergency declared on January 15, 1999, as a result of the record/near record snow which severely impacted the State of Indiana from January 1, 1999, through and including January 15, 1999, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 5193; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1834. A letter from the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting notification that funding under title V of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended, will exceed $5 million for the response to the emergency declared on January 8, 1999, as a result of the record/near record snow which severely impacted the State of Illinois from January 1, 1999, through and including January 15, 1999, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 5193; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1835. A letter from the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting notification that funding under title V of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended, will exceed $5 million for the response to the emergency declared on January 27, 1999, as a result of the record/near record snow which severely impacted the State of Michigan from January 2, 1999, through and including January 15, 1999, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 5193; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1836. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Bell Helicopter Textron Canada Model 407 Helicopters [Docket No. 99–SW–16–AD; Amendment 39–11111; AD 99–06–15] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1837. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 747 Series Airplanes [Docket No. 98–NM–163–AD; Amendment 39–11106; AD 99–08–02] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1838. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 747 Series Airplanes [Docket No. 97–NM–326–AD; Amendment 39–11105; AD 99–08–01] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1839. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Bombardier Model DHC–8–100, -200, and -300 Series Airplanes [Docket No. 97–NM–04–AD; Amendment 39–11109; AD 99–08–04] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1840. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Eurocopter France Model SA.3160, SA.316B, SA.316C, and SA.319B Helicopters [Docket No. 98–SW–58–AD; Amendment 39–11112; AD 99–08–06] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1841. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model DC–9 and C–9 (Military) Series Airplanes [Docket No. 98–NM–110–AD; Amendment 39–11110; AD 99–08–05] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1842. A letter from the Program Support Specialist, Aircraft Certification Service, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model DC–10 and MD–11 Series Airplanes, and KC–10 (Military) Series Airplanes [Docket No. 98–NM–55–AD; Amendment 39–11072; AD 99–06–08] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1843. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Airworthiness Directives; Allison Engine Company, Inc. AE 3007A and AE 3007C Series Turbofan Engines [Docket No. 99–NE–01–AD; Amendment 39–11108; AD 99–02–51] (RIN: 2120–AA64) received April 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

1844. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting Initial estimate of the applicable percentage increase in hospital inpatient payment rates for fiscal year 2000, pursuant to Public Law 101–508, section 4002(g)(1)(B) (104 Stat. 1388–36); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

1845. A letter from the Chair, Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, transmitting the FY 1998 Annual Report of the Christopher Columbus Fellowship Foundation, pursuant to Public Law 102–281, section 429(b) (106 Stat. 145); jointly to the Committees on Banking and Financial Services and Science.

1846. A letter from the Director, Office of Legislative Affairs, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, transmitting a listing of two Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation properties covered by the Act as of September 30, 1998; jointly to the Committees on Banking and Financial Services and Resources.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. YOUNG of Florida: Committee on Appropriations. Report on the Suballocation of Budget Allocations for Fiscal Year 1999 (Rept. 106–124). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida: Committee on Appropriations. H.R. 1664. A bill making emergency supplemental appropriations for military operations, refugee relief, and humanitarian assistance relating to the conflict in Kosovo, and for military operations in Southwest Asia for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–125). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. SESSIONS: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 158. Resolution providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 833) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–126). Referred to the House Calendar.

TIME LIMITATION OF REFERRED BILL

Pursuant to clause 5 of rule X the following action was taken by the Speaker:

(The following action occurred on April 30, 1999)

H.R. 434. Referral to the Committees on Ways and Means and Banking and Financial Services extended for a period ending not later than May 21, 1999.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. HYDE (for himself, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. BARR of Georgia, Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts, Mr. BACHUS, Ms. LOFGREN, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Mr. CLAY, Mr. CRANE, Mr. CUMMINGS, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. EWING, Mr. FARR of California, Mr. FOLEY, Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. HAYWORTH, Mr. HINCHEY, Mr. HOLDEN, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. MANZULLO, Mr. MARTINEZ, Ms. NORTON, Ms. RIVERS, Mr. SCOTT, Mr. SHOWS, Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina, Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania, and Mr. YOUNG of Alaska):

H.R. 1658. A bill to provide a more just and uniform procedure for Federal civil forfeitures, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SERRANO (for himself and Mr. HYDE):

H.R. 1659. A bill to reinforce police training and reestablish police and community relations, and to create a commission to study and report on the policies and practices that govern the training, recruitment, and oversight of police officers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. RANGEL (for himself, Mr. GEPHARDT, Mr. BONIOR, Mr. STARK, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. COYNE, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. MCDERMOTT, Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. MCNULTY, Mr. JEFFERSON, Mr. BECERRA, Mrs. THURMAN, Mr. ABERCROMBIE, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BALDACCI, Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin, Ms. BERKLEY, Mr. BLAGOJEVICH, Mr. BLUMENAUER, Mr. BORSKI, Ms. BROWN of Florida, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. CAPUANO, Ms. CARSON, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, Mrs. CLAYTON, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. CROWLEY, Mr. DAVIS of Virginia, Ms. DEGETTE, Mr. DELAHUNT, Ms. DELAURO, Mr. DEUTSCH, Mr. DINGELL, Mr. DIXON, Mr. ETHERIDGE, Mr. FARR of California, Mr. FATTAH, Mr. FILNER, Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts, Mr. FROST, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. GORDON, Mr. HINCHEY, Mr. HINOJOSA, Ms. NORTON, Mr. INSLEE, Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island, Ms. KILPATRICK, Mr. KUCINICH, Mr. LAFALCE, Mr. LAMPSON, Mr. LATOURETTE, Mrs. LOWEY, Mrs. MALONEY of New York, Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. MASCARA, Mr. MCGOVERN, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. MOAKLEY, Mr. OLVER, Mr. PAYNE, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. POMEROY, Mr. QUINN, Ms. RIVERS, Mr. ROTHMAN, Mr. RUSH, Ms. SANCHEZ, Mr. SANDERS, Mr. SANDLIN, Mr. SAWYER, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, Mr. SHOWS, Ms. SLAUGHTER, Mr. STRICKLAND, Mr. TIERNEY, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. WEINER, Mr. WEXLER, Mr. WEYGAND, Ms. WOOLSEY, and Mr. WYNN):

H.R. 1660. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand the incentives for the construction and renovation of public schools and to provide tax incentives for corporations to participate in cooperative agreements with public schools in distressed areas; to the Committee on Ways and Means, and in addition to the Committee on Education and the Workforce, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mrs. MORELLA (for herself, Mr. BALDACCI, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. HILLIARD):

H.R. 1661. A bill to amend title XXVII of the Public Health Service Act and part 7 of subtitle B of title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to establish standards for the health quality improvement of children in managed care plans and other health plans; to the Committee on Commerce, and in addition to the Committee on Education and the Workforce, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York:

H.R. 1662. A bill to amend Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to provide for the inclusion of mentoring programs for novice teachers in the professional development activities of local educational agencies, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

By Mr. CALVERT (for himself, Mr. STUMP, Mrs. BONO, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. LEWIS of California, Mr. PACKARD, Mr. DREIER, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. EVANS, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. COX, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. BILBRAY, Mr. MCKEON, Mr. ROYCE, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. GARY MILLER of California, Mr. DIXON, Mr. MATSUI, Ms. LEE, Mr. RADANOVICH, Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, Mr. KUYKENDALL, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. HORN, Mr. POMBO, Mr. LANTOS, Mr. ROGAN, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. FILNER, Mrs. TAUSCHER, Mr. CONDIT, Ms. LOFGREN, Mr. WAXMAN, Ms. SANCHEZ, Mr. BERMAN, Mrs. CAPPS, Mr. BECERRA, Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. SHERMAN, Ms. ESHOO, Ms. WATERS, Mr. FARR of California, Mr. THOMPSON of California, Mr. DOOLEY of California, Mr. STARK, Ms. WOOLSEY, Ms. PELOSI, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. OSE, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. DOOLITTLE, Mr. BUYER, Mr. HERGER, Mr. DOYLE, Mr. ACKERMAN, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. SNYDER, Ms. MCKINNEY, Mr. GIBBONS, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Mr. QUINN, Mr. BAKER, Mr. HANSEN, Mrs. NAPOLITANO, Mr. REYES, and Mr. UNDERWOOD):

H.R. 1663. A bill to designate as a national memorial the memorial being built at the Riverside National Cemetery in Riverside, California to honor recipients of the Medal of Honor; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

By Mr. YOUNG of Florida:

H.R. 1664. A bill making emergency supplemental appropriations for military operations, refugee relief, and humanitarian assistance relating to the conflict in Kosovo, and for military operations in Southwest Asia for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1999, and for other purposes.

By Mr. BATEMAN:

H.R. 1665. A bill to allow the National Park Service to acquire certain land for addition to the Wilderness Battlefield in Virginia, as previously authorized by law, by purchase or exchange as well as by donation; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. BOYD (for himself, Mr. FOLEY, Mr. DEUTSCH, Mr. WEXLER, Mr. DAVIS of Florida, Mr. DIAZ-BALART, Mrs. FOWLER, Mr. SCARBOROUGH, Mrs. MEEK of Florida, Mr. CANADY of Florida, Mrs. THURMAN, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. MCCOLLUM, Mr. GOSS, Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, Mr. BILIRAKIS, Mr. SHAW, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. MICA, Mr. WELDON of Florida, Ms. BROWN of Florida, and Mr. MILLER of Florida):

H.R. 1666. A bill to designate the facility of the United States Postal Service at 200 East Pinckney Street in Madison, Florida, as the ''Captain Colin P. Kelly, Jr. Post Office''; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mr. COOK (for himself and Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota):

H.R. 1667. A bill to amend title 23, United States Code, relating to vehicle weight limitations; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

By Mr. GANSKE:

H.R. 1668. A bill to authorize the National Park Service to conduct a feasibility study for the preservation of the Loess Hills in western Iowa; to the Committee on Resources.

By Mr. GOSS:

H.R. 1669. A bill to provide that an annual pay adjustment for Members of Congress may not exceed the cost-of-living adjustment in benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for that year; to the Committee on Government Reform, and in addition to the Committee on House Administration, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. HASTINGS of Florida:

H.R. 1670. A bill to establish a commission to study the culture and glorification of violence in America; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. HOYER:

H.R. 1671. A bill to grant a Federal charter to Korean War Veterans Association, Incorporated; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Ms. LOFGREN:

H.R. 1672. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to require States Medicaid plans to provide for payment for costs of medical services under individualized education programs under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act after they exceed $3,500 in a school year; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut:

H.R. 1673. A bill to provide bonus funds to local educational agencies that adopt a policy to end social promotion; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

By Mr. GARY MILLER of California:

H.R. 1674. A bill to amend the Safe Drinking Water Act with respect to civil actions against public waters systems that are in compliance with national drinking water regulations promulgated by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mrs. MINK of Hawaii:

H.R. 1675. A bill to provide for the full funding of the Pell Grant Program; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

By Mr. PALLONE:

H.R. 1676. A bill to amend part Q of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1965 to prevent motorist stops motivated by race or other bias; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHERMAN (for himself, Ms. PELOSI, Mr. MATSUI, and Mr. BROWN of California):

H.R. 1677. A bill to restrict the sale of cigarettes in packages of less than 15 cigarettes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. SWEENEY:

H.R. 1678. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to require the Secretary of Transportation to initiate investigations of unfair methods of competition by major air carriers against new entrant air carriers; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

H.R. 1679. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to provide assistance and slots with respect to air carrier service between high density airports and certain small and nonhub airports that have unreasonably high airfares, to improve jet aircraft service to markets that have unreasonably high airfares, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

By Mr. THOMAS:

H.R. 1680. A bill to provide for the conveyance of Forest Service property in Kern County, California, in exchange for county lands suitable for inclusion in Sequoia National Forest; to the Committee on Resources.

By Ms. WATERS:

H.R. 1681. A bill to concentrate Federal resources aimed at the prosecution of drug offenses on those offenses that are major; to the Committee on the Judiciary, and in addition to the Committee on Commerce, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mrs. WILSON (for herself, Mr. SKEEN, Mr. FORD, and Mr. UDALL of New Mexico):

H.R. 1682. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to establish a permanent tax incentive for research and development, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BRYANT (for himself and Mr. WICKER):

H.J. Res. 50. A joint resolution granting the consent of Congress to the Chickasaw Trail Economic Development Compact; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mrs. CHENOWETH (for herself, Mr. ARMEY, Mr. DELAY, Mr. ADERHOLT, Mr. BURTON of Indiana, Mr. COBURN, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. DICKEY, Mr. DOOLITTLE, Mr. FOSSELLA, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. HAYES, Mr. HAYWORTH, Mr. HILL of Montana, Mr. HILLEARY, Mr. HOSTETTLER, Mr. HUNTER, Mr. ISTOOK, Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas, Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky, Mr. MCINTOSH, Mr. METCALF, Mrs. MYRICK, Mr. NETHERCUTT, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. PITTS, Mr. RYUN of Kansas, Mr. SCHAFFER, Mr. STEARNS, Mr. TANCREDO, Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina, and Mr. WALDEN of Oregon):

H. Con. Res. 94. Concurrent resolution recognizing the public need for reconciliation and healing, urging the United States to unite in seeking God, and recommending that the Nation's leaders call for days of prayer; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mr. SWEENEY:

H. Con. Res. 95. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress that State earnings limitations on retired law enforcement officers be lifted to enhance school safety; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce, and in addition to the Committee on the Judiciary, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Ms. GRANGER (for herself, Mr. PITTS, Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Mr. DEMINT, Mr. TANCREDO, Mr. FLETCHER, Mr. METCALF, Mr. HAYWORTH, Mr. RAMSTAD, Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska, Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon, Mr. ETHERIDGE, Mr. GALLEGLY, Mr. MOORE, Mrs. NORTHUP, Mr. FORBES, Mr. SMITH of Washington, Mrs. FOWLER, Mr. BACHUS, Mr. TRAFICANT, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mr. MCINTOSH, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. KILDEE, Mr. MCKEON, Mr. PHELPS, Mr. SCHAFFER, Mr. KLINK, Mr. LATOURETTE, Mr. TOOMEY, Mr. SMITH of Michigan, Mr. CALVERT, Mr. FOLEY, Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. HORN, Mr. FROST, Mr. UDALL of New Mexico, Mr. BLUNT, and Mrs. CHRISTENSEN):

H. Res. 157. A resolution Expressing the sense of the House of Representatives in support of America's teachers; to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XII,

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts introduced a bill (H.R. 1683) for the relief of Paul Green; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 8: Mr. MICA.

H.R. 36: Mr. HOLT, Mr. DIXON, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, Mr. PALLONE, and Mrs. CLAYTON.

H.R. 44: Mr. BISHOP and Mr. BAKER.

H.R. 49: Ms. KILPATRICK.

H.R. 65: Mr. BAKER and Mr. BERRY.

H.R. 111: Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. PHELPS, Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland, and Mr. WEINER.

H.R. 116: Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi and Mr. MURTHA.

H.R. 142: Mr. WELDON of Florida.

H.R. 165: Mr. EHLERS.

H.R. 215: Mr. ANDREWS.

H.R. 274: Mr. COOK, Mr. PITTS, Mrs. MORELLA, Mr. HOYER, Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, Ms. KAPTUR, Mr. MORAN of Virginia, and Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts.

H.R. 303: Mr. BAKER, Mr. BERRY, Mr. DAVIS of Florida, Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon, and Mr. GOODE.

H.R. 315: Mr. RANGEL, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, and Mr. BORSKI.

H.R. 325: Mr. ABERCROMBIE, Mr. MASCARA, Ms. RIVERS, and Ms. SANCHEZ.

H.R. 348: Mr. ROHRABACHER and Mr. CUNNINGHAM.

H.R. 357: Mr. INSLEE.

H.R. 382: Ms. MCKINNEY, Mr. BLAGOJEVICH, Mr. SANDLIN, and Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas.

H.R. 383: Ms. CARSON, Mrs. MEEK of Florida, Mr. RODRIGUEZ, Mr. PASCRELL, and Mrs. CHRISTENSEN.

H.R. 390: Mr. SMITH of Washington, Mr. WELDON of Florida, Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. STRICKLAND, Ms. VELAZQUEZ, and Mr. KOLBE.

H.R. 405: Mr. NADLER and Mr. ACKERMAN.

H.R. 415: Mr. UDALL of New Mexico.

H.R. 425: Mr. MINGE, Mr. UDALL of New Mexico, and Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota.

H.R. 430: Mr. BAIRD, Mr. SANDLIN, Mr. MURTHA, and Mr. BORSKI.

H.R. 455: Mr. UDALL of New Mexico.

H.R. 457: Mr. BAIRD and Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi.

H.R. 486: Mrs. CUBIN, Mr. CRAMER, Mr. LUTHER, Mr. WEXLER, and Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 488: Mr. BONIOR and Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California.

H.R. 492: Mr. BILIRAKIS.

H.R. 516: Mr. GOODLATTE.

H.R. 518: Mr. HALL of Texas.

H.R. 527: Mr. PALLONE.

H.R. 531: Mr. GILCHREST, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. SWEENEY, Mr. SOUDER, Mr. CALLAHAN, Mr. GARY MILLER of California, Mr. MOORE, and Mr. WHITFIELD.

H.R. 537: Mr. GARY MILLER of California.

H.R. 541: Mr. WATT of North Carolina.

H.R. 558: Mr. KOLBE.

H.R. 595: Ms. KAPTUR and Mrs. MINK of Hawaii.

H.R. 597: Mr. BURR of North Carolina, Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. SANDLIN, Mr. CAPUANO, Mr. BERMAN, Mr. SNYDER, and Mr. HORN.

H.R. 673: Mr. GOSS.

H.R. 700: Mr. BILBRAY and Mr. TERRY.

H.R. 725: Mr. INSLEE and Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California.

H.R. 731: Ms. WOOLSEY.

H.R. 750: Mr. WYNN.

H.R. 775: Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky and Mr. EWING.

H.R. 776: Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. HOLDEN, Mr. WISE, Mr. RAHALL, and Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD.

H.R. 783: Mr. CANADY of Florida, Mr. GILMAN, Mr. DUNCAN, Mr. STUMP, and Mr. ETHERIDGE.

H.R. 784: Mr. BOUCHER, Mr. MCGOVERN, Mr. ETHERIDGE, Mr. SHAW, and Mr. CAPUANO.

H.R. 827: Mr. FROST, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Mr. BERRY, and Ms. RIVERS.

H.R. 850: Mr. UDALL of Colorado and Mr. HOEFFEL.

H.R. 875: Mr. MATSUI, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, and Mr. MEEKS of New York.

H.R. 894: Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 902: Mrs. LOWEY, Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts, Mr. STARK, Mr. HOEFFEL, and Mr. PORTER.

H.R. 906: Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts.

H.R. 914: Mr. INSLEE.

H.R. 961: Mr. WU and Mr. CAPUANO.

H.R. 976: Ms. WATERS, Mr. GANSKE, Mr. BALDACCI, and Mrs. MALONEY of New York.

H.R. 987: Mr. SESSIONS, Mr. KOLBE, Mr. WELDON of Florida, Mr. TIAHRT, Mr. CHABOT, Mr. MICA, Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky, Mr. SOUDER, Mr. FOLEY, and Mr. RYUN of Kansas.

H.R. 996: Mr. ENGEL, Mr. HINOJOSA, Mrs. MINK of Hawaii, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, and Mr. WYNN.

H.R. 997: Mr. BONIOR, Mr. PITTS, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. GEKAS, Mr. HOYER, Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Mr. COOK, Ms. KAPTUR, and Mr. MORAN of Virginia.

H.R. 1003: Mr. GONZALEZ.

H.R. 1032: Mr. KINGSTON, Mr. PICKETT, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. WAMP, and Peterson of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 1044: Mr. SHOWS, Mrs. MINK of Hawaii, and Mr. LATHAM.

H.R. 1049: Mrs. LOWEY.

H.R. 1062: Mr. BERMAN, Mr. SABO, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, Mr. MEEHAN, Mr. HOEFFEL, Mr. WAXMAN, Mr. NADLER, and Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD.

H.R. 1082: Mr. BENTSEN and Mr. QUINN.

H.R. 1083: Mr. NETHERCUTT, Mr. NUSSLE, and Mr. WALDEN of Oregon.

H.R. 1084: Mr. GARY MILLER of California and Mr. GOODLING.

H.R. 1102: Mr. HAYWORTH, Mr. METCALF, Ms. DUNN, Mr. ENGLISH, and Mr. HOBSON.

H.R. 1108: Ms. LOFGREN, Mr. KOLBE, and Mr. BERMAN.

H.R. 1111: Mr. DEAL of Georgia, Mr. GILCHREST, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, Mr. BAIRD, Mr. BERMAN, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, and Ms. KILPATRICK.

H.R. 1130: Mr. LEWIS of Georgia, Mr. MEEKS of New York, Ms. KILPATRICK, and Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon.

H.R. 1130: Mr. CAPUANO, Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon, Mr. SAWYER, and Mr. UDALL of New Mexico.

H.R. 1168: Mr. COBLE, Mr. ACKERMAN, Ms. CARSON, Mrs. LOWEY, and Mr. DUNCAN.

H.R. 1173: Mr. FATTAH.

H.R. 1188: Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. FORBES, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, and Mr. WYNN.

H.R. 1219: Mr. HILL of Montana.

H.R. 1236: Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas and Mr. WATT of North Carolina.

H.R. 1256: Mr. HALL of Texas and Mr. METCALF.

H.R. 1272: Mrs. EMERSON, Mr. ISTOOK, and Mr. PAUL.

H.R. 1283: Mr. STUMP, Mr. BALLERNGER, Mr. DOOLITTLE, Mr. BLUNT, and Mr. DOOLEY of California.

H.R. 1289: Mr. MATSUI, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. CARDIN, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, and Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD.

H.R. 1298: Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California.

H.R. 1299: Mr. LATOURETTE and Mr. SHOWS.

H.R. 1300: Mr. BLUMENAUER, Mr. FORD, Mr. ENGLISH, and Mr. PASTOR.

H.R. 1301: Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma, Mr. EWING, Mr. TIAHRT, Mr. ROEMER, Mr. ISTOOK, Mr. DOOLEY of California, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. SANDLIN, Mr. HILL of Montana, Mr. HUTCHINSON, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska.

H.R. 1317: Mr. FOLEY, Mr. HAYWORTH, and Mr. SHOWS.

H.R. 1322: Mr. GOODLING and Mr. GARY MILLER of California.

H.R. 1326: Mr. MCCRERY, Mr. FROST, Mr. FORBES, Mr. GRAHAM, and Mr. GARY MILLER of California.

H.R. 1344: Mr. SHOWS.

H.R. 1349: Mr. GOODE, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. NEY, Mr. FORBES, and Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 1350: Mr. SABO, Mr. BAIRD, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. DOOLEY of California, Mr. NADLER, Mr. PAYNE, Mr. WYNN, Mr. CAPUANO, Ms. BALDWIN, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, and Mr. BROWN of Ohio.

H.R. 1354: Mr. POMEROY and Mr. THUNE.

H.R. 1355: Mr. LARSON and Mr. SAWYER.

H.R. 1357: Mr. SENSENBRENNER.

H.R. 1361: Mr. CUMMINGS and Mr. OLVER.

H.R. 1370: Mr. BARR of Georgia and Mr. KUCINICH.

H.R. 1371: Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas, Mr. RAHALL, and Mr. BERMAN.

H.R. 1405: Mr. BERMAN, Mr. COYNE, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. FROST, Ms. PRYCE of Ohio, and Mrs. THURMAN.

H.R. 1456: Mr. UDALL of New Mexico, Mr. DEAL of Georgia, Mr. POMEROY, Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky, Mr. SHOWS, Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, and Mr. HILLIARD.

H.R. 1476: Mr. FARR of California and Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon.

H.R. 1485: Mr. WAXMAN and Mr. OLVER.

H.R. 1525: Mr. RAHALL and Mr. CROWLEY.

H.R. 1536: Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon.

H.R. 1538: Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma, Mr. DEMINT, Mr. PICKERING, and Mrs. MYRICK.

H.R. 1545: Mr. MATSUI, Mr. BERMAN, and Ms. KILPATRICK.

H.R. 1592: Mr. MCINNIS, Mr. SCHAFFER, Mr. TANNER, Mr. HERGER, Ms. DANNER, Mrs. EMERSON, and Mr. REYNOLDS.

H.R. 1606: Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts and Mrs. MINK of Hawaii.

H.R. 1622: Ms. PELOSI, Mr. BROWN of California, Mr. RAHALL, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. STARK, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California, Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts, Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Mr. DEUTSCH, and Mr. HINCHEY.

H.R. 1648: Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts, Ms. VELAZQUEZ, and Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA.

H.R. 1650: Mr. GUTIERREZ, Mr. HINCHEY, Mr. MATSUI, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Mr. BOEHLERT, Mr. WEXLER, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, and Mr. GILMAN.

H.R. 1657: Mr. WEYGAND, Mr. INSLEE, and Mr. CONYERS.

H.J. Res. 1: Mr. ARMEY.

H.J. Res. 21: Mr. HALL of Texas.

H. Con. Res. 8: Mr. TANNER.

H. Con. Res. 30: Mr. GILLMOR, Mr. SENSENBRENNER, and Mr. HUTCHINSON.

H. Con. Res. 31: Mr. BONIOR.

H. Con. Res. 65: Mr. BERMAN, Mr. GONZALEZ, Mr. SERRANO, Mr. FROST, Mr. SMITH of Texas, Ms. LEE, Mr. PASTOR, Mr. CONYERS, Ms. SANCHEZ, Mr. REYES, and Mr. GREEN of Texas.

H. Con. Res. 74: Mr. ANDREWS, Mr. CONYERS, and Mrs. CAPPS.

H. Con. Res. 80: Mr. MCGOVERN, Mr. EVANS, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. CROWLEY, Mrs. KELLY, and Mr. ENGEL.

H. Con. Res. 84: Mr. FORBES and Mr. GARY MILLER of California.

H. Con. Res. 88: Mr. LATOURETTE, Mr. FORBES, and Mr. BACHUS.

H. Res. 41: Mr. ACKERMAN.

H. Res. 89: Mr. WATT of North Carolina and Mr. GARY MILLER of California.

H. Res. 146: Ms. RIVERS, Mr. SAXTON, Ms. ESHOO, Mr. DEFAZIO, Mr. PRICE of North Carolina, and Mr. ALLEN.

H. Res. 156: Mr. JACKSON of Illinois, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. PAYNE, Mrs. JONES of Ohio, Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi, Ms. LEE, Mr. CLAY, Mr. FATTAH, Mr. FORD, Mrs. CHRISTENSEN, Ms. KILPATRICK, Ms. NORTON, Mr. BISHOP, Mr. DIXON, Mr. CONYERS, Ms. BROWN of Florida, Ms. CARSON, Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, Mr. JEFFERSON, Mr. MEEKS of New York, Mr. BLAGOJEVICH, Mr. RUSH, Mrs. CLAYTON, Mr. CUMMINGS, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Ms. WATERS, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. WYNN, Mrs. NAPOLITANO, Mr. LAMPSON, Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. OWENS, Mr. DAVIS of Illinois, Mr. RODRIGUEZ, Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA, and Mr. SCOTT.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 732: Ms. BROWN of Florida.

H.R. 1598: Mrs. EMERSON.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

THE STEEL CRISIS

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, here we are, six weeks after we passed the Bipartisan Steel Recovery Act by an overwhelming margin, seven months after we called on the President to take all necessary action to end illegal steel imports, and nearly two years after the flood of illegal steel imports began to hit our markets, and still the crisis continues.

Last week, the U.S. Department of Commerce announced that steel imports rose from February to March of this year by 25 percent. During the same period imports from Japan rose 36 percent, imports from Brazil rose 54 percent, imports from Korea rose by 11 percent, and imports from Indonesia rose 339 percent.

The problem becomes even more evident when you compare March's figures to those of July 1997 before the crisis began. Using that time frame, imports from Japan are up 22 percent, imports from Brazil are up 25 percent, imports from Korea are up 77 percent, and imports from Indonesia are up a remarkable 889 percent. Mr. Speaker, this is unacceptable.

Last Thursday, the Department of Commerce announced its final determination that Japan has been dumping steel on American markets. By the Administration's own words, foreign nations are breaking trade laws. Yet, despite the rhetoric, the Administration continues to stand by and do nothing but claim that the situation is improving, even when the numbers show otherwise.

President Clinton declared in his State of the Union Address in January that ''We must enforce our trade laws when imports unlawfully flood our nation.'' He threatened Japan by stating, ''if the nation's sudden surge of steel imports into our country is not reversed, America will respond.'' However, it was Japan that responded with imports in January that were up 75 percent from pre-crisis levels. After a brief dip in February, during which the Administration was fooled into believing that its empty rhetoric and useless posturing was actually working to stem the tide, Japan resumed dumping by increasing its March imports 36 percent over February's numbers and 22 percent over pre-crisis levels.

Mistakenly convinced of the correctness of their own ineffectual policies, President Clinton's advisers continue to delude him that their approach will bear fruit. The Administration has focused on warnings of action that no nation believes will ever come. As evidence, just yesterday, the President said during a press conference, ''We will take action if steel imports do not return to their pre-crisis levels on a consistent basis. Playing by the rules of trade is the best way to sustain a consensus for open trade.'' After the Administration failed to act on its first admonition to the Japanese, and on every warning since, the credibility of the threat has disappeared. Given the clear fact that the President can no longer be counted on to do anything more than just talk about enforcing our trade laws, instead of taking direct action, Congress must fill the void.

The need for action may now be greater than ever. Foreign countries can now rely on the Clinton Administration's unwillingness to deter their attempts to flaunt our trade laws, dump steel on American markets and drive American steelworkers out of work. The Senate must repudiate the Administration's message and finish the job we in the House began by passing the Bipartisan Steel Recovery Act. We have seen what the White House will, and will not, do if given the chance. Congress must now do what the Clinton Administration has proven incapable of and end the surge of illegal steel imports onto our shores that is driving hardworking American families out of work and away from their dreams.

CONGRATULATING HARRY BELAFONTE

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Harry Belafonte for receiving the 1999 Drum Major For Justice Award. The Drum Major For Justice Award banquet seeks to honor those Americans whose achievements most coincide with the dreams of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

Mr. Belafonte was a confidant and advisor to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Mr. Belafonte's activity in the human rights struggle is respected world wide. He has always believed that his work for human rights and his artistic pursuits gave him the basis for a most productive and balanced life.

Harry Belafonte had been called ''the consummate entertainer'' an artist in every field in which he has participated, including movies, Broadway, television, recording, concerts and producing. His first album ''Calypso,'' in 1955, was the first to sell more than one-million copies. Among other ''firsts'' were his being the first African-American to win an Emmy, and the first African-American television producer.

However, it is Mr. Belafonte's dedication to the civil rights movement that has earned him this honor. His involvement dates back to the marches in Selma, Montgomery and Washington. Mr. Belafonte has also been chairman of the MLK Memorial Fund. He was named by President Kennedy as Cultural Advisor to the Peace Corps, and received the Dag Hammarskjold Peace Medal in 1981, and the Martin Luther King, Jr. Peace Prize in 1982. In 1987 he was appointed a UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador (only the second American to hold the title), and in 1990 he was host for the U.N.'s World Summit on the Child; this was attended by heads of state from all over the world.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Harry Belafonte for his accomplishments and for following the ideals of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Belafonte many years of continued success.

DICK LATTIMER CONTRIBUTES TO ARCHERY

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

HON. DUNCAN HUNTER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, many people never find their true life's mission. My colleague, Mr. HUNTER, and I would like to pay tribute to Dick Lattimer who not only found his mission, but has used his talents and ambition to promote his passion for, and share his vast knowledge of, archery and bowhunting. His tireless efforts, endless energy, and boundless generosity have led many people to learn and later enjoy this wonderful pastime. No one in America or the world has worked harder, nor with as much determination to promote bowhunting and archery as Dick.

A 1957 graduate of Indiana University and native of South Bend, Dick shot his first bow in 1966 and archery became his way of life ever since. Shortly after his introduction to bows and arrows, Dick met and went to work for Fred Bear, the father of modern archery and bowhunting. With the support of his wife, Alice, and under the tutelage of the master, Dick set about a lifetime of advertising and promotional work for the sport he loved. Dick's passion, knowledge and love for the outdoors as well as his strong commitment to educating the public and networking with the sporting community made him the key player in the development of archery and bowhunting through the 70's and 80's.

Following the death of his mentor, Dick left Bear Archery in 1991 to become the first President and CEO of the Archery Manufacturers and Merchants Organization (AMO). From his position as the point person for the entire archery and bowhunting world, Dick developed the largest trade show ever convened dedicated to archery and bowhunting. The AMO Archery Trade Show is now entering its 4th year and has become the pivotal gathering for the world's bowhunters and archers.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to his more than full time commitment to AMO, Dick has spent countless hours volunteering for many prestigious boards. He has served as the Executive Director of the American Archery Council, the Television Chair and Co-Chair of the Communications Committee of the International Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies, Chair of the National Archery Museum, and a member of the Hunting and Conservation Committee, Public Affairs Committee and Bowhunting Subcommittee of the National Rifle Association. Of note for the Congress is Dick's service as a member of the board of directors of the Congressional Sportsmen's Foundation and his sponsorship of the Congressional Sportsmen's Caucus Task Force on Bowhunting. In his personal life, Dick has volunteered his time and financial resources to his community through his church and for causes such as the needs of homeless Americans.

For his lifetime of dedication to archery and bowhunting, Dick was inducted to the Archery Hall of Fame on January 9, 1999. Dick now joins the legends of archery and bowhunting as a peer and will forever rightfully share a distinguished place in the history of conservation and hunting in North America.

Mr. Speaker, if we want our citizens to be driven by the needs of the country and to be examples of selflessness, commitment and accomplishment, then we must continue to honor and praise individuals like Dick Lattimer. We ask you and all of our colleagues to join us in commending Dick Lattimer as an icon of the archery and bowhunting world but also as a great American sportsman and humanitarian.

REPORT FROM LAPORTE COUNTY, INDIANA

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my ''Report from Indiana'' where I honor distinguished Hoosiers who are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committed Hoosiers who I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them ''Hoosier Heroes''.

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in LaPorte County, Indiana recently in front of the LaPorte County Republican Party at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. He is Keith Jones, who is a very active and successful business man here in LaPorte County. By working tirelessly on behalf of the less fortunate, Keith epitomizes a Hoosier Hero.

Keith has been awarded the ''Outstanding Citizen Award'' by the LaPorte Rotary Club as well as the LaPorte Jaycees. Last, he also received the ''Distinguished Award'' by the LaPorte YMCA. Incredibly, his charitable works even extend beyond his community and country. He is the founder of the Aruba Friends of the Handicapped and has raised over $700,000 to help people there suffering from disabilities.

Keith's work has given so many people the most precious gift possible, hope. He doesn't do it for the pay, which is zilch, he does it for the smiles and laughter. You are a true hero in my book, doing good works for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Keith Jones deserves the gratitude of his county, state, and nation and I thank him here today on the floor of the House of Representatives.

IN HONOR OF NOBEL PRIZE WINNER LINUS PAULING

HON. DAVID DREIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, on May 15, the California Institute of Technology will host an exhibit on the life and works of Linus Pauling, the only man to have received two unshared Nobel Prizes, one for science and the other for peace.

The California Institute of Technology, nestled beneath the beautiful San Gabriel Mountains in Pasadena, California, is one of the finest institutions of higher learning in the world. Its contributions to our understanding of the universe around us, from space exploration to molecular biology, are unmatched among scientific institutions throughout the world. For years, Linus Pauling served on its faculty, earning a reputation that has immortalized his contributions to science as the Father of Modern Chemistry.

The exhibit is jointly sponsored by Cal Tech, the Pauling family, Oregon State University, and the Soka Gokkai International. I would note that its President, Daisaku Ikeda, is one of the great Ambassadors for peace in the world today, and was a close personal friend of Professor Pauling. In fact, the exhibit was inspired and launched by Ikeda as a tribute to his friend and colleague in a manner befitting Pualing's life. It was this idea that led Ikeda to propose the exhibit that would inspire and educate young people for leadership in the 21st century.

The exhibit is expected to attract young people from all over southern California. It will graphically demonstrate the intimate relationship between the search for knowledge of the universe and the pursuit of peace. It will also provide young people with a role model of a man whose life epitomized courage, wisdom and determination, values that will well serve today's youth as they prepare to become tomorrow's leaders.

It is with great joy that I announce the opening of the exhibit and recognize those who are responsible for making it available to the public, especially the young people of my district and of southern California.

This exhibit will run from May 16 to June 19 on the campus of Cal Tech in the Winnett Center, and will be open to the public on Wednesdays from 4pm to 9pm, on Saturday's from 10am to 6pm. Special group and school tours can be booked by calling (323) 938–8255. The exhibit is free to the public.

MATTHEW COPUS IS A WINNER OF THE PRUDENTIAL SPIRIT AWARD

HON. HEATHER WILSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to your attention a young man in our community, Matthew Copus, who has been named one of New Mexico's top youth volunteers for 1999 in The Prudential Spirit of Community Award.

Matthew's volunteer efforts truly reflect the spirit of community. For the past two years he has volunteered at All Faiths Receiving Home, a home for abused and neglected children. Matthew has worked hard to earn the trust of the children. His efforts include art projects, games and activities to encourage the children to communicate and regain social skills that have been damaged by abuse. Beyond his own volunteer time, Matthew has recruited other young people to volunteer and has raised money to help pay for supplies needed for projects. Matthew is committed to reducing child abuse and spreads the word through speaking engagements in the community.

One of the most important factors in a child's life is a person who cares. Matthew makes a positive difference in the lives of many children and in our entire community. He is one of America's top youth volunteers. Join me in thanking Matthew Copus for the positive impact he has in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

IN HONOR OF THE LATE GORDON McMILLAN

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a true visionary in education and champion of children, Gordon McMillan, a veteran Long Island teacher who passed away recently at the age of 64.

Ask any parent or student and I'm sure they'll agree that elementary and secondary education in this country must be reformed. But the system needs more than an infusion of money, it needs an infusion of innovative ideas as well. Innovative ideas were Gordon McMillan's specialty.

Today, and every school day, computers are being purchased, unpacked, and delivered to classrooms on Long Island and across the country in the hope that teachers will do wonderful things with those computers to assist the educational process. The tireless efforts of technology pioneers like Gordon McMillan made this possible. Like many teachers in our public schools, Gordon started teaching before the era of personal computers, but unlike other teachers, Gordon understood the power of change and the potential of computers as new educational tools.

Gordon was born in Cambria Heights, Queens, in 1935 and attended New York City's public school system. After graduating in 1952, he went to Adelphi University, where he received a bachelor of science degree in education in 1956. He later got his master's degree from Hofstra University. He started his teaching career at Plainview Elementary School on Long Island, and remained with the school district until 1974, reaching the position of assistant principal. Over the next six years, he worked as principal of Summitt Lane Elementary School in Levittown and Thomas Leahey School in Greenlawn, and assistant principal at West Islip High School. He then became principal of George Jackson Elementary School in Jericho where he remained until his retirement in 1988.

After his retirement Gordon worked as a consultant for IBM. In 1997, he once again went back to his true passion and took temporary assignments as an interim principal, working stints at Southampton Intermediate School and Medford Elementary School. He was working at River Elementary School in Patchogue Long Island at the time of his death.

Mr. Speaker, Gordon embodied the type of role model and educator that all would have liked and wanted their children to be involved with during their educational career.

To the parents he will be remembered as the innovator of bringing computers to the schools. To the children he will also be remembered as a 6-foot, 2-inch, 250 pound bear of a man, who once dressed as the Great pumpkin and donned a Superman costume, swinging onto the school's auditorium by a rope.

Colleagues, Mr. McMillan is an educator who will be sorely missed.

TRIBUTE TO THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA WOMEN'S TENNIS TEAM

HON. KAREN L. THURMAN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the University of Florida women's tennis team. Last season, this fine team won the 1998 NCAA women's tennis championship. It was the third time the University of Florida won the NCAA title, and it was also the third time the team completed an undefeated season.

I've been told the final game turned out to be a war of wills with the Gators tennis team pitted squarely against Duke at Notre Dame's Courtney Tennis Center. On Sunday, May 24 of last year, UF's team took home a hard-earned 5–1 victory.

Just ask Number One Player Dawn Buth how hard it was to bring home the championship. UF coach Andy Brandi refers to her as a real fighter and for good reason. Her match during the championship helped seal the Gators' victory. She was tired. She had cramps. Her right wrist hurt. But she kept going, and got tougher and tougher until she clenched the 151st singles win of her UF career.

Let me tell you what happened. Buth lost the first set, won the second, was losing in the third before coming back to win three games in a row and take the match. Afterward, she told a local newspaper reporter how she was able to do it. ''I just tried to stay focused, stay confident and I was able to pull out the next three games.'' That kind of attitude and perseverance will undoubtedly take Dawn Buth and her teammates far, not only on the tennis court but throughout their lives.

This latest victory carries on a distinguished record for the University of Florida's women's tennis team. In addition to three NCAA championships over the course of Head Coach Andy Brandi's tenure, the Gators have also earned 13 Southeastern Conference titles, six national indoor titles and finished six undefeated regular seasons.

Congratulations is certainly in order for Brandi and last year's coaching team: Assistant Coach Sujay Lama, Volunteer Coach Jo-Anne Russell and Athletics trainer Kellye Mowchan.

I also want to individually congratulate last year's women's tennis team: Bonnie Bleecker, Dawn Buth, Baili Camino, Traci Green, Stephanie Hazlett, Whitney Laiho, Stephanie Nickitas and M.C. White.

Go Gators!

IN HONORING OF THE FLYERS

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor an active, strong, and vigorous group of senior citizens, the Flyers, in Lakewood, Ohio.

This group of 15 senior citizens plays in local and national softball, basketball and volleyball leagues and tournaments. The group is a frequent participant in games at Elmwood Park in Rocky River and also plays in the Lakewood League. On a national scale, the Flyers have played in tournaments sponsored by Amateur Softball Association and other Senior organizations in St. Louis, Dallas and Mississippi. The group often holds fundraising events to raise the money to travel to different games across the country.

The members of the group have paid their dues and worked hard lives, and they now are enjoying their retirement and doing exactly what they love to do. One of the group's members. Mr. Vern Carr, would even like to see the Flyers compete against teams in Europe someday.

My fellow colleagues, please join me in saluting the Flyers and wishing them continued success, and most importantly a lot of fun, in their upcoming tournaments.

TRIBUTE TO THE BRONX COMMUNITY COLLEGE

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, it is with joy that I rise today to once again pay tribute to Bronx Community College, which will hold its 21st Anniversary Hall of Fame 10K Run on Saturday, May 1, 1999.

The Hall of Fame 10K Run was founded in 1978 by Bronx Community College's third President, Dr. Roscoe C. Brown. Its mission is to highlight the Hall of Fame for Great Americans, a national institution dedicated to those who have helped make America great.

The tradition continues, first under the leadership of Acting President, Dr. Leo A. Corbie and now under Dr. Carolyn G. Williams, the first woman President of Bronx Community College. Both Dr. Corbie and Dr. Williams have endorsed and follow the commitment made by Dr. Brown to promote physical well-being as well as higher education.

As one who has run the Hall of Fame 10K Run, I can attest that the excitement it generates brings the entire City together. It is a celebration and an affirmation of life. It feels wonderful to enable more than 400 people to have this experience—one that will change the lives of many of them. It is an honor for me to join once again the hundreds of joyful people who will run along the Grand Concourse, University Avenue and West 181 Street and to savor the variety of their celebrations. There's no better way to see our Bronx community.

For its first 20 years, Professor Henry A. Skinner has coordinated the Bronx Community College Hall of Fame 10K race, a healthy competition which brings together runners of all ages from the five boroughs of New York City. He is also the President of Unity and Strength, the organization of minority faculty, staff and administrators of Bronx Community College. Dr. Atlaw Belilgne of the Department of Mathematics and Computer Science, as the 1999 Director of the race, continues this rich Bronx tradition. He is also Director of Self Help and Resource Exchange (S.H.A.R.E.).

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing the individuals and participants who are making the Bronx Community College's 21st annual Hall of Fame 10K Run possible.

LETTER CARRIERS ADDRESS HUNGER BY SPONSORING NATIONWIDE FOOD DRIVE

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, May 8, 1999, letter carriers from around the country will be gathering nonperishable food items set aside by their customers for people in need. Milwaukee is a compassionate community and its benevolence ranks the city, for the second straight year, as number one in the nation in the amount of food collected.

The National Association of Letter Carriers, in conjunction with the United States Postal Service and the United Way, will kick off this year's food drive in Milwaukee with a press conference on Thursday, May 6th, to educate the public about the issues of hunger and convey the importance of each citizen's involvement to stamp out hunger.

I rise today, Mr. Speaker, to ask my colleagues to lend a hand to this worthwhile project by supporting the letter carriers' food drives across the nation. I would also like to invite the residents of Milwaukee and Waukesha Counties to consider adding a few extra canned food items or nonperishables to their grocery carts for collection on May 8th. Let's make this year's food drive better than ever.

Our food pantries are counting on drives like this to help keep their shelves filled. Let's all try to do our part to alleviate hunger.

IN HONORING OF NATIONAL TEACHER'S DAY

HON. JAY INSLEE

OF WASHINGTON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, today is National Teacher's Day. I do not believe educators are given nearly the amount of accolades they deserve, and I truly appreciate the chance to simply say: thank you for the important and meaningful work you do.

Mr. Speaker, I am especially proud that my father, brother, and brother-in-law are all teachers. Teachers are on the front lines everyday, preparing our children for the future. Teachers also bestow upon students the intellectual tools they need to become successful and productive members of society.

There is nothing that impacts America's social, economic and political future more than the quality of learning that happens in our schools. We should recognize the countless hours of selfless service that teachers devote to the most valuable resource in this country—our children.

Let me, again, express my appreciation and thanks to the millions of educators who impart their wisdom and knowledge to future generations.

HONORING EMMA JANE BLOOMFIELD

HON. GARY L. ACKERMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor and congratulate Emma Jane Bloomfield, who recently won an award from the Concord Rotary Club for her paper on Mongolian Culture. This paper was brought to my attention by her proud grandmother, Blanche Bloomfield, who resides in my district in Kings Point, NY. This essay contest demonstrates how our communities can work with our schools to further the educational goals of all of our nation's children. I hope all of my colleagues will have an opportunity to review this insightful and cogent essay and I would once again like to congratulate Emma on her outstanding work.

Under the control of Genghis Khan, the Mongolian people once had a forceful army, exploding with wrath and rage. However, the mounting tension between other countries and the Mongolians, caused by so many battles, resulted in the shattering of the Mongol empire. Since the 1300s, they have struggled to rebuild their society. Now that the strength and anger have faded from their community, many Mongols today believe in a strong emphasis on politeness and hospitality. Mongols live on the seeping grasslands of Asia and they use their environment to satisfy many needs. In the rural areas of Mongolia, many men are herdsmen who supervise the wild horses and yaks that roam the Mongols' homeland. The history of the Mongolian people has influenced their present culture, and their beliefs, styles of life, and natural environment are still contributing to the formation of their society and identities.

Mongolian history is traced back to the days of power when Genghis Khan ruled the Mongol empire. Genghis Khan was a wild horseman and a strong warrior who inspired the bravery of his people. He had great accuracy and distance when shooting a bow and arrow, and he had a keen mind that conjured up strategies he used to win battles. Khan was widely known for ruthlessly attacking towns and cities for the rewards of victory. Genghis Khan conquered more territory than anyone in Mongolian history, and he imposed his reputation on the world. Despite the cruelty that Khan showed toward other countries, the Mongols praised him and viewed him as the founder of their nation, creator of their people. The Mongols called Genghis Khan the ''Supreme Ruler Over the Ocean'' and ''Emperor of Emperors.''

A large portion of Khan's success was due to his solid armies, both his soldiers and his horsemen. Genghis Khan's armies were vast, and he grouped his men into units of tens, hundreds, thousands, and ten-thousands, so they could move in to battle quickly. Khan's powerful armies were often forced to over 225 miles of land within a day. Most of the warriors were horsemen, and they each owned three to twenty horses, which they alternated daily to give each horse sufficient time to rest. Weapons carried by the warriors were strong bows, lances, and swords. The soldiers wore heavy leather called lamellar to shield them from the fierce swipe of a sword.

Many of Genghis Khan's words provoked a feeling of force and fury. ''The greatest pleasure is to vanquish your enemies and chase them before you rob them of their wealth and see those dear to them baked in tears, to ride their horses,'' he once said. Khan was fueled by experiences of the many bloody battles that his armies fought. Genghis Khan relished seeing those inferior to him suffer, and he fought only to claim power and to satisfy his dreams. Khan's dream was to establish a network of riders, used as a spy system, all over Asia. His armies did succeed in taking over parts of China, Middle Asia, and Europe. Khan's empire stretched from Europe to Russia in the north, and from Vietnam to Iraq in the south. With their equipment, strength, and intelligence, the Mongol Umpire led by Genghis Khan seemed immortal.

Unfortunately for Mongolian society, the red heat of their empire soon faded to a cowering pink. Because they fought so many battles, the rivalries and conflicts between Mongolia and other countries brought misfortune and an unexpected end to the Mongol Empire. At that time, Russia and China began to expand and they claimed most power that the Mongols had once held. The collapse of the Mongol empire in 1505 scarred its people and society. The power supplied by Genghis Khan was humiliated, and the next centuries were filled with tragedy and struggle. While the Mongols tried to rebuild their economy, Russia and China prevailed over them and took parts of Mongolia under their control. In 1990, the break-up of the Soviet Union provided a blessing to the Mongols, and it offered freedom to some. However, problems still remain in Mongolia. To survive, the people have been forced to roam the grasslands, hunting with bow and arrow, taming horses, and raising livestock. The Mongols' strength has only re-emerged through their formation of a government while they have squirmed out of the reach of Russian and Chinese power.

Having rebuilt their society, natural and spiritual things now claim a higher rank among the Mongols. Mongolians believe that heaven, a home to the gods, holds an abundance of power. The Mongols honor heaven and all of nature under it. In fact, earlier Mongol tribes blessed and proclaimed their leaders as the ''sons of heaven.''

In their households, Mongols have always strongly emphasize politeness and hospitality. In pre-modern times the Mongols' homes were spread out all over the Mongols' land. This caused many people to travel from camp to camp, who would need a home for one night. Mongols provided shelter for visitors who later would face a hike across the windswept grasslands. With the arrival of a guest at a Mongolian's home, the host would traditionally offer a hospitality bowl, which would hold chunks of pungent cheeses, sugar cubes, candies, and bordzig pastries deep fried in yak and mutton fats. Using the hospitality bowl was the style in which the Mongols welcomed their guests. Mongolians believed in treating visitors as old and beloved friends, and in turn, the guest of a household would offer kind words to the hosts, and would express respect and gratitude by accepting foods at the table with customary gestures.

The traditional religion observed by the people of Mongolia is Tibetan Buddhism. Pedestals, in a Mongol's home, hold statues of Buddha, a symbol that is prominent in Tibetan Buddhism. After freedom of religion was introduced to Mongolia in 1990, Buddhism became the most commonly practiced religion. The government of Mongolia offered money to support the restoration of a sacred Buddhist Monastery.

Religion holds importance to the Mongols, yet it only occupies one level of Mongolian life. In the rural areas of Mongolia, the people's lives revolve around hunting or herding livestock. The semi-wild horses who graze in the mountains that enclose the grasslands, are for riding and training purposes. A Mongolian horse herdsman typically makes decisions as to where to let the horses graze, and when to move them to the next camps. Herders of any animal must eventually sell or butcher the livestock. Herdsmen efficiently use parts of the animals for fuel, warmth, and shelter. The job of a herdsman may also be to breed rarer animals, and sell them.

Traditionally, hunting occupies a large portion of Mongolian life. Many Mongol hunters use ancient archery techniques to hunt birds. Keen dogs and cheetahs are also used to track down a hunter's game. Occasionally, in earlier times, large-scale hunts would be organized where beaters would drive entire herds of antelope into the lurking hunters' bows. Falcons, too, were used to lead large game to the hunters.

In the rural places of Mongolia, the rural life of a Mongol is chiefly filled by the needs of the flocks of sheep, goats, herds of horses, cattle, or camels. Springtime is the season in which herdsmen have the most commitments to the livestock. The births of animals occupy great spans of time, and often an entire family comes to the fields and helps the herder with a difficult birth. Herdsmen scurry around tending to the needs of animals, trying to establish a health start to the herding season. Summertime is less busy, for herds of animals resort to pasture land and the livestock doesn't demand assistance from herdsmen. Yet in the summertime there is still some work to attend to: sheep are shorn for their dense wool and camels and goats are combed for their velvety under-wool. The autumn winds dry the moisture from the grasslands, and as winter approaches groups of herdsmen collect their livestock. The animals are confined to graze in small pens and barns, and hay becomes their main diet. In late autumn equipment and tools are replaced or mended for the new births of livestock in the springtime. Mongolian winters come to the land quickly and last for a long amount of time. Temperatures stay low for weeks, which make each day harder for Mongols to endure. Herdsmen stay loyal to the penned animals and help them through the months of winter, so the cycle can repeat.

On the grasslands outside of Ulan Bator, the capital of Mongolia, the Mongols live in tent-like gers (see appendix D). These homes have rounded walls that slope upward to form a point at the top. These traditional homes provide the Mongolian people with warmth and protect them from blizzards that may storm the grasslands. Gers are covered with felt, usually made by women. The process of felt-making typically takes two weeks for enough cloth to cover an entire ger. Because many Mongols are followers of animal herds, the ger satisfies the needs of their culture, for the ger is easy to dismantle and is designed to be transported from place to place. A ger is most commonly moved by a team of camels or oxen, the strongest animals that can support a heavy weight. The placement of a ger has been influenced by Mongols' traditions. Throughout Mongolian history, the door of the ger has always faced southeast. Mongols believe that because winds gust from the southeast and the sacred sun rises in the east, gers that face in this direction are blessed.

The most common animal to be seen roaming the land of Mongolia is the yak. Mongols use the abundance of these animals to benefit their culture by herding them and using the animals as a source of trade. The Mongolian people also dine on meat from yaks and use their fat to fuel stoves. The Mongolian government trades yaks to other countries for oil, manufactured goods, and machinery, which are all conveniences that Mongols cannot process themselves.

The Mongols' land is a tangle of many different environments. A portion of Mongolia includes a vast mountain range locking in bleak and rocky grasslands. The most prominent mountain range is the Altai. This cluster of mountains holds the only glaciers in Mongolia, which makes for a nipping, frigid climate. The Mongolian grasslands also border the Gobi Desert, where the climate is arid and hot. Mongol culture, therefore, has adapted to living among extreme temperatures, but it revolves mostly around the more temperate grasslands. The Mongols have proven, in the survival of their culture, that to this day they still have the spark and the strength that the great Genghis Khan possessed.

150TH ANNIVERSARY OF HARMONY MASONIC LODGE

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I wish to call to the attention of our colleagues and the American people the achievements of the Brothers of the Masonic Harmony Lodge #199 F.&A.M. of Sparkill, New York, on their 150th anniversary of fraternity and service to their community. The Harmony Lodge has continued the Masonic tradition of promoting ''morality in which all men agree, that is, to be good men and true.'' Together with the nineteen other Masonic Lodges of the Manhattan District, the Harmony Lodge has continued to support the charitable endeavors of the Masons by raising and donating millions of dollars to hospitals, homes for widows, the elderly, and orphans as well as numerous scholarship funds.

The Harmony Lodge held its first meeting with nineteen Brothers on October 12, 1849, and ever since then the language of their meetings has always been German. The Brothers of Harmony Lodge have actively participated with the other Masonic Lodges of New York to raise funds to build the German Masonic Lodge in Manhattan, purchase land for a Masonic Park and Masonic home for the elderly as well as aiding in the foundation of two other Masonic Lodges in the state of New York. The brothers of the Harmony Lodge take great pride displaying German heritage, and do so by inviting thousands of visitors each August to the German Masonic Park to enjoy German culture, food and music entertainment in their annual ''Oompah Fest and Steer Roast.''

The Masons, officially titled the Free and Accepted Masons, are one of the world's oldest and largest fraternal organizations, dating back to its foundation in England in the early 1700's. Throughout history the Masons have sought to bring men together of all race, religions and political ideology under the ideas of charity, equality, morality and service to God. Today the Masons have millions of members worldwide, including more than 2.5 million in the United States. They have earned a reputation as highly respected businessmen, ministers and politicians. Great men such as American statesman Benjamin Franklin, Composer Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, French philosopher Voltaire and U.S. President George Washington have all been Brothers in the Masonic order.

My own association as a Brother with the Masons has been a great influence on me throughout my career and in public life. Their moral values and ethical code have been an immeasurable help to guide me in making fair and just decisions in my responsibilities as a Member of this chamber.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that under the leadership of Worshipful Master Arnold Geisler, Secretary Jack Williams and Treasurer Reinhard Kabitzke that the Harmony Lodge will continue its good works as a model organization and will continue to help those in need as well as continue to be an exemplary example of fraternal service to community for another 150 years.

TRIBUTE TO THE BELLARMINE COLLEGE MOCK TRIAL TEAM

HON. ANNE M. NORTHUP

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to honor constituents from Louisville, Kentucky. Recently, the Bellarmine College Mock Trial Team competed in the American Mock Trial Association's National Championships in Des Moines, Iowa and brought back to Louisville the National Championship. The Knights of Bellarmine overcame the efforts of Stanford and Rhodes in their march to victory.

This was a redeeming victory for Bellarmine which had finished second in the competition the previous four years. While compiling a record of 7–0–1 during the competition all of the members of the championship team were named All-Americans. Meanwhile, the second team for Bellarmine gained valuable experience, several individual awards and finished in fifth place overall. I also am pleased to honor one of team's coaches the James Wagoner, who was honored for his outstanding service to the American Mock Trial Association and the legal profession outside of mock trial.

The Bellermine championship team is made up of: William Armstrong, Amanda Bennett, Jason Butler, Nathaniel Cadle, Ryane Conroy and Vanessa Cox. The second team included: John Balenovich, David Chamberlain, Cheryl Danner, Heather Jackson, Matt Rich, Christi Spurlock and Sarah Wimsatt. These two fine squads were led by James Wagoner, Ruth Wagoner and Jason Cooper. Again, I am so proud to honor this team, as Louisville celebrates its National Champion.

CONGRATULATING BILL AND BEV FARNSWORTH ON THEIR SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Bill and Bev Farnsworth as they celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Bill and Bev Farnsworth were married on May 4, 1974 in Elgin, Illinois. They moved to Fresno, California in 1978 and reside there today. Bill owns Valley Drywall Systems, a construction company. Bev is a department manager at Gottschalk's department store in Fresno. Together they have raised four children, Sherrie, Bryon, Kelly and Larry.

Bill and Bev Farnsworth have exemplified true family values in their family and love for each other. They have been involved in their community with various volunteer organizations. Bev was a volunteer for the Clovis Community Hospital Guild. Both Bill and Bev were a part of the Fresno County Republican Central Committee.

Bill and Bev have a saying that they hold dear, ''More than yesterday, less than tomorrow.''

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate Bill and Bev Farnsworth on their Silver Wedding Anniversary. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing them many more years of happiness.

BAY MEDICAL CENTER AUXILIARY: A VITAL PARTNER FOR VITAL SERVICES

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, there are many organizations that make a huge difference in our lives, and their successes are made possible by their support mechanisms. Bay Medical Center in my Congressional District provides outstanding health care to my constituents, and its ability to provide this wonderful care is a direct result of the activities of the Bay Medical Center Auxiliary.

Since 1973, the members of the Auxiliary have consistently acted as ambassadors for the hospital. Their good will and confidence has been a key factor in the many successful fund-raising campaigns over the years. In fact, the Bay Medical Center Auxiliary has provided nearly one million dollars to the Health System since 1990 through Gift Shop profits, proceeds from the annual Charity Ball, and other fundraising activities.

Proceeds provided by the Auxiliary have been used for many essential activities. Courtesy vans have been provided for patients convenience. Infant and adult ventilators, the first electric birthing bed-chair, state of the art mammography equipment, an advance life support ambulance, Life-Pac resuscitation equipment, fetal monitors, and cardiac rehabilitation equipment are only some of the medical devices provided by the Auxiliary's efforts that help maintain an outstanding quality of care. A number of facilities, including the women's resource library, waiting lounges in ICU and surgery, and the main campus lobby have all been improved by the Auxiliary. Work on behalf of open heart programs, including support of surgery and the heart-lung bypass machine, has made a life-saving difference to many patients.

There are 213 members of the Bay Medical Center Auxiliary. They come from all walks of life, and work throughout the year. Many members have had personal exposure to the services of Bay medical Center, and have joined the Auxiliary as their way of saying thanks for vital services. Each member appreciates the importance of the Center, and knows that it takes a network of caring people to provide quality health care. Each and every member wants to be a part of that network.

Mr. Speaker, as we look for champions around the nation, it is most fitting that we recognize the members of the Bay Medical Center Auxiliary as champions for their community. I urge you and all of our colleagues to join me in congratulating President Lucy Horak and Past President Linda Grube, along with all of the other most valuable members of the Bay Medical Center Auxiliary, on their success, and in wishing them many more productive years to come.

REPORT FROM SHELBY COUNTY

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my ''Report from Indiana'' where I honor distinguished Hoosiers whom are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committed Hoosiers whom I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them ''Hoosier Heroes''.

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in Shelby County at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. He's Assistant Police Chief Bill Dwenger. His devotion to his community has been unfailing and why Bill epitomizes a ''Hoosier Hero''.

While serving as a detective, Bill pursued primarily on his own time the Shirley Sturgill murder case that had been hanging over Shelbyville for seven years. Due to his perseverance, the murderer was caught, tried, and convicted to a life term. His hard work allowed his neighbors to breathe a little easier knowing that their community was safe.

Bill also serves on the Board of Community Corrections as well as the Shelby County Youth Shelter which provides a safe haven for abused kids. Bill doesn't help children for the pay, which is zilch, he does it for the smiles and laughter. Bill's work has given so many people the most precious gift possible, hope and peace of mind. You are a true hero in my book doing good work for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Bill Dwenger deserves the gratitude of the county, state, and nation, and I thank him here today on the floor of the House of Representatives.

HELP GIVE PEACE TO THE FAMILY OF ZACHARY BAUMEL—SUPPORT H.R. 1175

HON. DAVID DREIER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, on June 11, 1982, Zachary Baumel, an American citizen serving in the Israeli army, was captured along with four other members of his tank battalion in a battle with Palestinian and Syrian forces near the Lebanese town of Sultan Yaqub. While two of the captured soldiers were later released, Baumel and two other MIAs remain unaccounted for, despite evidence that they were probably captured alive. Like any parents living through the nightmare of a missing child, Zachary's parents, Yona and Miriam Baumel, have been unrelenting in the search for their son.

The Baumels have met with officials around the world to follow up on leads provided by various individuals claiming to know of Zachary's whereabouts. Unfortunately, they have yet to reach any sort of closure. While I sincerely hope that their personal search reunites them with Zachary, I believe that the U.S. government should make every effort to determine Zachary's fate and help bring peace to the Baumel family. H.R. 1175, which would require the State Department to step up efforts in locating and securing the return of Zachary Baumel, as well as other Israeli soldiers missing in action, is a step in that direction. I have cosponsored this important legislation, and I urge my colleagues to support me in this effort.

PAMELA CRUZ RECEIVES THE PRUDENTIAL SPIRIT AWARD

HON. HEATHER WILSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to your attention a young woman in our community, Pamela Cruz, who has been named one of New Mexico's top youth volunteers for 1999 in The Prudential Spirit of Community Award.

Pamela's volunteer efforts truly reflect the spirit of community. She visits a local nursing home twice a week to arrange entertaining activities for the residents. Pamela recognizes that the residents have contributed to our community and should not be forgotten. By showing affection and being consistent with her visits, she has gained the trust of the nursing home residents. Further, Pamela has recruited other young people in Albuquerque to volunteer at the nursing home. She is a wonderful example of reaching out to others to make our entire community a better place to live.

Pamela is definitely one of America's top youth volunteers. Join me in thanking Pamela Cruz for her contributions to old and young alike in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

IN HONORING OF THE LATE MICHAEL MCGARVEY

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a humanitarian, a true leader, and my personal mentor, Michael McGarvey, Jr., a veteran Long Island scout master and postman who passed away at the age of 80.

The first time I met Michael, I was impressed and impacted by his manner. He was such a gentle and instructive person, especially for me as a young kid attending Confraternity of Christian Doctrine (CCD) lessons at the Immaculate Conception hall in Westhampton Beach.

In our community he was known as the grandfather of scouting. Michael was an adult

Scout leader for more than 47 years. He rose to the post of commissioner of the Suffolk County Council, Boy Scout of America, and regional chairman of the Catholic Committee on Scouting. He was so enthralled with scouting that he attend board meetings until a few months before his death last week after a long illness.

In his time with scouting he was recognized with numerous citations, including one for service to the Catholic youth of Long Island presented to him by Bishop John McGann of the Diocese of Rockville Centre. He also received a Pius X citation for teaching catechism to the Immaculate Conception Church Confraternity in Westhampton Beach, where I was his student.

Born in Akron, Ohio, he graduated from East Akron High School and came to New York in 1939 to attend the New York World's Fair in Flushing and visit with his sister, Margaret Kennedy. His sister introduced him to her friend, the former Lillian Langguth of Manhattan. They were married shortly thereafter and remained so for 56 years.

They moved to Westhampton, Long Island in 1955, where they expanded Bide-A-Wee Home, the animal adoption center which they managed for 18 years. They were especially known for taking in pets that were left over from the summer vacationers. After that, Michael worked in the Riverhead Post Office until he retired six years ago at age 74.

I was moved by the commitment I witnessed Michael and Lillian have for the children of our community. They also loved their church, and lived the daily example of charity and love for their neighbors. In this time of distance between our children and their parents and church, Michael was a breath of fresh air. In many ways, he has helped shape my own life and I wish I could emulate his wonderful example.

Michael will be remembered as the ultimate Scouter, where he brought to the position of commissioner a level of dignity and respect that could be used as the role model for all volunteer leaders. To the people of Long Island Michael will be remembered as a Scoutmaster, Postman, animal sanctuary provider, and a neighbor that was always willing to offer a helping hand regardless of the situation. To me he will be remembered as a person that had a profound effect on the way I conduct myself in my life.

Colleague, Michael's warmth and dedication to the youth will be surely missed.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM

HON. KAREN L. THURMAN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. THURMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the University of Florida Women's Soccer Team. The Gators brought home the 1998 NCAA Women's Soccer Championship in only their fourth year of existence. Women's soccer is a relatively new competitive sport. But you would never have known that looking at the way these women played on Sunday, December 6.

That's the day these well-honed athletes will remember for the rest of their lives. They won the championship game against the University of North Carolina before a record crowd of more than 10,500 fans. The pressure was really on to beat the Tar Heels—well recognized for their 70-match unbeaten streak and numerous NCAA tournament wins.

Some people may have considered the Gators the new kids on the block. But they were out to prove themselves. And in doing so, the Gators became the youngest program this decade to win a title. The program was formed only four years ago by coach Becky Burleigh. She also made history. She became the first woman head coach to win an NCAA soccer championship.

Following the winning game, the Palm Beach Post quoted Burleigh saying, ''I can't believe it.'' The coach's reaction clearly describes her excitement. But I would like to clarify the record. This talented woman knew all along her team could do it. When she started recruiting for the squad's first season, she told her young freshmen players they would go to the final Four by graduation. And that happened.

Burleigh's fine eye for recruiting talent and her ability to mold and inspire took these women to the top. In January, Burleigh was named coach of the year by the National Soccer Coaches of America Association. Before that, the same association named her the coach of the year for the Southeast region. And I'm sure there's much more recognition coming her way and the Gators' way in the future.

I want to congratulate Burleigh and her coaching team: Assistant Coaches Victor Campbell and Tiffany Thompson, Volunteer Coach Matthew Mitchell, Manager Scott Barbee, and Athletic Trainer Michael Duck.

I also want to individually congratulate the entire team: Meredith Flaherty, who was named the tournament's Defensive Most Valuable Player, Danielle Fotopoulos, who was named the tournament's Offensive Most Valuable Player, Danielle Bass, Erin Baxter, Keisha Bell, Christie Brady, Jill DiBerardino, Kerri Doran, Erin Gilhart, Karyn Hall, Michelle Harris, Jordan Kellgren, Genie Leonard, Alexis MacKenzie, Kelly Maher, Heather Mitts, Adrianne Moreira, Lisa Olinyk, Angie Olson, Lynn Pattishall, Melissa Pini, Renee Reynolds, Andrea Sellers, Whitney Singer, Jill Stevens, Katie Tullis, Abby Wambach, Tracy Ward and Sarah Yohe.

Go Gators!

ON THE CONTINUING STEEL CRISIS

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to call upon the other body to pass H.R. 975, the steel import limitation bill. The House passed this bill by an overwhelming margin because the policy of this Administration has failed to protect the American steel industry and its workers from unfair competition. But a bill does not become a law without votes from both Houses of Congress.

While America waits for the other side to vote on H.R. 975, steel imports have begun to climb again. This should be an important reminder that nothing the Administration is pursuing adequately limits unfairly low priced steel imports. Though the Administration is ineffective in preserving the American steel industry, the Administration is actively defending the American banana industry in a trade dispute with Europe. But does the banana industry employ 160,000 American workers? No. Does nearly every state in the Northeast and Southeast and Southwest have a banana industry? No. Are foreign bananas crowding out the American banana business in the U.S.? No. Those facts have not stopped the Administration from pulling out every stop to protect a banana industry that does not exist in America.

Bananas did not build America. Steel did. The only practical solution to the steel import crisis is to make H.R. 975 into law.

TRIBUTE TO BETTY ADELSTEIN

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mrs. Betty Adelstein, an outstanding individual who has devoted her life to her family and to serving the community. Mrs. Adelstein will turn 90 on Wednesday and celebrated May 2, 1999 at a party given her family and friends.

She is a vibrant, dynamic, caring woman who drives to St. Vincent Hospital three days a week to volunteer in the office of the Director of Pediatrics. She has accumulated over 10,000 hours of volunteer service at the hospital and, during the past twenty years, she has given of herself and her time to various Staten Island organizations. Before moving to Staten Island, she spent nearly fifty years as a resident of the Bronx.

Mr. Speaker, Mrs. Adelstein was born in New Britain, Connecticut on May 5, 1909, a first generation American. From the age of five, she helped sell newspapers in her father's candy store. At fourteen years of age, after the shop was closed, she was taken out of school and brought to New York to help in the vegetable store her father opened there, leaving her mother, 4 brothers and a sister behind. When she was sixteen, the family moved to the Bronx from New Britain.

Mrs. Adelstein finished high school at night. Several years later, she meet her husband, David, an electrical engineer. They were married in 1932 and remained in the Bronx for forty-one years until his death in 1973. In 1975, she moved to Staten Island to be near her daughter, son-in-law and grandson. It was then last that she began her long career as a volunteer, which continues to this day. She is truly a source of inspiration to all who know her.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing a happy 90th birthday to Betty Adelstein.

TRIBUTE TO SAINTS CONSTANTINE AND HELEN GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH

HON. HERBERT H. BATEMAN

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the First District of Virginia's Hellenic community as it celebrates the 50th anniversary of Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church in Newport News.

Greek immigrants have lived and worked on the Virginia Peninsula from as early as 1900. From its humble beginnings to today, the Greek community has played a significant role in the growth and prosperity of the Virginia Peninsula. It also has established a number of associations and organizations for its members, which add to the strength of the community as a whole. The benefits of such associations are innumerable.

In 1929, a small group of Greek-American men on the Peninsula organized the Woodrow Wilson Chapter of the American Hellenic Educational and Progressive Association (AHEPA) while a group of Greek-American women organized the Greek Women's Penelope Society, an independent organization dedicated to community service. The Greek community soon began meeting regularly at St. Paul's Episcopal Church on 34th Street in Newport News and by 1934 a constitution was drafted to govern the growing community. The Hellenic Educational Society also was formed in 1934. This organization served as a community board to oversee the education of the young.

In 1944, a committee was formed to develop plans to build a church. Within three years, ground was broken on land near the Victory Arch in Newport News and Saints Constantine and Helen was completed by 1949. Then Archbishop Athenagoras—later Patriarch—participated in the dedication of the church. At that time, the congregation numbered 50 families. There are more than 1,000 members of the church today.

Soon after the Saints Constantine and Helen was built, a Philoptochos Chapter was formed to assist the needy on the Peninsula. This chapter is still in existence and the majority of the church's contributions to charitable organizations on the local, regional, national and international levels originates from this group.

As the number of Greek families in the community began to grow, so did the need for more space. In 1958, three school rooms were added to the church to provide an area for Sunday school classes. This provided both religious and language education for the children and any interested members of the Peninsula community. These efforts enhanced the spirit of the community by encouraging cultural identification.

By 1966, land was purchased on Traverse Road in Newport News to build a community center and a new church. The Hellenic Community Center opened in 1975 and is the centerpiece of the Greek community. It also is one of the largest gathering places available for groups to meet on the Peninsula. I, myself, have used the center for several functions.

Ground was broken for a new church in July of 1981 and within a year services were being held in the new building. It was consecrated by Archbishop Iacovos in 1984.

Since 1967, Saints Constantine and Helen has held an annual festival to share the culture and traditions of the Greek community with Peninsula. Having attended the event for many years, I know first hand the enthusiasm of our community for the celebration. I also have witnessed the success of many of Saints Constantine and Helen's programs.

I take great pride in being a member of the Order of AHEPA. My wife, Laura, is equally proud of being a member of the Daughters of Penelope. It is truly an honor to represent this outstanding segment of the community in Congress.

Again, I wish to commend both Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church and the Hellenic community on the Virginia Peninsula. They nourish each other and make possible the success and contributions of each.

It is my hope and expectation that the Hellenic community on the Peninsula will continue to succeed, and that the next 50 years will be as, or more, notable than the last.

A TRIBUTE TO MICHAEL T. WILTSIE

HON. DAVE CAMP

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. CAMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Michael T. Wiltsie, a young man from the 4th Congressional District whose bravery I commend and whose actions I would like to call to the attention of my colleagues in the U.S. House of Representatives.

On Sept. 2, 1998, Michael was serving as a safety patrol officer near Ganiard Elementary School in Mount Pleasant, Mich. He and an adult crossing guard were stationed at the corner of Broadway and Adams streets, a busy intersection.

What happened next could have been a tragedy, but instead is the story of an heroic 12-year old whose quick thinking effectively saved the life of a 7-year-old boy.

The adult crossing guard had just walked to the center of the street to stop traffic when the 7-year old walked around Michael's outstretched arms to follow the crossing guard. At that moment, a truck making a left-hand turn failed to stop at the stop sign and passed between Michael and the crossing guard. Michael reached out and grabbed the little boy by his backpack, pulling him to safety just as the truck sped by.

Michael is one of the six young students being honored today at the AAA's School Safety Patrol Lifesaving Award Ceremony in Washington, D.C. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the Lifesaving Award, which recognizes those patrols who risked their own lives to save the lives of others. More than one-half million children serve as patrols at 50,000 schools.

It is a special privilege for me to represent Michael in the U.S. House of Representatives. Our halls here are filled with the statues and memories of American men and women who have unselfishly given to others. I am pleased today to submit this tribute to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, to ensure that Michael's bravery is also recorded for history.

THE 24TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE TRAGIC FALL OF SOUTH VIETNAM TO COMMUNISM

HON. LORETTA SANCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, April 30, 1975 marked the beginning of a treacherous boat journey for many Vietnamese who sought refuge in an unknown land and an uncertain future. These individuals risked everything for a chance to live freely and provide better opportunities for their children and families. I rise today to pay special tribute and recognize the valiant efforts to our Vietnam War Veterans and to the Vietnamese who fought and died for freedom and democracy in Viet Nam.

Earlier this month, I traveled to Viet Nam to meet with representatives of the U.S. and Vietnamese government to express my concern for the lack of human, religious and political rights. During my visit, I met with several prominent human rights activists including Dr. Nguyen Dan Que, Tran Huu Duyen, the Venerable Quang Do and the Archbishop of Saigon, Pham Minh Man. I learned first hand that despite the release of several prisoners of conscience under a presidential amnesty in September 1998, public criticism of the government by dissidents is still not tolerated. The few who do speak out publicly and advocate peaceful reform continue to be harassed and imprisoned.

As we recently witnessed, the protest that has taken place in Little Saigon, Orange County, California is a reminder to all Americans how sacred human rights, freedom and democracy are. For many, the display of the communist flag is a reminder of the pain and sufferings after 1975.

Mr. Speaker, as we reflect on this tragic day it is our duty as Members of Congress to honor the memory of the individuals that fought for liberty and democracy in Viet Nam.

REPORT FROM ADAMS COUNTY

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my ''Report from Indiana'' where I honor distinguished Hoosiers who are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committed Hoosiers who I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them ''Hoosier Heroes''.

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in Adams County, Indiana at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. He is Alan Converset, who is a sales manager at WZBD Adams County Radio. By working tirelessly on behalf of the less fortunate, Alan epitomizes a ''Hoosier Hero''.

Alan served as the president of the Decatur Rotary Club and Chairman of the United Way golf outing to raise money for those who need a helping hand from someone who cares. He also works on the March of Dimes Walk America Committee.

Alan's work has given so many people the most precious gift possible, hope. He doesn't do it for the pay which is zilch; he does it for the smiles and laughter. You are a true hero in my book, doing good work for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Alan Coverset deserves the gratitude of the country, state, and nation, and I thank him here today on the floor of the House of Representatives.

A.J. HERRERA SELECTED AS PLAYER OF THE YEAR FOR PARADE MAGAZINE'S 21ST ANNUAL HIGH SCHOOL BOYS SOCCER TEAM

HON. HEATHER WILSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring to your attention a young man in our community, A.J. Herrera, who has been selected Player of the Year on Parade magazine's 21st annual High School Boys Soccer Team.

A.J. Herrera has represented the United States in France, Slovakia, and Russia as a three-year member of the U.S. National Team. He has hopes of playing on the U.S. Olympic Team. In discussions regarding his soccer ability, A.J. references the support he has received from family, friends, teammates, and coaches. Although he has an athletic gift to play soccer, A.J.'s No. 1 priority is earning a college degree.

A.J. Herrera is an example of young people throughout our communities who are involved in sports and other extracurricular activities that build character and citizenship. Learning lessons about setting and achieving goals, staying physically fit and being part of a team. The community is proud of his accomplishments. Join me in recognizing A.J.'s achievements and contributions to Albuquerque, New Mexico.

A TRIBUTE TO THEODORE BUTCHER

HON. JOSEPH R. PITTS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor a faithful Chester County man upon his retirement from West Chester University, where he served as a faculty member and administrator. Mr. Theodore Butcher's contributions to his family, community, and country deserve to be noted.

Over the past thirty years, Mr. Butcher has worked tirelessly to ensure fair and equitable treatment of people with regards to education, race, religion, economics and disabilities. He has given of himself both personally and financially to the causes in which he believes and for which he works. Through his community service with the West Chester Community Center, the Community Housing Resource Board, the Fair Housing Council, Mental Health/Mental Retardation, The Community Service Council of Chester Country, The Swope Foundation, the West Chester Rotary Club, the YMCA, NAACP and on the original board of the Chester County Water Authority.

Clearly, this is a man with a deep commitment to his community. I can venture to say that Mr. Butcher has added much value to West Chester University and to Chester County, Pennsylvania. I am pleased to honor him today, and would like to submit for the RECORD a letter from his daughter Joacqueline Butcher. My congratulations and best wishes go with this community servant.

SUPPORTING THE NATIONAL LETTER CARRIERS FOOD DRIVE

HON. LOIS CAPPS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay special tribute to our letter carriers in Santa Barbara, California. On Saturday May 8, our local letter carriers will be participating in the seventh annual ''Stamp Out Hunger'' food drive, sponsored by the National Association of Letter Carriers.

Our local letter carriers will be joining their fellow letter carriers in more than 10,000 cities and towns across the nation in collecting nonperishable food items and donations along their postal routes for local food banks. The Stamp Out Hunger food drive is expected to help feed nearly thirty million needy children and adults in our communities.

On behalf of the people on the Central Coast and across the nation, I owuld like to thank our letter carriers for their leadership in this very worthy cause.

TRIBUTE TO THE GRAN PARADA DOMINICANA DE EL BRONX, INC. ON THEIR 10TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor for me to pay tribute to a great organization, the ''Gran Parada Dominicana de El Bronx, Inc.'' which celebrates its tenth anniversary of celebrating Dominican culture in my South Bronx Congressional District today, Monday, May 3rd, 1999.

The Gran Parada Dominicana de El Bronx, Inc. was created on May 3, 1990. Each year thousands of members and friends of the Dominican community march from Mt. Eden and 172nd Street to East 161st Street and the Grand Concourse during the annual Great Dominican Parade and Carnival of the Bronx. Under its Founder and President, Felipe Febles, the parade has grown in size and splendor. It now brings together an increasing number of participants from all five New York City boroughs and beyond.

Mr. Speaker, as one who has participated in the parade in the past, I can attest that the excitement it generates brings the entire City together. It is a celebration and an affirmation of life. It feels wonderful to enable so many people to have this experience—one that will change the lives of many of them. It is always an honor for me to join the hundreds of joyful people who march each year and to savor the variety of their celebrations. There's no better way to see our Bronx community.

The event usually features a wide variety of entertainment for all age groups. Past years' festivals included the performance of Merengue and Salsa bands, crafts exhibitions, and food typical of the Dominican Republic.

In addition to the parade, President Febles and many organizers each year provide the community with nearly two weeks of activities to commemorate the contributions of the Dominican community, its culture and history.

Mr. Speaker, it is with enthusiasm that I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to the Gran Parada Dominicana de El Bronx, Inc. and in wishing the Committee continued success.

TREVOR P. SCHMIDT WINS THE VFW'S 1999 VOICE OF DEMOCRACY BROADCAST SCRIPTWRITING CONTEST

HON. BILL BARRETT

OF NEBRASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I'd like to call my colleagues' attention to the following script written by my constituent, Trevor P. Schmidt, a senior at Chadron High School in Chadron, Nebraska. Trevor won the VFW's 1999 Voice of Democracy broadcast scriptwriting contest for Nebraska.

MY SERVICE TO AMERICA

The other day my friend Shawn and I went out to lunch. I was driving so I said, ''Where would you like to eat today, Shawn?'' He said he didn't care, so we went where I wanted to go. Once we got there, Shawn started to complain like you wouldn't believe, and I thought to myself, what right do you have to complain? I gave you a choice, and you deferred to me. In America today, the constitution and our fellow citizens are asking us, ''Where do we want to go today?'' Unfortunately, the majority of Americans are saying, ''I don't care''. However, if you read the news, the majority of people do care. They are just not motivated enough to do anything about it. Oh sure they like to complain once they see where the country has ended up, but complaining can't move a speck of dust and it isn't going to help our country. Democracy is based around participation, and it is only successful when used properly. Like a car's engine, America can run using only part of its cylinders, but in order for America to reach its highest potential, all parts must be working at the same time.

Democracy is a tool just waiting to be picked up, but like any other tool it is useless until someone puts it to work. Throughout time, it has been used by a plethora of individuals, and now it is my time and the time of my peers. It is time for us to accept the torch of America that is slowly being passed down. We cannot let the flame die, so we must hold it high and let it light the way for the world. For many of my peers, action in Democracy will begin as they cast their votes in this fall's election. While I'm not able to join others in voting at this election because of my age, I have taken my own road to ensure that the tool of Democracy does not sit idle. Since voting was not an option for me, I wanted to ensure that those who did have the right to vote were making use of it. I approached the county clerk and arranged it so that I could be their extension. Over a course of three days, I worked for them and registered over fifteen new high school voters. While this really isn't comparable with running for office, it was something I could do to help my country. This action was just another step in my maturation as a citizen of democracy.

I began my service years ago, when as a child I first began to read. At first I only read simple stores, but as the years passed, I began to read and hear a much grander tale; one of a nation that rose up around a noble theory, a nation that was to be ruled by the people. I learned of America. I thrived on this utopian story for many years, but once again as time passed the story got more complex. I learned of the mistakes America and its people had made, and I learned of the great people who struggled to rectify these mistakes. I have absorbed many people's opinions over the years, and now I have my own and I know that I can give them voice.

Langston Hughes once wrote, ''I too sing America, I too am America.'' This is where I stand now and forever, I will sing my voice along with my fellow Americans and though my voice may be lost in the chorus at times, I will keep singing, keep supporting my nation. A person singing a solo is limited to his/her options, but a choir combines each individual's choices into a complex splendor. Choral music depends on each member singing his or her own distinctive part. Sometimes the chords clash, and sometimes the parts slide into near unison; always each part must be heard. So too with democracy, I must speak my opinion, but I also must hear and accept my fellow citizen's opinion and recognize that my nation will be nothing with just my part. One thing that is of key importance though is that I must know my part; therefore, my quest for knowledge must never end. I must also encourage those around me to speak their mind. Even though I may not like what I hear, it is an essential part for the success of democracy. This is how I will serve my country. I will learn all that I can, I will take in others' opinions and learn from them, and then without reservation I will speak my mind and let my nation know how I feel. I too am America, and I am not about to let anyone forget.

REPORT FROM FLOYD COUNTY

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my ''Report from Indiana'' where I honor distinguished Hoosiers who are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committee Hoosiers who I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them ''Hoosier Heroes''.

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in Floyd County, Indiana at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. He's Kevin Boehnlein, who is a local director here for junior achievement and whose motto is ''Looking out for the future of the community''. By working tirelessly for his community, Kevin epitomizes a ''Hoosier Hero''.

Kevin may be young but he has a giant's heart and he cares deeply about his community. Kevin is in the Jeffersonville rotary club, and has helped build homes for the needy as a member of Habitat for Humanity. He is also very active in his church. Kevin and his wife Kristen serve as a leadership team at Oak Park Baptist Church. They serve as counselors to young couples to help them maintain a strong love and faith.

Kevin's work has given so many people, the most precious gift, hope. He doesn't do it for the pay, which is zilch; he does it for the smiles and laughter. You are a true hero in my book doing good work for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Kevin Boehnlein deserves the gratitude of the county, state, and nation, and I thank him here today on the floor of the House of Representatives.

HUMANITARIAN AWARDS

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this occasion to recognize the organizers and honorees of the 1st Annual Tan Chong Padula Humanitarian Awards. The awards night will be held on May 8, 1999, at the Garden Grove Community Center in Garden Grove, CA—an endeavor to recognize and honor individuals of Chamorro descent for volunteerism and service to the community. Proceeds from this event will fund the Tan Chong Padula Scholarship. The first such award is scheduled to be presented in the year 2000.

The idea was first proposed by Lola Sablan-Santos, the executive director of the Guam Communications Network. Contrived with the full support of the Padula/Roberto family, the annual event is a celebration of the life and accomplishments of the late Connie ''Tan Chong'' Padula. Tan Chong was born on May 8, 1917, on the island of Guam. She moved to the State of California and became a longtime resident of Orange County, maintaining a home in Santa Ana from 1968 until 1992.

Her civic-mindedness, in addition to her kindness, generosity, and compassion, earned her a very respected niche in her community. Never one to keep to herself, Tan Chong volunteered her services to a host of civic activities ranging from church fundraisers to the manning of polling stations during elections. As one of the founders of the Guamanian Society of Orange County, she spearheaded community activities which were almost always held at the Garden Grove Community Center. She was widely known for her great support to Chamorro community organizations throughout the State of California and for her willingness to be of assistance to those in need. Sadly, she passed away in Orange County on June 19, 1992.

This year's event will be held on the anniversary of her 82nd birthday. All honorees will receive a medallion especially crafted for this annual event by Chamorro artist Ron Castro on Guam and the top award will be presented to the individual chosen as ''Humanitarian of the Year.''

This year's awardees in the ''Adult'' category are George Afleje, Maria ''Kitalang'' Borja, Heidi Chargualaf, Carmen Cruz, Pacing Cruz, Perci Flores, Maria Laguana, Joaquin Naputi, Ann Pangelinan, Joe Pangelinan, Celia Perez, Suzanne Robert, Juana Sanchez, Juanita ''Nita'' Santos, Ernie Tajalle, and Maria Tajalle. In the ''Youth'' category, Michael Maguadog, Sarah Mesa, Stefanie Mesa, Bryanna ''Berry'' Quenga, Nikki Quenga, Michael Van Langeveld, and Tara Van Meter were selected. The honor of being chosen as the first recipient of the Tan Chong Padula Humanitarian of the Year Award goes to Juana Sanchez.

On behalf of the people of Guam, I congratulate the organizers, honorees, and, most of all, the Humanitarian of the Year awardee of the 1st Annual Tan Chong Padula Humanitarian Awards. Miles away from their home island of Guam, these folks managed to combine their resources in order to benefit the community in a manner that best represents our island culture. Keep up the good work! Si Yu'os Ma'ase'.

ORGAN DONATION

HON. ELIJAH E. CUMMINGS

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, recently, we celebrated National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week and today I recognize the medical advances that have made organ transplantation a viable treatment option. Thanks to those who have given the gift of life, more than 20,000 individuals received an organ transplant in 1996.

However, each year, the number of organs donated in the United States falls tragically short of the need. Sadly, more than 55,000 people are on the national organ transplant waiting list and about 10 will die each day as the waiting lists continue to grow.

Organ donation is increasing, but not fast enough to come close to meeting the need. In recent years, progress has been made in creating awareness of the need for organ donation. Most Americans indicate they support organ donation. Nonetheless, only about 50 percent of families asked to donate a loved one's organs agree to do so. Moreover, thousands of opportunities to donate are missed each year, either because families do not know what their loved ones wanted, or because potential donors are not identified for organ procurement organizations and their families are never asked.

To address these barriers to donation, government and private sector partnerships must be focused on * * * * * * that we from government and the private sector. But most importantly, we need volunteers willing to share the gift of life. To achieve this goal, there must be an emphasis on increasing consent to donation and referrals to organ procurement organizations.

However, we must also ensure that our social and work environments are amenable to persons serving as donors. That is why I urge support of my legislation H.R. 457, the Organ Donor Leave Act, which would provide federal employees an additional 7 days to serve as a bone-marrow donor, and 30 days to serve as an organ donor.

Passage of this measure would stand as a model for private employees to amend their personnel policies to grant additional paid leave to living donors who give bone marrow, a kidney, or other organs.

Without donors, transplant surgeons cannot save even one life. With just one donor, they can save and improve as many as 50 lives. I believe that we must all pledge to join the national community of organ and tissue sharing by closing the gap between donated organs and tissue and the people who need them.

With this commitment, we pave the way for our nation to be able to answer the hopes and needs of those who now wait too long for a second chance at life.

I urge support of H.R. 457 and challenge all Americans to say ''yes'' to organ and tissue donation.

H.R. 1660, PUBLIC SCHOOL MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, today, along with many of my colleagues, I am introducing legislation, entitled the Public School Modernization Act of 1999, which consists of two education tax incentives that are contained in the President's budget recommendations for fiscal year 2000. I am very pleased that 88 Members have joined me as cosponsors of this needed legislation. I cannot imagine a better way to honor our teachers on ''Teacher Appreciation Day'' than to work toward modernized schools, smaller classes, and other educational improvements in our public schools.

I will continue to work with the Administration to introduce the President's domestic initiatives that are within the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Committee. I also will continue to urge consideration by the Congress of these important proposals.

The most important challenge facing this country today is the need to improve our educational system. Expanding educational opportunities is crucial to our country's social and economic well being.

I have a personal interest in improving the quality of education for all students. Through the GI bill, this country made an investment in my education that provided me with a needed second chance after the Korean War. I believe that we must give all public school children a second chance so that they can make a positive contribution to society by making the most of their abilities through educational opportunities.

I am very excited that the President emphasize education in his State of the Union address and that his budget recommendations contain a comprehensive program to improve our public school system. The bill that we are introducing today contains two important tax provisions that will help modernize our public schools, reduce class sizes, and expand education-based training opportunities for students most in need.

I recognize that these tax provisions alone are not the total answer to our country's need to improve our educational system. Therefore, I also am a strong supporter of the other education improvements included in the President's budget.

Many children today are attending school in trailers or in dilapidated school buildings. We cannot expect learning to occur in those environments. Other students are forced into huge classes, making it difficult for students to learn and difficult for teachers to help students on an individual basis. Using tax credits, this bill would provide approximately $24 billion in interest-free funds for school modernization projects. This bill is a meaningful first step in addressing the problem of crowded and dilapidated school facilities.

Recent events have underscored the need for increased school safety measures in many public schools. While these are by no means the only answers, reducing class size and providing safe and modern schools will help children get off to the right start and will help teachers more easily recognize and serve those students who may need special attention. In order for our children to learn, they must not be afraid to attend school. Safe schools are a necessity—and a priority. In addition to smaller classes, this legislation will provide the means for school districts to modernize other safety and educational features in the public schools.

We must also do more to provide education and training opportunities for students who do not go on to college. We have existing programs, like the empowerment zone legislation, that provide targeted incentives to encourage economic development in depressed urban and rural areas. While these incentives are important, employers in the targeted areas assert that they are unable to hire qualified individuals to work in the jobs created by the investment programs.

The bill speaks to this problem by extending and enhancing the education zone proposal that was enacted on a limited basis in the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act. This program is designed to create working partnerships between public and private entities to improve education and training opportunities for students in high poverty rural and urban areas.

Some have argued that the Federal government should have no role in assisting the public school system at the K through 12 level. I disagree strongly. The federal government historically has provided financial resources to the public school system. It has done so in part by providing tax-exempt bond financing that enables State and local governments to fund capital needs through low-interest loans. The bill that we are introducing today, in many respects, is very similar to tax-exempt bond financing. This bill does not require any additional layers of bureaucracy at the Federal or State level. It provides special tax benefits to holders of certain State and and local education bonds. The procedures used to determine whether bonds are eligible for those special benefits are substantially the same as the procedures applicable currently in determining whether a State or local bond is eligible for tax-exempt bond financing.

I also want to be very clear that this bill supports our public school system. I believe that improving our public school system should be our highest priority. Approximately 90 percent of the students attending kindergarten through grade 12 attend public schools. If we can find the resources to provide additional tax incentives, those incentives should be focused on improving the public school system that serves such a large segment of our student population. I have and will continue to oppose legislation, such as the so-called ''Coverdell'' legislation, that diverts scarce resources away from our public school system.

The Republicans are promoting a change in the tax-exempt bond arbitrage rules which they say is a meaningful response to the problem of dilapidated and crowded school buildings. Under current law, a school district issuing construction bonds can invest the bond proceeds temporarily in higher-yielding investments and retain the arbitrage profits if the bond proceeds are used for school construction within two years. The Republican arbitrage proposal would extend the period during which those arbitrage profits could be earned from two to four years. The Republican proposal does not benefit those districts with immediate needs to renovate and construct schools. It benefits only districts that can delay completion of school construction for more than 2 years. It is inadequate at best. At worst, it may increase costs for those districts most in need because more bonds could be issued earlier.

Today's bill includes a provision that would extend the Davis-Bacon requirements to construction funded under the new program. This provision is consistent with the policy that Federally-subsidized construction projects should pay prevailing wage rates. The bill also includes provisions designed to ensure that local workers and contractors are able to participate in the construction projects.

Amazingly, while the concept of investing in human capital goes unchallenged in debate, elected leaders are still spending more of our nation's limited budget resources on back-end, punitive programs like law enforcement and prisons, rather than front-end investments like education and training that can really pay off in increased workforce productivity.

Unfortunately, these skewed priorities are present at the local level, too. New York City spends $84,000 per year to keep a young man in Riker's Island Prison, yet only $7,000 each year to educate a child in Harlem.

In addition, improving opportunities in education is a vital link in broader U.S. economic policy, including U.S. trade policy. Ensuring that our education system is strong, and that our children's education prepares them to take advantage of the economic opportunities our society has to offer, is essential to ensuring that the benefits of trade and trade agreements extend more deeply and fully throughout our society.

We must change our priorities. Let's invest in the future of this country through our children. Let's bring the same zeal to encouraging and educating our children that we now apply to punishment and incarceration.

The following is a brief description of the provisions contained in our bill. They would cost approximately $3.3 billion over the first 5 years.

EDUCATION ZONE PROVISIONS

A. Qualified Zone Academy Bonds

Section 226 of the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act provides a source of capital at no or nominal interest for costs incurred by certain public schools in connection with the establishment of special academic programs from kindergarten through secondary schools. To be eligible to participate in the program, the public school must be located in an empowerment zone or enterprise community or at least 35 percent of the students at the school must be eligible for free or reduced-cost lunches under the Federal school lunch program. In addition the school must enter into a partnership with one or more nongovernmental entities.

The provision provides the interest-free capital by permitting the schools to issue special bonds called ''Qualified Zone Academy Bonds.'' Interest on those bonds will in effect be paid by the Federal government through a tax credit to the holder.

The bill would increase the caps on the amount of bonds that can be issued under the program as shown in the following table. The bill would also permit the bonds to be used for new construction.

| Year | Current law | Additions under bill | Total issuance cap |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1998 | $400 million | | $400 million |
| 1999 | $400 million | | $400 million |
| 2000 | | $1 billion | $1.0 billion |
| 2001 | | $1.4 billion | $1.4 billion |

The bill would make several technical modifications to the 1997 legislation. It would repeal the provision that restricts ownership of qualified zone academy bonds to financial institutions, it would change the formula used in determining the credit rate, it would provide for quarterly allowances of the credit to coincide with estimated tax payment dates and permit credit stripping in order to improve the marketability of the bonds, it would require a maximum maturity of 15 years, rather than a maximum maturity determined under a formula, it would change the formula for allocating the national limit to make it consistent with the formula used in allocating the limit on qualified school construction bonds, and it would provide an indefinite carryover of any unused credit.

B. SPECIALIZED TRAINING CENTERS

The bill also includes a provision designed to encourage corporate contributions to specialized training centers located in empowerment zones or enterprise communities. A specialized training center is a public school (or special program within a public school) with an academic program designed in partnership with the corporation making the contribution. There is a limit of $8 million per empowerment zone and $2 million per enterprise community on the amount of contributions eligible for the new credit. The limit would be allocated among contributors by the local official responsible for the economic development program in the zone or community.

QUALIFIED SCHOOL CONSTRUCTION BONDS

The bill would also permit State and local governments to issue qualified school construction bonds to fund the construction or rehabilitation of public schools. Interest on qualified school construction bonds would in effect be paid by the Federal government through an annual tax credit. The credit would be provided in the same manner as the credit for qualified zone academy bonds.

Under the bill, a total of $11 billion of qualified school construction bonds could be issued in 2000 and in 2001. Half of the annual cap would be allocated among the States on the basis of their population of low-income children, weighted the State's expenditures per pupil for education (the Title I basic grant formula). The other half of the annual cap would be allocated among the hundred school districts with the highest number of low-income children and that allocation would be based on each district's Title I share. Before making the allocations described above, $200 million in 2000 and 2001 would be reserved for allocation by the Secretary of the Interior for schools funded by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

The following chart shows the aggregate amount of qualified school construction bonds and qualified zone academy bonds that could be issued in each State under the bill. The total includes amounts allocated to large school districts in the State. An additional $750 million is reserved for allocations to other school districts not in the largest 100 districts.

[In thousands of dollars]

| State | Estimate Allocation |
|---|---|
| Alabama | $373,179 |
| Alaska | 45,552 |
| Arizona | 321,189 |
| Arkansas | 191,361 |
| California | 3,029,203 |
| Colorado | 203,299 |
| Connecticut | 195,615 |
| Delaware | 46,746 |
| District of Columbia | 113,625 |
| Florida | 1,337,671 |
| Georgia | 606,081 |
| Hawaii | 49,685 |
| Idaho | 55,825 |
| Illinois | 1,125,357 |
| Indiana | 326,773 |
| Iowa | 135,205 |
| Kansas | 154,208 |
| Kentucky | 344,582 |
| Louisiana | 596,956 |
| Maine | 76,808 |
| Maryland | 351,517 |
| Massachusetts | 402,027 |
| Michigan | 1,001,250 |
| Minnesota | 266,123 |
| Mississippi | 327,445 |
| Missouri | 386,832 |
| Montana | 62,924 |
| Nebraska | 82,857 |
| Nevada | 90,274 |
| New Hampshire | 44,910 |
| New Jersey | 526,789 |
| New Mexico | 185,062 |
| New York | 2,750,541 |
| North Carolina | 390,043 |
| North Dakota | 46,746 |
| Ohio | 948,239 |
| Oklahoma | 270,223 |
| Oregon | 191,113 |
| Pennsylvania | 1,007,919 |
| Puerto Rico | 636,673 |
| Rhode Island | 81,320 |
| South Carolina | 261,777 |
| South Dakota | 47,922 |
| Tennessee | 396,843 |
| Texas | 2,149,680 |
| Utah | 84,796 |
| Vermont | 43,847 |
| Virginia | 317,458 |
| Washington | 285,098 |
| West Virginia | 177,753 |
| Wisconsin | 418,781 |
| Wyoming | 43,236 |

DAVIS-BACON REQUIREMENTS

The bill includes a provision that would extend the Davis-Bacon prevailing wage requirements to construction funded under the new program. In order to ensure the marketability of the tax-subsidized financing, the Davis-Bacon requirements would be enforced by the Department of Labor and not through disallowance of tax benefits.

The bill also requires governments participating in the new program to give priority in awarding contracts to contractors with local workforces and to require a priority for local workers for new hires. The bill contains modifications to the Workforce Investment Act to ensure the availability of skilled local workers for the construction.

REGARDING THE STATE OF AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

HON. DAVID D. PHELPS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. PHELPS. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by thanking my colleague Mr. BERRY for gathering us here to talk about the state of agriculture and the dire need for quick action on the Supplemental Appropriations measure. There is perhaps no more timely or pressing issue facing our nation's farmers and the legislators who represent them in Washington, and I am grateful to have the opportunity to participate in this discussion.

The importance of agriculture to the families and economy of Illinois' 19th District cannot be overstated, and I am proud to serve on the Agriculture Committee, where I look forward to helping to shape our nation's agriculture policy. Every one of the communities I represent is deeply impacted when agriculture experiences tough times, and these are some of the toughest in recent memory.

The pork industry is still reeling from a crisis, and prices are low for other commodities that are critical to my district, such as corn and soybeans. The Natural Resource Conservation Service in Illinois and many other states is facing a major budget shortfall that will likely necessitate office closures or furloughs and has already resulted in the suspension of CRP technical assistance services that countless farmers depend upon. Farmers are experiencing undue delays in receiving disaster assistance and other USDA payments, and Farm Service Agency offices throughout the country are understaffed and overworked.

I urge my colleagues to recognize the urgency of this situation and hope we can work together to find both short- and long-term solutions to the problems that plague our agriculture community. It seems clear to me, in fact, that one short-term solution has already been found, in the form of a supplemental appropriations bill that includes $152 million for USDA. This money will allow the Department to increase loan capacity by more than $1 billion at a time when conditions in the agriculture economy have increased demand for USDA's farm loan programs by 400%. The funding will also provide desperately-needed temporary staffing assistance for FSA offices.

Unfortunately, it has been two months since the President submitted his supplemental spending request, and over a month since both houses passed their bills. Farmers are already in the fields planting crops and USDA is receiving 150 applications for loan assistance every day. Meanwhile, conferees have only this week been appointed to begin crafting a final supplemental measure, and there is no indication that this risk is being undertaken with the urgency it requires. We simply must pass this legislation now. America's farmers are counting on their representatives in Congress. We cannot let them down during this time of crisis.

Again, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Mr. BERRY for demonstrating his commitment to American agriculture and urging us to speak out on this important issue.

THE SMART IDEA ACT OF 1999

HON. ZOE LOFGREN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce legislation that makes the point that Congress doesn't need to pit the needs of disabled children against the needs of non-disabled children in meeting our commitments with IDEA—the individuals with Disabilities Education Act. There are other alternatives available. As is often the case, Mr. Speaker, this Republican-controlled House lacks imagination when confronting important issues.

It is ironic that on National Teacher's Day we are pitting disabled children against their non-disabled classmates. Instead of depriving our schools of important funds from other federal education programs, as the Republicans suggest, I propose that we use an existing federal program to meet the obligations of IDEA. I think the Medicaid program is ideal for this approach.

The concept of my legislation is simple: after any school district has spent $3,500 on a student who is eligible for IDEA funds, the school district can receive full federal funding from the Medicaid program for additional required services mandated under IDEA.

The idea behind IDEA was that children who are disabled must receive the assistance they need to achieve their academic potential. That's the right thing for those children and their families. It's also the right thing for America—so that every individual has the maximum chance to be a contributor.

But who pays has been a problem for many years. Especially problematic for cash-strapped schools are situations where extraordinary expenses are required for a severely disabled child. These expenses can ''bust the budget'' and pit the parents of disabled children against the parents of non-disabled children. Because of the high costs of providing special assistance to the disabled, it is believed that some school districts tend to overlook findings that assistance is needed. That is counter-productive to the goal of helping disabled children succeed in school. But it's hard to blame the schools. The necessary funding has never been provided by the state or federal governments for this great IDEA.

The use of Medicaid to fund IDEA solves most of these problems. Since the Federal government funds 50% of Medicaid, shifting extraordinary expenses to the Medicaid program would ensure that the Federal government does its part. Because the rest of Medicaid funding comes from the states, the use of Medicaid also would ensure that states do their fair share and don't shirk their obligations to local schools. Adoption of this proposal would remove the disincentive now in place for schools to avoid providing help to disabled children. Additionally, it would remove the animosity that can develop between the parents of disabled and non-disabled children for scarce resources.

I think this change makes a lot of sense and hope that a bipartisan majority can put solutions ahead of politics and pursue this plan. Let's not allow a lack of imagination and compassion to short-change all our kids and schools.

A TRIBUTE TO THE CITY OF LATON

HON. CALVIN M. DOOLEY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the community of Laton on celebrating their 100 year anniversary.

In 1902, Lewelyn A. Nares and Charles A. Laton acquired land near Kingsburg known as ''The Laguna De Tache''. Nares and Laton transferred title of their holdings to ''Laguna Lands Limited'' and Charles A. Laton soon disappeared from the local scene. Years later, a man named T.J. Saunders, an Iowa native, brought a group of businessmen to the area forming the nucleus for the city of Laton.

Laton has a rich history of community service. That tradition is exemplified by the strong ongoing commitment of the Volunteer Fire Department, the Lyon's Club, and other local organizations. In addition to providing a range of public services, each year the Laton community comes together for the Building Our Neighborhoods Drug Free (BOND) festival, which brings families together to celebrate Laton's drug-free environment. Community programs, including the BOND festival have made Laton one of the Central Valley's best places to raise a family.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating the city of Laton in celebrating their 100th year as a successful and prosperous community.

HONORING THE JACK C. HAYS HIGH SCHOOL REBEL BAND

HON. RON PAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, the Jack C. Hays High School Rebel Band of Austin, Texas, recently earned the distinct honor of being selected for the 1999 Sudley ''Flag of Honor'' award from the John Philip Sousa Foundation. This award is the highest recognition of excellence in concert performance that a high school band can receive. During the 17 years the award has been in existence, only 39 bands from the entire United States and Canada have been selected for the Flag of Honor. Conductor Gerald Babbitt and his Rebel band deserve our praise and recognition on the occasion of receiving this prestigious award.

The John Philip Sousa Foundation designed this award to identify and recognize high school concert band programs of very special excellence at the international level. To be eligible for nomination, a band must have maintained excellence over a period of many years in several areas including concert, marching, small ensemble and soloists. The director must have been the conductor of the band for at least the previous seven consecutive years including the year of the award.

Each recipient receives a four-by-six foot "Flag of Honor" which becomes the property of the band, The flag is designed in red, white and blue and bears the logo of the John Philip Sousa Foundation. The conductor receives a personal plaque and each student in the band receives a personalized diploma.

Mr. Speaker, it is indeed an honor to have such an outstanding high school band in the 14th Congressional District. I am delighted to extend my hearty congratulations to them. Their hard work and dedication is an inspiration to us all.

REPORT FROM WHITLEY COUNTY

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my "Report from Indiana" where I honor distinguished Hoosiers who are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committed Hoosiers who I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them "Hoosier Heroes".

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in Whitley County, Indiana at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. She is Genny Walter-Thomson, whose devotion to her community has been unfailing. She has worked for decades to improve the lives of the mentally ill. By working tirelessly on behalf of the less fortunate, Genny epitomizes a Hoosier Hero.

Genny's special love is for children. She has worked hard to build the new YMCA so the youth of this community can direct their energies in a positive direction. She also serves on the Welfare-to-Work board to help people with the transition from dependence to dignity.

Genny's work has given many people the most precious gift possible, hope. She doesn't help people for the pay, which is zilch, she does it for the smiles and laughter. You are a true hero in my book, doing good works for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Genny Walter-Thomson deserves the gratitude of the country, state, and nation, and I thank her here today on the floor of the House of the Representatives.

WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1999

SPEECH OF

HON. TOM BLILEY

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, April 29, 1999

The House in Committee of the Whole House of the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 1480) to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the United States Army Corps of Engineers to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes:

Mr. BLILEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 1480, a bill to authorize the United States Army Corps of Engineers to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes.

Section 326 of the legislation, which addresses the modification of a project on the West Bank of the Mississippi River for flood control and storm damage reduction, contains language which clarifies the application of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, commonly known as "Superfund," to the project. As you know, the Superfund statute is a matter within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Commerce, and this provision falls within that jurisdiction.

However, I have no objection to the inclusion of this provision. I recently sent Chairman SHUSTER a letter indicating that I would not seek a sequential referral of the bill, and ask unanimous consent that the letter appear in the RECORD at this point.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, April 27, 1999.

Hon. BUD SHUSTER,
Chairman, Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR BUD: I am writing with regard to H.R. 1480, a bill to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the United States Army Corps of Engineers to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes. Section 326 of the legislation, modifying the project for flood control and storm damage reduction, West Bank of the Mississippi River (East of Harvey Canal), Louisiana, contains provisions within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Commerce. Specifically paragraph (a)(1) clarifies the application of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act ("CERCLA") of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) to the project.

Because of the importance of this legislation, I recognize your desire to bring it before the House in an expeditious manner, I will not exercise the Committee's right to a sequential referral. By agreeing to waive its consideration of the bill, however, the Commerce Committee does not waive its jurisdiction over H.R. 1480. In addition, the Commerce Committee reserves its authority to seek conferees on any provisions of the bill that are within its jurisdiction during any House-Senate conference that may be convened on this legislation. I ask for your commitment to support any request by the Commerce Committee for conferees on H.R. 1480 or similar legislation.

I request that you include this letter as part of the Record during consideration of the legislation on the House floor.

Thank you for your attention to these matters. I remain,

Sincerely,

TOM BLILEY,
Chairman.

A TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE OLIVER OCASEK

HON. THOMAS C. SAWYER

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, we rise to honor Oliver Ocasek—one of Ohio's most distinguished citizens. On May 20, Oliver Ocasek will receive the YMCA of the USA's Volunteerism Award—the YMCA's highest honor. The YMCA is honoring Ocasek for his more than 50 years of service to youth organizations. We rise today, not only to recognize his deserved selection for this award, but to recognize a lifetime of service to the people of Ohio.

Sen. Ocasek's devotion to education extends well beyond his volunteerism with the YMCA. He co-founded the Ohio Hi-Y Youth in Government Model Legislature program with Governor C. William O'Neill in 1952 and supervised it throughout his service on the Ohio-West Virginia Board of the YMCA. He has served on the greater Akron area boards of Goodwill Industries, Shelter Care, and the Salvation Army. He also has been a professional educator in a wide variety of capacities: a teacher, a principal, a school superintendent, and a professor at both the University of Akron and Kent State University. He was instrumental in bringing together our regional institutions of higher learning to create the Northeastern Ohio Universities' College of Medicine. He capped his educational service with three terms on Ohio's State Board of Education.

This breadth of service to youth is impressive by itself. But alone, it does not capture Oliver Ocasek's contribution to the people of Ohio. Oliver Ocasek was one of the most influential legislators in the Statehouse, where he served in the Senate for 28 years from 1958 to 1986. In the 1970's, he became the first Senate President elected by his peers due to a change in the Ohio Constitution. Along with Republican Governor James Rhodes and Democratic House Speaker Vernal Riffe, Sen. Ocasek made many of the decisions to keep state government moving forward. He was an expert on Ohio's complex school funding system and used his knowledge, experience, and position to benefit local students. His enormous influence came from his savvy and from the hard, tedious work of studying, debating, refining, and reaching decisions on difficult and often contentious state issues.

He is astute, well-steeped in history, a gifted orator and a man of heart-felt compassion.

Oliver Ocasek's larger-than-life ambitions drove him hard in politics and in civic life in general, not in search of personal gain and glory, but in order to use his talents and positions to care for the least of his brothers and sisters. Last year in the Akron Beacon Journal, Sen. Ocasek expressed his philosophy: "Nothing breaks my heart more than for a child to not have parents who care or to not have a chance for a good education. That's been my commitment—my life—to provide a good education for all children." His leadership has inspired tens of thousands of young people touched by his commitment to education and to the YMCA youth programs over the last half-century.

Today, many people disparage public service and doubt that one person can make a difference. Oliver Ocasek would profoundly disagree. And more importantly, his efforts and their recognition by the YMCA are the evidence to the contrary. His service to the people—and particularly the youth—of Ohio shows that, with hard work and commitment, one person can make a difference. And we are grateful for the difference that he has made.

TRIBUTE TO THE ALEXANDER MACOMB CHAPTER DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

HON. DAVID E. BONIOR

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to have the opportunity to recognize the achievements of a very special organization. I ask my colleagues to join me in saluting the Alexander Macomb Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution as they gather for their Centennial Celebration.

In June of 1899, 12 women congregated in the home of Mrs. Helen Smart Skinner to organize the Mount Clemens chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Though their membership has grown and changed, their goals have remained the same: to dedicate their time and talents to serving God, home and country. During the early years they assisted the military by sending supplies to soldiers. Today, they continue to support the veterans at the Detroit V.A. Hospital. The chapter began marking graves of soldiers from the Revolutionary War and the war of 1812. In 1986, they assumed responsibility for the Cannon Cemetery and continue to mark graves when they are located. The chapter has erected many memorials to honor our fallen soldiers throughout the country. The Daughters of the American Revolution are dedicated to service through their membership.

During the past 100 years, members of the D.A.R. have contributed their time and resources to the betterment of society. They have generously donated flags to schools, scouts, public parks and most recently to the new Mount Clemens Court Building. The chapter has supported many schools by donating books over the years as well as supporting their National Library. I would like to thank all of the members, past and present, who have worked diligently to foster true patriotism in the Macomb County community.

The members of the Macomb Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution are dedicated to the preservation of patriotic principles and securing the blessings of liberty for mankind. Please join me in offering congratulations as they celebrate 100 years of service to God, home and country.

HONORING THE BOROUGH OF NORTH YORK ON ITS 100TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. WILLIAM F. GOODLING

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Borough of North York on the occasion of its 100th Anniversary Celebration. I am pleased and proud to bring the history of this fine borough to the attention of my colleagues.

The general outlines for the borough began in 1888 with the purchase of 63 acres of ground by Jacob Mayer, a leading cigar maker. At that time, North York was known as Mayersville. On April 17, 1889, the Borough of North York was incorporated, encompassing about 146 acres of land. The first official council meeting was held on May 12, 1899.

Today, the population of the Borough of North York is 1689. It is a thriving community and home to many outstanding businesses.

I send my sincere best wishes as the Borough of North York celebrates this milestone in its history. I am proud to represent such a fine place and look forward to watching it grow as we enter the new millennium.

CONGRATULATING TO OUR LADY OF LOURDES ACADEMY MIAMI, FLORIDA

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to recognize an outstanding group of girls from Our Lady of Lourdes Academy who won third place at this year's national We the People competition.

Sacrificing their weekends, evenings, and spending countless of hours in preparing diligently for the state and local tournaments which they won, 17 students of Our Lady of Lourdes Academy proudly represented Miami and the state of Florida this year in yesterday's national competition on the Constitution.

I ask my Congressional colleagues to join me in paying tribute to devoted teacher Rosie Heffernan and to the following 17 young girls who made evidence their pride in our country's heritage and demonstrated their vast knowledge of the United States' history and of current events: Deerack Asencio, Deanna Barkett, Melissa Camero, Carly Celmer, Catherine Cone, Jessica Fernandez, Tanya Garcia, Diana Kates, Ingrid Laos, Vivian Lasaga, Claudia MacMaster, Tanya Nelson, Sonya Nelson, Tatiana Perez, Flavia Romero, Melissa Sanchez, and Kristina Velez.

REPORT FROM WAYNE COUNTY

HON. DAVID M. McINTOSH

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to give my "Report from Indiana" where I honor distinguished Hoosiers who are actively engaged in their communities helping others.

Mr. Speaker, it has always been my strong belief that individuals and communities can do a better job of caring for those who need help in our society than the federal government. The wonderfully kind and committed Hoosiers who I have met traveling around Indiana have not changed my view.

Ruthie and I have met hundreds of individuals who are committed to making our communities a better place in which to live and raise our children—we call them "Hoosier Heroes."

I recognized this genuine Hoosier Hero in Wayne County at a Lincoln Day dinner speech. She is Violet Backmeyer, whose commitment and service to the needy has been just as strong and successful. By working tirelessly on behalf of the less fortunate, Violet epitomizes a Hoosier Hero.

For the past 15 years, Violet has served as a Wayne Township Trustee. She has given invaluable service to the Salvation Army and various food pantries both providing aid to the desperately poor.

Violet's work has given so many people the most precious gift possible, hope. She doesn't do it for the pay, which is zilch, she does it for the smiles and laughter. You are a true hero in my book, doing good works for others with no other motive than Christian charity.

Violet Backmeyer deserves the gratitude of her country, state, and nation, and I thank her here today on the floor of the House of Representatives.

CALIFORNIA RESOLUTION TO HONOR WORLD WAR II VETERANS

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to place into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a Resolution from the California State Assembly, Assembly Joint Resolution No. 15 relative to Filipino World War II veterans:

Whereas, The Philippine Islands, as a result of the Spanish-American War, were a possession of the United States between 1898 and 1946; and

Whereas, In 1934, the Philippine Independence Act (P.L. 73–127) set a 10-year timetable for the eventual independence of the Philippines and in the interim established a government of the Commonwealth of the Philippines with certain powers over its own internal affairs; and

Whereas, The granting of full independence ultimately was delayed for two years until 1946 because of the Japanese occupation of the islands from 1942 to 1945; and

Whereas, Between 1934 and the final independence of the Philippine Islands in 1946, the United States retained certain sovereign powers over the Philippines, including the right, upon order of the President of the United States, to call into the service of the United States Armed Forces all military forces organized by the Commonwealth government; and

Whereas, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, by Executive order of July 26, 1941, brought the Philippine Commonwealth Army into the service of the United States Armed Forces of the Far East under the command of Lieutenant General Douglas MacArthur; and

Whereas, Under the Executive Order of July 26, 1941, Filipinos were entitled to full veterans benefits; and

Whereas, Approximately 200,000 Filipino soldiers, driven by a sense of honor and dignity, battled under the United States Command after 1941 to preserve our liberty; and

Whereas, There are four groups of Filipino nationals who are entitled to all or some of the benefits to which United States veterans are entitled. These are:

(1) Filipinos who served in the regular components of the United States Armed Forces.

(2) Regular Philippine Scouts, called ''Old Scouts,'' who enlisted in Filipino-manned units of the United States Army prior to October 6, 1945. Prior to World War II, these troops assisted in the maintenance of domestic order in the Philippines and served as a combat-ready force to defend the islands against foreign invasion, and during the war, they participated in the defense and retaking of the islands from Japanese occupation.

(3) Special Philippine Scouts, called ''New Scouts,'' who enlisted in the United States Armed Forces between October 6, 1945, and June 30, 1947, primarily to perform occupation duty in the Pacific following World War II.

(4) Members of the Philippine Commonwealth Army who on July 26, 1941, were called into the service of the United States Armed Forces. This group includes organized querrilla resistance units that were recognized by the United States Army; and

Whereas, The first two groups, Filipinos who served in the regular components of the Unites States Armed Forces and Old Scouts, are considered United States veterans and are generally entitled to the full range of United States veterans benefits; and

Whereas, The other two groups, New Scouts and members of the Philippine Commonwealth Army, are eligible for certain veterans benefits, some of which are lower than full veterans benefits; and

Whereas, United States veterans medical benefits for the four groups of Filipino veterans vary depending upon whether the person resides in the United States or the Philippines; and

Whereas, The eligibility of Old Scouts for benefits based on military service in the United States Armed Forces has long been established; and

Whereas, The federal Department of Veterans Affairs operates a comprehensive program of veterans benefits in the present government of the Republic of the Philippines, including the operation of a federal Department of Veterans Affairs office in Manila; and

Whereas, The federal Department of Veterans Affairs does not operate a program of this type in any other country; and

Whereas, The program in the Philippines evolved because the Philippine Islands were a United States possession during the period 1898–1946, and many Filipinos have served in the United States Armed Forces, and because the preindependence Philippine Commonwealth Army was called into the service of the United States Armed Forces During World War II (1941–1945); and

Whereas, Our nation has failed to meet the promises made to those Filipino soldiers who fought as American soldiers during World War II; and

Whereas, The Congress passed legislation in 1946 limiting and precluding Filipino veterans that fought in the service of the United States during World War II from receiving most veterans benefits that were available to them before 1946; and

Whereas, Many Filipino veterans have been unfairly treated by the classification of their service as not being service rendered in the United States Armed Forces for purposes of benefits from the federal Department of Veterans Affairs; and

Whereas, All other nationals who served in the United States Armed Forces have been recognized and granted full rights and benefits, but the Filipinos, as American nationals at the time of service, were and still are denied recognition and singled out for exclusion, and this treatment is unfair and discriminatory; and

Whereas, On October 20, 1996, President Clinton issued a proclamation honoring the nearly 100,000 Filipino veterans of World War II, soldiers of the Philippine Commonwealth Army, who fought as a component of the United States Armed Forces alongside allied forces for four long years to defend and reclaim the Philippine Islands, and thousands more who joined the United States Armed Forces after the war; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Assembly and the Senate of the State of California, jointly, That the Legislature of the State of California respectfully memorializes the President and the Congress of the United States during the First Session of the 106th Congress to take action necessary to honor our country's moral obligation to provide these Filipino veterans with the military benefits that they deserve, including, but not limited to, holding related hearings, and acting favorably on legislation pertaining to granting full veterans benefits to Filipino veterans of the United States Armed Forces; and be it further

Resolved, That the Clerk of the Assembly transmit a copy of this resolution to the President and the Vice President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Senator and Representative from California in the Congress of the United States.

CONSENT OF CONGRESS TO THE CHICKASAW TRAIL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT COMPACT

HON. ED BRYANT

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, as we move into the 21st Century, there is a need in our rural communities to find new revenue sources to keep up with the constant changes of our high-tech and booming business community.

This scenario rings true in many areas of rural Tennessee. Several of the counties within the seventh-district are doing what they can to attract businesses to their communities to provide jobs and revenue to help their counties, cities, and towns grow in the new century.

That is what we have in front of us today. The Chickasaw Trail Economic Development Compact gives Congressional consent to an interstate compact between Tennessee and Mississippi that will promote interstate cooperation and economic development in an area straddling Fayette County, Tennessee and Marshall County, Mississippi.

Under the bill, the Chickasaw Compact would conduct a study to determine the feasibility of establishing an industrial park in this area. Should that study turn out to be favorable, the states would then negotiate a new compact implementing the details needed to establish a 4,000 to 5,000 acre industrial park. This location is adjacent to metro Memphis, which is shot of available land for future industrial growth, and it is hoped that the development would attract sophisticated high technology industries to the area.

The compact has already established a board of directors representing the two states, the two counties and the private sector. Financial support from local, state and federal sources have allowed the project to proceed with an initial feasibility study.

COMMEMORATING THE PASSING OF ROBERT LAWRENCE RUMSEY

HON. GARY G. MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on this sad occasion to commemorate someone very dear to me, my father-in-law, Robert Lawrence Rumsey.

Robert passed away peacefully in his sleep at the age of 85 on January 28, 1999 at his home in Glendora, California. He is survived by his wife of 64 years, Evelyn Rumsey; his sister Dorothy Lawrence; his three daughters and two sons-in-law, Charles and Judy Nichols of Huntington Beach; Loretta Rojas of Pomona; my wife, Cathy, and me.

He will be deeply missed by his seven grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, and one great great-grandchild.

Robert was born in Chicago, Illinois in 1913 to Silas and Nellie Rumsey. When he was five years old, he moved to Los Angeles, California. In 1930, Robert graduated from Manual Arts High School and soon thereafter moved to Detroit, Michigan where he met his beautiful wife Evelyn. The two were married on August 21, 1934. Robert then attended the Ford Motor Company Trade School and graduated with honors. He proceeded to become a master Tool and Die Maker and Mold Maker.

In 1941, Robert and Evelyn moved to Southern California and in 1947 began building their home in Glendora. For many years, Robert worked for United Engravers in Los Angeles.

Services were held on Monday, February 1, 1999 at Oakdale Memorial Park in Glendora, California.

You will be greatly missed.

COMMEMORATING THE CORNERSTONE CEREMONY FOR JOHN A. O'CONNELL TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL

HON. NANCY PELOSI

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the Cornerstone Ceremony for John A. O'Connell Technical High School in San Francisco.

In 1989 the Loma Prieta earthquake virtually destroyed the facilities at John A. O'Connell Technical High School, and forced them to relocate the school temporarily for a period of ten years. In the year 2000 the John A. O'Connell Technical High School will return to its former site and a new building structure in the Mission District of San Francisco. John A. O'Connell Technical High School will be the first San Francisco public school of the Millenium. Its curriculum will be revised to reflect the role of technology for today's classrooms and workplaces as its focus moves from a traditional trade school to a school emphasizing a curriculum that will embody a "school to career" principle.

On May 10, 1999, the Cornerstone Ceremony for John A. O'Connell Technical High School will be hosted by officers of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons of California. It is a true reflection of our diversity of interests to bring together so many organizations in support of public education. The Masons have a rich tradition of serving our communities, particularly education, and we are grateful for their support over these many years. The man whose name we honor today—John O'Connell—served the San Francisco community as its labor leader for almost half a century as a founder of the Teamsters Union and the San Francisco Labor Council. Their extraordinary vision and commitment bring us once again to the doorsteps of a new center for education and learning in the Mission District.

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of Congress, let us join in celebrating our continued support for pubic education by commending the leaders and representatives of the San Francisco Mission District community, labor community, and Masonic Lodges and organizations and other individuals who have contributed to this historic occasion.

DALLAS COWBOYS OWNER JERRY JONES

HON. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, many of us are aware of the contributions that Dallas Cowboys owner Jerry Jones has made to the sport of football. His focus on excellence in sportmanship and successful stewardship of the Dallas Cowboys will be forever cemented in the history of the game.

However, Mr. Jones has also made a significant contribution to the history of our country and the ideas of Thomas Jefferson, the third President of the United States, who drafted the Declaration of Independence.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Jones along with his wife Gene, donated $1 million to a Library of Congress program that is currently rebuilding Thomas Jefferson's personal book collection that was lost in a fire.

This gracious gift allows the Library of Congress to obtain lost copies of books destroyed in 1851. It will be a labor and financially intensive undertaking that will be helped by Mr. Jones's assistance.

Cicero once said that "to be ignorant of the past is to remain a child." Mr. Speaker, the donation by Mr. Jones will assure that we will be able to hold onto history and be less ignorant of it, while being wiser.

Thomas Jefferson was not only the drafter of the Declaration of Independence and U.S. President, he was also an enlightened thinker whose ideas helped us build this country and guide her through dark times. His ideas and thoughts were shaped and influenced by books.

It is appropriate that the gift from Mr. and Mrs. Jones will help restore Jefferson's rare books as he helped found the Library of Congress.

As this country still wrestles with issues of equality and freedom well into the 21st century, it is incumbent upon us to refer to the high-minded ideals of our Founding Fathers. The $1 million donation to the Library of Congress will help this country locate those books and remind us of our collective vision and history.

On behalf of the residents of the 30th Congressional District and all Americans, I would like to thank Jerry and Gene Jones for their donation to the Library of Congress. For me, this also represents their service to our country, support of democratic ideas and persevering history.

THE DAIRY COMPACT—WHY WE NEED IT

HON. AMO HOUGHTON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. HOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of H.R. 1604, a bill which would allow New York State farmers to join the New England Dairy Compact. The compact is not a panacea for dairy problems, but it is a start.

There are those who argue against it—too restrictive, anti-competitive, will increase milk prices. Despite the nay-sayers, there are many reasons to support this compact, and I support it. There are cultural reasons, economic reasons, and an overriding consideration: our own farmers want it.

The current compact in New England was established about two years ago. It provides dairy farmers with a steady, predictable floor price for their milk. And that is important. Dairy farmers for the most part live so close to the line that mild gyrations in the price they receive can be lethal.

How would anyone like to run a business where the price of your product in one day can drop 40% and you have no control over it. Your product, your quality, your service is better than ever. Through non-economic sources beyond your control your whole business stands on the brink of destitution. 5,600 New York dairy farms went that route in the last ten years.

There are three groups opposed to this life-saving compact.

First, the large Midwestern producers who in effect control through government orders the floor price of liquid milk and cheese.

Second, the big city political powers who claim that a compact to stabilize prices will at the same time increase prices to the poor. This has been disproved over and over again.

Third, the middle men—those who handle, package and distribute the raw milk before it reaches retail consumers. While the farmer receives the same price for his milk on average as he did 20 years ago—this guy has jacked up the price to the consumer in this same period by 35%.

Everyone has a right to fight for his or her economic interests, but not using the government as an accomplice, and not at the expense of those who milk the cows and produce the basic product. Something is terribly wrong when downstream interests enrich only themselves and prey on the vulnerability of smaller family farms. These plus others hold in their hands the ability to drive an important part of our heritage as well as our food supply to the wall.

If government is for anything it is to protect those who can't protect themselves. This is why I, along with others, am fighting for a multi-state Dairy Compact.

The dairy business could soon be dominated by mega-farms whose only claimed advantage is an economy of scale. That's not sufficient reason to muscle out others of lesser size whose costs are similar, but whose deep pockets are not. If the federal government is going to be in the dairy business at all, it better try to serve the many, not the few.

Is a compact the answer to all the problems in our dairy industry? Of course not. But it will help preserve our family producers until a more permanent solution can evolve.

So, the way I see it, a compact benefits farmers and consumers. That's why I will fight for its passage.

HONORING CECILE HERSHON

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I stand before you today to recognize and honor the accomplishments of a truly remarkable woman. On May 5, members of the Flint, Michigan, Northern High School Alumni Association will gather to honor five Distinguished Fellows, members of their alumni community who have contributed to legacy and rich history of Northern

High School, and of Flint. One Distinguished Fellow to be honored is the late Ms. Cecile Hershon.

Born in Lansing, Michigan in 1920, Cecile Hershon and her family eventually moved to Flint, where she graduated from Northern High School in 1938. In 1944, Cecile was recruited by the United States Army and began her long military career as a civilian clerk in Arlington, Virginia. From there she went on to become a part of the newly merged Army and Navy Signal Services, first known as the Armed Forces Security Agency as is currently what we know as the National Security Agency.

Cecile began to further her career with the National Security Agency, becoming adept as intelligence research, analysis, and reporting, and soon became a exceptional cryptographer. She later accepted an overseas position where she continued to perfect her skills, allowing her to function in a variety of supervisory and management positions. Throughout her career, which spanned an incomparable 42 years, Cecile received numerous honors and commendations, including one of the agency's highest honors, the National Meritorious Civilian Service Award in 1986. Cecile also became involved in WIN—Women in NSA, an organization dedicated to increasing personal growth and development among both men and women within the NSA. As a member of WIN, Cecile was honored with their President's Award on two separate occasions. She was also the first recipient of WIN's Dorothy T. Blum Award for excellence in personal and professional development.

In addition to being a model employee, Cecile was an ardent humanitarian as well. She was constantly found extending a helping hand to friends, colleagues, and sometimes mere acquaintances, sometimes at her own personal or professional expense, and with no thought of personal gain. Countless members of the NSA and the military attribute their success to Cecile's support and encouragement. There have been many accounts of people who were convinced by Cecile to remain in the NSA, complete their education, and honor familial obligations. Indeed, many of our military are better soldiers due to the influence of Cecile Hershon.

Mr. Speaker, Cecile Hershon lived her life in a truly selfless and benevolent manner, and it goes without saying that her influence extends even to this day. Her life's work, serving her country for so long as a civilian, is commanding of the highest respect.

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION TO HONOR WORLD WAR II'S FIRST HERO, CAPTAIN COLIN P. KELLY, JR.

HON. ALLEN BOYD

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. BOYD. Mr. Speaker, today, I introduced a bill to honor World War II's first hero, and fellow Floridian, by designating the post office building in Madison, Florida the Captain Colin P. Kelly, Jr. Post Office.

Colin Kelly was born in Monticello, Florida on July 11, 1915. Raised in Madison, Florida he attended Madison High School until his graduation in 1932. In the summer of 1933, Kelly entered West Point, and after graduation in 1937 he was assigned to flight school and a B–17 group.

At the outbreak of WWII, Capt. Kelly, along with other B–17 crews, was ordered to Clark Field, the Philippines. Shortly after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Capt. Kelly and his crew were ordered on a bombing mission to attack the Japanese fleet. After completing their bombing run, Capt. Kelly's plane was attacked by two Japanese fighters while returning to Clark Field. Kelly gave the order to abandon the aircraft but remained at the controls to maintain the plane's elevation so his crew could safely bail out. He did not have time to make his escape and was killed in the line of duty on December 10, 1941.

According to Major Kenneth Gantz in a memo for General William Hall dated November 21, 1945, ''Kelly became a hero by circumstances at the time when his country desperately needed a hero.'' Indeed, Kelly was featured in many popular publications of the day and is often considered America's first hero of WWII. In addition, President Roosevelt awarded Capt. Kelly the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously for his actions.

The designation of the post office in his hometown of Madison as the Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr. Post Office seems a fitting tribute to this patriot, his family, and his legacy. I am proud to honor this American hero.

HONORING TEACHERS HALL OF FAME INDUCTEE RONALD W. POPLAU

HON. DENNIS MOORE

OF KANSAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of my constituents to honor Ronald W. Poplau, a sociology teacher at Shawnee Mission Northwest High School in Shawnee, KS, and one of only five teachers in the nation to be inducted this year into the National Teachers Hall of Fame.

Students and administrators who have worked with Ron Poplau have known for many years that he is one of the finest the field of professional education has to offer. For over 35 years, Ron Poplau has dedicated himself to giving students the tools they need not only to find their way in civil society, but to thrive.

Like many Americans, Ron Poplau has drawn inspiration from his family. Ron's father immigrated from Germany at the turn of the century, and because of prejudice and fear, was not able to receive a proper education. When Ron became a teacher, it was the fulfillment of his father's dreams to free himself and others from illiteracy.

Throughout his career, Ron Poplau has received many honors and awards for his work in the classroom. Most recently he has received the Wooster College Excellence in Teaching Award, the U.S. Army Outstanding Citizen Award, the Greg Parker Faculty Award, and has been twice recognized as the U.S.D. 512 Employee of the Year. But Ron Poplau's legacy goes far beyond his classroom.

Most importantly, Ron Poplau has helped thousands of students foster a lifelong commitment to community service. His Cougars Community Commitment program puts hundreds of students into the community every day to assist the poor, needy, and elderly. It has become a model for other school districts and been honored by local, state, and national awards.

Perhaps the definitive statement above Ron Poplau was offered by his colleague Beth Jantsch when she said, ''What Ron has done by the creation of this program is to leave a legacy of community care and involvement for generation to come . . . I can only believe that this will be a better world because of the lives that have been touched and by those that will carry on the torch of caring and community involvement . . . he is our shining light.''

On behalf of the people of the Third District of Kansas, I want to thank Ron Poplau for caring so much for the development of our nation's children, and for helping to strengthen our community by encouraging young people to extend their hand in friendship and service.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in congratulating Ronald W. Poplau of Shawnee Mission Northwest High School on his induction into the National Teachers Hall of Fame.

MARILYN SAVIN FOR OUTSTANDING LIFETIME CONTRIBUTIONS TO WOMEN'S RIGHTS

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to rise today to remember and pay tribute to a Connecticut woman who, during her life, worked tirelessly to advance the rights of women. Marilyn Savin devoted nearly two decades to promoting and protecting a woman's right to choose.

Through her work with the National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League (NARAL), both locally and nationally, Marilyn became a leading activist in the pro-choice movement, having a particular impact in the Republican Party. As a direct result of her influence, Connecticut Republicans stand out in the nation for their support of reproductive rights—an outstanding illustration of the power of her commitment and dedication.

Indeed, Marilyn was a true leader in advancing reproductive rights, family planning, and women's health. Marilyn translated principles into action by public speaking engagements and public surveys. A women's right to choose is one that is constantly under attack. Those who fight to ensure that women maintain this right and have access to safe procedures, often put themselves in jeopardy for their beliefs. For this, Marilyn deserves our respect and gratitude.

As a longtime resident of the Town of Woodbridge, she was an active member of the Woodbridge Town Committee, Woodbridge

Town Library, Planned Parenthood of Connecticut, and the National Coalition of Republicans for Choice. From these roots, she continued her campaign with Connecticut NARAL, serving on their Board of Directors and as chair of the state political action committee. Her tremendous imvolvement with the local chapter led her to serve NARAL on the national level. As a member of the Board of Directors, Foundation, Board, and the National Political Action Committee, Marilyn helped to shape the values and ideas the group continues to promote today.

Recently, the pro-choice movement sadly lost Marilyn Savin. On May 1 Connecticut NARAL will hold its 1999 Choice Celebration and Auction in her honor. This is a fitting tribute to a woman who dedicated her life and spirit to advocating the right of choice. Though her enthusiasm, energy, and commitment will be missed, the unparalleled impact of her efforts will not be forgotten.

It gives me great pleasure to stand today in honor of Marilyn Savin and join with friends, colleagues and family members as they remember this talented woman. Her dedication to this movement has truly made a difference which will be felt by women in Connecticut and across the country for years to come.

PEACE IS OUR PROFESSION

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, on April 19, 1999, I had the opportunity to address the United States Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colorado. I spoke about the priority of peace as the profession of the United States military. My speech to that group is set forth as follows:

Many of you, I am sure, have been to the headquarters of the Strategic Command at Offutt Air Force base in Nebraska. Some of you, I know, will soon be joining that fine organization. The motto of the strategic command, which was for many years that of its predecessor, the strategic air command, is a simple, but profound statement:

''Peace is our profession.''

That statement expresses very well the purpose of the U.S. military. The United States does not maintain military power because it seeks to expand its rule or dominate other nations—the purpose of U.S. military power—and the reason for the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps—is to secure the peace.

''Peace is our Profession'' was especially well-chosen as a motto for the strategic air command. I know that every one of your predecessors who climbed into the cockpit of a SAC bomber had to be aware of the awesome fact that loaded on board were weapons of more destructive power than had ever been unleashed in all the wars of history that had gone before. SAC was—and the strategic command remains—the steward of the most terrible military force ever created. Because of that, it was always critically important to keep the purpose of such awful power foremost in mind—to preserve peace by remaining able to make war, for it was none other than George Washington who said, ''There is nothing so likely to produce peace as to be well prepared to meet an enemy.''

I believe the old SAC motto remains just as relevant and appropriate today as it was during the height of the cold war. But I have to say, in the wake of our experience since the cold war ended, that peace isn't quite what many people thought it would be. Sir Michael Rose, the British general who commanded UN forces in Bosnia before the Dayton agreement, put it well in the title of his recent book, which he calls ''Fighting for Peace.''

In our ambiguous, complicated, demanding global environment, it is critically important that you, who are entering into the profession of arms, consider very carefully what it means to say ''Peace is our profession.'' It is important first of all because you must understand, in your hearts as in your minds, both the great difficulty and great value of what you are doing, even when many of your fellow citizens may not always appreciate your efforts as well as they should.

Peace is difficult. It is difficult above all because it is not, as some people seem to think, the natural state of things. Peace does not just happen. Peace is not the comfortable, old rocker on the porch we would like to sink into after a hard day's work. Peace is much more like the progress of Ulysses, who sailed through storm-lashed seas only to find at each new landfall a different challenge—whether a treacherous temptation luring him from his path or an ever more devious and powerful foe.

The short history of the post-cold war era shows us one thing very clearly—that peace can only be maintained when those with the strength to do so accept their responsibility as much as possible to resist aggression, to define the rules of international order, and to enforce those rules when necessary. Peace is something that must be built anew in ever changing circumstances by the labor, the will, and sometimes the blood of each generation.

We are only beginning to see what challenges will face your generation. I hope and pray that those challenges will be, in some ways, at least, less fearsome than those your predecessors faced. God forbid we should ever again have to send our finest young people into the mechanized killing fields of the great world wars of the past century. The spread of weapons of mass destruction, therefore, makes me shudder—it is all the more important that your labor be applied to keep such awful implements from ever being used.

The great and unique challenge you face, it seems to me, is in the insidious nature of the enemy before you. In the world wars, in the cold war, in the Persian Gulf War, even in Korea and Vietnam, the enemy was apparent. Today, I think, the enemy is harder to define. Through no less dangerous, it is in some ways more difficult to grapple with because it is so difficult to see clearly. Admiral Joseph Lopez, who recently retired after serving as Commander of Allied Forces in Southern Europe, has said very wisely that ''Instability is the Enemy.''

That is a good way of defining it, above all because it serves to emphasize the importance of our military engagement, in all kinds of ways, with other nations around the world. But to understand that doesn't make it any easier to cope with. One problem, obviously, is that instability is everywhere. So in trying to cope with it as best we can, we are working you and your colleagues much too hard. I have argued long and loudly that we need to stop doing that. For their part, your leaders in the Air Force are working diligently to reorganize the force in a way that will make things better. Even so, I can't promise you that the task of maintaining this troubled peace will be much easier in the future.

An even more difficult problem arises from the fact some instability is more dangerous than other instability. The question we all struggle with is this: How do we decide when instability is sufficiently dangerous to our long-term interests to justify putting the best of our young men and women—that is, you—at risk?

Let me tell you that no one in a position of responsibility in this Nation takes that question lightly. We have a lot of frivolous and needlessly partisan debates in Washington. But when it comes to a debate over your lives—over whether to tell you to risk your lives to defend our nation—The Congress engages the issues seriously and solemnly. We, and the President, may not always make the right decision—but God knows, we all try to.

The difficulty for you is that there are legitimate, deeply held differences of view on whether and when our interests and our principles are sufficiently at stake to justify putting your lives on the line in Kosovo or Kuwait or Korea. When the enemy is as ambiguous as instability, it is, I am afraid, too likely that your leaders will sometimes sound an uncertain trumpet. And that may lead some of you very soon—and perhaps every one of you sooner or later—to question whether the demands we are making on you are justifiable. For to affirm, in this historical era, that peace is your profession, will very likely require you to face some very profound questions about your commitment to duty and to country.

I hope that all of you will elect to stay and serve as long and as well as you are able. Let me recall for you that your predecessors have also had to face difficult personal questions. After the war in Vietnam, I know that many professional service members—at all grades—felt abandoned if not betrayed by their country. Some left the service—but many stayed, and those who stayed managed, in the end, to rebuild the American military into a force that is the best we have ever had. Inevitably you are going to face demands that will challenge your commitment. I hope you will understand that the task you are engaged in—to keep the peace—is as important to your country as the duty asked of any soldier, sailor, marine or airman who has gone before.

There is one other reason why I think you need to consider carefully what it means to say ''Peace is our Profession.'' You are part of a society in which your fellow citizens are often very assertive of their rights. Veterans are not immune to that sentiment, by the way. But that is entirely appropriate—that is, in part, what America is all about.

I was taught something, however, that becomes more brilliantly clear to me with every passing year. I was taught that with rights come responsibilities. When your forebears lifted into the air in a bomber armed with weapons that could wreak a holocaust, they were accepting a grave responsibility. When you say, ''Peace is our Profession,'' you are embracing a vocation in which you are going to bear a much larger share of the responsibilities than almost all of your fellow citizens.

The need for you to act responsibly has already been impressed upon you in many ways in this great institution. You have been held to standards of personal conduct much more stringent than those required of others of your age—or, for that matter, of your elected leaders. Let me tell you that such demands for personal responsibility, for having integrity in your personal lives, will feel as light as a single snowflake the first time you are responsible for protecting the lives of others. Responsibility is demanded in your profession because, at some time, so much will be at stake in the decisions you make.

I'm not telling you this because I am worried that you will not rise to the occasion. On the contrary, I believe that you are part of a military organization that will make you ready to do your duty well, when you are called upon. I am telling you this because I am concerned, instead, that your sense of responsibility, your sense of duty, your sense of honor will, at times, make you feel somehow cut off from the society you serve.

I want to tell you that you cannot and must not let that happen. You are a critical part of American society. You are the bulwark of this society. American society cannot carry on as a free, independent, diverse, rich society without you. But neither can you succeed without the support of the American people. You have to work at maintaining that support as vigorously as you work at any other part of your profession.

Sometimes that will not be so easy. Peace is your profession. The paradox is that the more successful you are at your profession—the more peace you bring to our country—the less you are likely to be appreciated for what you do.

The famous British poet, Rudyard Kipling, wrote a poem entitled ''Tommy'' about the treatment of soldiers in time of peace. It is written from the point of view of a British infantryman, dressed in his red coat, who was refused a pint of beer at a ''Public House,'' and he complains

''For it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' ''Chuck him out, the brute!''
But its ''Saviour of 'is country,'' when the Guns begin to shoot.''

In time of war, we band together as a Nation. In time of peace—even in time of a very troubled and difficult peace—many of our fellow citizens focus on other things. It is your job to let them do that. It is your job not to let them forget you even as they focus on other things.

A great many thoughtful, well-informed people are concerned these days about what they perceive as a growing gap between military and civilian society in the United States. I, too, worry about that.

Let me be clear about this. I don't worry that the military will somehow become a renegade force, or that military leaders will defy civilian leadership. That is not a real concern to me. All of you have been imbued with the importance of civilian control of the military as part of your very souls. You have joined the military to protect our great, free society, not to try, futilely, to control it. I don't believe any group or institution can control it.

I worry, rather, that if you feel yourselves to be cut off from society, to be abandoned by it, to feel it's failings as somehow alienating—then your alienation will become a self-fulfilling reality. You will not do what is needed to ensure continued public understanding of your role and continued public support of your vital mission.

American society, for good or ill—mostly for the good—is absorbed in other things than ensuring the peace. Americans make you responsible for that great task. You have to tell them about it. You cannot afford to feel that your great responsibility makes you somehow unique or somehow deserving of support. You are deserving of support. But you have to reach out to your fellow citizens to let them know that.

How should you do that? Partly it is a matter of attitude. Don't let yourself feel cut off. Don't let yourself feel different. Don't let your ingrained sense of duty make you feel unappreciated and unhonored. If you seek public support, you will get it.

I think you should be taught that it is part of your duty as an officer in the U.S. Air Force to keep in constant touch with the community in which you grew up. When you go home, you should call up the president of the local Lions club or the Rotary club and say ''Congressman Skelton told me I ought to give you a call and let you know where I am and what I'm doing in my military service.'' You will get a great response. Your community wants to support you. Your community wants to know that you are there for them. Your community wants you to continue to be a part of it. Your community wants to understand what it is to say, ''Peace is our Profession.'' It is part of your profession to contribute to their understanding.

As you progress through your military career, it is my sincere hope that you will not only fulfill your fondest dreams, but that you will, by your service, provide the peace for our country that will allow your fellow American citizens to pursue their dreams.

Thank you for the opportunity to address you today. God bless.

A SALUTING FATHER JAMES VERNON MATTHEWS, II IN CELEBRATION OF HIS 25 YEARS OF FAITHFUL SERVICE AND COMMITMENT TO OUR COMMUNITY

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great honor to rise today and bring to the attention of the United States House of Representatives a man many residents in my Congressional District affectionately know as Father Jay.

Father James Vernon Matthews, II was ordained as the first Black Catholic Priest in northern California on May 3, 1974.

Born in 1948 in Berkeley, California, to Yvonne Marie Feast and James Vernon Matthews, the Reverend Matthews graduated from Oakland's Skyline High School in 1966. He received a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Humanities and Philosophy from St. Patrick College, Mt. View, California in 1970, a Master of Divinity Degree from St. Patrick Seminary, Menlo Park, California in 1973 and attended the Continuing Education Program for Doctor of Ministry (Candidate) at the Jesuit School of Theology in Berkeley, California from 1977 to 1979.

Over, the past 25 years, Father Jay has provided our community with a tireless commitment to service. He has conducted throughout the United States retreats for youth and workshops and retreats for African American Catholic vicariates and pastoral centers, participated as a team leader in Black Cultural Weekends of the Marriage Encounter Movement and most notably in 1993, conducted the St. Jude Novena at the National Shrine in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

Father Jay's pastoral service has been as: Administrator and Associate Pastor of St. Cornelius Church, Richmond; St. Cyril Church, Oakland and All Saints Church, Hayward; Associate Pastor, Saint Louis Bertrand Church, Oakland; Deacon, Saint Columba Church, Oakland: Teacher, Bishop O'Dowd High School, Oakland; and Youth Minister of the Diocese of Oakland.

Father Jay's professional affiliations include actively serving on several boards & organizations, including Catholic Charities, Catechetical Ministries of the Diocese of Oakland, Alameda Cancer Society, Bay Area, Black United Fund, Knights of St. Peter Claver, Knights of Columbus, Catholic Daughters of the Americas, Bay Area Urban League, NAACP, Martin Luther King, Jr. Birthday Observance Committee, National Association of Black Catholic Administrators, National Catholic Conference on Interracial Justice, Coordinating Committee, City of Oakland Strategic Plan, Oakland Mayor's Advisory Council on Education, Chaplain—Oakland Fire Department, Board of Directors—Comprehensive Health Improvement Project, East Oakland Youth Development Center, and is the Chairman of the Church Committee for the United Negro College Fund of the East Bay.

Father Jay has been the recipient of numerous awards including the Martin Luther King, Jr. Award for Outstanding Community Service, the Marcus Foster Educational Institute's Distinguished Alumni Award, the Rose Casanave Service Award of the Black Catholic Vicariate, as well as service awards from the Ladies Auxiliary of the Knights of St. Peter Claver and the Bay Area chapter of the Xavier University, New Orleans Alumni Association.

Currently, Father Jay serves as Chaplain of Black Catholics of the Diocese of Oakland and Pastor of St. Benedict Church, Oakland.

Throughout his life, Father Jay has epitomized the ideal of a true man of God. He is a powerful role model in his immediate community and communities throughout the country. The love and service he shows towards all people regardless of race, creed, or religious background has gained him the respect of his peers.

On June 1, 1999 Father Jay will have the distinct privilege and honor to further his religious studies at the Vatican with a one year sabbatical from his current duties in the Diocese of Oakland.

It is a great honor to salute Father Jay, not just for his 25 years of service as a Catholic priest but for the many years of warmth, compassion and love he has shared with our community. The City of Oakland and its surrounding environs are a better place to live because of his firm commitment to improving the human condition of all people.

I wish Father Jay continued success as he embarks upon the next 25 years of service to God, his country and the people of Oakland.

TRIBUTE TO GABRIELLA CONTRERAS AND RYAN LEYBAS

HON. JIM KOLBE

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, today I met two young people from the 5th District of Arizona who are really making a difference in their communities. Both of them are Prudential Spirit of Community State Honorees for 1999, and were hosted in Washington, DC by Prudential and the National Association of Secondary School Principals. While nearly 20,000 youth volunteers submitted applications for these awards, Gabriella Contreras and Ryan Leybas are among 104 students from across the United States who were chosen for this honor.

Gabriella Contreras, a 13-year-old 7th grader at Roskruge Middle School in Tucson, had the additional honor of being named one of America's top ten youth volunteers by Prudential. When she was nine, Gabriella organized a community service club at her school in response to a nearby high school's problems with violence, gang activity, and drug use. Now in it's fifth year, Gabriella's ''Club B.A.D.D.D.,'' which stands for ''Be Alert—Don't Do Drugs,'' helps students channel their time and energy into community service projects. These projects have included clothing and food drives, annual ''peace'' marches, recycling campaigns, schoolwide cleanups, and anti-drug art gallery, and a citywide youth volunteer summit. Club B.A.D.D.D., known as the club that does good, now draws more than 500 people to some events and is being promoted at other schools.

Ryan Leybas, the other honoree from Arizona's 5th District, is an 18 year old senior at Casa Grande Union High School. Five years ago, Ryan founded a leadership camp for junior high students to teach them skills to succeed in school and life. With the support of the Pinal County school superintendent, what started out as a requirement for a Boy Scout merit badge has expanded into 120 participants this year, with at least two students from almost every school in Pinal County attending the three-day camp. Ryan, who is developing the leadership camp into a model that can be used in other states, continues to recruit students, coordinate logistics and find motivational guest speakers for the camp.

Both of these young people have shown exceptional talent in working with their peers for the betterment of their communities and their schools. I'd like to recognize them for their achievements as Prudential Spirit of Community State Honorees, and I look forward to working with them as they become tomorrow's adult leaders of Arizona.

THE COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT ACT—MAKING AMERICA STRONGER

HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, today, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights sent a clear and loud message to Congress—stop the attack on the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA). Enough is enough.

I wholeheartedly agree.

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights is an impressive coalition of more than 180 national organizations, representing people of color, women, children, labor unions, persons with disabilities, older Americans, major religious groups, gays and lesbians and civil liberties and human rights groups. In a collective voice, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, once more, made it known to those who stubbornly want to believe otherwise, that the Community Reinvestment Act is a success.

Since its enactment in 1977, financial institutions have made more than $1 trillion in loans in low-income communities. More than 90 percent of these loans came in the past seven years. As a result, neighborhoods have prospered, communities have flourished, small businesses have succeeded and the quality of life for many has improved.

Today's Washington Post wrote,

> ... Since 1977 federally insured banks have been subject to the Community Reinvestment Act, requiring them to seek business opportunities in poor areas as well as middle-class and wealthy neighborhoods. The law, a response originally to clear evidence of bias in lending, has worked well. It doesn't force banks to make unprofitable loans, but it encourages them to look beyond traditional customers, and it's had a beneficial effect on home ownership and small-business lending.

Many banks share this view. John B. McCoy, President and CEO of one of the largest and profitable banks in the nation, Bank One, testified before the House Banking Committee on February 10 that his bank is ''working effectively and successfully with CRA.''

However, there are those in Congress who are attempting to undermine the success of the Community Reinvestment Act, either by refusing to expand it or calling for its outright end.

I hope that my colleagues were listening today. The Community Reinvestment Act is a wise investment with a sure return. I applaud the efforts of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights and join in their crusade to protect and expand the Community Reinvestment Act.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MATT SALMON

OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. SALMON Mr. Speaker, I'm recorded as having voted ''nay'' on House rollcall vote No. 107. I intended to vote ''aye.'' Isn't it ironic that on the day that I am putting the finishing touches on the revised K–12 Education Excellence Now (KEEN) Act, which now explicitly offers a federal tax credit of up to $250 annually for teachers who purchase school supplies for their students with their own money, I would make this error.

TRIBUTE TO RABBI ABRAHAM KELMAN

HON. ANTHONY D. WEINER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to invite my colleagues to pay tribute to Rabbi Abraham Kelman on his being honored by the Rabbis and Congregations of Flatbush and Vicinity on the occasion of their Annual Breakfast on behalf of the Ezras Torah Charity Fund.

Rabbi Abraham Kelman is an eighth generation Rabbi in his family, a tradition which is continued today by his son, Rabbi Lieb Kelman. The Kelman family has traditionally been involved in Chinuch and community activities as a means of helping those who are unable to help themselves.

Before coming to New York, Rabbi Kelman was a Rabbi in Toronto for nine years. He received Smicha in Toronto, as well as a B.A. and M.A. in Oriental Languages from the University of Toronto. In addition, Rabbi Kelman was a chaplain in the Canadian army during World War II.

Rabbi Abraham Kelman is the founder and Dean of Bnos Leah Prospect park Yeshiva. Since it's founding in 1952, the school has provided thousands of youngsters with a strong secular and Jewish education. Thanks to the dedicated efforts of Rabbi Kelman, Bnos Leah Prospect Park Yeshiva has seen its enrollment rise to more than 1,300 students. He is also the Rabbi of the Yeshiva Congregation of Prospect Park.

Rabbi Abraham Kelman is the author of a number of books such as ''Prospectives on the Parsha.'' He was instrumental in organizing the Prospect Park Nursing Home, a nonprofit facility in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn dedicated to meeting the needs of our senior citizens.

Rabbi Abraham Kelman has long been known as an innovator and beacon of good will to all those with whom he has come into contact. Through his dedicated efforts, he has helped improve my constituents' quality of life. In recognition of his many accomplishments on behalf of my constituents, I offer my congratulations to Rabbi Abraham Kelman on the occasion of the Rabbis and Congregations of Flatbush and Vicinity's Annual Breakfast on behalf of the Ezras Torah Charity Fund.

EXPOSING RACISM

HON. BENNIE G. THOMPSON

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, May 4, 1999

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, in my continuing efforts to document and expose racism in America, I submit the following articles into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

FLORIDA TO BECOME BATTLEGROUND STATE ON RACIAL, GENDER PREFERENCES

(By John Pacenti)

MIAMI—The California businessman who plans to launch a ballot initiative to abolish state-sponsored racial and gender preferences in Florida attacked Gov. Jeb Bush on Monday as a purveyor of racial politics who is ''siccing his attack dogs on me.''

Ward Connerly, a black conservative Republican who has been successful with similar propositions in California and Washington, said a poll he commissioned found 80 percent of Floridians support his proposal.

Lawmakers, though, are a different story. ''Florida doesn't need somebody from California to come here and tell it how to write its Constitution,'' said U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla.

Connerly said politicians, particularly Republicans, are afraid of offending black voters. He described campaigning in black churches, like Bush did, as playing the ''race card.''

''That is saying I want your vote on the basis of your skin color, on the basis of your ethnicity,'' he said.

Bush met with Connerly in January and later wrote a letter to him saying he felt a ballot initiative targeting affirmative action would be divisive. The governor refused to answer questions on the matter Monday.

''His goal is to build a consensus around issues we should be focusing on— and those are education, fighting the drug war, protecting the developmentally disabled,'' said Bush's press secretary Nicolle Devenish. ''His focus is not going to be on this political debate right now.''

Connerly said Bush is behind a concerted effort to keep the initiative off the Florida Ballot.

''I can overcome the obstacle of the sitting governor of my party who is siccing his attack dogs on me and his party against a proposition I believe in,'' Connerly said. ''I believe the establishment is wrong, is dead wrong on this issue.''

Connerly, who also made announcements in Jacksonville and Altamonte Springs, said he plans to get one or more initiatives on the November ballot next year or 2002.

''It's like an old car. It's got a lot of mileage on it and it's ready to sputter out any minute,'' Connerly said of affirmative action. ''I think we should give it a graceful retirement and find a way of getting some new wheels that solves some real needs.''

He said that economic-based affirmative action should replace the raced-based preferences that has spilled over into private businesses and caused so much resentment in the workplace.

''We are talking about getting rid of the marginalization that flows from race-based affirmative action,'' Connerly said ''. . . it is all over America.''

Connerly, a member of the University of California Board of Regents, would need to gather 435,073 signatures to put the measure on the Florida ballot.

Rev. Jesse Jackson, who was in Miami to talk about AIDS in the black community, said Connerly was ''trying to peddle fear'' and is going to have trouble without Bush's support.

''Gov. Wilson in California cooperated with Ward Connerly,'' said the Rev. Jesse Jackson. ''It seems like Gov. Bush will not. Florida must avoid the mistake made by California.''

Washington Gov. Gary Locke, though, opposed a Connerly-backed measure in 1998 and it passed with 58 percent of the vote.

ALLEGED WITNESS TO ATTACK SAYS STATEMENT COERCED

(By Tammy Webber)

CHICAGO.—The man prosecutors once described as their key witness to the 1997 racial beating of a 13-year-old black boy now claims his rights were violated during police questioning.

Richard DeSantis, 20, is charged with obstructing justice after disappearing for eight months as prosecutors tried to build a case against three men charged with beating Lenard Clark into a coma after he wandered into their predominantly white Bridgeport neighborhood.

His disappearance forced a five-month delay in the trials before prosecutors decided to proceed without him. One defendant was sentenced to eight years in prison for aggravated battery and committing a hate crime, while two others accepted plea agreements and got probation and community service.

DeSantis on Monday claimed authorities coerced him into signing a statement and would not allow him to speak to his attorney despite repeated requests.

The statement, therefore, should not be admissible in court, said attorney James Cutrone, who was not DeSantis' attorney at the time he signed the statement.

Cutrone said if the Cook County Judge Robert W. Bertucci grants the motion to suppress the statement, the county should drop its case. Testimony is scheduled to continue today.

Under questioning Monday, DeSantis said several portions of his signed statement are incorrect, including where he allegedly told police he saw three friends beat Lenard.

He described being held for questioning for more than nine hours at the police station, where he claims he was interrogated, put through a police lineup and told that he was lying when he said he did not witness the beating.

He said he signed the statement because police allegedly told him he could go home and would not be charged if he did so. He testified it was also after he heard his attorney's voice in the station but was not able to see him.

''I thought after I heard (the lawyer's voice) . . . and they didn't let him see me, I thought they could do whatever they wanted to,'' he said.

John O'Malley, his attorney at the time, also testified that he was at the police station for more than two hours before he was able to see DeSantis—and after DeSantis signed the statement.

But under questioning by Assistant State's Attorney Robert Berlin, DeSantis conceded that authorities let him read the statement and make any changes before he signed it.

Frank Caruso Jr. received an eight-year sentence after being found guilty of aggravated battery and committing a hate crime, but innocent of attempted murder. Victor Jasas, 18, and Michael Kwidzinski, 21, received probation and community service after accepting plea agreements.

Clark, now 15, cannot remember the attack. All three defendants were accused of knocking Clark from his bicycle, then kicking and pummeling him until he was unconscious.

---

RACIAL ATTACK

DARIEN, CI.—A white businessman accused of stabbing a black man in the face with a pen on board a Metro North train has been given special probation in the case.

Kevin Keady was arrested by Metro North police June 28, 1996, after he allegedly hurled racial slurs and his fists at Michael Moore on a train.

Keady allegedly used a pen as a dagger to slash Moore's face. Moore's nose was broken and he received stitches to repair a torn ear lobe, said Moore's attorney, Charles Harris, Keady was charged with intimidation by bigotry or bias and second-degree assault.

A Superior Court judge last week granted Keady accelerated rehabilitation which is available to first-time offenders who face charges that could result in prison time. If the defendant successfully completes the two-year probation, all records are erased.

Keady denies the charges. He claimed Moore and others attacked him and uttered bigoted remarks. He filed a civil lawsuit against Moore in July 1998.

Moore also has sued Keady. A Superior Court judge awarded him a $150,000 lien on Keady's home in Darien, ruling that there is probable cause that Moore could win at least that much. Moore's suit seeks $15,000 in damages for claims of assault and battery, false imprisonment and intimidation based on bias or bigotry.

Keady's next scheduled court date is March 9, 2001, after the completion of his special probation.

---

NUMBER OF BLACK APPLICANTS TO UW LAW SCHOOL PLUMMETS

SEATTLE.—The number of black applicants to the University of Washington Law School has plummeted since a voter-approved ban on public affirmative action programs.

In the first round of admissions since the initiative became law in December, the number of black applicants was down 41 percent from a year earlier. Applications from Filipinos and Hispanics also are down, by 26 percent and 21 percent, respectively, while total applications were off 6 percent through March 5.

Although too early to say what this year's entering class will look like, university officials say the new figures may confirm their fear that the law prohibiting race consideration in admissions will make the university's population less diverse.

''One possibility has to be that Initiative 200 has caused a chilling climate in which minority men and women are reluctant to apply for fear they won't be welcome at the university,'' President Richard McCormick said.

''The applications are the material with which you have to work, and if minority applications are down, it doesn't help with respect to the recruitment of a diverse class,'' McCormick said.

But the man who ran the initiative campaign took a different tact.

''I think it shows that the word is getting out on the street that the use of race-driven admissions is becoming a thing of the past,'' John Carlson said. ''Students are more apt to apply to schools that match their skills levels.''

SENATE—Wednesday, May 5, 1999

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, a very present Help in trouble, You do not send natural catastrophes but help us to endure them. Our minds and hearts are focused on the tragic deaths and the destruction left in the aftermath of the series of tornadoes that wracked the Oklahoma City area and sections of Kansas, leaving more than 45 people dead and homes and neighborhoods razed. Especially we pray for the families who lost loved ones and had their homes destroyed. Care for them with Your sustaining comfort and strength. Bless the police, emergency workers, doctors, and medical personnel who are seeking to help those who are suffering. Strengthen Senators DON NICKLES and JIM INHOFE of Oklahoma and SAM BROWNBACK and PAT ROBERTS of Kansas as they give leadership in this emergency.

We commit to You the work of the Senate today. Guide the Senators in all that they do and say, discuss, and decide. As crises at home and abroad mount, grant them clear minds, steady hearts and wills to seek and to know You and do Your will. Through our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will immediately begin a rollcall vote on the Byrd resolution, S. Res. 94, commending Rev. Jesse Jackson for his role in the return of our POWs. Following the vote, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 11 a.m., with Senators COVERDELL and DORGAN in control of that time. At 11 a.m. the Senate will resume consideration of the Sarbanes substitute amendment to S. 900, the financial modernization bill, with a vote on the Gramm motion to table occurring at approximately 12 noon. Additional amendments are expected and therefore Senators can expect votes throughout today's session of the Senate.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able Senator from West Virginia is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 2 minutes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRAYERS FOR THE PEOPLE OF OKLAHOMA AND KANSAS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I thank the Chaplain for his prayer. This is a nation which, in the words of Benjamin Franklin, believes in the scriptures and particularly that scripture to which Franklin called the attention of the other framers of the Constitution in Philadelphia in 1787:

> Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it: except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain.

We, the colleagues of the Senators from Oklahoma and Kansas, share their concern about the people who have lost lives, loved ones, and property. Our hearts go out to their constituencies and to them as well as they serve their people every day.

COMMENDING THE REVEREND JESSE JACKSON

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, let me read the resolving clause of the resolution on which we are about to vote.

> (1) The Senate commends the Reverend Jesse Jackson for his successful efforts in securing the release of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales and for his leadership and actions arising from his deep faith in God; and
>
> (2) The Senate joins the families of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales in expressing relief and joy of their safe release.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, Two days ago, when that military transport plane touched down at Andrews Air Force Base and we saw our three American soldiers safe again at last, I said, instinctively, ''thank you.''

''Thank you, God, and thank you, Jesse Jackson, for bringing Steven Gonzales, Andrew Ramirez and Christopher Stone safely home from their captivity in Serbia.'' Millions of people all across our country, I suspect, said much the same thing. I am pleased today to repeat those words here, in the United States Senate, and to support this resolution honoring Reverend Jackson and the others in his delegation who played such a critical role in securing the release of our service men.

''When I was in prison, you visited me.'' That was one of the ways Jesus said we could recognize those who do his work. In daring to visit our soldiers in prison in Serbia, Reverend Jackson and the delegation of religious leaders who accompanied him surely were following Jesus's teachings as they understood them. Our nation owes them a debt of gratitude.

Some have questioned the wisdom of the delegation's trip. There has been speculation about what effect their going to Serbia could have on political or military tactics. Frankly, I don't want to get into that debate. This was not a political or military mission. It was a humanitarian mission.

Much praise rightly goes to Reverend Jackson, who organized the trip. I also want to acknowledge another member of the delegation: Congressman ROD BLAGOJEVICH, a second-term Congressman from Chicago's North Side, and the only Serbian-American in the House of Representatives.

There are moments in history where a person emerges who seems almost to have been born to fulfill a critical role. On this mission, ROD BLAGOJEVICH was that person. Not only is he a man of significant political and moral courage, he is also the son of Yugoslav immigrants. His father spent four years in a Nazi POW camp during World War II. He learned to speak Serbo-Croation as a child, and still speaks it.

I remember when I first was elected to the House. I sought out several of my political heroes to ask them ''How can a young Congressman make a difference—a real difference—in people's lives?'' ROD BLAGOJEVICH has found an answer to that question. Steven Gonzales, Andrew Ramirez and Christopher Stone are united today with their families, in large measure because of the courage he, and Reverend Jackson, and the other religious leaders in their delegation displayed in going to Serbia.

Today's Washington Post contains an interesting account of their mission, from the time it was first conceived by Reverend Jackson through their triumphant return home. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of that article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, May 5, 1999]

MISSION ACCOMPLISHED: THE CONGRESSMAN WHO PULLED STRINGS FOR POWS' RELEASE

(By Kevin Merida)

The interview begins with a little shake-rattle-and-roll. Rod Blagojevich doing Elvis Presley.

''I'm all shook up, unh-hunh-hunh.''

Blagojevich is a huge fan of The King (''Do you think he's still alive?''), and he's feeling loose. It's not often—let's say never—that a second-term congressman from the North Side of Chicago can thrust himself onto the international stage, help rescue three Americans held captive and claim a patch of glory. That would be the patch right behind Jesse Jackson's. Meaning he's in all the brought-back-our-boys camera shots, but not prominently placed. But he's okay with that. Blagojevich is the boyish-looking dude with the mop of brown hair combed to the left, a cross between John Travolta and Henry Winkler. He sometimes takes his meals at Ben's Chili Bowl on U Street. No one recognizes him there. Maybe someone will recognize him now.

Without Rod Blagojevich (pronounced bla-GOYA-vich), there might not have been a trip to Belgrade, no meeting with President Slobodan Milosevic, no tearful family reunions this week for U.S. soldiers Christopher Stone, Andrew Ramirez and Steven Gonzales. Blagojevich was the arranger, working his contacts in the Serbian American community when it looked like the trip was dead. Those contacts ultimately cleared a path to Milosevic himself.

Not that the whole country is applauding. Some administration officials carped—anonymous carping is the best fun of all—that the unofficial Jackson peace mission only undercut the NATO bombing campaign and could potentially fracture the allies. Not to mention that it might damage President Clinton's credibility at home on the war. Pundits spouted: PR props for the Serb-led Yugoslav government.

''If Mother Teresa had been one of those prisoners and we had gotten her out, we would have been criticized,'' Blagojevich says. ''I guess if you're not being criticized, you're not important. But it's thrilling to be in the mix. It sure beats digging a ditch for a living.''

Blagojevich, 42, a Democrat, is the only House member of Serbian descent, which is perhaps the key part of this story. He grew up speaking both English and Serbo-Croatian. Still does. His father, Rade, was an immigrant to this country. A Yugoslavian army officer, Rade Blagojevich was captured by the Nazis in World War II and spent four years in a German POW camp. He eventually made his way to the United States and married a Chicago-born woman whose parents had emigrated from Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Together they tried to raise Rod and his brother as Americans, but as Americans with a rich understanding of their ancestry. Often, their mother would pull in one direction and their father would tug in the other.

It was one thing to play the tamburitza, a ukulele-like instrument; it was another thing to sport the white-socks-and-sandals look that his dad thought was authentically Yugoslav.

''I don't want to wear that,'' he told his father. ''I'm going to get laughed out of the neighborhood if I wear that. That's a bad look.''

Blagojevich parents have passed away, but it is with their memory in mind and all that he has learned about Serb culture over the years that he injected himself into this war. He felt he had a unique perspective to offer. Ironically, some in the Serbian community here have been disappointed in him for not being more active in Serbain American affairs.

Shortly after the soldiers were captured on March 31, Blagojevich telephoned national security adviser Samuel ''Sandy'' Berger and White House chief of staff John Podesta to offer his help. Nothing grew out of those calls. He then read in the newspapers that Jackson wanted to take a delegation of American religious leaders over to visit the soldiers and try to win their release. Jackson was having trouble getting guarantees from Milosevic that the delegation could even see the GIs.

Blagojevich approached Rep. Jesse Jackson Jr. (D–Ill.) on the House floor and mentioned that he had some contacts who might be able to help. The younger Jackson put Blagojevich in contact with his father. Blagojevich got to work. Soon, he was talking directly to Yugoslavian deputy premier Vuk Draskovic. Things were working out. Draskovic had assured the group's safety and a visit with the soldiers. The soldiers would be allowed to talk to their families. He'd get it in writing. The trip was back on. Except on the eve of departure, the maverick Draskovic was axed.

Blagojevich recalls the Rev. Jackson's reaction to that development as they were hashing out last-minute details for the trip in Washington. He lapses into his Jackson impersonation. ''Blagojevich, our boy just got fired. You got any others out there?''

Actually, Blagojevich did.

Once in Belgrade, it was Jackson who set the agenda, Jackson who commanded the spotlight. Blagojevich, as he put it, ''worked the corridors'' and took advantage of his ''cultural connection'' and ability to speak the language.

As Blagojevich explained his role in a conversation in his office yesterday, he pulled out two business cards. Nebojsa Vujovic, spokesman for the Federal Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. They had a common friend in Chicago. Bogoljub Karic, minister without portfolio, Republic of Serbia. He had met with this guy in his congressional office two days before the bombing campaign. He later saw the same man on TV emerging from a Milosevic cabinet meeting.

While all the attention was focused on Jackson, Blagojevich says, ''it was proper and part of the strategy to be working these other guys. He and I were working different angles.''

Jackson and Blagojevich both were in the three-hour meeting with Milosevic on Saturday morning that produced the release of the American prisoners the next day. Jackson then met with Milosevic privately.

The trip produced some light moments amid all the intensity and emotion—Blogojevich, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, greeted Sgt. Stone by promising him a raise—but there were no light moments with Milosevic.

''I detected absolutely no warmth toward me,'' Blagojevich says. ''In fact, I detected a decided lack of warmth.''

A lack of warmth? Could it be that Milosevic remembered that this Chicago congressman had pronounced him guilty of ''ethnic cleansing'' and compared his tactics to those of Nazi leaders?

Once back home, Jackson, Blagojevich and others met at the White House Monday evening with Clinton. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright was there. Berger was there. Vice President Gore dropped by for a moment.

Jackson gave a detailed explanation and interpretation of what the delegation heard and saw in Belgrade. He said that Milosevic's gesture deserved to be matched. He talked of other leaders who were so far apart, but had talked to each other and had become closer over time. Sadat and Begin.

''Then I was up,'' recalled Blagojevich, who told Clinton that the Serbs weren't backing down. He pitched his proposal for a partition of Kosovo, which would give Serbs control of the northern region where most of the Orthodox cathedrals and historic sites important to them are located. An autonomous homeland would be created in the south for the ethnic Albanians driven out by Milosevic's forces.

''I like Clinton. I'm happy I voted to impeach him. I do think he needs to step up to the plate and take charge of this. With all due respect, I think Madeleine Albright and Sandy Berger are running the show.''

Blagojevich says he is ''extremely skeptical'' that the bombing campaign will be successful. The NATO allies have underestimated the Serbs' resolve, he believes. ''Despite the bombs, daily life goes on.'' The timing for a negotiated solution is right, he thinks.

The administration apparently thinks not.

''They were on a mission of peace and it was successful,'' says National Security Council spokesman David Leavy of the Jackson-led group, ''but the fundamental reality remains the same. There are a million Kosovars who are not going home to their families.''

However the war ends, the Jackson-Blagojevich bond has strengthened.

''I feel like I'm a second cousin now,'' Blagojevich says.

The younger Jackson puts the relationship in context: Blagojevich's father-in-law, Alderman Dick Mell, is a longtime Chicago machine boss. Blagojevich's district, 1 percent black, is a bastion of white ethnic pride. For many years, it was represented by Dan Rostenkowski. It is not a district in which Jesse Jackson and Jesse Jackson Jr. are exactly popular.

''Us relating to Rod and Rod relating to us is something taboo,'' Rep. Jackson explains, noting that although he and Blagojevich and their wives have grown close personally, he understands that the North Side member takes flak for the association.

''You being part of that Jackson thing is really going to cost you your career,'' says Jackson Jr., imitating his friend's critics. ''But after this trip, he is now officially an honorary South Sider. Apparently, it was a great growing experience for both him and Reverend Jackson.''

After his 15 minutes of fame at Jackson's side, Blagojevich's only question is this: ''When do I take my seat on the back bench again?''

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I will vote for this resolution because I share in the happiness and relief that the families of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales, and all Americans feel now that these fine young men have been released from captivity. We are all thankful that they are home, safe from harm.

I do not believe, however, that private diplomacy that is at odds with our country's objectives in this war and public relations stunts by Mr. Milosevic deserve our praise. I cannot commend the participation of any American in his propaganda.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLARD). Under the previous order, leadership time is reserved.

COMMENDATION OF THE EFFORTS OF THE REVEREND JESSE JACKSON

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now proceed to vote on adoption of S. Res. 94, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 94) commending the efforts of the Reverend Jesse Jackson to secure the release of the soldiers held by the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. HELMS (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. SESSIONS (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. THOMAS (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. WARNER (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN) and the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) is absent attending a funeral.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) would vote ''aye.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 92, nays 0, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 99 Leg.]

YEAS—92

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Abraham | Crapo | Jeffords |
| Akaka | Daschle | Johnson |
| Allard | DeWine | Kennedy |
| Ashcroft | Dodd | Kerrey |
| Baucus | Domenici | Kerry |
| Bayh | Durbin | Kohl |
| Bennett | Edwards | Kyl |
| Biden | Enzi | Lautenberg |
| Bingaman | Feingold | Leahy |
| Bond | Feinstein | Levin |
| Boxer | Frist | Lieberman |
| Breaux | Gorton | Lincoln |
| Brownback | Graham | Lott |
| Bryan | Gramm | Lugar |
| Bunning | Grams | Mack |
| Burns | Grassley | McCain |
| Byrd | Gregg | McConnell |
| Campbell | Hagel | Mikulski |
| Chafee | Harkin | Murkowski |
| Cleland | Hatch | Murray |
| Cochran | Hollings | Nickles |
| Collins | Hutchinson | Reed |
| Conrad | Hutchison | Reid |
| Coverdell | Inhofe | Robb |
| Craig | Inouye | Roberts |
| Rockefeller | Smith (NH) | Thurmond |
| Roth | Smith (OR) | Torricelli |
| Santorum | Snowe | Voinovich |
| Sarbanes | Specter | Wellstone |
| Schumer | Stevens | Wyden |
| Shelby | Thompson | |

ANSWERED ''PRESENT''—5

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Fitzgerald | Sessions | Warner |
| Helms | Thomas | |

NOT VOTING—3

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Dorgan | Landrieu | Moynihan |

The resolution (S. Res. 94) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 94

Whereas on March 31, 1999, Staff Sergeant Andrew A. Ramirez, Staff Sergeant Christopher J. Stone, and Specialist Steven M. Gonzales were taken prisoner by the armed forces of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia while on patrol along the Macedonia-Yugoslav border;

Whereas Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales conducted themselves throughout their ordeal with dignity, patriotism, and faith;

Whereas the Reverend Jesse Jackson led a delegation of religious leaders to the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia that succeeded in negotiating the release of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales; and

Whereas the Reverend Jesse Jackson has previously succeeded in securing the release of hostages held in Syria, Cuba, and Iraq: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the Senate commends the Reverend Jesse Jackson for his successful efforts in securing the release of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales, and for his leadership and actions arising from his deep faith in God; and

(2) the Senate joins the families of Sergeant Ramirez, Sergeant Stone, and Specialist Gonzales in expressing relief and joy at their safe release.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed as if in morning business for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). Without objection, it is so ordered.

MIDWEST TORNADOES

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, yesterday, Senator INHOFE and myself, Congressmen J.C. WATTS, FRANK LUCAS and STEVE LARGENT, as well as the Governor of Oklahoma, and James Lee Witt, Director of FEMA, toured the Oklahoma tornado disaster.

I have been in the Senate, I guess, 19 years now, and I have looked at the damage of several tornadoes in the State for the last many years. But I have never seen this type of devastation nor this level and this extent before. This may be the most devastating tornado that we have had in total damages in our State history. It has certainly produced one of the largest tornadoes, probably the largest number of tornadoes. I read one press account that said there were 45 tornadoes in the State of Oklahoma on Monday. One particular tornado was much larger than the others. Many reports said it was a quarter of a mile wide, or maybe half a mile wide, and at some points it was maybe a mile wide and stayed on the ground for a long period of time—some people said maybe as much as 2 hours.

What we did see was a tremendous amount of damage—a devastating amount of damage that destroyed, it was estimated, 1,500 or 2,000 homes. We will find out. Unfortunately, it has taken 40-some lives. I say unfortunately. I think Oklahoma is very fortunate. I think the fatality toll could have been in the hundreds if not thousands, because we looked at homes that were just totally demolished as if a bomb had gone inside each one of those homes and absolutely exploded the homes. There was nothing but just some elements of rubble. To think that people survived in many of these homes is truly a blessing, truly a miracle that I think we will find recounted day after day.

Needless to say, we are moved by the tragedy, and also by the compassion that is being expressed by so many people from across the country.

We were there to say that we wanted to help, that our government would help, that we will do everything that we can. Our government steps in in times of tragedy and national disasters to help lend assistance. And we will do that.

I will also say that won't be enough. It will take a lot of support from individuals, from churches, from communities, from families and friends to try to replace these homes and these families, and to make them whole again. And they will. They will survive. They are very solid.

One of the things I will never forget was seeing this area that is totally demolished and one house which hardly had anything left standing, and there was an American flag flying very high with people very proud.

Mr. President, it makes me proud to be an Oklahoman. It makes me proud to be an American, and proud to represent the great people of Oklahoma.

With that, Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time to my colleague from Oklahoma, Senator INHOFE.

Mr. INHOFE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Thank you, Mr. President. I thank my colleague, the senior Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. President, in Oklahoma we have gone through tragedies that are indescribable. The Murrah Federal Office Building was the most significant terrorist attack on domestic soil in the history of America. It is one that you can't describe standing here on the Senate floor. I have been there. And I remember so well the thundering march, the cadence of the fire trucks as they were going to try to extract so many people out of the building, and all types of volunteers.

We saw the same thing yesterday. It was indescribable. I note the story of a horse that was picked up and taken a quarter of a mile in the air, and dropped on top of a car, then a car on top of a house, and the twisted ''I'' beams. The power, the indescribable power that was there.

James Lee Witt—I am very complimentary of James Lee Witt, a man I have known long before he was Director of FEMA. As chairman of the committee that has jurisdiction over FEMA, I work very closely with him. And I tell you right now, he had his hands on there. He was personally involved in it. He explained to us that this is the most significant tornado that he had seen in terms of the devastating damage and power that was there.

You always remember one or two things. I recall in the helicopter ride going across a little town called Moore, OK. Everything was devastated in that town, except right across the street from the most devastating part of this tornado stood the First Baptist Church of Moore, OK. It had been untouched.

As my senior Senator from Oklahoma said, we are so appreciative of everyone coming together, for all of the comments of our colleagues since we have been back, the prayers that we had this morning from the Senate Chaplain and others, and people like the Governor of Oklahoma, the mayor of Oklahoma City throughout yesterday, the police departments and the fire departments, all of the volunteers, and certainly FEMA bringing this all together.

We are very thankful, and we in Oklahoma will be bound to that. We ask for your continued prayers for the families, for those who lost their lives, and for the families of those who lost their lives.

I thank very much all of the government coming together to help us rebuild the damage that has been done.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BROWNBACK addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as if in morning business for a period of up to 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

KANSAS TORNADOES

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, the State of Kansas was also hit by the same system that hit Oklahoma which caused so much tragedy and damage. I would like to speak for a few minutes on that.

We had a number of families that had homes destroyed. We had five people killed in Kansas, hundreds were injured, and thousands of people lost their homes and businesses. I know they are in the hearts and minds of all Americans today, and we will stand ready to assist in that in any way we can.

The devastation that these tornadoes left in their paths is just shocking.

I want to show you a picture of the aftermath. This was actually taken of the damage that took place in Moore, OK. You can just see the devastating power that is in one of these systems that can rise up so fast and cause so much destruction. In Wichita, the trail of destruction was 15 miles long and 5 miles wide.

As I mentioned previously, five Kansans lost their lives, and more than 70 people were injured from the fatal twisters.

More than 500 homes have been damaged or destroyed, leaving many people homeless.

I have the second picture that I wanted to show people, a view of what has taken place. This is an aerial view of the Lake Shore Trailer Park in South Wichita. You can see where the path of the tornado was, where it was the most intense going through with just absolute destruction in the wake of that path of where it went through.

More than 50,000 people have been left without power.

Sedgwick County, KS, where Wichita is located, has reported that over 1,100 structures were destroyed, and more than 7,100 structures were damaged.

In the town of Haysville, right next to Wichita, 27 businesses have been wiped out, and virtually eliminating the business district of this Wichita suburb.

The father of one of my staffers—the person who is actually my scheduler—is the principal of Chisolm Life Skills Center in Wichita. His entire school was demolished by this tornado.

We are very proud of the rapid response of people who have reached out to help us through this terrible tragedy—the State and local authorities in Kansas, the rescue personnel, the Kansas National Guard, FEMA, and citizens of the Wichita area. They have really reached out in that typical Midwestern tradition of helping others when they are having difficulty.

I am also pleased to report that the President has responded quickly to the situation in both Kansas and Oklahoma by ordering Federal relief to those counties hit by these devastating tornadoes. The American Red Cross and the Salvation Army have provided 800 numbers for those wishing to help victims of these disasters.

I have pictures of a couple of victims. This apartment complex was destroyed in the wake of the path of the tornado. This is a picture of Suzie Dooley and her daughter, Sarah, who is 13, and their family dog, Wilma, trying to gather themselves after losing their mobile home near 55th Street, South, in Wichita. Their faces show the destruction they have been through, but also the hope and thanks they are alive and were not injured in the process.

The Red Cross and Salvation Army are offering shelter for people in Wichita who need help. The Red Cross has an 800 number, 800–HELP–NOW, to contact to provide help. We can provide a local phone number. They are on the Internet at www.DisasterRelief.org. Funds can be sent to the American Red Cross in Wichita. The Salvation Army has an 800 number as well.

I know the nature of Kansans and Americans is to help one another in a time of need. I will work with Federal and State authorities to provide fast and effective relief to families and communities harmed by this natural disaster.

I know I speak for my Senate colleague, my fellow Senator from Kansas, Senator PAT ROBERTS, in saying we will continue to keep the victims and their families in our actions, thoughts, and prayers as we hope much of the rest of the country will in this very difficult time.

I yield the floor.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I am sure all of our colleagues express our deep sympathy to the Senators from Oklahoma and Kansas and the communities that were so devastated by these storms.

We have all seen these disasters happen, and then the inspiration that Senator NICKLES alluded to, with everyone coming together. Clearly, this takes a lot of effort and a long time to dig out.

Our prayers will be with these Senators and these citizens of the fine States of Oklahoma and Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I add my words to those who talked about the tragedy in Oklahoma this morning. I remember watching television last night and seeing the power and the destructive might of those storms that swept across Oklahoma and parts of Kansas as well.

I have a feeling for what the people are going through, as a result of the disasters that hit North Dakota in 1997. We had the worst flood in 500 years in Grand Forks, ND, and we had 95 percent of the town evacuated, the largest mass evacuation of a city in the United States since the Civil War. I know the trauma those people are facing, and I know the difficulty of recovery.

Our hearts go out to the people in Oklahoma and Kansas who have been so affected. I hope they know that we are prepared to respond and to help. We in North Dakota remember very well how people reached out a helping hand to our State, so many people from around the country who actually came to North Dakota to help us rebuild—the Red Cross, the other organizations, the Salvation Army. We had a woman from California who came to town and gave $2,000 to every family that had been affected, a gift of tens of millions of dollars.

We remember very well the Federal Government's rapid response, the agencies of the Federal Government that moved to assist the people who were affected. FEMA did an absolutely superb job under the leadership of James Lee Witt. We will never forget it. The Department of Housing and Urban Development, under the leadership of Secretary Cuomo, did a superb job, and we will never forget their help. The SBA was quick to move in to help businesses. We know all of those agencies will be ready to respond in Oklahoma and Kansas as well.

I hope that we see the Congress respond. I believe the people in Oklahoma and Kansas deserve the same kind of rapid and full response that we received in North Dakota. Frankly, I hope they don't face some of the delays we faced in trying to get a congressional response, because when people are devastated, they should not have to wait for help. This Government is big enough and strong enough and this country is generous enough to move to help immediately.

Mr. President, again, our hearts go out to the people in Oklahoma and Kansas who have lived through this trauma; and to those who have lost relatives and loved ones, we share their deep sorrow.

TEACHER APPRECIATION WEEK

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, this week is Teacher Appreciation Week. Yesterday was National Teacher Day.

For a number of our colleagues, education is such a core subject—both of the 105th Congress and now in the 106th Congress—Members want to express themselves on this subject.

I am joined today by the distinguished Senator from Mississippi with some opening remarks about Teacher Appreciation Week.

I yield up to 4 minutes to the Senator from Mississippi.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, let me congratulate my friend, the distinguished Senator from Georgia, for organizing this special order and allowing this opportunity to speak on the subject of Teacher Appreciation Week.

TRIBUTE TO TINA SCHOLTES, MISSISSIPPI'S TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am proud to cosponsor the Senate Resolution proclaiming this week Teacher Appreciation Week.

This week, in every state, students and parents are taking time to thank the school teachers, and we should too. They are the true heroes in our nation's effort to enrich the lives of all our citizens through education.

I want to pay tribute today to a special Mississippi teacher. She is Mississippi Teacher of the Year, Mrs. Tina Fisher Scholtes, of Sudduth Elementary School in Starkville, Mississippi. Tina has been an elementary school teacher for sixteen years. She has spent the past fourteen years teaching first grade in Starkville.

First grade lays the foundation for formal education. Every parent hopes their child will begin school with an excellent teacher. Tina Scholtes is without a doubt an excellent teacher. Being an excellent teacher requires hard work, along with respect for children and an understanding of the learning process. Tina has those attributes and more. She also cares about outcomes. She wants all her students to succeed.

Beyond the Masters Degree she earned at Mississippi State University, Tina has completed professional development for teaching reading and mathematics; the special needs of teaching deaf students; National Board Certification; and training other teachers. Her resume is evidence of her capacity for gaining knowledge and sharing it with others. While continuing her first grade teaching, she has returned to Mississippi State University where as a clinical instructor she directs the activities of student teachers.

Tina has brought new teaching techniques into the schools where she has taught. She serves as a mentor to new teachers and has developed school wide curriculum reforms. She also has used local television programs to provide early childhood education lessons to parents.

Another indication that she is a dedicated teacher is her participation in the Parent Teacher Association where she served as President while teaching at Emerson Elementary School. Tina recognizes the importance of teachers participating in the community and is active in her church, and in other community activities.

I was very pleased that Tina Scholtes took time to visit my office when she was in Washington recently for the National Teacher of the Year recognition events.

I congratulate her on all her successes. The first graders in Starkville, Mississippi are lucky, indeed, to begin their lives as students with Tina Scholtes, and we are all grateful to her for being such a good example for other teachers to follow.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I yield up to 4 minutes to the distinguished chairman of the Labor-Education Committee, Senator JEFFORDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator JEFFORDS is recognized.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, it is a pleasure to participate in honoring our teachers in National Teacher Appreciation Week.

I think we all remember those early years of our lives when we started school. I still remember the first day of first grade. I remember going to school in my father's hand and fearing what was going to happen to me. I remember Mrs. Anderson who greeted us all individually at the door and how immediately I warmed up to her. It was then I realized this really wasn't going to be as bad as I thought. I can even remember where my seat was that year.

Ms. Maughn, in second grade, was another wonderful person. The teacher I remember more was Viola Burns, my third grade teacher. That was the beginning of World War II. She realized I needed a little further work so she had me read Time magazine and come back to her to talk about it. I also had her in the sixth grade. She was an incredible individual who helped shape my life.

Then fourth grade was ''teacher unappreciation year''—I don't want to remember that. We rebelled. We ran through five teachers before we settled down. I wiped that from my memory. I feel sorry for those five teachers.

I think everyone has memories and understands what an incredible help a teacher can be in our lives.

My mother was a music and art teacher; my sister, a third grade teacher; my niece is a teacher; the man across the street was the principal of our high school.

Those schools are gone. My former elementary school is now a private school, a Christian church school; middle school is the fire station; my high school is now the middle school.

I still remember the teachers. It is not brick and mortar but the teachers that make a difference. Dindo Rivera goes around the country talking about the changes in education and how important it is. If an office worker had fallen asleep 20 years ago, woke up and walked through a modern office, they would be in incredible despair. They wouldn't know what to do. They wouldn't know how to answer the phone.

But he goes on to say that if a teacher had the same experience of falling asleep and waking up now, that teacher would walk into the classroom and find that not much had changed. But the world has changed and our teachers cannot be made the scapegoats. We should not indicate that it is their problem. We, as a nation, have to recognize the teachers need help and we have to give it to them. That means we have to develop professional training. We have to be sure our colleges are producing teachers who are well qualified. At the same time, we have to recognize that our Nation will not prosper if we do not realize it is the teachers who make the difference. We are increasing standards and doing all these things to envelop them with modern technology which is difficult to understand, especially if you don't have more than 10 minutes in a day to even think about those things.

I think it is incredibly important we all remember the teachers, especially this year, since the Elementary and Secondary Education Act is up for reauthorization. This is our moment, at a critical time in our history, when we must take a look at the problems and the demands and the difficulties that are presented to our teachers and devise the means to help them help us become the Nation we all want to be.

Let's think about our teachers today, remember what they did for us, and think about what we can do for them.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I want to personally thank you for arranging for us to take this time out of our busy schedules to recognize teachers during Teacher Appreciation Week.

Providing the brightest future for our nation's children is one of the most important things we will do here on the floor of the Senate. After parents and families, America's teachers play the leading role in helping our children reach their potential. Therefore, it gives me great pleasure to join in tribute to our nation's outstanding educators and recognize a few of the top teachers in my home state of Idaho.

We all know the impact of teachers. Five days a week, for 9 months of every year, nearly 3 million teachers in this country help mold our children's future. I believe in the quality education our teachers, administrators, and others provide in Idaho. That is why my children continue to reside in the great State of Idaho. My wife Susan and I made the decision nearly 7 years ago when I was first elected to Congress that she and our children would remain in Idaho. We wanted our children to continue to receive the quality education they now experience in Idaho's public school system.

That quality education takes many faces. I want to show you one of them this morning. Judy Bieze lives in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho and teaches first grade at Hayden Meadows Elementary in nearby Hayden Lake.

Mrs. Bieze was honored this year by the State of Idaho as Teacher of the Year. But she is more than that; she is also a local softball coach and a Sunday school teacher, so I guess that makes her a teacher 7 days a week.

During each school year Mrs. Bieze gives individual attention to her students by profiling each one as the ''Special and Unique'' person of the week. She also encourages parents to volunteer in the classroom and to take an active role in their child's learning.

It is the ability to give of herself that makes Mrs. Bieze special. Her superintendent says she ''exemplifies the initiative and dedication we seek in our educators.'' Mrs. Bieze characteristically deflects that praise and credits her students. She says she—in her words—is ''truly blessed'' as ''the recipient of their unrestrained love, curiosity and enthusiasm for six hours each day.'' If only we could be holding more speeches on the floor of this Senate that deal with issues like love, curiosity and enthusiasm. Mrs. Bieze, we salute you.

I would be remiss in not mentioning some of Idaho's other outstanding teachers. Just last week, Idaho's PTA honored Jeff Durner, a fifth-grade teacher at Jefferson Elementary in Boise. The PTA credits Mr. Durner for helping children ''become the best they can be.''

The Idaho Education Association credits a sixth-grade teacher from my hometown of Idaho Falls as being worthy of special recognition. Zoe Ann Jorgenson has helped develop a special program in her district that groups children based on their needs, not on their age. She says many parents have chosen to keep their children in public schools, rather than move them to private classrooms, based on this innovative and unique program.

Mrs. Jorgenson believes the system should be made to fit the children, not that children be forced to fit the system. She says that parents are looking for choices within the structure of the public school system, and she wants to offer them those choices.

Finally, Idaho Parents Unlimited says a special education teacher formerly from Blackfoot, and now from Meridian, ID deserves credit for trailblazing programs for students that are sometimes forgotten in our school systems.

Barbara Jones earned the title of Special Education Consulting Teacher. One parent in Blackfoot described her as ''a true gift to my son as well as myself.'' Ms. Jones is now helping both fellow teachers and students learn how special needs can offer special rewards.

We all have a stake in this process, because our children's success in education depends on the support they receive at home, and the future of our nation depends on the leaders we are raising today.

Some define leadership as what we do with our opportunities. I am proud to praise these fine Idaho educators who have moved the bar higher—for our children.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize teachers across America for the vital work they do. I come from a family of educators, so I have seen firsthand the grueling work teachers go through every day—not for their own gain, but because they care about each and every one of our children. Teachers are not the highest paid people, they are not in the most glamorous profession—but they are, and should be, among the most respected people in our country. That is why it was so important that we declared this week as the 14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week and that we recognized May 4, 1999, as National Teacher Day.

Mr. President, the resolution that we passed yesterday states that education is key to the very foundation of American freedom and democracy we all enjoy, that teachers have a profound impact on the development of our children, and that much of the success we enjoy here in the United States can be attributed to our teachers. The resolution also states that while ''many people spend their lives building careers, teachers spend their careers building lives.''

Mr. President, I want to take a couple of minutes to recognize a teacher from my home state of Idaho who has truly spent her career building lives. Judy Bieze teaches first grade in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho. Judy got her start with a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Illinois State University, began teaching elementary students in 1971, and hasn't stopped since. For the past 14 years, she has blessed the children of Idaho.

She is an active member of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, the International Reading Association, the Panhandle Reading Council, and the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development. She is a lead teacher in her school and has received numerous grants to do everything from providing books for parents and children to check out and read to underwriting a district-wide inservice training in spelling.

Somewhere amongst all of this, Judy finds time to teach some of Idaho's children. In fact, Judy humbly reflects that her greatest accomplishments come in 6- and 7-year-old bodies.

It is no wonder. Judy practices some techniques in her classes which some may call innovative, while others call them back to the basics. For instance, during the course of the year she takes time to recognize each child in her class as the ''Special and Unique'' person and works each day to recognize each child's accomplishments. Furthermore, she believes that parents must be actively involved in their child's education. From encouraging parents to be involved in classroom activities to weekly letters home to detail what their child has been doing in school, Judy recognizes that parents are first and foremost in a child's education.

Judy has stated that each day she is ''rewarded by the large and small accomplishments of the children entrusted to my care.'' Last year, Judy's peers recognized these accomplishments and her commitment to the education of our children by choosing Judy Bieze as the Idaho State Teacher of the year for 1998–1999.

Judy believes that each child is a unique, unrepeatable miracle. On behalf of the great state of Idaho, I am glad that Judy chose to come to Idaho and work her miracles with our children. I am proud of the work she does, and am pleased that I have the opportunity to recognize her accomplishments today. It is my hope that other teachers will see what she has done, see how she cares for our children, and strive to follow her lead. With teachers like Judy leading the pack, I have great confidence in the future of our country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). The Chair recognizes the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 6 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. CONRAD. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent we get 4 additional minutes on this side as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, it is expected the Senate will soon consider a resolution that highlights the week of May 2 to 8 as National Teacher Appreciation Week. We have had a wonderful 2 weeks in this Nation's Capital. Last week the President signed the Ed-Flex bill which returned much of the control—local accountability, local flexibility—to local schools and school districts. This week we honor our teachers.

I rise today to honor the many outstanding teachers across the Nation and especially in my home State of Tennessee. In particular, I would like to highlight the achievements of Ms. Delise Teague, the 1999 Tennessee Teacher of the Year, whom I had the honor to meet, as you can see in this photo, just several weeks ago. This is Delise in the picture.

First, I would like to cite some of the research which paints a clear picture about the quality of a teacher being so critical to the future of our children and their education. Tennessee is one of the few States with data systems in place which make it possible to link teacher performance to student achievement. Researchers have the capability of examining the impact teachers have in terms of their effectiveness, how well they are teaching, and what students actually learn. Data from these studies show the least effective teachers produce gains of approximately 14 percentile points for low-achieving students. However, the most effective teachers produce gains that average 53 percentile points.

The data also reveal that these effects are cumulative over time. In fact, students with three quality teachers in a row, scored over twice as high on math tests as those students with teachers who are less qualified. Thus, we have anecdotal evidence and scientific evidence that a quality teacher has a tremendous impact on students.

One such outstanding teacher is Delise Teague, shown here in this portrait, who teaches English at McNairy Central High School in Selmer, TN. She knows firsthand the impact a quality teacher can have on a student. Using her words, she notes, ''I cannot take personal credit for my success as a classroom teacher. Great teachers shared the light with me. I am simply passing it on.''

She adds it was her first Sunday School teacher whose influence ''served to fan the flame of learning that had been sparked at home by loving parents and an abundance of books.'' She will further tell you that she had several teachers in the public school system who played a key role in her own education and in her decision to pursue a career in teaching. The teachers who motivated Delise in her education were the ones who saw her untapped potential and challenged her. This is a lesson that Delise applies in her own classroom. She challenges her students and believes in their potential to succeed.

In fact, Courtney Carroll, a student at McNairy Central High School, wrote, ''Miss Teague is loved and respected by her students because she truly wants each person who enters her classroom to be successful.''

Delise coaches the varsity softball team and freshman basketball team. She has served on the Technology Literacy Grant Committee, the National Honor Society Selection Committee, and as a student teacher supervisor/mentor. She is active in her community and takes on projects such as distributing fruit baskets for the elderly and providing gifts through the project Angel Tree for underprivileged children and contributing to Saint Jude's Children's Hospital through fundraising efforts.

She is just one wonderful example of the many dedicated teachers in our Nation's schools. In my own past I think of June Bowen, who taught me seventh grade English, and Mary Helen Lowry, who passed away this year, who taught me English through high school. I am so pleased to be able to participate in this effort to honor our Nation's teachers by promoting National Teacher Appreciation Week.

As parents and community members, we should all take a few minutes to celebrate this great cause for our children's future. I yield the floor.

Mr. COVERDELL addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I thank all my colleagues honoring National Teacher Day and Teacher Appreciation Week. I appreciate very much the work Senator FRIST has done on behalf of reform in education.

Mr. President, I am pleased to join my colleagues today to recognize May 2–8, 1999, as the 14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week, and to commend thousands of dedicated teachers across the nation for their determined efforts to shape the intellect of our children.

The foundation of American freedom and democracy is a strong, effective system of education where every child has the opportunity to learn in a safe and nurturing environment.

America's first rate education system depends on a partnership between parents, principals, teachers and children. The success of our nation for much of the 20th century—is the result of the hard work and dedication of teachers across the land.

While many people spend their lives building careers, teachers spend their careers building lives. Our nation's teachers serve our children beyond the call of duty as coaches, mentors, and advisors without regard to fame or fortune. Across the land nearly 3 million men and women experience the joys of teaching young minds the virtues of reading, writing and arithmetic.

As part of the 14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week, I'd like to pay special tribute to Andrew Baumgartner of Augusta, Georgia—who was recently named the 1999 National Teacher of the Year.

Mr. Baumgartner, who teaches kindergarten at A. Brian Merry Elementary School in Augusta, has been a teacher for 23 years. His motivation and source of inspiration comes in part from the belief that it was his duty to give something back to society, and he has done so through his teaching.

To achieve his goal of getting kids to learn, Mr. Baumgartner creates a sense of adventure in his classroom. He has used his creativity and imagination to bring the magic of reading and learning to the minds of his kids.

The award, sponsored by the Council of Chief State School Officers and Scholastic, Inc., will send Mr. Baumgartner on a promotional tour as 1999 National Teacher of the Year, where he will share his innovative ideas with other teachers around the nation. I wish Mr. Baumgartner the best of luck during this tour and am confident that he will inspire other teachers with his creativity and willingness to do whatever it takes to get kids to learn.

In closing Mr. President, I call on all my colleagues—on both sides of the aisle—to take a moment this week to give a special thanks to the nearly 3 million important American men and women—like Andy—who have contributed to the emotional and intellectual development of children across the land.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise in recognition of Teacher Appreciation Week. During this week we have a special opportunity to thank the dedicated professionals who open our children's eyes to the world of discovery and learning, the world that will open the door to a brighter future for them and for all of Michigan.

Five days a week, for nine months out of every year, America's 2.7 million teachers help to mold our children's future, the future of Michigan, and the future of America. Across Michigan and across the United States, tomorrow's business leaders, inventors, doctors, and even teachers are building the foundation of learning and experience that will shape their lives and careers.

This week, Mr. President, Michiganites like all Americans are taking time to pay tribute to our teachers, some of the most important people in our children's lives. After parents and families, teachers pay the most important role in helping our children reach their potential. No teacher can take the place of loving and attentive families, but the school experience plays a crucial role in shaping our children's character.

After the tragic events in Colorado, I hope all of us will take the time to think about the difficult job our teachers have, in these troubled times, giving children the structure and habits as well as the knowledge they need to become good citizens and productive adults.

I have always supported calls for better computer technology in our classrooms. And it is true that our children need to learn to use tools that will expand their access to information. But a qualified, highly trained teacher remains the most important education tool in any classroom. Today's technological innovations can help teachers capture our children's attention and bring the world to their eyes and fingertips. But no machine can take the place of a dedicated teacher who genuinely cares about a child's future. With the rapid advance of education technology, we must ensure that our teachers are trained in the most effective educational use of this technology, and that none of us are distracted from the basics of a good education by glittering machines.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, there are disturbing statistics about how well our teachers are prepared to enter the classroom. More than 25 percent of new teachers nationwide enter school without adequate teaching skills or without training in their subject according to the National Commission on Teaching and America's Future. One in seven teachers has not fully met State standards.

We must do more to ensure that our teachers are fully prepared to meet the increasing challenges of their profession. We must take advantage of every opportunity to provide today's teachers with access to proven training programs while simultaneously recruiting and training qualified and dedicated young people to become tomorrow's great educators.

Most importantly, Mr. President, we must applaud and show our appreciation to the teachers who go that extra mile for our kids, capturing their attention, helping them gain the knowledge and skills they need, and providing examples of dedication and skill that should inspire us all.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to salute one of our nation's most precious resources, our teachers and in particular New Mexico's teacher of the year, Stan Johnston of Los Alamos High School.

I would submit, teachers are the key to America's future. Christa McAuliffe, the teacher and astronaut put it in perfect perspective. She said, ''I touch the future, I teach.''

Building upon her statement I would say: it is a simple fact that the future is prejudiced in favor of those who can read, write, and do math. A good education is a ticket to the secure economic future of the middle class. As the earning gap between brains and brawn grows ever larger almost no one doubts the link between education and an individual's prospects.

And today the Senate is acknowledging those on the front lines with our students, the unsung heroes, their teachers. Somewhere in this great country of ours a teacher has a future leader of the United States in his classroom. Who knows; it could be one of the students in Stan Johnston's English and Study Skills class at Los Alamos High School in New Mexico.

My point is simple, after parents and families, teachers play an important role in helping our children reach their potential. After our children leave home each morning, it becomes the responsibility of America's almost 3 million teachers to ensure our children are prepared for the future because in our nation's classrooms resides the future.

Hopefully, the future doctors who will find the cure for cancer, mental illness, and heart disease are right now in our classrooms. But, most importantly we have the next generation of our country now attending classes throughout our schools.

In conclusion, I would like to thank you and a job well done to all of our teachers and in particular, Stan Johnston of Los Alamos High School. Again, thank you and please continue the superb work you are doing on behalf of our country.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, of all the occupations in America, teachers may deserve their own ''appreciation day'' the most. And, perhaps no occupation influences the future of our country more. I am delighted to join my colleagues today in paying tribute to those teachers all over America who have made a real difference.

One special teacher who made a real difference in my life was Mr. McElroy.

When I was a young boy, I played my violin in the school orchestra. On the day of one of our most important performances, the student who was supposed to play a solo on the bass got sick and was unable to perform. My music director, Mr. McElroy came to me and convinced me that, even though I had never played the bass, I could perform the solo.

I had terrible doubts about my ability to step in and do the job. But Mr. McElroy had confidence in me, even if I didn't. And he worked with me and encouraged me and coached me for most of that afternoon. That night I was able to play the solo without making a mistake.

As I think back on it, this was one experience that taught me that if I applied myself I could meet a challenge. When, in 1976, everyone believed I was a long-shot to win the nomination and, indeed, the election to become Utah's senator, I should have told them about Mr. McElroy.

I know that right now, in a classroom in Utah—maybe in the room of Diane Crim, who teaches math at Salt Lake's Clayton Intermediate School and is Utah's 1998 Teacher of the Year—another young student is learning these important lessons thanks to a dedicated and caring teacher.

Teaching is not just a job, it's a calling. It is a calling to impart knowledge, to mete out discipline, to inspire, to motivate.

Last week, our entire nation mourned the loss of a devoted teacher, Dave Sanders. The testimony of his students to his caring, whether in the classroom or on the basketball court, is a tribute better than any we here in the Senate could pay. I hope that the students he taught at Columbine High School will go on to practice the lessons he taught and be the kind of citizens in the community that he hoped they would be.

Mr. President, Mr. McElroy, Diane Crim, and Dave Sanders all represent the best of the teaching profession. There are thousands of others we could mention here today who have helped our children learn the keys for living such as reading, math, science, and history. But, more than that, they have helped reinforce essential values like hard work, perseverance, team work, and integrity. I am pleased to join in honoring these teachers today.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I also want to comment on the National Teacher Appreciation Week, because I think all of us can look back in our own backgrounds and remember what a difference teachers made in our lives.

I can remember very well the teachers who made a contribution to my life, to my growing up: Mrs. Goplin, who taught American history and who really shared a great love for understanding the Constitution of the United States, always told us that this is one of the greatest documents in human history. I will never forget those words of Mrs. Goplin.

She was exactly right. Our Constitution is one of the greatest documents in human history, and how lucky we are to live in a country that has constitutional guarantees of freedom for the American people and says to each and every American, you have certain rights, rights that protect you from the overreach of government, because our forefathers had known in Europe that government can become oppressive and that government can make demands on its citizenry that are not fair, that are not reasonable. We are so lucky to have these protections.

I remember other teachers: My third grade teacher, Mrs. Offerdahl, who is still alive in a nursing home in North Dakota, what a great woman. She came every morning to that class with a sparkle in her eye and a love for learning and a love for teaching. She made a difference not only in my life but in the lives of hundreds and hundreds of students whom she taught over a very long career in the Bismarck, ND, school system—Mrs. Offerdahl.

And Mrs. Senzek, who was my fifth grade teacher, a highly intelligent woman, somebody who was absolutely committed to improving the educational standards of the kids in Bismarck, ND. My sixth grade teacher, Miss Barbie, who was a very sophisticated woman, somebody who loved reading and imparted that love to students.

I think back to how fortunate we were to have people of that quality and that caring who provided education to us and at great sacrifice to themselves. I can say every one of these women whom I have mentioned could have made much more money doing something else, but they were dedicated to teaching young people, and they made enormous financial sacrifices to do it.

There are so many other teachers along the way whom I remember. Mrs. Hook was my second grade teacher. She was a woman of real majesty, really almost a regal person, very tall, very erect, very dignified, somebody who commanded respect.

These are people who made an impression that has lasted a lifetime, lasted a lifetime for me, but I know lasted a lifetime for other students in the Bismarck public school system as well.

Mr. President, I add our words of praise to all the teachers across this country who make a difference in the lives of kids. Other than family members, other than parents, perhaps there is no more important relationship than what teachers do in terms of training our kids. So, today, we say thank you, thank you for everything you have done. You have made a difference.

CRISIS IN AMERICAN AGRICULTURE

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I want to talk about another crisis that is occurring in this country. It is not receiving the attention as are the storms in Oklahoma, the tornadoes, and the tremendous damage that has been wreaked in those States by this set of storms, but it is a crisis nonetheless. It is almost a stealth crisis. It is a crisis in American agriculture, and I can tell you, it is causing trauma, too.

In my State, we have just seen a series of headlines in the major newspapers that tell the story. I thought I would bring them to the attention of my colleagues today so hopefully we can reflect not only on the tragedy in Oklahoma and Kansas, but we can reflect on the tragedy that is happening in central America, and I mean the central America of North Dakota and South Dakota, Montana, Nebraska, and Kansas—States that have been hard hit by a virtual depression in agriculture.

It is causing real trauma, Mr. President. These headlines tell the story. This headline sums it up: ''The rural depression.'' There is a real depression in the heartland of America. Prices, the lowest we have seen in 50 years, are causing literally thousands of farmers to exit agriculture.

Here is another headline which recently ran in papers back home: ''Farm prices, farm numbers both fall.''

And this headline that says: ''Another farm dies; does Washington really care?'' That is the question we are going to be asking today and we are going to continue to ask as we see this crisis grow and develop affecting more and more farm families and starting to affect the small towns of our State as well. In fact, this headline says it well: ''AG Crisis Is Bigger Than N.D.'' This is an editorial from the largest paper in our State pointing out that not only is North Dakota affected but other farm States as well.

This is a headline which ran recently: ''State Loses Farmers.'' And one headline which ran, again, in the biggest paper in our State: ''Crop Prices Are the Problem.'' And indeed they are. ''Crop Prices Are the Problem.'' This article says, ''Crop prices, that's the big thing wrong with the region's farm picture this year.'' And they are exactly right.

When I mentioned the crisis has moved from the farmstead to the streets of North Dakota, this headline tells that story: ''Farm Downturn Leaves Main Street Reeling. Three family-run businesses in Michigan, North Dakota closed, with little hope of reopening.''

There is the crisis that is receiving enormous attention in Oklahoma and Kansas—and it should have enormous attention. Those people deserve for others to understand what is happening and the suffering they are experiencing.

There is another crisis as well, and that is the crisis in farm country. Those people are suffering. And they deserve attention as well.

Let me just show another chart which goes right to the heart of the problem we are facing. This shows what has happened to farm prices from 1946 to 1998 for wheat and barley. You can see from the prices—this is 1998—it has even gotten worse. We go out to 1999, and these prices continue to decline in real terms. We have the lowest prices now for these commodities in 52 years. This is a crisis by any definition.

I just want to conclude by going back to what one of the articles said in the papers back home. This says: ''Banks' Survey Shows Farm Income Dwindling.'' In this article they say, ''The vice is tightening on farm borrowers in the Upper Great Plains. The outlook for farm income is grim unless commodity prices increase.''

Mr. President, that is exactly the case. We face a tightening noose around the necks of literally thousands of farm families, and it is time for a response from the Federal Government. We need to pass the disaster supplemental. We need to make the last disaster program we passed whole, because we now know it will cost $1.5 billion more to keep the promise which was made in that disaster program. We need to once again shore up the transition payments that are promised farmers under the new farm bill at this time of price collapse.

Those are steps we can take, we need to take, we must take. In addition, we should reform crop insurance, because we know that program does not work when you have multiple years of disaster.

I just close by saying once again, I hope America is listening and understands that there are tragedies occurring across the United States. We have a tragedy in Oklahoma, a tragedy in Kansas, and we ought to respond.

There are also tragedies that are occurring below the radar screen. They are not getting the attention of the national press. They are a crisis nonetheless, and we ought to respond to them as well.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

Mr. President, I know my colleague from Montana is waiting to speak.

I inquire of the Parliamentarian, how much time do we have remaining on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Five minutes 15 seconds are remaining.

Mr. CONRAD. I just ask my colleague from the State of Montana if he would like that additional 5 minutes. I would be happy to yield to him at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would the Senator from Montana——

Mr. GRAMM. Reserving the right to object, may I hear the request again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The inquiry was whether the Senator from Montana desires time.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I appreciate the inquiry of the Senator from North Dakota. I would, but I want to accommodate the manager of the bill, too. I would like, at some time in the next hour or two, to speak for 15 minutes.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. To accommodate the Senator, why don't we just take 5 minutes off each side. We are going to have the vote at noon, so we will have less time. Senator SARBANES and I had an opportunity to plow this ground in some depth, so why don't we yield to the distinguished Senator 10 minutes now, and then we will begin the debate on the financial services modernization bill.

Mr. BAUCUS. If I might try once more for 15.

Mr. SARBANES. I yield the Senator another 5 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Thank you very much.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. So the RECORD is clear, the Senator from Montana will have 15 minutes—10 minutes from the Democratic side, 5 minutes from the majority side.

The Senator from Montana is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank very much not only my good friend from North Dakota but my good friend from Texas, Senator GRAMM, and my good friend from Maryland, Senator SARBANES.

CHINA'S WTO ACCESSION

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise this morning to offer some thoughts on the negotiations towards China's WTO accession, in the aftermath of Premier Zhu Rongji's visit to the United States.

This, I submit, is a question of fundamental importance to America's trade interests. China is now our fourth largest trading partner—after Canada, Japan, and Mexico—a major market, and the source of our most unbalanced trade relationship in the world. And it is perhaps still more important to America's strategic interests in Asia. Today, I would like to review the progress thus far and its implications for these interests.

Let me begin, however, with some context about WTO accessions and the commitments they require.

The WTO really began with the creation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, otherwise known as the GATT, in 1948. At that time, 23 nations were members. Each of them agreed to a set of tariff cuts and agreed to apply the new tariffs to all other GATT members. This is the famous, or infamous, principle of ''MFN,'' or ''Most Favored Nation.''

Since then, since 1948, 111 other economies—membership is no longer restricted to countries, as Hong Kong and the European Union are now members—have joined to make up today's 134-member WTO.

The original tariff agreements are also joined by agreements on sanitary and phytosanitary standards—that is, health standards—intellectual property, technical barriers to trade, and other issues. And 30 more economies have applied to join, the largest being China.

As these economies join, they must also lower their trade barriers, live up to WTO's intellectual property and agricultural inspection commitments, and so forth. For existing members, however, the only requirement is the one they adopted back in 1948: that we apply MFN—or today normal trade relations—tariffs to the new members. That is the only commitment that current members have to make.

So as we consider the commitments China has and will make to be a WTO member, we must also remember that these are fundamentally one-way concessions. Let me repeat, to enter the WTO, China has committed to a set of one-way concessions.

Nothing in any WTO accession will mean American concessions on market access; the use of our trade laws to address dumping, subsidies, or import surges; or controls on American technology exports. Likewise, if we should choose to tighten export controls at some point in the future, nothing in the WTO accession would prevent us from doing so.

Let me now turn to the commitments China has made and to the issues which remain.

To enter the WTO, China and the existing members must do two things: draft a ''Protocol'' covering a set of fair trade policies, and agree on a set of market access concessions.

These are the issues which the American negotiating team addressed in the months and weeks before Premier Zhu's visit. And the results are striking. China has made a significant set of concessions in both areas. The work is not done, but let me review for the Senate some of the major elements.

Under the protocol, China has made the following commitments: It will end the practice of requiring technology transfer as a condition for investment. That is very big. This includes refusing to enforce tech transfer provisions of existing contracts. The United States is guaranteed the right to continue using nonmarket economy methods for fighting dumping and unfair subsidies.

China will end investment practices intended to take jobs from other countries, for example, local content requirements which stop auto plants from importing U.S. parts; export performance clauses requiring production to be exported rather than sold on the Chinese market, and so on. And China has agreed to a product-specific safeguard which will strengthen our ability to fight sudden import surges.

It is important in the weeks and months ahead to ensure that these provisions have acceptable duration. But it is also clear both that we will be able to use the WTO to strengthen our guarantees of fair trade, and also that we will be able to use our own domestic trade laws for the same purpose. These are fundamental parts of any successful WTO accession.

The American negotiators have also won an impressive set of commitments in market access. Let me offer a few examples: In agriculture, China has already begun by lifting its infamous ban on Pacific Northwest wheat, American beef, and also on citrus products. And when it enters the WTO, it will accompany this by major tariff cuts. For example, beef tariffs will fall from 45 percent to 12 percent, and adoption of tariff-rate quotas in bulk commodities; that is, minimum guarantees of imports into China.

The wheat tariff-rate quota, for example, has the potential to lift China's imports from 2.4 million metric tons a day to 7.3 tons for the first year China is in the WTO and more afterwards. China will also give up any rights to export subsidies, a far cry from, say, Europe which has massive export subsidies; China going much, much further than Europe is today.

In industrial goods, China will grant full distribution rights, retailing, repair, warehousing, trucking and more in almost all products over 3 years. And it will allow American companies to import and export freely. These are concessions that will fundamentally transform an economy which now operates by requiring both Americans and Chinese to use Chinese Government middlemen in these areas. It will make large tariff cuts to an average of 7.1 percent, and it will give up the quota policies at the heart of several industrial policy ventures.

Another concession of special interest to my State of Montana is deep cuts in wood products, from levels reaching 18 percent today down to 5 and 7 percent after WTO membership. And in services, China has made commitments in every sector. They are especially strong, as I noted, in distribution, but also extend to telecommunications, to finance, to audiovisual, environmental services, law, franchising, direct sales and more. These are very significant concessions which go most of the way to creating a commercially meaningful agreement.

The U.S. negotiators deserve immense credit for their tremendous achievements of the past months, absolutely amazing, perhaps even more for their willingness to refuse bad offers in the past years and remain firm in the commitment to strong accession in all areas.

Several issues, however, remain unresolved. I am especially and very strongly concerned that we are not accepting any rapid phaseout of nonmarket economy dumping rules or import surge provisions. We can also improve on the market access commitments in several of the service sectors. However, we should also understand that there is a point at which we should say yes. We should not set a goal of transforming China's trade regime into Hong Kong's by next New Year's Day. Rather, we should expect a good, commercially meaningful accession, and we are almost there now.

Finally, let me say a few words about the broader interests involved. A WTO accession is a set of unilateral trade concessions; in this case, made by China. As such, it is in our economic and our commercial interest. It will create opportunities while making trade fairer for our working people and farmers. But it is also a piece of a larger strategy designed to create a more stable, a more prosperous and more peaceful Asia-Pacific region.

China's economic integration into the Pacific region since the opening under President Nixon in 1972 has been immensely important to our long-term national interests. We can see that very clearly in the Asian financial crisis, for example.

When I came to Congress, China was a revolutionary power, which would have used this recent currency crisis to spread disorder, spread revolution throughout Southeast Asia and the Korean peninsula. But today it is a beneficiary of Thai, Singapore, Korean and Malay investment, and these countries are also China's markets. China has responded to the crisis by contributing to their recovery through currency stability and several billion dollars in contributions to IMF recovery packages.

The WTO accession will deepen and strengthen this process. At the same time, it will move China toward the rule of law, give Chinese working people, students and families more frequent, more open contact with foreigners and, thus, contribute to our work toward a China which has more respect of the law and more respect for human rights.

Mr. President, the U.S. negotiators thus far have done an excellent job. They have already offered American farmers a ray of hope during a very difficult year. We are very close to accessions that will make trade with China fundamentally more fair for our country. It will then be up to the Senate, to our colleagues, to take the final step by making the normal trade relations we now offer to China permanent.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUTCHINSON). If the Senator will withhold, morning business is closed.

FINANCIAL SERVICES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 900, which the clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (S. 900) to enhance competition in the financial services industry by providing a prudential framework for the affiliation of banks, securities firms, insurance companies, and other financial service providers, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Sarbanes (for DASCHLE/SARBANES) amendment No. 302, in the nature of a substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time until 12 noon shall be divided between the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Maryland, with 23 minutes for Senator GRAMM and 17 minutes for Senator SARBANES.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. MACK. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I thank Senator GRAMM for yielding me the time. I have a comment or two with respect to the process that we have gone through in putting this legislation together.

I commend Senator GRAMM. I can't think of a time in my now 17 years in the Congress where I have had a chairman of a committee that has spent as much time with the other members of the committee, walking through a particular piece of legislation, each aspect of it, making sure that each of us was prepared and educated on the various issues. There are some difficult issues that face us—the whole issue of CRA, unitary thrifts, the mixing of banking and commerce, the issue of operating subsidiaries versus affiliates, all of them complicated.

I can remember not too many years ago when there was this sense in America that the model which should be followed was the Japanese banking system that people looked at and said, we ought to look at Japan, the dynamic economy they were producing in the late 1980s. I think about how much things have changed in those 10 years.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point very briefly?

Mr. MACK. I will be glad to yield for a moment.

Mr. SARBANES. I remember people would say that the Japanese had all the largest banks in the world and they were saying, look. And now look at the situation.

Mr. MACK. It is a dramatic change, and here we are. We have been talking about this legislation for all those years and we haven't made the modifications we needed to make. I hope we will be successful this time.

I rise in support of the underlying bill and in opposition to the Sarbanes substitute. We all know that legislation to overhaul the bank regulatory structure is long overdue, and I join many of my colleagues in thanking the chairman for his hard work in writing this bill and bringing it to the floor.

I will begin by quoting the words of the Senate Banking Committee report, which I believe presents a strong case for financial modernization. It states:

The argument for legislation to rationalize our financial structure is strong. Regulatory and court decisions have eliminated many of the barriers between commercial and investment banking. The barriers separating commercial banks from investment banks have been perforated in both directions. Finally, changes in the technology and practice of financial intermediation have rendered the restrictions of Glass-Steagall increasingly ineffective and obsolete.

There is nothing particularly remarkable about that language, Mr. President. In fact, those same arguments will be made by many of my colleagues here today. But what is remarkable about the statement I just read is that it comes from a committee report on banking legislation in 1991. Just as I believed those words to be significant 8 years ago, I believe them to be even more so today. Unfortunately, there was no overhaul of our banking system in 1991. And despite much hard work and a clear need for action, there has been none since. We are long overdue for this debate and I am pleased the Senate is addressing this important issue.

Freedom and free enterprise have allowed our corporate and financial institutions to respond to changing times and to adapt to a changing financial environment. But this ability has reached its limits within the confines of present law. For our financial institutions to continue to grow, to compete, and to evolve, we must give them a new legislative climate in which to operate. That is the purpose of the bill before us today.

Mr. President, our banking system is truly a model for the world. Emerging economies from Asia to Africa to Central Europe look to the United States for the blueprint and technical expertise to build an effective financial infrastructure. This is happening because we have found a remarkable balance between community banks and global institutions, between the regulators and the regulated, between the States and the Federal Government, and between ordinary people and the money they need to finance their hopes and dreams. In recent years, we have witnessed a wave of high-profile mergers, as institutions across the sectors hope to create ''synergy'' from offering a broad range of financial products to an expanding global customer base. For their part, many smaller, community-based institutions are using the new regulatory authorities to offer their customers one-stop shopping for individual financial needs—from ordinary retail banking to insurance products and securities instruments.

All of this is very important to the continued financial well-being of our Nation and to the global competitiveness of our financial services industry. However, the expansions I speak of are not taking place with the approval of the Congress and are not occurring through any action on our part to change the law. Rather, these things are happening because—as the 1991 report mentioned—court decisions and the broadened interpretations of present law by the banking regulators have allowed them to take place in an ad hoc manner. In order to access the right to affiliate with other sectors, financial companies have to jump over increasingly complicated regulatory hurdles in order to adapt and survive. It is high time Congress weighed in on this important trend. It is high time we cleared the way for these affiliations and repealed the underlying web of Depression-era restrictions on our banking industry.

That is what we accomplish in the bill before us today, Mr. President. This legislation allows companies to diversify holdings by lifting the prohibitions on affiliations among banks, insurance companies, and securities firms, thus allowing them to compete fully in a free-market environment. If Congress fails to act, we will once again limit the potential of our financial sector and we will continue to impose needless and unnecessary regulatory burdens on individual financial institutions. The other body is moving with its own legislation. The Senate needs to act now to ensure that our financial sector is on solid footing for the new century.

The bill before us repeals the Depression-era Glass-Steagall law prohibiting affiliations between commercial and investment banks. It allows banks and insurance companies to affiliate under the same corporate umbrella. It contains provisions outlining the appropriate regulation of bank sales of insurance, and it allows banks with assets of less than $1 billion to engage in a broader range of financial services through operating subsidiaries. Of course, Mr. President, the relationships between these entities are carefully constructed to ensure institutional safety and soundness and that the taxpayer-insured deposits of retail banking institutions are protected.

The structure provided for in this legislation will end the ad hoc expansion and administration of our banking sector and provide the industry with a clear roadmap for the 21st century. In my view, it will lead to greater stability, enhanced safety and soundness, and improved choices for customers and consumers.

So I urge my colleagues to support passage of this important bill and defeat the Sarbanes substitute.

With that, I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. What is the parliamentary situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is under the control of the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. LOTT. I yield myself time out of my leader time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I will be brief because we have to get back to this Financial Services Modernization Act. I know the two managers managing this are working on it studiously, and we will be having votes later today. It looks to me as if we can make good progress.

MARY BETH BOYER BLACK, MISSISSIPPI'S 1999 TEACHER OF THE YEAR

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I join my other colleagues here today in recognizing National Teacher Appreciation Week. I am the son of a schoolteacher. My mother taught school for 19 years, between first and the sixth grade. She finally had to leave teaching because in those days teachers basically could not make enough money to live on. She wound up in bookkeeping and broadcasting. I also worked for a university for 3 years, and I have a very serious appreciation for our teachers and the jobs they do.

I have stayed in touch, over the years, with my second-, third-, and fourth-grade teachers at Duck Hill, MS. I don't know why, but I particularly remember those three and have always appreciated them. I guess we remember the ones who teach us to write and do the basic reading. They were wonderful women and wonderful people, and they inspired me in many ways.

So in appreciation of this National Teacher Appreciation Week, I will quote from the Bible. It says:

> Train up the child in the way he should go, and when he's old, he will not depart from it.

Those were the words of Solomon. That is good advice from Solomon.

So today I want to pay particular attention to our Mississippi Teacher of the Year, Mary Beth Black. She teaches chemistry, physics, and advanced placement physics. I remember those courses. They are the reason I didn't go into pharmacy or med school. Biology, chemistry, physics—I took all the college preparatory courses, and I look back now and I know that I was wasting space. I was really never destined to major in the sciences. But it is so important that we have teachers who inspire students in that area. If we are going to be competitive in the future, in the next millennium, and participate in the world economy, we are going to have to have students who are good in science, physics, computer sciences, and the sciences in general.

In order for them to learn what they need to know and to be inspired in that field, you need great teachers like this teacher, the ''Teacher of the Year'' in Mississippi, who teaches at Emory, MS, a wonderful lady with a wonderful record.

She points, interestingly enough, to her second-grade teacher who, she noted, inspired her when she was 7 years old—that she knew when she was 7 she could be anything she chose to be: She could be a brain surgeon, she could drive a fire truck, or go to the Moon. But this second-grade teacher inspired her to want to be a teacher. She always wanted to be a teacher—and to be more than just a teacher, to be an inspiration to young people.

She said:

> Second grade can be challenging. My problem was cursive writing or ''real writing'' as we second graders called it. No matter how hard I tried, my loops and swoops and tilts were never as good as my peers.

''Until now,'' she said, ''school had been great.'' But in this instance it got to be a problem and a challenge. But her second-grade teacher, Mrs. Hurt, worked with her and taught her and then became an inspiration to her.

So today I give thanks and appreciation to all of our teachers across our great country, and in my State of Mississippi to the ''Mrs. Hurts'' who taught in those small, sometimes one- and two-classroom buildings as my mother did, who not only taught the course but inspired a generation of more teachers such as Mary Beth Black, Mississippi's Teacher of the Year.

An 18th-century American historian, Henry Brooks Adams, said: ''A teacher affects eternity; (she) can never tell where (her) influence stops.''

So our teachers influence our young people, and they affect the future of our country and the world. Thanks to all of them.

I yield the floor.

FINANCIAL SERVICES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

Mr. DASCHLE addressed the Chair.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I yield such time as the minority leader may consume.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished ranking member, the Senator from Maryland. I thank him and the Democratic members of the Banking Committee for the tremendous leadership and patience that, in particular, Senator SARBANES has demonstrated in getting us to this point.

I also want to acknowledge the efforts of all my colleagues on the Senate Banking Committee, and especially the fellow Democrats of the Banking Committee, who have put so much effort and energy and diligence into bringing us to this very important debate, and ultimately this vote which we will shortly have.

I might add, as I know the distinguished Senator from Maryland has already noted, that every Democratic member of the Senate Banking Committee is a cosponsor of the substitute we will be voting on shortly. Together, my colleagues on the committee have produced a proposal to give financial service companies new freedoms and new flexibility—without risking the financial well-being of our economy or of individuals. It is a balanced, responsible proposal—one the President can sign—and, on behalf of the entire Democratic caucus, I thank them for producing it.

Let me be very clear, Mr. President. Senate Democrats support financial services modernization. We want to see a bill passed. There is no good reason that can't happen this year—in fact, this week.

This should not be a partisan issue. Historically, it has not been one.

Our substitute is based on last year's H.R. 10. The Senate Banking Committee passed H.R. 10 on a vote of 16 to 2—16 to 2. Republicans on the Senate Banking Committee supported H.R. 10 last year. So did virtually every major financial services industry group.

In the House, the House Banking Committee passed a very similar bill this year. Again, the vote was overwhelmingly bipartisan—51 to 8.

Until recently, Democrats and Republicans have agreed overwhelmingly that the path laid out in our substitute was the right path. That has all changed. Reform has suffered a major setback this year. In the Senate Banking Committee, the majority forced through a new, harshly partisan bill on a party line vote of 11 to 9. This new bill shattered the consensus that so many people worked so long and so hard to create.

In place of the broad support enjoyed by H.R. 10, the committee bill is opposed now by every Democrat on the Banking Committee. It is also opposed by every civil rights group. It is opposed by community groups, community organizations, and local governmental officials.

Instead of a clear path to enactment—which is what we would have had had we stayed with the bipartisan approach to H.R. 10—financial services reform is now on two tracks. There is the veto track. And make no mistake, S. 900 is on this track. It will be vetoed if the President receives it in its current form. Then there is the enactment track. That is the track our substitute and the bipartisan House Banking bill are on.

We are not saying, ''It is our way, or no way.'' Neither side should ever issue such an ultimatum. That is not the way of the Senate. We have discussed with the majority leader our desire to find a bipartisan way to get the financial services modernization bill back on the enactment track. We have agreed to a floor procedure which will enable us to finish this bill in an expeditious manner.

We do not want to delay this bill any longer. That has already happened. It has already been delayed. As I said, we want to pass financial services modernization this year, and perhaps even this week. So the choice for the Senate is clear. It is partisan brinkmanship, or bipartisan accomplishment.

We stand ready on this side of the aisle to deliver a bill that the President can sign. He has cited four serious flaws in S. 900 which he has said will force him to veto the bill. Our substitute corrects all four flaws.

First and foremost, our substitute does not gut CRA—the Community Reinvestment Act—as S. 900 does. The CRA has proven a huge success in expanding access to credit and investment in low- and moderate-income communities. Investment capital is the lifeblood of these communities. That capital must continue to be available to qualified borrowers in all communities. We cannot draw red lines around the American dream. Democrats will not support a bill that undermines the effectiveness of the CRA.

The second major difference between our substitute and the underlying bill is the way the two proposals deal with the separation of banking and commerce.

For nearly 70 years, since the collapse of the banking industry during the Great Depression, U.S. law has separated banking from other commercial activities. An army of experts—from Chairman Greenspan to Secretary Rubin to former Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker—believe that separation must be maintained.

But you don't have to look in the history books to understand why mixing banking and other commercial activities is risky business. Look at the recent currency crisis that started in Asia and spread to some of our Latin American neighbors. If anything, the globalization of our economy makes a reasonable separation between banking and other commercial activities even more important now than it was when those laws were first enacted.

Unfortunately, as the distinguished Senator from Maryland has observed, the underlying bill weakens the separation of banking and commerce in a number of ways. Our alternative does not. It reflects the careful compromises developed last year. It preserves the separation between banks and other commercial activities without in any way limiting the flexibility financial service companies need in today's economy. It strikes the right balance between opportunity and responsibility.

Let me interject here that, should our substitute fail, my colleague from South Dakota, Senator JOHNSON, intends to offer a related amendment. It would close a loophole which commercial companies currently use to mix banking and commerce by acquiring existing unitary thrift holding companies. I will strongly support his effort.

A third difference between our substitute and S. 900 has to do with consumer protection. H.R. 10—the bill the Banking Committee passed out last year with overwhelming support—included a number of consumer protections having to do with such things as risk disclosure and licensing of personnel. Those protections were essential for its passage last year. They remain essential to the American people. They have all been stripped out of the underlying bill—every one of them. They are all included in the Democratic alternative. They must be included in any financial services bill this Congress passes, or the President will veto it.

There is a fourth way in which our bill differs from both the committee bill and from last year's bill. It involves what financial activities can take place in subsidiaries of banks, and under what conditions.

As the legislative process has progressed, the Treasury Department has agreed to significant additional safeguards regarding the financial activities of banks' operating subsidiaries. Our alternative incorporates these safeguards. At the same time, it would permit banks to structure certain new activities in these so-called ''op-subs'' as they see fit. Again, it balances opportunity and responsibility.

Mr. President, that is where we stand—the juncture of two tracks: The veto track, and the enactment track.

S. 900—as it is currently written—will put us on the veto track. We know that:

It undermines the Community Reinvestment Act.

It breaches the separation of banking and commerce.

It ignores consumer protection.

And, it fails to strike a responsible balance on the question of bank operating subsidiaries.

The failure to proceed on a bipartisan track has placed this bill at risk. Unless we negotiate with each other once again in good faith, I must say this bill will be vetoed.

If that happens, it would represent a serious failure on the part of this Senate.

More important, it would deprive American businesses, and the American people, of important tools and safeguards they need in this new global economy.

We appeal to our colleagues: Let's get this bill back on track. Let's adopt this alternative. Let's pass financial services modernization. This year. This week. We can do it. I hope we will.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Democrat leader for the effort he has made to get the Senate to this point. Obviously, when we have votes on contentious issues, ultimately Members come to the floor and vote. Somebody wins and somebody loses. I think on many of the votes we are going to have, neither of us knows what the outcome will be.

We are beginning a process that will go through conference. We have a bill in the House that is very different. I think we all want to write a bill that the White House can sign.

Yesterday, the President came out with six conditions for signing the bill, two of which your substitute does not comply with. Obviously, we are going to have to work with the White House on a continuing basis.

I want to assure you, Mr. Leader, I will also sit down, roll up my sleeves, and try to work. Maybe we can't solve these problems, but if it is possible to solve them, I want to do it.

I thank the Senator for his help.

Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas has 11 minutes, and the Senator from Maryland has 7 minutes 24 seconds.

Mr. GRAMM. I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of the Banking Committee. I thank him for the time. I also thank him for the leadership and direction and focus he has had on this issue and his willingness to talk to others about the issues.

I rise to oppose the substitute amendment offered by the ranking member of the Banking Committee. Most of the reasons for my opposition lie within the great expansion of the Community Reinvestment Act, or CRA.

For example, the amendment would allow the Federal banking agencies to take actions, including divestiture, forcing people to sell off parts of their business if an institution fails to maintain a satisfactory or better CRA rating. Currently, the enforcement action authorized for the banking agencies is the ability to deny the noncompliant banks' application to acquire another facility.

The substitute would expand the reach of CRA to noninsured institutions or wholesale financial institutions, and they don't even deal with consumers. Previously it had been argued that banks and thrifts convey an economic benefit as a result of deposit insurance, and thus the CRA is justifiably imposed on those institutions. But now, for the first time, this amendment would expand CRA to the non-FDIC-insured institutions.

It would allow a Federal banking agency to take enforcement action, such as the cease and desist order, civil monetary penalties, or even criminal sanctions, all for not complying with the CRA. That is an expansion. These penalties could even be extended to an officer or director of the holding company or bank.

In addition to extraordinary CRA expansion, I found several other problems with the substitute amendment. First, it reduces the authority of State insurance commissioners and creates the National Association of Registered Agents and Brokers, NARAB. The insurance agents in Wyoming oppose the NARAB provision because they believe it is the precursor to Federal regulation of insurance and Federal bureaucracy.

The substitute amendment also reduces the ability of the bank to engage in trust and fiduciary activities. On the other hand, S. 900 allows a bank to engage in traditional trust and fiduciary activities, just as they have done for so many years.

Additionally, it is apparent that there is not consensus in the substitute bill, and it differs from the product of last year. I voted for H.R. 10 last year. I will not vote for this substitute. It is not the same bill. The most significant difference lies in the operating subsidiary provisions. Last year, H.R. 10 only passed the House by one vote. Just last week the House Commerce Committee held a hearing on H.R. 10, which is nearly identical to the substitute amendment, and the Members on both sides of the aisle were very critical of the bill.

I strongly encourage my colleagues to oppose the substitute amendment. It does not represent a consensus, and it is certainly more burdensome and expansive on the affected industries. It is not the product of compromise.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas controls 7 minutes 37 seconds, and the Senator from Maryland has 7 minutes 24 seconds.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I rise in very strong support of the substitute amendment, which is the provisions contained in S. 753, introduced by Senator DASCHLE and all of the Democratic members of the Senate Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee.

We have been at this for a long time—those on the committee and other Members who have been interested in the issue of financial services modernization. We have been seeking to find a way to pass a bill to protect safety and soundness, to protect consumers, to ensure that CRA not be undercut or eroded; and that permits financial service institutions within the realm of financial services, in effect, to enter into new arrangements in terms of affiliations and the activities they can conduct.

This is something that has been urged on us. Those in the industry think it would be helpful to them. Some of this has been taking place without statute, but it is uncertain, unsure. It happens through regulation; it happens through court decision. I think most people think if we could arrive at a statutory framework in which to place these developments that that would be a desirable objective.

That is why we introduced S. 753. That is why we are offering it as a substitute amendment to the committee bill. It essentially tracks the language of the bill that was reported last year on a vote of 16–2 from the committee with one exception with respect to operating subsidiaries. This substitute permits banks to conduct some activities in an operating subsidiary—not all of the activities they can now engage in—and that reflects, in part, an effort by Secretary Rubin to try to reach an accommodation to ensure that some of the concerns that were raised are addressed.

There is a conflict, a difference of view here, a very strong difference of view here between Secretary Rubin and Chairman Greenspan, both of whom are saying to have a bill we have to have a good bill, and their definition of a good bill, each of them, is one that corresponds to their views, particularly on this important issue of the op-sub versus the affiliate, as far as carrying on activities.

In this regard, I point out as we listen to Secretary Rubin that we are also listening, of course, to the possibilities of a Presidential veto. We can't get a bill into law without the President's signature—that is obvious and clear—and the President has taken a very strong position on this legislation. In fact, he has sent a letter to the committee stating in the clearest possible terms that he would veto the committee bill if it was presented to him in its current form. That is when we began the markup in the committee. The committee has issued a statement of administration policy in which they say:

Nevertheless, because of crucial flaws in the bill, the President has stated that if the bill were presented to him in its current form, he would veto it.

We have had extended debate on the differences between the committee bill and the substitute amendment. Senator GRAMM and I and others are participating in that. I am frank to say I thought the minority leader, Senator DASCHLE, just laid out a very clear, concise, extremely well-stated position with respect to the differences between these approaches.

We differ in banking and commerce. The substitute seeks to, in effect, reaffirm, make clearer, the division between banking and commerce. We differ, as I indicated, with respect to the operating subsidiary issue, which of course involves the sharp difference between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the Federal Reserve. We differ very strongly on CRA. It is asserted that the substitute expands CRA. In fact, what the substitute seeks to do is to ensure that if banks move into securities and insurance, that those banks should have a satisfactory CRA rating before they can undertake such a merger or affiliation.

It requires the banks to be in compliance with CRA. It in effect says that a bank with an unsatisfactory CRA rating is not going to be able to use this additional power now being given to them to move into securities and to move into insurance. At the moment, they do a limited amount of that activity. But if they are going to actually go into it in a full-scale way, which is what this legislation offers—which both pieces of legislation offer to the banks, we do not differ on that proposition; both as a part of the financial services modernization approach are prepared to permit that—but we feel very strongly that they should be in compliance, the banks should be in compliance with CRA, if they intend to do that.

A number of very important groups in the community support the substitute. I will have printed in the RECORD letters from civil rights organizations—from Hispanic organizations, which have been very strong in perceiving that CRA has made a big, big difference in their community in terms of home ownership and in terms of investment, and that there has been very significant benefit for Native American organizations that report on what has happened on the Indian reservations, from farm and rural groups, and from over 200 mayors, all of whom prefer the substitute amendment.

I ask unanimous consent those letters be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE
ON CIVIL RIGHTS
Washington, DC, March 18, 1999.

Hon. PHIL GRAMM,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRAMM: We are writing to express our deep concern over your public mischaracterizations of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA), and over the treatment of CRA in the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of the Senate Banking Committee on March 4.

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights is the nation's oldest, largest, and most diverse coalition of organizations committed to the protection of civil rights in the United States. As leaders of the civil rights community, we take strong issue with your description of CRA as a vehicle for ''fraud and extortion''[1] and to your characterization of CRA as ''perhaps the greatest national scandal in America.''[2] To the contrary, we agree with President Clinton that the Community Reinvestment Act is ''a law that has helped to build homes, create jobs, and restore hope in communities across America.''[3]

CRA has proven to be an effective means of encouraging federally insured financial institutions to extend prudent and profitable loans in underserved urban and rural communities. CRA has been credited with the dramatic increase in homeownership rates among minority, and low- and moderate-income individuals. Since 1993, the number of home mortgage loans extended to African-Americans has increased by 58%, to Hispanics by 62%, and to low- and moderate-income borrowers by 38%.[4] CRA has similarly served as the impetus for revitalizing distressed rural and urban communities through small business and small farm lending and community development investments.

Data from federal bank regulators reveal that the CRA has not been used arbitrarily to block or delay bank applications to the regulators. Community groups and others rarely file adverse comments to bank applications based on CRA. Less than 1% of bank applications have received adverse comments.[5] Moreover, assertions that banks provide commitments to community groups and others because they are afraid that regulators will deny or substantially delay the processing of their application is not supported by the record. Bank applications that receive adverse comments are denied only 1% of the time.[6] In addition, few applications are substantially delayed due to an adverse CRA comment.

Despite the strong record of CRA success and the lack of evidence of abuse, the bill that was reported out of the Senate Banking Committee seriously weakens CRA in three ways. First, it does not require that all banks in a bank holding company have a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating to exercise the new powers provided by the legislation. This would substantially roll back CRA by permitting banks that are not meeting the credit needs of their communities to benefit from the expanded powers to affiliate with securities and insurance firms.

Second, the bill would provide a ''safe harbor'' from public comment on CRA performance for banks with a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating. Under the bill, an institution receiving at least a satisfactory CRA rating during the previous 36-month period would be deemed in compliance with CRA and immune from public comment unless individuals present ''substantial verifiable information'' to the contrary arising since the last examination. Since over 95% of banks receive a satisfactory rating, the provision would fundamentally undercut the right of community groups and others to comment on a bank's CRA performance.[7] Community group participation in the CRA process has been critical to the success of CRA. Public comment on other aspects of a bank's performance, such as management or financial resources, would not face similar limitations on the scope of information that may be introduced nor be subject to the same burden of proof.

Third, the bill exempts banks with less than $100 million in assets from CRA. This represents 63% of all banks.[8] If enacted the provision will have devastating consequences for rural communities because small banks are often the only source of credit in rural areas. Despite claims that small banks by their nature serve the credit needs of local communities, data from regulators reveal that these institutions have disproportionately poor CRA records.

We would note that the financial services bill reported out of the House Banking Committee last week on a bipartisan vote of 51–8 did not contain any of these shortcomings in regard to CRA. This is in sharp contrast to the 11–9 party line vote by which the Senate Banking Committee reported out its bill, in significant measure because of the controversial CRA provisions.

Fair access to credit, which is the purpose of CRA, is a critical civil rights issue. As the President has said, ''CRA is working, and we must preserve its vitality as we write the financial constitution for the 21st century.''[9] As reported out of the Senate Banking Committee, the Financial Services Act of 1999 would drastically weaken CRA. Unless this shortcoming is addressed, we would urge strong opposition to this legislation.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dorothy I. Height, Chairperson, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights; Barbara Arnwine, Executive Director, Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights Under Law; Andrew H. Mott, Executive Director, Center for Community Change; Wade Henderson, Executive Director, Leadership Conference on Civil Rights; Karen Narasaki, Executive Director, National Asian Pacific American Legal Consortium; JoAnn K. Chase, Executive Director, National Congress of American Indians.

Shanna L. Smith, Executive Director, National Fair Housing Alliance; Hugh B. Price, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Urban league; Hilary Shelton, Washington Bureau Director, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Raul Yzaguirre, President, National Council of La Raza; Manuel Mirabal, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Puerto Rican Coalition, Inc.

FOOTNOTES

[1] Congressional Record, September 30, 1998.
[2] Congressional Record, October 5, 1998.
[3] Letter from President Clinton to Senator Phil Gramm, March 2, 1999.
[4] Home Mortgage Disclosure Act data cited in Secretary Robert Rubin's letter to Senator Phil Gramm, February 23, 1999.
[5] Comptroller of the Currency, Office of Thrift Supervision, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and Federal Reserve Board.
[6] Id.
[7] Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council.
[8] Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.
[9] See supra note 3.

Footnotes at end of letter.

APRIL 8, 1999.

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
Senate Hart Office Building, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: The undersigned organizations write to express strong opposition to the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of the Senate Banking Committee on March 4th. The Act would restructure the financial services industry in the United States by allowing broad affiliations among banks, insurance companies, and security firms. Currently, the law strictly limits ownership among different financial entities and between financial companies and commercial corporations. The Act seeks to ease these restrictions, without commensurate expansion of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) to cover insurance companies, securities firms, mortgage companies, and other financial entities allowed to affiliate with banks. The Act would undermine one of the most effective revitalization vehicles for underserved low-income and minority communities, including Hispanic American communities across the country.

We have found, and research confirms, that all too often the credit and financial needs of these communities are severely underserved. Historically, many financial institutions have avoided investing in these communities due to their perceived higher level of risk. Unfortunately, ''perceived higher level of risk'' is often code for ''low-income'' or ''minority.'' But the facts show that low-income and minority communities are not inherently riskier than other communities. In fact, most financial institutions find them to be quite profitable, once they begin investing in them. Unfortunately, without the CRA, many financial institutions have not and would not be encouraged to do so.

As the data show, Hispanics are the fastest-growing population in the United States. We are a growing force in the expansion of homeownership and small business development, two leading indicators of the economic well-being of this country. For example, between 1987 and 1992, Hispanic-owned business grew by 76%, compared to 26% for U.S. businesses overall. According to a 1997 Harvard study, ''the number of Hispanic homeowners has shown the most spectacular rise'' in recent years compared to that of Whites and of other minority groups. Population projections forecast Hispanics to be the largest minority group in the U.S. by the year 2005, causing the U.S. economy to be increasingly dependent on the continued prosperity of the Hispanic American community. Without the CRA, this growth may be impeded.

As reported out of the Senate Banking Committee, the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 would hinder that growth by weakening the CRA in the following three ways. First, a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating is not required in order for financial institutions to enjoy the new powers afforded to them by the legislation, thereby allowing banks to exercise their privilege, even if they are not meeting the credit needs of the communities where they do business.

Second, banks receiving a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating would be given a ''safe harbor'' from public comment on CRA performance. Since over 95% of banks receive a ''satisfactory'' rating, this would undermine the effectiveness of the law by restricting a community's right to voice its experience with banks. While a ''satisfactory'' rating provides a helpful guide to a bank's overall performance, it may not provide an accurate picture at the neighborhood level.

Third, the Act proposes to exempt all small rural banks (those with less than $100 million in assets) from CRA, thereby releasing 76% of all rural banks from their CRA obligations. As with the safe harbor provision, this undermines the spirit and the effectiveness of the law by exempting most rural banks. This would have particularly adverse consequences in low-income rural communities where often the only source of credit is a small bank. Moreover, researchers have found that small banks have disproportionately poor CRA records compared to larger banks, thereby highlighting the need for CRA in rural communities and small towns.

CRA is one of the strongest incentives to encourage investment in low-income and minority communities. Over the last twenty-two years, neighborhoods across the country have benefited from CRA-encouraged investments. This has resulted in increases in homeownership and business development, leading to the rebirth of many American neighborhoods. However, many communities remain underserved by capital and investment vehicles. For this reason, reinforcement, not weakening, of CRA is critically needed. We urge you to support the continued strengthening of America's communities by vigorously opposing the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of Committee, and supporting amendments that would strengthen the Bill's CRA protections. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Rick Dovalina, National President, League of United Latin American Citizens; Arturo Vargas, Executive Director, NALEO Educational Fund; Ruth Pagani, Executive Director, National Hispanic Housing Council (NHHC); Juan Figueroa, President and General Counsel, Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund (PRLDEF); Antonia Hernandez, President and General Counsel; MALDEF; Raul Uzaguirre, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Council of La Raza (NCLR); Manual Mirabal, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Puerto Rican Coalition (NPRC).

---

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF AMERICAN INDIANS,
Washington, DC, April 14, 1999.

Hon. PHIL GRAMM,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRAMM: On behalf of the National Congress of American Indians (''NCAI''), we are writing to express our serious concern over the treatment of the Community Reinvestment Act (''CRA'') in the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999. NCAI is the oldest, largest and most representative national Indian organization devoted to promoting and protecting the rights of tribal governments and their citizens.

The CFA has proven to be an effective means of encouraging federally insured financial institutions to extend prudent and profitable loans in traditionally underserved areas including Indian Country. Specifically, the CRA has helped focus attention to the challenges of extending credit to reservations under current law and has acted as a catalyst to reservation based economic development. Since the implementation of the CRA, Native American groups and banks have negotiated agreements for lending more than $155 million within Indian Country.

In its current form, we believe the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 would seriously erode the effectiveness of the CRA, a law that has certainly helped to build homes, create jobs and restore hope in many of our communities. We are particularly concerned that the bill reported by your committee would exempt small rural banks from coverage by the CRA and would create a ''safe harbor'' under CRA for banks with satisfactory or better ratings thus making it much more difficult for the public to comment on problems with a bank's CRA performance in conjunction with an expansion application filed by a bank. We are also concerned that your bill does not require that all banks in a bank holding company have a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating to exercise the new powers provided by the legislation. This would substantially roll back the CRA by permitting banks that are not meeting the credit needs of communities to benefit from the expanded powers to affiliate with securities and insurance firms.

We strongly urge you to reconsider these provisions of the bill. As reported out of the Senate Banking Committee, the Financial Services Act of 1999 drastically weakens the CRA and unless this shortcoming is addressed, we would urge strong opposition to the legislation.

Sincerely,

W. RON ALLEN,
President.

(Also signed by 17 representatives of tribes and tribal organizations.)

---

THE UNITED STATES CONFERENCE OF MAYORS
Washington, DC, April 29, 1999.

DEAR SENATOR: The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) has played a critical role in encouraging federally insured financial institutions to invest in the cities of our country. Legislation reported out of the Senate Banking Committee on March 4, the Financial Modernization Act of 1999, would dramatically weaken CRA. We strongly urge you to oppose this legislation unless CRA is preserved and strengthened.

The United States Conference of Mayors is the nation's largest nonpartisan organization dedicated to ensuring the economic stability of the nation's largest cities. As mayors, we recognize that CRA has been an essential tool in revitalizing cities around this nation. In fact, there is now increasing recognition that the strength and economic health of whole regions require strong and vibrant cities. Creating new economic activity—new businesses, new jobs, new homeowners—is key to the revival of urban areas and their surrounding regions, CRA has been a key component to creating this new economic activity.

Private sector investment encouraged under CRA has helped to stabilize communities suffering from economic decline. CRA has similarly helped to spur bank and thrift investment in multi-family rental housing development and rehabilitation, small business expansion, and community economic development. CRA is a crucial complement to FHA Insurance, The HOME program, Community Development Block Grants, and the low-income housing tax credit. These programs, which have built or financed the purchase of millions of units of affordable rental and ownership homes, work so effectively because they leverage tens of millions of private dollars.

In light of the success of CRA and our experiences with community revitalization efforts, we are very troubled by allegations that have been made that CRA has ''since been corrupted into a system of legalized extortion.'' In contrast to the description of community based organizations as ''racketeers'' and ''thugs'' many of us have participated in successful partnerships with private institutions and members of the community. These relationships have resulted in a tremendous infusion of capital into underserved communities as well as increased banking services.

The bill that was reported out of the Senate Banking Committee would have dire consequences for the nation's cities if it were enacted. First, the failure to require that banks seeking to affiliate with securities and insurance firms have a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating would permit banks to ignore the credit needs of their communities and benefit from the powers provided in the legislation. This is a substantial rollback of CRA and would most certainly reduce the flow of capital in these areas—returning us to a time when banks and thrifts redlined communities with credit worthy borrowers.

In addition, the bill provides a ''safe harbor'' from public comment on CRA performance to banks with a ''satisfactory'' or better CRA rating. This provision effectively eliminates public comment on a bank's CRA performance. As you are undoubtedly aware, the opportunity to comment on a bank's performance is a right given to every member of the public. Public comment participation in the CRA process is considered a critical component of the law's success. The public often raises community investment issues which have been overlooked by regulators. This provision singles out CRA comments for unfair treatment. Unlike CRA comments, individuals seeking to comment on other aspects of a bank's performance would not face limitations on the scope of information that they may introduce or be required to carry a burden of proof. Moreover, data from regulators indicated that the comment process has not been abused.

Finally, the bill exempts small banks in rural areas (assets less than $100 million in assets) from CRA obligations. These institutions represent 76% of banks and thrifts in rural communities. This provision would seriously compromise the capital needs of rural residents who depend almost exclusively on small banks and thrifts to meet their credit needs. Residents in these communities rely on CRA to encourage banks to make mortgage, small farm, and small business loans.

Prior to the enactment of CRA, banks, and thrifts routinely redlined low- and moderate-income neighborhoods in our nation's cities. The modest requirement in CRA that financial institutions meet the credit needs of their communities has lead to the successful channeling of billions of dollars into localities.

As reported out of the Senate Banking Committee, the Financial Services Act of 1999 would severely weaken CRA and our nation's cities. Unless the onerous CRA provisions are addressed and CRA is preserved and strengthened, we would urge strong opposition to the Senate bill.

Sincerely,

Richard Arrington, Jr., Birmingham, AL
Patrick Henry Hays, North Little Rock, AR
Robert Mitchell, Casa Grande, AZ
Alex J. Harper, San Luis, AZ
Neil Giuliano, Tempe, AZ
George Miller, Tucson, AZ
Richard F. Archer, Sierra Vista, AZ
Marilyn R. Young, Yuma, AZ
Ralph Appezzato, Alameda, CA
Garry Fazzino, Palo Alto, CA
Mary Rocha, Antioch, CA
Shirley Dean, Berkeley, CA
Eunice M. Ulloa, Chino, CA
Judy Nadler, Santa Clara, CA
Chris Christiansen, Covina, CA
George Pettygrove, Fairfield, CA
Larry R. Green, Glendora, CA
Chris B. Silva, Indio, CA
Roosevelt F. Dorn, Inglewood, CA
Cathie Brown, Livermore, CA
Donald E. Lahr, Santa Maria, CA
David Smith, Newark, CA
William E. Cunningham, Redlands, CA
Willie L. Brown, Jr., San Francisco, CA
Harriett Miller, Santa Barbara, CA
Gary Podesto, Stockton, CA
Robert R. Nolan, Upland, CA
Wally Gregory, Visalia, CA
Robert Frie, Arvada, CO
Wellington E. Webb, Denver, CO
John DeStefano, Jr., New Haven, CT
Dannel P. Malloy, Stamford, CT
Anthony A. Williams, Washington, DC
Gerald Broening, Boynton Beach, FL
Alex Penelas, Miami-Dade County, FL
Mara Giulianti, Hollywood, FL
Ralph L. Fletcher, Lakeland, FL
Richard J. Kaplan, Lauderhill, FL
James F. Fielding, Port St. Lucie, FL
Alex G. Fekete, Pembroke Pines, FL
Joe Schreiber, Tamarac, FL
Bill Campbell, Atlanta, GA
Bob Young, Augusta, GA
Patsy Jo Hilliard, East Point, GA
Felix F. Ungacta, Hagatna, Guam
Stephen K. Yamashiro, Hawaii, HI
Lee R. Clancey, Cedar Rapids, IA
H. Brent Coles, Boise, ID
Gregory R. Anderson, Pocatello, ID
Neil Dillard, Carbondale, IL
Richard Daley, Chicago, IL
Jerry P. Genova, Calumet City, IL
Angelo A. Ciambrone, Chicago Heights, IL
Lydia Reid, Mansfield, IL
Stanley F. Leach, Moline, IL
Barbara Furlong, Oak Park, IL
R. David Tebben, Pekin, IL
Ross Ferraro, Carol Stream, IL
Stephen J. Luecke, South Bend, IN
Joseph R. Zickgraf, Columbia City, IN
James P. Perron, Elkhart, IN
Duane W. Dedelow, Jr., Hammond, IN
Paul W. Helmke, Fort Wayne, IN
Carol Marinovich, Kansas City, KS
David L. Armstrong, Louisville, KY
Waymond Morris, Owensboro, KY
Edward G. ''Ned'' Randolph, Jr., Alexandria, LA
Ruth Fontenot, New Iberia, LA
Walter Comeaux, Lafayette, LA
Marc Morial, New Orleans, LA
John Barrett, III, North Adams, MA
Nicholas J. Costello, Amesbury, MA
Thomas M. Menino, Boston, MA
David Ragucci, Everett, MA
Patrick J. McManus, Lynn, MA
Richard C. Howard, Malden, MA
Thomas V. Kane, Portland, ME
James L. Barker, Garden City, MI
Dennis Archer, Detroit, MI
Woodrow Stanley, Flint, MI
Aldo Vagnozzi, Farmington Hills, MI
Robert B. Jones, Kalamazoo, MI
David C. Hollister, Lansing, MI
Jack E. Kirksey, Livonia, MI
Linsey Porter, Highland Park, MI
Walter Moore, Pontiac, MI
Donald F. Fracassi, Southfield, MI
Sharon Sayles Belton, Minneapolis, MN
Chuck Canfield, Rochester, MN
Joseph L. Adams, University City, MO
Larry R. Stobbs, St. Joseph, MO
Harvey Johnson, Jr., Jackson, MS
Jack Lynch, Butte, MT
Patrick McCrory, Charlotte, NC
George W. Liles, Concord, NC
Jerry Ryan, Bellevue, NE
Ken Gnadt, Grand Island, NE
James Anzaldi, Clifton, NJ
Anthony, Russo, Hoboken, NJ
Sara B. Bost, Irvington, NJ
Margie Semler, Passaic, NJ
Albert McWilliams, Plainfield, NJ
Thalia C. Kay, Pemberton Township, NJ
Douglas Palmer, Trenton, NJ
Lavonne Bekler Johnson, Willingboro Township, NJ
Jan Laverty Jones, Las Vegas, NV
Sandra L. Frankel, Brighton, NY
Anthony M. Masiello, Buffalo, NY
James C. Galie, Niagara Falls, NY
William F. Glacken, Freeport, NY
James A. Garner, Hempstead, NY
Roy A. Bernardi, Syracuse, NY
Edward A. Hanna, Utica, NY
Ernest D. Davis, Mount Vernon, NY
Donald L. Plusquellic, Akron, OH
Richard D. Watkins, Canton, OH
Michael B. Keys, Elyria, OH
Paul Oyaski, Euclid, OH
Beryl E. Rothschild, University Heights, OH
William L. Pegues, Warrensville Heights, OH
Thomas J. Longo, Garfield Heights, OH
Debora A. Mallin, Bedford Heights, OH
Marilou W. Smith, Kettering, OH
David Berger, Lima, OH
Joseph F. Koziura, Lorain, OH
Cicil E. Powell, Lawton, OK
M. Susan Savage, Tulsa, OK
Bill Klammer, Lake Oswego, OR Vera Katz, Portland, OR
Donald T. Cunnigham, Jr., Bethlehem, PA
Timothy M. Fulkerson, New Castle, PA
Joyce A. Savocchio, Erie, PA
Stephen R. Reed, Harrisburg, PA
Ted LeBlanc, Norristown, PA
Edward Rendell, Philadelphia, PA
Charles H. Robertson, York, PA
William Miranda Marin, Caguas, PR
James E. Doyle, Pawtucket, RI
Vincent A. Cianci, Jr., Providence, RI
James E. Talley, Spartanburg, SC
Jon Kinsey, Chattanooga, TN
Kirk Watson, Austin, TX
David W. Moore, Beaumont, TX
Ronald Kirk, Dallas, TX
Jack Miller, Denton, TX
Mary Lib Saleh, Euless, TX
Charles Scoma, North Richland Hills, TX
Lee P. Brown, Houston, TX
Michael D. Morrison, Waco, TX
Kenneth Barr, Fort Worth, TX
Deedee Corradini, Salt Lake City, UT
William E. Ward, Chesapeake, VA
Paul D. Fraim, Norfolk, VA
Peter Clavelle, Burlington, VT
Mark Asmundson, Bellingham, WA
Lynn Horton, Bremerton, WA
Paul Schell, Seattle, WA
Paul F. Jadin, Green Bay, WI
John D. Medinger, La Crosse, WI
Susan J. Bauman, Madison, WI
Maricolette Walsh, Wauwatosa, WI
John Lipphardt, Wheeling, WV

---

APRIL 29, 1999.

FAMILY FARM AND RURAL ORGANIZATIONS SUPPORT COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT ACT: OPPOSE THE FINANCIAL SERVICES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999

DEAR SENATOR: As organizations working with and representing rural residents, we write to register our strong opposition to the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of the Senate Banking Committee in late March. We are very concerned that the bill substantially undercuts the existing Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and totally ignores the need to modernize CRA to meet the dramatic changes in financial services across the country.

Rural America remains in desperate need of affordable credit. CRA has been a law that has significantly expanded access to credit in rural areas of our country. Despite this increased access, there remain widening gaps and unmet needs in ensuring credit access to all rural residents. A recent Small Business Administration (SBA) report analyzing the June 1998 Federal Reserve Data shows a 4.6% decline in the number of small farm loans. The value of total farm loans was $74.5 billion. Of great concern is the statistic that reveals a troubling trend; the value of very large farm loans (over $1 million) increased by 25% while ''small'' farm loans (under $250,000) increased a mere 3.9%. Larger loans are going to fewer operations.

Rural areas continue to suffer from a serious shortage of affordable housing. Farmers are facing the worst financial conditions in more than a decade due to declining commodity prices. Rural Americans continue to need the tools of the CRA to ensure accountability of their local lending institutions. CRA helps to meet the credit demand of millions of family farmers, rural residents, and local businesses.

We strongly oppose three provisions in the Senate Banking Committee reported bill which would have particularly negative consequences for our communities.

First, the bill contains a ''safe harbor'' for banks that have achieved a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating in each of its examinations in the prior 36-month period. This provision would make banks and thrifts immune to public comment during pending expansion applications unless individuals or groups are able to provide ''substantial verifiable information'' that the bank is not in compliance with CRA. This provision would essentially eliminate the public's opportunity to comment on a bank's performance in meeting the credit needs of its communities. More than 95% of banks consistently receive 'satisfactory' or higher ratings. Rural residents play an important role in bringing CRA performance issues to the attention of regulators and making banks responsive to community needs. This provision would deny citizens and community based organizations the opportunity to comment on the credit needs of their community.

Two, the bill exempts from CRA banks and thrifts with less than $100 million in assets located in non-metropolitan areas. These institutions represent 76% of banks and thrifts in rural communities. This provision would seriously compromise the capital needs of rural residents who depend almost exclusively on small banks and thrifts to meet their credit needs. Banks and thrifts in rural areas face little competition from other financial services institutions.

In addition, despite assertions from the industry, many small banks do not by their nature serve the credit needs of their communities. In fact, data from the regulators show that small banks do not invest more in their communities, on average than larger banks. In addition, small banks have a disproportionately high share of less than satisfactory CRA ratings. A Congressional Research Service study of data from 1997 to mid-1998, found that banks with less than $100 million in assets received 70% of the below ''satisfactory'' CRA ratings.

In addition, arguments that CRA subjects small banks to intrusive and time consuming compliance requirements are unfounded. The CRA regulations were revised in 1995 in part to reduce compliance burdens on small banks. The new rules provide for a streamlined examination for banks with less than $250 million in assets including an exemption from data collection and reporting requirements. Small bank ratings now focus exclusively on lending and lending related activities. The need to reduce an already minimal regulatory burden on small banks should not outweigh the credit needs of residents of rural communities.

Third, unlike last year's H.R. 10 voted out of the Senate Banking Committee and this year's House Banking Committee version of financial modernization, the Senate Banking Committee reported bill fails to require that banks have a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating in order to affiliate with securities and insurance firms. In the absence of this requirement, a bank could ignore the credit needs of its communities and still benefit from the new affiliations and powers provided under this legislation.

The Small Business Administration (SBA) report on bank holding company lending in rural communities reaffirms this concern. While the 57 largest bank holding companies held 68.6 percent of all domestic bank assets in June 1998, they made just 10.7% or 160,000 of all the outstanding farm loans. These loans totaled just .18 percent of total assets in these bank holding companies. This increasing concentration and consolidation in financial services comes at a time when the community role in determining whether this expansion is appropriate is being reduced.

In closing, CRA has been a valuable tool for over twenty years to encourage financial institutions to help meet the credit needs of rural communities across this nation. Access to affordable capital is important to restoring economic prosperity in our nation's rural areas. In its current form, the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 permits banks to ignore the needs of our communities and remove one of the few tools that has resulted in a level of accountability. We urge you to vote against the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 unless these objections are addressed. Please contact (202) 543–5675 with any questions.

Sincerely,

American Corn Growers Association
Center for Rural Affairs
Federation of Southern Cooperatives
Intertribal Agriculture Council
Iowa Citizens for Community Improvement
Land Loss Prevention Project (NC)
Missouri Rural Crisis Center
National Black Caucus of State Legislators
National Catholic Rural Life Conference
National Family Farm Coalition
National Farmers Union
National Neighborhood Housing Network
National Rural Housing Coalition
North American Farm Alliance
Presbyterian Church (USA), Washington office
Rural Coalition
Sin Fronteras Organizing Project
United Methodist Church, General Board of Church and Society
Wisconsin Rural Development Center

Mr. SARBANES. Finally, let me simply say, as the Democratic leader indicated, unless we can get the substitute in place, we are on a veto track with S. 900. The substitute will eliminate the veto problem. So, for those who want legislation, who want to see financial services modernization enacted into law, I urge them to vote for the substitute.

I assume the chairman will probably make a motion to table.

Mr. GRAMM. I will.

Mr. SARBANES. Therefore, I urge Members to vote against the motion to table the substitute, thereby giving us the opportunity to then go forward and adopt the substitute.

I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, let me begin by noting that not one single organization which represents anyone who makes a living in any industry directly affected by this bill supports the Sarbanes substitute. The Sarbanes substitute is opposed by insurance companies, by those who represent the companies; it is opposed by the American Bankers Association, by the Bankers Roundtable, and by the Independent Bankers of America. It is opposed by every organization that represents any facet of the securities industry. This substitute is literally a substitute which has no support by anyone who is going to be directly affected by these laws.

What are the major problems with it? There are more problems than I can possibly outline in 6 minutes, so let me just take a couple of them. We all know Alan Greenspan. We know he is the most respected person in America on economic matters. We all know if there is anybody on this planet who can lay any legitimate claim to the current level of prosperity in America, it is Alan Greenspan, because of his banking and monetary policies.

We also know that Alan Greenspan is not someone who goes out looking for a fight. If he has to say something that anybody does not want to hear, he tends to go all around the barn before he says it. You need to know those things to understand how strongly Chairman Greenspan feels in his opposition to the Sarbanes substitute. In fact, he has said, ''I and my colleagues''—and by ''colleagues'' he means every member of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, most of whom were appointed by Bill Clinton—''are firmly of the view that the long-term stability of the U.S. financial markets and the interests of the American taxpayer would be better served by no financial modernization bill rather than one that allows the proposed new activities to be conducted by the bank. . ..''

Alan Greenspan says in the strongest way possible, in the most passionate terms that he has ever spoken on any issue in his public life: You would be better not to pass a bill than to pass the Sarbanes substitute.

Why? Because the Sarbanes substitute lets banks engage in these expanded financial services within the bank, thereby putting at risk the taxpayer through FDIC insurance. By performing these services in banks, they get an implicit subsidy from FDIC insurance, from the discount window, from the Federal wire, that will make banks able—not because they are more efficient, but because of this subsidy—ultimately able to dominate the securities industry and all other industries which would be affected. We would end up with a banking system that looks very much like the Japanese banking system, totally dominating our financial markets. Alan Greenspan is opposed to that. It is very dangerous for the American economy. It is dangerous for the taxpayer. I urge my colleagues to reject this substitute.

A second issue I want to talk about is CRA. The current bill preserves CRA. The current bill makes two modest changes. One, it says that if a bank has a long-term history of compliance—has been in compliance three years in a row and is currently in compliance—that if a protest group or individual wants to inject themselves into the process, they can do it. They can say whatever they want to say. But the regulator can't hold up the bank's action in the name of CRA, given their long history of compliance and given that they are currently in compliance, unless the protester has more than a scintilla of evidence; unless the protester can present such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support the claim; unless the protester has real, material—not seeming or imaginary—evidence. In other words, if you are going to stop a bank from doing something that it has been found qualified to do, you have to present some evidence—hardly, a demanding constraint.

Second, we exempt very small rural banks from CRA. Why? We exempt very small rural banks from CRA for a very simple reason:

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Sarbanes substitute amendment to the Financial Services Modernization Act. I salute him for his leadership in seeking financial services reform that prepares us for the new century.

I agree that we should reform our financial services. There is no doubt that changes in law have lagged behind changes in our banking and financial services industries.

This amendment is a great improvement over the underlying bill. It would provide greater protections for consumers. It would also maintain the Community Reinvestment Act—which is so important in enabling low income communities to help themselves.

However, I would like to raise a number of what I call ''flashing yellow lights'' or warning signals that we should be aware of before enacting financial services modernization. We should proceed with caution to avoid irrevocable changes when the savings of hard working families and the viability of our communities could be put in jeopardy.

For example, financial services reform would make it easier for banks, securities firms and insurance companies to merge into oligopolies. The savings of many would be controlled by a few. Americans will know less about where their deposits are kept and how they are used.

What would be the effect of these mergers on consumers? I am concerned that these mega institutions could lead to higher fees and fewer choices for consumers.

Marylanders used to have savings accounts with local banks where the teller knew their name and their family. We have already seen the trend toward mega-mergers, accompanied by higher fees, a decline in service, and the loss of neighborhood financial institutions. This legislation accelerates that trend.

In addition, what would be the affect of this legislation on the alarming increase in foreign takeovers of US banks? I support increased globalization, but what will happen when home town banks are taken over by companies that have no roots or commitments to the community?

With a globalization of financial resources, the local bank could be bought by a holding company based outside the United States. Instead of the friendly neighborhood teller, consumers would be contacting a computer operator in a country half-way around the globe through an 800 number. Their account could be subject to risks that have nothing to do with their job, their community or even the economy of the United States. I know that impersonalized globalization is not what banking customers want when they talk about modernization of financial services.

So I will support the Sarbanes amendment. It goes further in answering my concerns. But I hope we will be able to address these concerns more fully as we move forward with this legislation. they generally do not have a city to serve, much less an inner city.

Third, in the last 9 years, Federal regulators have performed 16,380 CRA evaluations of these banks—evaluating them annually. These banks report that it costs them between $60,000 and $80,000 a year to comply with CRA. Yet, at the end of 9 years and 16,380 evaluations, just three small rural banks have been found to be substantially out of compliance. One million—excuse me, one trillion. Excuse me, let me be sure I have my figure here. At the end of this process, with small banks having spent perhaps $1,310,400,000,000 complying with paperwork in the name of evaluating community lending, we have found just three banks out of compliance. Not only does the substitute eliminate this provision that ends this senseless wasting of small bank resources that cost local communities and deny them access to credit, but it imposes confiscatory penalties that would make a bank, if it fell out of compliance with CRA, potentially subject to a $1 million fine, not just on the bank but on the bank officer or on the bank director.

We have two letters here, one from the Independent Bankers and one from the ABA, raising the point that one of the toughest things to do now in this period of massive lawsuit liability is to get good people to serve on a bank board. Both the Independent Bankers of America and the ABA have written urging us not to adopt a provision that would make it virtually impossible for small banks, especially, to get qualified officers and board members because of the liability costs. I urge my colleagues to reject this substitute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12 noon having arrived, the Senator from Texas is recognized to make a motion to table.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I ask for 1 minute so I can pose a question to the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I want 1 minute to respond.

Mr. SARBANES. How does the Senator get this $1 trillion figure?

Mr. GRAMM. We have had 16,380 examinations of small, rural institutions since 1990. Those small, rural institutions report to us that it costs them about $80,000 a year to keep the records to comply with these examinations, and that is where the number came from.

Mr. SARBANES. My arithmetic—first of all, I do not concede the figures. In any event, even if I accept them, it is 1 billion, not 1 trillion.

Mr. GRAMM. If it is a billion or a trillion, it is a lot of money.

Mr. SARBANES. A lot of money, but there is a big difference between a billion and a trillion. That is one of the problems with this debate, I underscore.

Mr. GRAMM. I have my trusty calculator, and I will make the calculation again. But lest my colleague be correct, let me just restate it in his terms. The term is, does it make sense to make little banks spend $1.3 billion to comply with keeping paperwork when in 9 years, only three banks out of 16,000 audits have been substantially out of compliance? Is that not overkill? Is that not bankrupting every small bank in America? The answer is yes.

Mr. GRAMM. I move to table the pending substitute, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN), is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU), is absent attending a funeral.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU), would vote ''no.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURNS). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 54, nays 43, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 100 Leg.]

YEAS—54

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Abraham | Frist | McConnell |
| Allard | Gorton | Murkowski |
| Ashcroft | Gramm | Nickles |
| Bennett | Grams | Roberts |
| Bond | Grassley | Roth |
| Brownback | Gregg | Santorum |
| Bunning | Hagel | Sessions |
| Burns | Hatch | Shelby |
| Campbell | Helms | Smith (NH) |
| Chafee | Hutchinson | Smith (OR) |
| Cochran | Hutchison | Snowe |
| Collins | Inhofe | Specter |
| Coverdell | Jeffords | Stevens |
| Craig | Kyl | Thomas |
| Crapo | Lott | Thompson |
| DeWine | Lugar | Thurmond |
| Domenici | Mack | Voinovich |
| Enzi | McCain | Warner |

NAYS—43

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Akaka | Feingold | Lincoln |
| Baucus | Feinstein | Mikulski |
| Bayh | Graham | Moynihan |
| Biden | Harkin | Murray |
| Bingaman | Hollings | Reed |
| Boxer | Inouye | Reid |
| Breaux | Johnson | Robb |
| Bryan | Kennedy | Rockefeller |
| Byrd | Kerrey | Sarbanes |
| Cleland | Kerry | Schumer |
| Conrad | Kohl | Torricelli |
| Daschle | Lautenberg | Wellstone |
| Dodd | Leahy | Wyden |
| Durbin | Levin | |
| Edwards | Lieberman | |

ANSWERED ''PRESENT''—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING—2

| | |
|---|---|
| Dorgan | Landrieu |

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that notwithstanding the agreement of May 4, Senator SARBANES now be recognized to offer a CRA amendment with all other provisions of the previous consent agreement still intact.

I further ask that a vote occur in relation to the CRA amendment at 7 p.m. tonight, and if debate has been completed prior to that time, the amendment may be laid aside in order for Senator GRAMM, or his designee, to offer an additional amendment.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I think the agreement should be ''or a designee,'' and Senator BRYAN is going to offer the amendment.

Mr. LOTT. I modify it to say Senator SARBANES or his designee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, for the information of all Senators, Members should be aware that votes will occur today on the CRA issue and possibly other banking issues. If debate is completed before the 7 o'clock hour, there are other amendments that could be considered. There will certainly be one at 7 o'clock on this CRA issue.

If the Senate is able to complete this banking bill by the close of business on Thursday, then I would be prepared to announce at that time that there would be no votes on Friday. So if we can get this work completed—and it looks as if we may be able to; the managers are working together. And we have a couple of issues that will have to be debated and considered carefully, plus there are other amendments that won't take as long to be debated. This could be completed by Thursday night. If that is the case, we will not have any votes on Friday. If we are not able to finish it Thursday night, we may have to go over until Friday and complete it. I wanted Members to be aware of that possibility.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 303

(Purpose: To make amendments relating to the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977, and for other purposes)

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN], for himself, Mr. DODD, and Mr. KERRY, proposes an amendment numbered 303.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 14, strike lines 8 and 9 and insert the following: ''are well managed;

''(C) all of the insured depository institution subsidiaries of the bank holding company have achieved a rating of 'satisfactory record of meeting community credit needs', or better, at the most recent examination of each such institution under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977; and

''(D) the bank holding company has filed''.

On page 14, line 20, strike ''and (B)'' and insert '', (B), and (C)''.

On page 18, between lines 4 and 5, insert the following:

''(5) LIMITATION.—A bank holding company shall not be required to divest any company held, or terminate any activity conducted pursuant to, subsection (k) solely because of a failure to comply with subsection (l)(1)(C).

On page 66, strike lines 7 and 8 and insert the following: ''bank is well capitalized and well managed;

''(E) each insured depository institution affiliate of the national bank has achieved a rating of 'satisfactory record of meeting community credit needs', or better, at the most recent examination of each such institution under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977; and

''(F) the national bank has received the''.

On page 66, line 12, strike ''subparagraph (D)'' and insert ''subparagraphs (D) and (E)''.

On page 66, line 16, insert before the period '', except that the Comptroller may not require a national bank to divest control of or otherwise terminate affiliation with a financial subsidiary based on noncompliance with paragraph (1)(E)''.

On page 96, strike line 23 and all that follows through page 98, line 4.

On page 104, strike line 20 and all that follows through page 105, line 14.

Redesignate sections 304 through 307 and sections 309 through 311 as sections 303 through 309, respectively.

Amend the table of contents accordingly.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, we are about ready to debate an important issue dealing with the Community Reinvestment Act. Let me say that I think there has been considerably more heat than light generated in the debate surrounding this issue. I thought it might be helpful to my colleagues to explain how the provisions of this act work, what is involved, what is not involved, the provisions that currently exist in the bill we are debating, and the contents of the amendment.

The Community Reinvestment Act has been in operation now for 21 years. The act itself is triggered in either of two circumstances—one, as part of a periodic review, and that depends upon the size of the institution. It applies only to insured depository institutions, so we are talking about banks and thrifts. It also is triggered when a depository institution files an application for a charter conversion, for merger, acquisition, or requesting authority for additional branches.

Those applications, then, are reviewed by the appropriate bank regulator, or the thrift regulator, whether that be the OCC, the Federal Reserve, or the OTC. Notice is then given, and the community groups have an opportunity to comment on the application. So you have a periodic review, which may be annually or a longer period of time, or you have the circumstances in which an insured depository institution seeks either a charter conversion, a merger, an acquisition, or additional branches.

Notice is given. Now, 97 percent of all depository institutions—banks or thrifts—get a satisfactory CRA rating. The penalties that can be provided are that, No. 1, an application could be denied, an application could be accepted subject to certain conditions, or the application can be approved without conditions. I think it is important to understand who is making the decision here. It is not the community groups that have a veto power. These are decisions that are essentially made by bank regulators—regulators that have traditionally evinced no hostility to the banking industry. And even an institution which gets the lowest rating—substantial noncompliance is the lowest rating you can get—may still have its application approved. So nothing in the language of CRA compels a regulator to disapprove an application, even if the financial institution that is applying for the relief sought gets the lowest evaluation possible.

What is the history in the last 21 years of the act? There have been some 86,000 applications filed over the last 21 years and, of those, only 660 have received adverse comments. So less than 1 percent of all of the applications relating to CRA that have been received have been subject to objections or adverse comments by any of the regulating groups over a period of 21 years.

What has CRA accomplished? Well, it has accomplished a great deal. In point of fact, the CRA, over the years, has resulted in a substantial increase in lending and other financial activity within the inner-city and minority groups in America. CRA encourages banks to meet the credit needs of the entire community, including low- and moderate-income areas.

Over the last 21 years, the CRA has been one of the strongest incentives to encourage investment in low-income and minority communities.

Under the law, federally insured financial institutions have made billions of dollars in profitable market rate loans and investments in underserved urban and rural areas. And it has done so without creating a large Federal bureaucracy, or jeopardizing the safety and soundness of any financial institution.

CRA has been an important tool in improving access to credit for minority and low- to moderate-income Americans.

The dramatic increase in home ownership rates for minorities is attributable in large part to increased focus on banks' CRA performance. Between 1993 and 1997, the number of conventional home mortgage loans extended increased for African Americans by 72 percent; for Hispanics, 45 percent; for Asian Americans, 31 percent; for Native Americans, 30 percent; for low- and moderate-income census tracks by 45 percent.

Small business owners in low- and moderate-income communities have seen a substantial increase in their access to credit under the law.

Under the emphasis of CRA, banks have made loans to African Americans, Native Americans, Hispanic and Asian Americans, and, according to the Small Business Administration, loans to African-American-owned firms increased by 145 percent between 1992 and 1997. In 1997 alone, banks made more than $34 billion in loans to entrepreneurs located in low- and moderate-income areas.

These loans have financed businesses which have been critical to revitalizing the distressed communities.

Mr. President, it seems to me that has a desirable result for every mayor of every major community in America struggling to revitalize the inner core of his or her State. That is the experience in my own State. That is the experience, I suggest, of every State.

As a result of CRA, we are seeing more money being invested and loaned in inner cities with minority businesses.

That, it seems to me, makes sense, and good public policy.

Who, then, objects to CRA?

We are dealing with a piece of legislation that will substantially transform the way in which modern financial institutions will be regulated—banking, securities and insurance.

Mr. President, those groups are in support of CRA, and they are in support of the amendment which I have offered.

Indeed, in the last session of the Congress, H.R. 10, which contains CRA provisions virtually identical to the ones that are contained in the Bryan amendment, were passed by the House of Representatives, and emerged from a Senate Banking Committee by a vote of 16 to 2—broad bipartisan support.

In this Congress, the financial institution restructuring bill that is making its way through the other body was approved by a vote of 51 to 8—51 to 8—and the CRA provisions contained in that piece of legislation are essentially identical to the provisions that the Bryan amendment addresses.

Banks are supportive, the insurance industry is supportive, and the securities industry—the major players are supportive. Moreover, banks have found not only that it is good public policy, but it makes sense financially.

The National Association of Home Builders, which has participated in an enormous growth in the rate of new housing starts, and has seen a remarkable increase in the percentage of home ownership in America, has this to say about CRA.

The National Association of Home Builders:

Therefore, the NAHB, the National Association of Home Builders, supports any amendments offered to remove or replace the provisions in S. 900—

That is the bill that we are debating—that deals with a much more restrictive and a roll-back provision of CRA.

The Home Builders go on to say:

While the CRA may not be the perfect solution to ensuring housing credit is available to all communities, financial institutions of all sizes, through their compliance with CRA, have provided crucial community development loans and affordable housing production loans that have benefited millions of people across the United States. We see no public good served by a weakening or a reduction in the CRA requirements.

I will explain shortly how S. 900, the bill before us, would substantially weaken the CRA provisions, and the position taken by the Home Builders, and others, is to support the amendment which is presently before the body.

Mr. President, the distinguished chairman of the committee and I have a difference of opinion. And he will have an opportunity, I am sure, to articulate his point of view. The chairman—it is entirely appropriate for him to do so—sent out letters to various groups to get their comments.

A letter from a small banker dated March 26 of this year responds to that—a copy of which was made available to those of us who serve on the committee—a letter addressed to:

Dear Senator Gramm: I received a copy of your letter to Scott Jones—

Mr. Jones is the President of the American Banking Association—regarding the proposed exemption from CRA requirements for small banks. While I appreciate your efforts on our behalf, I have to say that this exemption ''Don't mean jack to me.''

That is a quote. That is his language.

We have two bank charters, and have always received an outstanding rating. The burden is not onerous, especially under the revised requirements now in effect for the past two or three years. The information I gather to determine in-area versus out-of-area loans is useful to me outside of the CRA requirements. I probably spend less than 5 hours a year on the issue. I don't think it is worth squandering any political capital you have to eliminate the CRA.

That is the essential text of the letter that our distinguished chairman received. That small banker made reference to some provisions in CRA that were changed in 1996.

Mr. President, recognizing that a small bank has a much smaller staff to deal with compliance issues, substantial changes were made in the CRA requirements for small banks. Essentially, we are talking about institutions under $250 million.

No. 1, with respect to CRA, those small banks have no CRA reporting requirements.

Let me reemphasize that. They have no CRA reporting requirements.

And the standards which are applied to larger banks that are involved in a lending, a service, and an investment criteria are not applicable to small banks. Indeed, small banks do not have to compile any data. They don't have to submit any reports.

They have to have records available so that when the bank examiner comes in pursuant to this periodic request, or if a small bank requests some activity which triggers the application of CRA, they simply say to the bank examiner, ''Our records are contained in the file cabinet over there.'' There is no reporting requirement and no affirmative burden on their part other than to have the records which, as the small banker who wrote the letter to our distinguished chairman pointed out, a bank would want to have for itself independent and separate and apart from the CRA requirements.

So, indeed, there has been an acknowledgment and an attempt to streamline the requirements that small bankers are subject to. And that has been acknowledged by the correspondent who wrote to our distinguished chairman.

What do we have in the current bill? The current bill does a couple of things which, in my view, roll back the provisions of CRA.

It says, in effect, that if a financial institution has a CRA rating of satisfactory or above for a period of 36 months, 3 years, it would be deemed in compliance for purposes of CRA, and for any one of the applications for either a merger, an acquisition, or grant of extension, there would be no opportunity for community groups to comment.

That would roll back the provisions.

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRYAN. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. GRAMM. I know the Senator, and I know he would not want to state something that is incorrect. I will be brief.

The amendment says if a bank has a long history of compliance, they have been in compliance for 3 years in a row, they are currently in compliance, in order for the regulator to prevent them from taking the action that they are allowed to take by being in compliance, that a person who protests has to present some substantial evidence.

''Substantial evidence'' is defined in the law as more than a scintilla. It does not in any way say they are deemed to be in compliance, other than that they are innocent until proven guilty if they have a good record. Anybody can protest, anybody can file a complaint, but the regulator can't stop the process or delay it unless the challenging party presents some ''substantial evidence.''

This isn't for everybody. It is only for the banks that have a long history of compliance.

I didn't want to have any confusion. That is exactly what it says.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. BRYAN. I thank the chairman.

The chairman states correctly the contents of the bill. However, let me say in response to the Senator's position, we have in effect a 97-percent compliance rate. Mr. President, 97 percent of the financial institutions in the country receive satisfactory or better. In the entire history of the Community Reinvestment Act, with some 86,000 applications, we have had fewer than 1 percent of those protested in any way.

In terms of balance, to give community groups an opportunity not only to comment but to register concerns, it strikes me that the Senator's provisions impose limitations that do not currently exist in the law. I know the able chairman well understands, even if there were a finding under current law that the particular financial institution has the lowest possible rating—substantial noncompliance—that does not preclude the bank regulator from approving the application.

CRA is not an onerous burden. Under the current law, which would remain in place with the Bryan amendment, a bank that seeks a merger approval or charter provision change or a new branch, even if that bank had a substantial noncompliance, the lowest rating possible in the CRA, under the law, nothing precludes the bank regulator from approving that application.

I understand the concern of the Senator from Texas in terms of balancing the equities here. It strikes me that we ought not to put that additional burden of proof on community groups who may want to file some legitimate concerns they have about a proposed merger, acquisition, or a branch extension.

I think the record reflects, of 86,000 applications, we have had fewer than 1 percent, 660, that have availed themselves of this. I respectfully submit, in response to the comments of my friend from Texas, that is not, in my judgment, unduly burdensome.

The Senator also provides in his version of S. 900 a small bank exemption. The effect of that would be to eliminate about 37 percent of all of the banks in the country from the current provisions of CRA. Again, I think it is a balance. It is not the purpose of the Senator from Nevada nor of those who support the Bryan amendment to want to impose an onerous, unreasonable, unfair burden upon a financial institution. However, I must say, I think the track record would indicate that is not the case.

Responding to a legitimate concern of small banks, as I pointed out, in 1996 the rules were changed so that small banks do not have a reporting requirement. All they must do is maintain records so that the bank examiner who comes in periodically to review, or whenever the application is filed that triggers the CRA review to look at the records, can make sure in effect that the bank is lending in the community. It strikes me that is good public policy. Indeed, banks have profited from that activity.

Those are the two provisions that the Senator's version of S. 900 would contain. Also, it would eliminate CRA from the new activities which would be permitted under the provisions of this law.

The thrust of this legislation is to provide a regulatory framework that deals with the reality of the marketplace. Many of those who do not serve on the Banking Committee have heard Glass-Steagall mentioned frequently in the course of financial modernization discussions. This is a Depression-era piece of legislation. I like it. It neatly compartmentalizes banking regulation, insurance regulation, and security regulation. It makes a lot of sense. In the aftermath of the financial collapse of the 1920s and the Great Depression that followed, a number of abuses were pointed out. This legislation was in response to those abuses. It served the Nation effectively for many decades.

As a result of court decisions and actions taken by bank regulators, today much of Glass-Steagall has been effectively emasculated and the marketplace is dictating new products that involve combinations of insurance, securities, and banking functions. I agree with the distinguished chairman that we need a piece of legislation which effectively deals with that. In effect, what we are doing is establishing that modern framework. We have established essentially a system of functional regulation.

It appears from the testimony we have received from the Banking Committee and others who have offered comment that the new financial world will deal not so much in terms of mergers and acquisitions but will seek to avail itself of the new financial services that banks will be able to participate in under the provisions of S. 900, the financial restructuring bill we are debating. Those services involve, essentially, securities and insurance functions.

This is testimony offered before the House Banking Committee by Treasury Secretary Rubin. I think he makes a point far more effectively than I.

> Banking industry experts agree that most of the consolidations within the banking community have occurred and that the new frontier will involve mergers among banks, securities and insurance firms.

As a side point, that is the kind of activity which the S. 900 restructuring bill will authorize.

According to Treasury Secretary Rubin, if we wish to preserve the relevance of CRA at a time when the relative importance of bank mergers may decline and the establishment of nonbank financial services will become increasingly important, the authority to engage in newly authorized activities should be connected to a satisfactory CRA rating.

That is the philosophical underpinning. We will be dealing with a new world, a new financial structure, and that, we believe, is appropriate in light of the changes in market conditions.

What are the requirements that would be imposed upon a depository institution under the provisions of this amendment which would seek to avail itself of these new activities—insurance and securities? No. 1, as a condition precedent, a depository institution would have to have a satisfactory rating. That is not, it seems to me, an unreasonable provision.

What kind of action must the regulator consider? If the institution has a satisfactory CRA rating and all other regulatory issues nonrelated to CRA are in place, that application could be approved, it could be subjected to certain conditions, or it could be denied. An agreement could be entered into between the financial institution and the regulator if, indeed, there were some concerns about maintaining the CRA, and the regulator would have the ability to do several things if there were a noncompliance with the agreement entered into.

On balance, what we are talking about is preserving the relevance of CRA in this new financial world we are talking about that will deal with mergers and acquisitions involving brokerage and insurance type of services which are not currently authorized under the regulatory framework.

So I think, just by way of concluding, what we are talking about is not a bold or reckless expansion of CRA. We are really talking about, No. 1, maintaining the status quo with respect to CRA and its traditional functions as it deals with the mergers and the acquisition and charter changes and the new branch request, which is the current part of the law. And we are simply saying, with respect to these new services, these new opportunities which financial institutions will be allowed to participate in, which as Secretary Rubin points out is where the action is going to be, that is where the field of play is. To say that with respect to those new activities no CRA would be applicable, no requirement would be in place, is, in effect, to roll back the application of CRA to the range of financial services that banks are currently allowed to participate in.

In my judgment, this is a reasonable and fair amendment. Bankers support it. Securities firms support it. Insurance companies support it. It enjoys a broad range of support.

Let me emphasize to my colleagues that, unlike some issues which have tended to divide us in terms of partisan differences, the House of Representatives, in considering banking legislation and financial restructuring—the same type of legislation we are debating here today—in a vote of 51 to 8 approved CRA provisions which essentially track the Bryan amendment. In the last Congress, when we came within a gnat's eyelash of getting financial restructuring legislation enacted, it was approved by a bipartisan majority in the House and it cleared the Senate Banking Committee on a vote of 16 to 2.

So this should not be, and I hope it will not be, a partisan vote.

In the 21 years that CRA has been around, 86,000 applications have been received that were triggered by the provisions of the existing law. And in fewer than 1 percent—fewer than 1 percent—have objections or adverse comments been made.

I think the amendment is fair. It strikes a middle ground. It acknowledges the concerns of small banks with the changes that were made in 1996. I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will support this legislation.

I see the Senator from Maryland——

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BRYAN. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. First of all, I commend the able Senator from Nevada for an extremely fine statement in support of this amendment which I very strongly back.

The Senator made reference—I think it is an extremely important point—to the fact that the decisions with respect to complying with CRA are made by the regulators. As I understand it, community groups or anyone else can come in and make comments when some of these steps are to be taken for which an institution would have to meet CRA muster, and some of those comments, I assume, can be right on point, others may wander about. But whatever the case, it is not the people who comment who make the judgment; it is the regulators who make the judgment. So they can take it into account, give it some weight, give it no weight—isn't that correct?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator from Maryland is absolutely correct. It is the regulators, whether it is the OTS, or Federal Reserve, or the OCC.

As the Senator from Maryland knows, because of his longstanding membership on the committee, much can be said about bank regulators. I do not believe anybody would indicate or suggest the record would indicate that there is a hostility by the regulators to the institutions they regulate. In effect, the regulators have the opportunity to consider the CRA issues presented among a range of other issues—capital adequacy, a whole host of things that may be unrelated.

As the Senator from Maryland knows—and I think this is something that needs to be pointed out—even if the institution which has the application has the lowest possible rating—substantial noncompliance, which, in effect, means they have done virtually nothing—the regulator can still approve the application. They can still approve it. So there is no requirement under the existing law with respect to the kinds of mergers, acquisitions, charter changes, and branch expansions that requires a financial institution to even have a satisfactory rate.

So this is hardly an onerous provision, I say to my friend from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator from Texas interrupted the Senator to make the point on this ''comments'' question, the safe harbor issue, that if we previously had a satisfactory rating or better, they could not take into account people's comments, unless they had substantial, verifying information, and then we are being told that a lot of cases were read that indicated that ''substantial'' means a scintilla of evidence.

The Senator was a distinguished attorney general for the State of Nevada for a number of years before he became the Governor. Wouldn't he read the phrase ''substantial, verifiable information'' as a more exacting standard than ''scintilla'' of evidence?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator from Maryland makes a good point. I think any fair reading, in terms of the standards of proof, is that a ''substantial'' standard is much higher than a scintilla.

In effect, what this provision would do is raise the bar substantially, I say to my friend from Maryland, for community investment groups being able to, in effect, make their case for the consideration—the consideration of the regulator.

I come back to the point. Even if they make their case that, indeed, the bank has not been responsible, has not done what it ought to do under CRA, the regulator may disregard that and still grant that approval. So it strikes me that by posing a standard before they even get into the ball game of ''substantial,'' you indeed cut off access to much of the input the community groups ought to have before a regulator makes a decision.

Mr. SARBANES. It is interesting. The current system I think is seen by most people as working fairly well. In fact, many fine financial institutions do not complain about it. They are prepared to continue to work under the current system, and many of them have even said they see strong positive value in it. So it seems to me this is an effort to institute an important change that would really cut off open comment.

You see, none of this is done, as I understand it, in the committee bill with respect to management or capital or any of the other issues the regulators look at when they undertake to consider one of these mergers or affiliations. It is being applied only to CRA. I mean CRA is being singled out for the application of this kind of prescreening, as it were, of people's ability to come in and make their comments.

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator makes a good point. That is absolutely correct. As the Senator knows, as a practical matter, although CRA is triggered generically in two circumstances—one, part of a periodic review; the other, when applications are made for charter changes or new branches or mergers or acquisitions—as a practical matter, the only opportunity community groups have is in this application process which the Senator has described.

That is the only opportunity. So if you foreclose them by a standard that is unreasonable and difficult to meet, you have, for all intents and purposes, foreclosed community groups from registering any effective concerns that they have.

Mr. SARBANES. I think that is an extremely important point. The chairman has said they have court opinions. I have not seen these cases that interpret ''substantial'' to mean ''a scintilla of evidence.''

Mr. GRAMM. More than a scintilla.

Mr. SARBANES. The chairman corrects me and says ''more than a scintilla.'' I don't know how much more, but more than a scintilla.

In any event, isn't it the case that no full hearings have been held on CRA? We come to the floor, and we get all of these assertions about abuses of one sort or another, sort of radical changes in a program that is seen as having been the lifeblood, enabling communities to renew themselves. To my knowledge, we have not had within the committee any sort of comprehensive hearings to examine those questions; is that the Senator's understanding?

Mr. BRYAN. That is the understanding of the Senator from Nevada, we have had no hearings at all.

I must tell the Senator from Maryland that the financial institutions in my State are supportive of CRA. If we want to take anecdotal evidence, I have to say financial institutions in my State have indicated, one, it is good public policy, and, two, they have financially benefited. But there is no record before us, based upon any hearings or testimony—and I must say I think that there is opportunity for hearings to be held. When we are dealing with some other regulatory relief issues in the Banking Committee, that might be an appropriate time to bring people in so we can build a record.

My understanding is that we have had nothing to that effect and, indeed, this Senator has been on the committee now for 11 years. Financial institutions in my own State are very supportive of the provisions.

Mr. SARBANES. Isn't it also the case, I ask the Senator, that in the mid-1990s, when a number of banks were complaining about the regulatory burden associated with CRA, Secretary Rubin undertook a major effort to address the question of regulatory burden and made very substantial changes in the requirements, which were greeted by the various banking associations at the time as being very forthcoming in dealing with this question of overregulation?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator from Maryland is correct. Recognizing that small banks are in a different situation than larger banks in terms of staff capability, the Secretary did precisely that. In January 1996, these new provisions went into effect, and they are appropriate, in my judgment, and they are dramatic.

No small bank under the size of $250 million has to report CRA. There is no reporting requirement for CRA that is incumbent upon a small bank, as defined in the provisions.

The responsibility of the small bank is simply to make available to the bank examiner, when he or she comes in periodically or when the examiner is reviewing the records for an application, the fact that the bank is serving the community.

Moreover, the standards which are required for a larger bank dealing with a lending standard, a service standard and investment standard are inapplicable to small banks.

In trying to balance the inequities here, as I know the distinguished Senator from Maryland is interested in doing and all of us share in a very bipartisan way, dealing with the very special concerns of small banks has been addressed, we have eliminated the reporting requirement and have simply said, if I might respond to my friend from Maryland, that when the bank examiner comes in, the only obligation on the part of the financial institution is to direct the bank examiner to the file drawer and say, ''Those are our records.'' The bank examiner examines those records, and that is the burden that is imposed.

I must say, in terms of the balance, as the Senator from Maryland knows, coming from a State which has major metropolitan areas that fight urban decay, as does every major community in America, CRA is one of the most effective redevelopment tools for the inner cities in America that we have. It has poured hundreds of millions of dollars of new investments into the inner cities. That benefits not just the inner cities, but that benefits all of us.

The tragedy that occurred in Littleton, CO, 2 weeks ago occurred in a suburban area, but I think it is increasingly apparent to America, whether you live in the inner city or live in the suburbs, the problems that our inner cities have in America spread like a contagion. So it is in the best interest of every American, wherever he or she lives, that those inner cities which face all the problems of urban decay, crime, and drugs, that what we can do to help to build those inner cities and strengthen the hands of mayors, Democrats, Republicans, nonpartisan, is important public policy, and CRA has done the job. That is why the U.S. Conference of Mayors, as the distinguished ranking member knows, has been so strongly supportive of the provisions in the BRYAN amendment that we offer today.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator has been very patient. Will he indulge me for one further question?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator from Nevada is happy to do so.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator's amendment, I think, has an extremely important provision which says that if a banking institution wishes to go into securities or into insurance, which would be permitted in a comprehensive way for the first time by this legislation, that banking institution must pass the CRA test in order to do that. It is asserted that this is a, I think the language was used by my colleague, the chairman, a massive expansion of CRA.

I take a very different view of that. It seems to me it is only keeping CRA abreast of the developments that are taking place with respect to financial modernization, because heretofore banks could not reach out and do—they did some of those activities within the bank of a very limited nature that had been permitted either by regulation or by court opinion but which were highly controversial and contested, and one of the things this bill is intended to do is to resolve those questions in terms of the structure of the financial services industry. Both the Senator and I are supportive of trying to do that.

It seems to me that if the bank is now going to be permitted to move out to do these other activities, it is not some massive expansion of CRA. That CRA requirement would be placed upon the bank before they could move to do those other activities. Otherwise, it seems to me, over time, you will erode CRA, as institutions begin to shift their assets out from under the banking activity into the securities and the insurance activities.

This amendment, the proposal the Senator has, does not extend CRA to the securities and insurance affiliates; am I correct on that point?

Mr. BRYAN. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SARBANES. Which in fact has been strongly urged by a number of the community groups that are supportive of CRA. They in effect want to extend it out. If that were to be done, I would recognize that as an expansion, and we could fight that issue, as it were. But that is not what is in this amendment.

This amendment puts the requirement only on the bank, if it seeks to go out and do those activities. That seems to me to be perfectly reasonable. In fact, it seems to me failure to do that is really a setback or an erosion of CRA.

I ask the Senator his view on that question.

Mr. BRYAN. I share the observation and the conclusion reached by the distinguished ranking member. That is precisely the case. As the Senator from Maryland knows, we are dealing with a changing dynamic in the financial marketplace. That really is the catalyst that brings us into this financial restructuring debate.

The Senator may have been off the floor when I shared the observation that the Treasury Secretary made, which reflects the view that the Senator has expounded upon. He says, in effect:

[I]f we wish to preserve the relevance of CRA at a time when the relative importance of bank mergers may decline and the establishment of non-bank financial [services] will become increasingly important, the authority to engage in newly authorized activities should be connected to. . .CRA.

He is saying that much better than I. He is saying, in effect: Look, this marketplace is shifting, it is moving. From what we have seen historically, since CRA has been in effect, with the traditional consolidation and mergers of one bank with another, that is not likely to be where the dynamic is in the marketplace in the future. We have already seen it.

What we are going to see are consolidations and mergers with other aspects of the financial services community—insurance and securities. And if you say that CRA has no reference or application to those applications, in effect you are relegating CRA to the dustbin of history; by and large, it is no longer as relevant as it is currently.

So, in effect, what we are trying to do is simply keep CRA as relevant in the new financial world as we have in the old financial world. I do not view this as an extension of CRA. It simply reflects a change in the marketplace that we are likely to see with respect to the way the financial services are provided to Americans.

Mr. SARBANES. In fact, unless we do this, you could have a bank in substantial noncompliance with respect to the CRA test which would then be able to reach out and exercise these additional powers?

Mr. BRYAN. That is precisely the case.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Senator. I thank him very much for his strong opening statement on this important amendment.

Mr. BRYAN. I thank the Senator for his comments, which I think helped elucidate a number of comments which are going to be important in this debate.

I yield the floor. I note that the Senator from Minnesota may wish to speak.

Mr. GRAMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. GRAMS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I want to take time today to first outline my support for the bill overall, and then also to talk a little bit about the current pending business, and that is the question concerning CRA.

As a member of the Senate Banking Committee, I rise in strong support of S. 900, the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999, and urge my colleagues to take the committee's recommendation to pass this very important piece of legislation.

The Glass-Steagall Act—which prohibits commercial banks from affiliating with companies predominantly engaged in the securities busines—was passed at a different point in time and in a dramatically different economy. In response to the numerous commercial bank failures during the depression, the Glass-Steagall Act was enacted as part of President Roosevelt's economic recovery package. One premise leading to the law which has since been proven incorrect, by the way—was that commercial banks which were involved in securities underwriting failed at a higher rate than other banks due to losses in their securities business when Wall Street collapsed. Subsequent studies have proven that these very same banks actually fared better than other banks which had not diversified by offering broad securities products. Unfortunately, as with most of the flawed legislation on our books, the law was not sunset and has hindered America's financial institutions—banks and securities firms alike—since its enactment in the 1930s.

Although commercial banks in recent years have been able to conduct limited securities underwriting activities through Section 20 affiliates, S. 900 appropriately repeals the Glass-Steagall prohibitions on common ownership of commercial banks and securities firms and will allow these activities to be conducted without the arbitrary restrictions which govern these activities currently.

The Bank Holding Company Act also includes similar restrictions in Section 4(c)(8) which have prevented safe, sound, and well managed commercial banks from affiliating with insurance companies. Although insurance is unquestionably a financial product, banks have been prohibited from underwriting insurance, and insurance companies have been restricted from fully entering the business of banking. This bill removes the Bank Holding Company Act restrictions and it preempts State laws which prohibit these affiliations.

Although there always seems to be broad agreement that the time for reform is now, every recent effort has failed because the devil has been in the details of how to regulate the new entities. S. 900 successfully incorporates a wide array of negotiated agreements between the interested industries to provide functional regulation—meaning regulation by product and not by the entity offering it. Under the bill's regulatory structure, banking products will be regulated by bank regulators, securities activities will be regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission, and insurance will continue to be regulated by State insurance commissioners. This system will ensure that the experts in each area will oversee the activities to protect the consumer and to ensure that all parties are playing on a level playing field.

As part of this system of functional regulation, the bill retains the current system of State regulation of insurance. While I strongly support State regulation of insurance, I believe there is a role for some Federal oversight. I believe that because Congress delegates the authority to regulate the insurance activities of national banks, it also has the responsibility to ensure that State regulation does not result in bloated, burdensome, and unresponsive regulation. Also, I will be holding hearings this year in the Securities Subcommittee to explore where any flaws exist and will work hard to address them with all of the interested parties.

Another major area of functional regulation contained in S. 900 is the regulation of securities activities. The bill provides a workable compromise which eliminates the bank's existing broker-dealer exemption and substitutes a system of targeted exemptions which protect traditional banking products while requiring other securities activities to be offered by a broker-dealer. Also, the bill requires the SEC and the Federal Reserve Board to work together to determine how future products will be regulated.

There has been some talk around Washington that an amendment may be offered to delete these bank exemptions and give the SEC complete authority to determine how future products will be regulated.

Let me be clear that if this amendment is offered, it is done so for only one reason—and that would be to kill the bill. If the bank exemptions are eliminated and traditional activities, such as trust activities, are not statutorily protected, the entire banking industry will unite against this bill. Again, I urge my colleagues to oppose any amendments which significantly alter the bill's securities provisions.

When repealing current law affiliation restrictions, the question is also raised about what activities the new broader bank holding companies will be able to conduct. The bill contains a standard—financial in nature—by which all activities of a bank holding company must comply. This provision maintains the current separation of banking and commercial activities, while providing appropriate flexibility, again, subject to Federal Reserve Board oversight. Some have criticized even the narrow flexibility which is provided in this bill. However, without this flexibility many financial companies will not be able to take advantage of the new structure contained in the bill and will continue to expand their activities outside of the bank holding company model and, thus, outside the oversight that the structure would ensure. Also, while on the topic of banking and commerce, I want to briefly touch on the unitary thrift holding company. There are three thrift related provisions either in S. 900 or which are expected to be considered as floor amendments. First, as reported by the Committee, the bill prevents the formation of any new unitary thrift holding companies after February 28, 1999. This provision will protect any applications which were ''in the pipeline'' at that time, on the date the bill was unveiled but will prevent any new unitary charters, thus providing a finite universe of unitary charters.

Mr. President, another provision which is included in the base text of the bill extends the assessment differential between banks and thrifts on the payment of interest on bonds that were issued by the Financing Corporation as part of the savings and loan crisis. In 1996, Congress enacted legislation requiring thrifts to make a one-time assessment into the Saving Association Insurance Fund or better known as SAIF, to fully capitalize the then-undercapitalized fund. This assessment was included predominantly because it was scored as a revenue gain under budget rules, and it could be used as the offset that Congress needed to grant the President added spending that he was demanding in return for his support of the balanced budget plan.

In order to lighten the blow to thrifts and to ensure that the FICO bond interests payments were made in a timely and also in a dependable manner, Congress for the first time spread the assessment for FICO interest to the commercial banks. Under that legislation, banks were to be assessed at a rate one-fifth of that which thrifts are assessed until January 1, 2000, at which time all institutions would be assessed at the same rate.

The bill before us today extends for 3 years the period during which there will be an assessment differential. Not surprisingly, the thrift industry adamantly opposed this provision. It is expected that Senator JOHNSON will be offering an amendment, which I intend to support, which strikes the FICO assessment extension and eliminates the thrifts' ability to affiliate with nonfinancial firms.

Although this amendment presents an unpopular choice for thrifts, I believe that it is in the best interest of the thrifts in my State because it will positively impact their bottom line while only slightly impacting their ability to affiliate.

I should note that if the Johnson amendment were approved outside of the underlying modernization bill, it would be much more burdensome, because thrifts would then be limited to selling only to banks or to other thrifts. However, the bill's expansion of the ability of bank holding companies to affiliate with insurance companies and securities firms passes through to thrifts and will now permit nonunitary thrifts to also sell to banks, sell to securities firms, or insurance companies.

Now I want to take a moment to discuss the issue which will likely be the most contentious during the debate on this bill. That is the Community Reinvestment Act or CRA. During consideration of this bill, the Banking Committee approved two balanced amendments designed to bring rationality to a law which has ventured far from what I believe was its original purpose. CRA was enacted in 1977 to encourage financial institutions to help meet the credit needs of the local communities in which they were chartered. Although noble sounding, CRA has drifted far afield from that original purpose. S. 900 includes a small bank exemption, approved on a bipartisan vote of the committee, which exempts banks with assets of under $100 million and which are outside of a metropolitan statistical area for the CRA.

Although I have received a number of calls of opposition from constituents in urban areas in my State, which will not be affected by this exemption, I do think it is important to listen to what some of the bankers in rural Minnesota are also saying. I am sure this is true not only in Minnesota but in rural banks across the country.

Although these bankers are often vilified, I believe that they play a very crucial role in ensuring that affordable financial services are widely available in the rural America.

Just take, for example, the comments of John Schmid of the Security State Bank in Sebeka, MN. John writes:

> We are a small rural Minnesota bank with assets of $21 million—$21 million, this is not a large money center bank—and our town population is 680 souls. We could not exist if we did not support and reinvest as much as we could in our town and surrounding area.

Gregory Morgan of First National Bank of Montgomery, MN, also tells a similar story. He writes:

> Our bank is 36 years old, founded on the idea of serving the entire community of Montgomery and as such, we have been successful. Our efforts of living and breathing community reinvestment are not driven by having to be in compliance with some law written in Washington but rather by listening and serving our friends and neighbors throughout the Montgomery area.

Yet another constituent committed to his hometown is Romane Dold, of Currie State Bank. Romane writes:

> We are a small community bank located in a town of 300 people. Our assets are $17 million. Our bank has always adhered to the regulations of CRA and, in fact, received an ''Outstanding'' rating in our most recent exam. The problem that we have with the regulations is that it just is not necessary. Our bank has been in this town since 1931 and quite honestly, if we hadn't been reinvesting in this community for over 60 years we wouldn't be here. CRA has just been another ''little burden'' that we have to contend with to appease some regulator.

Finally, the message Kieth Eitreim of Jasper State Bank in Jasper, MN, shared also proved that CRA is a bottom-line issue, costing small rural communities precious dollars, a lot of money. His bank is > . . .an $18 million bank located in a town of 600 people in southwestern Minnesota. CRA is a requirement that does absolutely nothing to protect the people of my community except to cost them money. The last exam we had lasted 3 days and proved what we already knew. We service our community. If we did not, we would not be in business.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. GRAMS. I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. SARBANES. I am quite prepared to concede that there are a lot of small banks that do, in fact, service their community, as the Senator has indicated by the quotes. We have never held extended hearings on this issue, but the material from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation says that 57 percent of small banks and thrifts have a loan-to-deposit ratio below 70 percent and that 17 percent of those have levels less than 50 percent. Conceding that there are small banks who really pay attention to their community, it is obvious that there are also small banks which are not doing that.

In fact, the Madison Wisconsin Capital Times, in an editorial a couple of years ago, said:

> Many rural banks establish a very different pattern than reinvesting in their communities where local lending takes a lower priority than making more assured investment like Federal Government securities. Thus, such banks drain local resources of the very localities that support them, making it much harder for local citizens to get credit.

I do not gainsay the examples that the Senator cited. But clearly, there are examples on the other side. And CRA, of course, is directed to get not at the good or the best actors, but the ones that are not addressing needs. The statistics from the regulators seem to indicate, and this editorial that we have—and we have other comments to the same effect—seems to indicate that there is a problem.

Mr. GRAMS. I understand the concern, and I know those numbers have been raised in the questions.

I also know, if you look at the other side of the story, I have talked to some of these small bankers who say they live in a town or work in a town of 300 people. And if you look out in the rural parts of the country today, most of the population in these small towns is growing in age. So his concern was, although we make all these loans available, there are not many home mortgages being sought. There are not many automobiles being bought. There are not many washers and dryers for which loans are being asked. There isn't the demand for the loan.

You have to expect that these bankers are going to have to put the money to some use, if there is nobody out there asking for the loan. The question

I have for the Senator is, how many of those loans have been asked for and then denied?

The story I have—and I don't have this information in front of me—is that he said it is awfully hard to loan money to my community when there is no request for loans. What do I do, let the money sit in the safe overnight? No, he has to invest it, maybe in some of these other government or other financial institutions or financial mechanisms.

I think there are two sides of that story. It is not that these banks are turning down loans. In many cases, in these small communities in rural parts of the country, there is no demand for these loans. The bank is a good, safe place to keep it, but not always to be able to use the bank's facilities.

Mr. SARBANES. That is a reasonable point. It ought to be examined in a set of careful hearings, because, in fact, the particular institution may confront that problem, although it may be overlooking loan possibilities, which has frequently been the case and is certainly the case in many instances in which areas people were neglected in terms of the availability of credit. We have never done those kinds of hearings. We have never really looked at this problem in some sort of objective, comprehensive way.

And we hear all these kinds of ad hoc stories, as it were. But, you know, there are counter-ad hoc stories. I am frank to say I don't think we ought to be making the kind of significant changes in the CRA that are in the committee bill without having gone through the sort of process I am talking about.

I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. GRAMS. Mr. President, by putting a face on the businesspeople working day in and day out trying to help America's rural communities strive and survive, I hope we can eliminate the vilification which is cast upon them. We are talking about banks under $100 million. As the gentleman from Sebeka said: 680 people is not a major financial center, and we have done the best we can to meet the requirements. We would not be in existence and would not be able to survive in our community if we didn't reinvest and if we had turned down these loans.

There is a commonsense way to look at it. According to the stories we have heard and the bankers we have talked to, a lot of times these are banks with three or four employees. Many times they are asked to have a full-time employee just to work on government regulations, which takes a lot of money that could be used for loans, et cetera, out of the bank, and, as one banker said, it does absolutely nothing for his community. That is where we have to look at some of this. This is common sense.

By using their words to show that they are meeting their communities' needs, not because Washington tells them to do so or says they have to, but, again, because it is in their best interest and it is in the best interest of their community and their town, it proves the need for the small bank exemption.

The Committee also included a provision which has mistakenly been deemed a ''safe harbor.'' Unlike a safe harbor, which gives an institution a free ride, the rebuttable presumption included in S. 900 simply gives meaning to the work of the regulators during CRA exams. CRA's stated purpose is to require each appropriate federal banking regulator to use its authority when examining financial institutions to encourage such institutions to help meet the credit needs of the local communities. By providing a rebuttable presumption, the bill gives the regulator the benefit of the doubt that they are meeting the requirements of CRA by encouraging action by the institution during the exam. However, the bill provides a safety that if someone feels that the regulator has not properly assessed the institution, provided the individual can prove the regulators failure, it can still protest an action. Thus, this amendment simply protects federal banking regulators against harassment by individuals who simply want to criticize their work.

Finally, Mr. President, I regret to have to include a negative comment in this statement about an otherwise outstanding bill. However, I believe that the operating subsidiary provisions included in S. 900 are inadequate and should be amended. As the Senator who worked on a bipartisan basis last year with Senator REED of Rhode Island to draft a compromise operating subsidiary amendment, I have vested a great deal of time studying the pluses and minuses of this option. I have come to the conclusion that it is appropriate for national banks to conduct full financial activities, with the exception of insurance underwriting and real estate development. I enthusiastically support the op sub amendment of Senator SHELBY which will be offered to this bill. It is identical to the amendment I authored last year and again this year in Committee. The amendment provides adequate safeguards to ensure that the sub poses no greater risk to the bank than a holding company affiliate. Another benefit of this amendment is to provide competition among regulators. A recent conversation I had with a banking lawyer convinced me that this amendment is prudent public policy. The attorney shared with me that in his dealings with the Federal Reserve Board and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, one of the agencies have been cooperative in helping his client work through issues and find creative ways to deal with their problems while the other has done nothing to help. If we were to eliminate the competition, regulators would have no incentive to be responsive to the institutions they regulate and American banks would have no where to turn if they are unhappy with their treatment.

Mr. President, in closing I again urge my colleagues to support this important legislation so that we can move the bill through conference and to the President for his signature.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the bill which is before the Senate, S. 900, is known in the shorthand form as the Financial Modernization Act. It is a 150-page bill which has been the subject of debate and deliberation on Capitol Hill for almost 10 years—a 10-year effort by the House and the Senate to try to modernize the laws and regulations in Washington relative to banks and financial services. Of course, anyone who has paid any attention understands that while we have been debating, there has been a revolution taking place.

I am reminded that just a few years ago we passed major reform in the area of telecommunications—years of hearings, extraordinary testimony from expert witnesses, the best staff work, the best lawyers, the best efforts by the Members of the House and Senate—and we delivered the Telecommunications Act modernizing regulation when it came to this industry.

Now, a few years later, we take a look at that work product. I was amused to find someone who came to my office and reported to me that they had found in that 1,000-page bill only two references to the Internet. Think of that. We modernized our telecommunications law and almost overlooked the most amazing phenomena that is taking place in telecommunications.

I hope we don't make the same mistake here. I hope in our effort to modernize financial institutions that we are thoughtful, that we modernize them in a way that is good for everyone—consumers and families in America as well as the owners of those institutions.

Twenty-two years ago we took a look at banking in America. We decided that we had some interest as a nation in making certain that the banks served the communities where they were located. That is not a radical notion, is it—to say if you have a bank in a town that is holding the savings and checking accounts of individuals and families and businesses, that when that bank does business it should do business in that same community where the people live, where the businesses are located, where the farmers have their farms, and where the ranchers have their ranches.

We found that some banks were, in effect, in a parasitic capacity. They were drawing out the resources of communities and regions and not putting the money back in. In its worse situation, you would find in some of the urban areas redlining, where banks would take the money out of a community and refuse to write mortgages for the people who wanted to build homes, or to modernize their homes. They wouldn't put money into the small businesses in the same communities where they were drawing the money.

In 1977, we decided there was a need for legislation called the Community Reinvestment Act. It speaks for itself—that the banks reinvest in the communities where they are located. It is not a radical concept. In fact, I think it is a rational concept. It is one that, frankly, has served us very well for 22 years. Now, as part of Senate bill 900, there is an effort to radically change community reinvestment.

I don't know what the experience of other Senators might be. But I can tell you what my experience has been in my hometown of Springfield, IL. I have lived in that town for about 30 years, practiced law there, and raised a family. There was a time when I not only knew the name of every bank downtown, but I knew the bank presidents. I might not have socialized with them, but I sure knew where they were. I knew where they lived, and I knew who their families were. I had a feeling that those banks were going to be around for a long time. You could just tick them off: The First National Bank, the Illinois National Bank, The Springfield Marine Bank.

But over a span of 10 or 15 years a dramatic change has taken place. I think a lot of Americans find themselves in the same situation that I am in. I struggle to remember the latest names of these latest banks. Which one is the First National Bank? Which one is the Planters and Growers Bank? I can't keep up with it. It seems every 6 or 12 months there is a change, and not just a change in name, there is a change in ownership. The bank that used to be run downtown in Springfield may be run out of someplace in Ohio, New York, or Europe.

If Members ask whether or not we need this law of 1977, this Community Reinvestment Act, to make certain that as these changes are taking place in the banking industry—whoever owns them, wherever their home might be—that they still serve the communities where they draw their money from, I think is still a very sound concept.

Yet this bill, S. 900, suggests it is a concept that should be largely abandoned, because in three specific areas there are changes in the law.

First, it eliminates the requirement that all banks within a holding company have and maintain satisfactory Community Reinvestment Act ratings as a condition for exercising new financial powers. To put it in common English, if you want to take your bank and holding company and expand it in some direction, we are going to take a look to see if you have been good citizens in the communities where you are located.

I think that is a reasonable suggestion. That is the law. But this bill changes it. This bill removes that requirement and says you can't take a look at their records and see if they have been helping local farmers and businesspeople, families, with mortgages.

Does that make sense, at a time when bank ownership is becoming further and further removed from the people who bank, that we are going to somehow absolve them of responsibility to the neighborhoods, the communities, the towns, the counties around them? I don't think that makes any sense at all.

The second thing, the so-called safe harbor provision. If an institution had a good conduct ribbon for 36 months under the Community Reinvestment Act, this bill basically says leave those banks alone, don't ask any more questions.

I don't think that makes sense either.

The Community Reinvestment Act examinations take place about once every 18 to 24 months. In fact, for the smaller institutions, they have been streamlined more dramatically. I don't think we ought to say that after some 3 years of good conduct we are no longer going to ask basic questions as to whether or not you are making an investment in your community.

The final provision, which the previous speaker, the Senator from Minnesota, addressed from his point of view, was whether or not a bank—rural bank in this instance—with less than $100 million in assets should be required to meet the requirements of the Community Reinvestment Act. An argument can be made, and has been made by some, that these are smaller institutions and, as such, should not be burdened by regulators and paperwork, let them do their business, they are good neighbors, and things will work out.

Yet in the report filed with this bill, we find the statistics do not bear out that point of view. Let me read:

> Over 76 percent of rural U.S. banks and thrifts have assets less than $100 million.

We are talking about more than three-fourths of the bank and thrift institutions in the smalltown areas.

> It is asserted these small rural banks by their nature serve the credit needs of their local neighbors. However, small banks have historically received the lowest Community Reinvestment Act ratings. Institutions with less than $100 million in assets accounted for 92 percent of institutions receiving noncompliance ratings under the CRA.

What many do is take the money from the community and then do not lend it back into the communities. They turn around and buy government securities instead of lending it to the businesses and families that need those assets to make investments in the communities.

I don't think the small bank exemption is the way to go. I think the provision in the CRA change relating to that overlooks the fact that just a few years ago we put in new regulations to streamline CRA investigations in smaller banks, banks of less than $250 million in assets. We exempted many small banks from reporting requirements and eliminated a lot of documentation and paperwork. We need to continue to focus on banks of all sizes to make sure they are doing the right thing.

After 22 years of the Community Reinvestment Act, what do we have to show for it? Has it worked? I think, quite honestly, it has worked very well. My State of Illinois is very diverse, with a large city like Chicago and many small towns. In the Chicago area, thanks to a strong economy and CRA, the number of home loans to low-income borrowers almost doubled between 1990 and 1996, enabling 30,000 families to become homeowners. Is it of value to those families that those banks put the money back into the community? I think it obviously is.

I want to take a look at some of the other areas of my State. Voice of the People, in the Chicago Uptown area, has provided quality, affordable housing for low-income families. The racially and economically diverse community of Uptown Chicago, on the far north side of town, partnered with the Uptown National Bank of Chicago and completed the International Homes project, a development of 28 town homes constructed on five vacant lots within a four-square-block area in Uptown. This made homeownership possible for 28 lower-income minority and immigrant families. Half of these first-time homeowners are families earning under 50 percent of median income.

At the same time, down in my old hometown of East St. Louis is Winstanley/Industry Park Neighborhood Organization, a new nonprofit corporation representing 8,000 people. For those not familiar with it, my old hometown has had a tough time for the last 20 or 25 years. They struggled to keep the community together and to survive. The Winstanley/Industry Park Neighborhood Organization has been a plus. It is a mixed-use area comprised of residential, commercial, and abandoned industrial sites. What they have tried to do is to work with Magna Bank of Illinois to change the area. They have created a farmers market, community owned and operated, which was developed by this organization. What makes the market particularly unique is 14 of the 16 vendors are local residents.

If your bank were located somewhere in Europe and you came into the branch in your hometown and said, ''We have some people here who are struggling to make a living; they are low income and they want a chance to start a farmers market,'' is it more likely that you are going to get a sympathetic response from someone who knows the community, has a responsibility to the community, rather than someone who is just hammering away at the bottom line? I think the answer is obvious.

A residential loan counseling program of the same organization has launched a response to the victimization of over 1,400 lower-income families who were being misled by unscrupulous realtors into home purchase agreements known as bond-for-deed. The realtors who engaged in this often held the title to the properties throughout the length of the contract without recording the transaction and without hazard insurance for the purchaser. Most of these agreements contain no terms and have open-end type mortgage balances. This organization counseling program helped these same residents, lower-income families, refinance with conventional mortgages on their own homes.

Finally, West Humboldt Park is a low-income, predominantly minority neighborhood on Chicago's west side. It is plagued by poverty, illiteracy, welfare dependence, street and domestic violence, alcohol and substance abuse, and a lack of job opportunity. In 1989, Orr High School and the 12 neighborhood elementary schools formed a partnership with Bank of America—then Continental Bank—establishing a community network of schools in West Humboldt. The partnership has grown to include over 25 programs providing education and social services. They include Boys and Girls Clubs, the creation of the BUILD project, which is a group of parents who are really trying to keep the streets safe for their kids.

It amazes me that in our efforts to modernize the laws involving banks and thrift institutions, one of the first casualties proposed in the Republican majority bill before the Senate is to eliminate the Community Reinvestment Act. A party which dedicates itself to the premise that local control is best is virtually ready to give it away. To say that when it comes to local control of banking assets so critical for building and rebuilding a community, it will no longer hold them responsible, I think that is shortsighted.

For 22 years, the Community Reinvestment Act has worked. I hope we defeat this provision if we can muster a direct vote on it. If not, defeat the bill if it continues to push the things which are not in the best interests of consumers and families across America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). The distinguished Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I want to respond to the amendment that has been offered. I apologize if anybody has the idea, listening to this debate, that there is not another side to the argument. We had several people who had time constraints and wanted to speak. Senator SARBANES and I are being held hostage here, in managing the bill. So as a courtesy to others, we have let them speak first. But I now want to give a comprehensive response to this issue. Let me begin.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield for a minute?

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. How long would the Senator expect to go?

Mr. GRAMM. I think it is going to take me probably a minimum of about 30 minutes to go through the entire group of issues.

Mr. SARBANES. Could we then put Senator BAYH and Senator EDWARDS in line to speak after you finish?

Mr. GRAMM. I do not know that any Republican has spoken on this issue. Did Senator ENZI speak?

To this point, if I might say, the distinguished Senator from Nevada spoke at length. You engaged in a lengthy colloquy with him. We then had a nonrelevant speaker.

Mr. SARBANES. Senator GRAMS spoke for you.

Mr. GRAMM. By nonrelevant I do not mean the Senator was irrelevant on the issue. It had no relevance to this issue. It was about another issue completely. Senator GRAMS really talked about the bill itself.

So it is my turn to speak. I intend to speak and answer the points that have been raised. Then I would like to continue going side to side. We only have one other person here. I do not know if he is going to speak at any great length.

Mr. SARBANES. Then I guess our colleagues know in about 30 minutes they could hope to get recognition to speak.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I think it is important for people to step back and look at what is being proposed. I have to break the discussion down into two parts. No. 1, what it is that Senator SARBANES would do with his amendment, and, second, what it is he would undo with his amendment.

Mr. SARBANES. Senator BRYAN.

Mr. GRAMM. So let me explain what he would do with his amendment, then explain what he would undo, and then explain why both what he would do and what he would undo is bad.

First of all, let me begin with current law in CRA, then what I am going to do is go through what the Senator's amendment would do. I am then going to talk about the history of CRA and within that history I am going to try to explain the problems that we are trying to fix in the underlying bill. Then I want to talk at some length about those problems and about the underlying bill. I think I will have covered the whole waterfront.

Let me remind our colleagues the current Community Reinvestment Act basically has two provisions. The first provision is that bank regulators have to consider how a bank has been meeting local credit needs only when a bank applies to open a new bank, branch or to merge. Second, bank regulators may deny application based on a CRA record. So basically, in terms of the existing CRA law, the way it was written, there is no violation for simply failing to comply. The enforcement mechanism is that if you apply to open a new branch or open a bank or to merge, then the bank regulator—whichever one you are subject to, based on your charter—looks to see if you are meeting the needs of your community. And community reinvestment, I would like to remind our colleagues, is focused on lending. The primary focus of community reinvestment is lending in the communities where you take deposits.

A bank regulator can deny an application based on your CRA record. There is no penalty involved other than the denial of the application. That is current law in CRA. What the substitute that has been offered by Senator BRYAN would do—I have ''The Sarbanes Substitute,'' because Senator SARBANES offered this in committee and we assumed he would offer it today, but it is the same provision—is this:

The Bryan substitute would add eight more requirements to CRA than the are required under current law. In fact, this would be a good opportunity to ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Chairman Greenspan that outlines what the CRA provisions of this substitute are, what the CRA provisions of the bill are, and exactly what they would do. Because, as I am sure all of our colleagues are aware, what tends to happen in these debates is people set up straw men. In this case the straw man is that somehow the underlying bill undoes CRA —that is straw man 1. Straw man 2 is that the substitute virtually leaves CRA as it is.

The reality, as I will paint in some detail, is that the underlying bill tries to deal with two clear abuses in CRA: One, an integrity provision; and, two, a relevancy provision. It in no way does violence to the basic idea of CRA. And the second reality as compared to the straw man is that this substitute is the most massive expansion of CRA in its history and would literally impose a penalty structure that goes far beyond anything ever contemplated in CRA when it was adopted in 1977, or that has ever been discussed since. In fact, our colleague keeps wondering where the hearings are concerning the two modest changes that we have made in the underlying bill, without ever raising the question: Where are the hearings on which these massive punitive penalties would be based? Where is the abuse that they seek to address? The point is, the rhetoric of Senator SARBANES applies more to his substitute than it does the underlying bill.

So let me ask unanimous consent that the letter from Alan Greenspan with regard to the CRA provisions of the substitute and the CRA provisions of the underlying bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM,
Washington, DC, April 7, 1999.

Hon. PHIL GRAMM,
Chairman, Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: You have asked for an analysis of how the financial modernization bills recently passed by the House Committee on Banking and Financial Services (H.R. 10) and the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs affect the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (CRA). Enclosed is a memorandum from the Board's General Counsel discussing the impact of these bills on the CRA.

That memo indicates that H.R. 10 would affect the CRA in three principal ways. It would require at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA performance rating as a precondition for engaging in the new financial activities, provide for the enforcement of this requirement, including through penalties and divestiture, and apply the CRA to uninsured wholesale financial institutions. Currently, the CRA does not require that an institution's CRA record be considered in connection with proposals to engage in nonbanking activities, authorize enforcement of the Act outside the applications process, or apply to uninsured depository institutions.

The bill recently passed by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs does not contain similar provisions. The Senate bill, however, does contain two CRA-related provisions not contained in H.R. 10: an exemption from the CRA for small insured depository institutions that are located outside metropolitan areas and a rebuttable presumption regarding an institution's compliance with the CRA.

I hope this information is helpful.

Sincerely,

ALAN GREENSPAN,
Chairman.

Enclosure.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING THE EFFECT OF RECENT LEGISLATIVE PROPOSALS ON THE COMMUNITY REINVESTMENT ACT

Chairman Phil Gramm has asked for an analysis of how H.R. 10, as passed by the House Committee on Banking and Financial Services last month, and the bill passed by the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs on March 4, 1999, would affect the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 (''CRA'').

H.R. 10 would primarily impact the CRA in the following three ways.

1. The CRA currently applies only to federally insured depository institutions. H.R. 10 would subject the newly established uninsured wholesale financial institutions to the CRA.

2. The CRA currently requires that the Federal banking agencies consider the CRA performance of an insured depository institution in connection with proposals by the institution, or the institution's holding company, to acquire or establish a deposit-taking facility (e.g., open a branch or acquire or merge with another insured depository institution). It does not require that an institution's CRA record of performance be considered in connection with proposals to engage in, or acquire a company engaged in, nonbanking activities. H.R. 10 would allow a financial holding company to engage in new financial activities only if all of the company's subsidiary depository institutions have and maintain at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating. Thus, H.R. 10 would link CRA performance to the ability of a banking organization to engage in, or acquire a company engaged in, a nonbanking activity. More than 95 percent of the depository institutions examined for CRA compliance in 1997 received a ''satisfactory'' or better CRA rating.

3. Current law does not authorize a Federal banking agency to take any type of enforcement action against an insured depository institution that has a less than satisfactory CRA rating, other than denying proposals by the institution (or the institution's holding company) to establish or acquire a deposit-taking facility. Thus, current law does not permit the Federal banking agencies to take actions, including enforcement actions or divestiture proceedings, outside the applications process if an institution fails to maintain a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating on an ongoing basis. See Memorandum from Walter Dellinger, Assistant Attorney General, U.S. Department of Justice, to Eugene A. Ludwig, Comptroller of the Currency, 18 U.S. Op. Office of Legal Counsel No. 39 (Dec. 15, 1994).

H.R. 10 would require that the subsidiary depository institutions of a financial holding company maintain at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating for the holding company to continue to engage in the new financial activities. If a subsidiary depository institution fails to maintain such a rating, the financial holding company and subsidiary depository institution must execute an agreement with the appropriate Federal banking agencies to correct the deficiency and such agencies could impose limitations on the activities of the financial holding company or subsidiary depository institution until the subsidiary's rating is restored. The failure by a financial holding company or subsidiary depository institution to comply with these requirements would constitute a violation of the Bank Holding Company Act. In such circumstances, the appropriate Federal banking agency could take enforcement action (e.g., issue a cease and desist order, assess civil monetary penalties or, in the case of the Board, seek criminal sanctions) against the financial holding company, the subsidiary depository institution, or an individual participating in the violation (such as an officer or director of the holding company or depository institution). Finally, if the subsidiary depository institution's CRA rating is not restored to at least the ''satisfactory'' level by its next examination (or such longer period as the Board determines to be appropriate), H.R. 10 would authorize the Board to require that the financial holding company divest the subsidiary depository institution or, alternatively, cease engaging in new financial activities.

Section 121 of H.R. 10 also would permit a national bank to control an operating subsidiary engaged in financial activities permissible for a financial holding company, but only if the national bank and its depository institution affiliates have and maintain at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating.[1] National banks and affiliated depository institutions that did not maintain such a rating could be subject to the same type of corrective measures as discussed above for financial holding companies.

The bill passed by the Senate Banking Committee does not contain provisions similar to those discussed above. The Senate bill, however, would exempt from the CRA any insured depository institution that has $100 million or less in total assets and that is located outside a Metropolitan Statistical Area. Data indicate that approximately 3,871 insured banks and thrifts, representing approximately 37 percent of all insured banks and thrifts and 2.7 percent of the assets of all such institutions, would meet these criteria, as of December 31, 1998. In addition, under the Senate bill, an insured depository institution would be presumed to be in compliance with the CRA until its next examination if the institution received at least a ''satisfactory'' rating at its most recent CRA performance examination and at each CRA examination in the preceding three years. This presumption would not attach if the appropriate Federal banking agency receives substantial verifiable information, arising since the date of the institution's most recent CRA examination, that demonstrates the institution is not in compliance with the CRA.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield? I understood the Greenspan letter compared the provisions in the House bill with the committee bill, not the provisions of the substitute.

Mr. GRAMM. They are virtually identical, but I stand corrected. In fact, let me yield to you to tell us the difference.

Mr. SARBANES. They are not identical. There are some significant differences between the two, and I will develop them after the Senator finishes his presentation.

But as I understand it, your request to the Fed and their response was to compare the House bill with the committee bill. Am I correct in that?

Mr. GRAMM. I think that is correct. I stand corrected. I would like it printed in the RECORD, but I would be happy to hear the distinguished Democratic ranking member of the committee explain to us the differences. I assert that there are no significant differences, but I would like to hear them.

Let me go over basically what we have in terms of additions to CRA in the pending amendment, if the Senate decided to adopt it.

No. 1, by making noncompliance with CRA or falling out of compliance with

[1] Part 5 of the OCC's regulations, which purports to allow subsidiaries of national banks to engage in activities that national banks are not permitted to conduct directly, currently requires that a national bank have and maintain at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating to control an operating subsidiary engaged in principal activities that the bank cannot conduct directly. See 12 C.F.R. §§5.34(f)(3)(iii), 5.3(g)).

CRA a violation of banking law, officers and directors of banks for the first time could be fined up to $1 million a day for CRA noncompliance. I will come back to this in a moment.

Under this substitute, banks can be fined up to $1 million a day for falling out of compliance.

Under this substitute, cease and desist authority for CRA noncompliance are brought into the system.

Bank regulators may place any restrictions on any banking activities for CRA noncompliance.

Bank regulators may place any restrictions on any insurance activities for CRA noncompliance.

Bank regulators may place any restrictions on any securities activities for CRA noncompliance.

Bank regulators may place any restrictions on any other activities of the holding company for CRA noncompliance.

Any violation by any one bank in the holding company can trigger penalties against any and all activities of the entire banking company.

Insurance sales of bank subsidiaries can be restricted for CRA noncompliance.

Finally, the provision adds new expansions of CRA far beyond the existing law. Under current law, banks sell insurance—small banks in cities of less than 5,000, other banks depending on their State regulation—and they do it without CRA approval.

The substitute would expand the decision of banks or ability of banks to sell insurance to require CRA approval. Some 20 banks now provide some security services. They do it without being required to get CRA approval. The pending substitute would expand CRA approval to that activity.

The first point I want to make is, contrary to the rhetoric being used, we are talking about the largest, most significant expansion of CRA in history—none of which is based on any assertion of any abuse—and we are talking about imposing confiscatory penalties that are devastating to our banking industry.

I want to read pieces of two letters on this issue of the potential for a million-dollar-a-day fine. One letter is from the Independent Community Bankers of America. This is a letter from an organization of very, very small, generally community banks, often in rural areas that would be affected by this. Let me read the paragraph:

> We also have grave concerns about expanding CRA enforcement authority to include the levying of heavy fines and penalties against banks or their officers and directors. An ongoing challenge for many community banks in small communities is finding willing and qualified bank directors. Legislation following the savings and loan crisis of the 1980s and 1990s greatly increased the amount of civil money penalties to which bank officers and directors may be subject. Any increase in the potential for fines and penalties could provide further disincentive for service on a bank board.

Here is the point. If a small bank is going to hire somebody to be president or be an officer or recruit somebody to be on a bank board, they are going to have to buy liability insurance to protect that person from this potential fine, which would literally put thousands of rural banks in America out of compliance.

If there is a problem here that needs to be fixed, if there is an abuse that should be dealt with, then one might say that perhaps this is justified. But here is the record: There have been some 16,380 examinations of small, rural banks in America since 1990, and of those 16,380 examinations, three banks and S&Ls have been found to be out of compliance to a substantial degree.

Our ranking member of the committee would bring in the potential for a million-dollar-a-day fine based on the fact that in 16,380 audits on CRA since 1990—9 years—there have been three banks substantially out of compliance. What is the justification for these massive punitive fines? There is no justification.

The justification basically is that this is seen as an opportunity to massively expand CRA. That is what the justification is.

The second letter, on exactly the same subject, is from the American Bankers Association. Here is what they say:

> We would oppose amendments we understand may be offered that would contain provisions not only eliminating the two CRA provisions currently in the bill, but also adding additional new CRA requirements. One strong concern the ABA has is that the potential for such penalties could discourage directors from serving on community bank boards and increase the cost of officer and director liability insurance coverage for banks. There has been no justification given for inserting these new penalties into CRA, particularly given the outstanding record the banking industry has in serving communities across the country.

I remind my colleagues, this substitute seeks to impose these massive punitive penalties against small banks in America when in 16,380 exams, which cost those banks cumulatively $1,310,400,000 to keep the records and comply with the exam—$1,310,400,000; I have the decimal points right this time—after all that money, after all those exams, three small, rural banks or S&Ls were found substantially out of compliance.

If this is not regulatory overkill that drives working men and women in America crazy and that threatens little banks all over the State of Kansas, the State of the Presiding Officer, and all over Indiana and all over Texas and all over America, that threatens their very existence, I don't know what it is.

First of all, this is totally unjustified, makes absolutely no sense and, to quote my colleague from Maryland, never has a hearing been held on this subject. Never has any justification been given whatsoever for imposing a million-dollar fine on bank board members and bank officers in the name of CRA. It is the most gross overkill and regulatory burden that this Senator has seen in the entire time that I have been debating banking legislation.

I remind my colleagues that I spent 12 years of my life teaching money and banking in college. I have spent too long of my life, 21 years, in the House and Senate, and I have been serving on the Banking Committee every day I have been in the Senate, and I have had the privilege this year of serving as chairman. I have never seen such a massive regulatory overkill as these proposed provisions, and I am confident that they will be rejected.

(Mr. SANTORUM assumed the Chair.)

Mr. SARBANES. Will the chairman yield on this point?

Mr. GRAMM. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. I am looking at a table from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, from 1990 through 1998, that those 320 institutions were given a ''needs to improve'' rating which, of course, is below compliance, and 18 institutions were given ''substantial noncompliance.''

The Senator is using this ''three'' figure, and I don't know where that comes from.

Mr. GRAMM. I can tell you where it comes from. It comes from looking at the banks and S&Ls that meet two tests: One, they have less than $100 million of assets; and, two, they operate solely outside standard metropolitan areas.

And my figure is, that those banks have been subjected, since 1990, to 16,380 examinations. And in those 16,380 examinations, the average of which has cost that little bank about $80,000, according to some 488 banks which have written us on this subject, that these 16,380 examinations—this is from the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council—that in these 16,380 examinations, costing, on average, $80,000 apiece—so this is $1.3 billion that has been taken out of these little bitty communities and out of their banks, where people are paid higher interest rates and have gotten less credit—the result of that has been that three of these banks, over a 9-year period, have been found to be in substantial noncompliance.

You do not have to have a Ph.D. in mathematics to figure out, if you have done 16,380 exams on these small, rural banks, and only three of them have been in substantial noncompliance, you are spending a tremendous amount of their money to find a very, very small number of bad actors—in fact, three one-hundredths of 1 percent.

What is even more astounding is that all of these little banks combined make up only 2.8 percent of the capital of the banking system. They are getting 44 percent of the examinations. They make up only 2.7 percent of the assets of the banking system, and out of 16,380 exams, only three of them were out of compliance.

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator——

Mr. GRAMM. What is wrong here? What does not make sense here?

Mr. SARBANES. If the Senator will yield, he simply stated the point all over again, but it hasn't squared the factual discrepancy.

According to our data from bank regulatory agencies, more than 70 small, rural banks and thrifts are currently deemed not in compliance; that is, below a satisfactory rating with CRA this year alone.

Since 1990, 338 small, rural banks and thrifts received CRA ratings below satisfactory.

Sure, the Senator can make the same speech about those numbers, but I just want to get those on the RECORD, because those numbers are very significantly different from the numbers which the Senator is putting forward.

Mr. GRAMM. If I might reclaim my time—and I think probably we would be better off to let me go through and make my presentation and let the Senator do the same—let me go back and restate the facts.

What the Senator has done is basically taken a totally different classification than I am talking about. I have been very clear in what I am saying. Here is what I am saying. And it is devastating, there is no question about that. I am glad I am not on the other side of this argument. I would be trying to change the subject, if I were. But here are the devastating facts.

The devastating facts are, that of the little banks in America—less than $100 million in deposits; probably have 6 to 10 employees—that are outside standard metropolitan areas—so these are banks that do not have a city to serve, much less an inner city.

Mr. SARBANES. Those are the banks we are talking about. Those are the figures I am giving you.

Mr. GRAMM. Look, let me go ahead. I will explain the difference in what you are saying and what I am saying. OK. So let me start at the top. I will go all the way down, make my point, and then I want to go on and give my presentation. You all have had many opportunities to give yours today. And I listened to them faithfully.

But here is the point, if you take every bank in America that has less than $100 million of deposits, and that is also outside a standard metropolitan area, they make up 38 percent of the financial institutions in the country. They have 44 percent of the audits. In fact, they were audited for CRA 16,380 times from 1990 through 1998.

In those 16,380 audits, that cost, on average—cost the bank; I am not talking about the Government regulator; but cost the bank to comply with gathering all the information, spending the week in the audit, keeping all the records, designating a CRA officer—and I will later in my presentation read actual letters from the banks—these little banks and these little communities spent $1.3 billion of their money complying with this law.

Of these 16,380 examinations, only three banks, over a period of 9 years, only three banks were found to be substantially out of compliance.

Our colleague has taken a different definition, ''marginally out of compliance,'' and the number was bigger, maybe 70 out of 16,380. The point being, my statement is true, that only three banks, out of all of these that are audited, have turned out to be substantially out of compliance.

On the basis of that, our colleague would impose a $1 million-a-day fine on officers and board members. And I stand by my point that that is the biggest overkill I have seen.

I think I have dealt with the proposals made which would be added by the amendment that is pending.

These proposals really boil down to punitive, crushing, regulatory burden and fines, imposing a $1 million-a-day fine on bank officers and bank board members, massively expanding CRA.

The justification in 1977 for CRA was, ''Well, you've got deposit insurance. That's a good subsidy. We ought to be able to force these institutions to allocate capital for a public purpose.'' But for the first time, this substitute would expand CRA to a noninsured institution where there is no logic for its expansion. For the first time, CRA approval would be necessary for selling insurance and selling securities within a bank or at an affiliate of a bank holding company.

These are massive expansions of regulatory burden. They are totally unjustified based on any facts, no matter how you read them. I cannot believe that a majority of the Senators would vote to do those things.

Let me talk about what we undo if we adopt the Senator's amendment. And I want to take some time to go through this. I have not done this at great length.

I want people to understand what is the problem with CRA that we are trying to deal with in these two very modest amendments which the Banking Committee has written.

First of all, let me talk about what you can view as good news. In 1977, there was a rider to a bill that was written by Senator Proxmire that created what we today call CRA. It said that banks should lend in the communities where they collect deposits. There was no enforcement mechanism. It was simply to be used when evaluating approval for bank mergers and branches.

A Democrat Senator raised an objection to the provision, worrying about redtape and paperwork. Interestingly enough, the distinguished chairman at that time said, ''No problem. The redtape and paperwork will be nominal. No big deal.'' We have all heard it millions of times when thousands of programs have become law. There was a vote in the Banking Committee to strip out this provision. And that vote failed on a 7–7 tie.

We then had the bill come to the floor of the Senate. There was another vote. And I do not have the total here, but I think it was 41–30. We had some huge number of Members of the Senate who were absent. So the bill became law.

So here is the point I want to make. In 1977, we started out with a CRA requirement. And in that year—and these figures are all from the National Community Reinvestment Coalition—in that year there were about $50 million of CRA loans or cash payments or commitments to lend. And that number was relatively small, until 1992.

Now, what happened in 1992? Well, two things happened. One, we started having a rash of mergers, so that these very large banks and also some small banks had to get CRA approval to merge. What happened is this number started to grow very rapidly. Last year, in loans, commitments to lend, cash payments, the total was $694 billion.

Now, to put that in perspective, the loans, commitments to lend, and cash payments, and commitments to pay cash—and I am going to talk about cash payments at some great length here in a moment—totaled $694 billion last year. That is bigger than the Canadian economy. That is bigger than the combined assets of Ford, General Motors, and Chrysler. That is bigger than the discretionary budget of the Federal Government. Yet our colleagues, who will oppose these two very simple amendments, say there is no need to look at a potential reform in CRA.

CRA is now bigger than General Motors. It has grown from virtually nothing to become larger than the discretionary budget of the Federal Government, and yet our Democrat colleagues refuse to admit the possibility—or many of them do—that we might need some degree of effort to deal with abuses which would naturally occur in a program that grew in a very short time from $50 million to $694 billion.

Why do I think this is a relevant point? Well, let me give you one fact. According to the community groups, $9 billion has been paid or committed in cash. Had you gone to that committee hearing in 1977 and said to the then chairman of the Banking Committee, Senator Proxmire, ''Well, what about cash payments, what about people literally giving community groups and individuals money not to testify against their merger or not to oppose it or actually paying them to support it,'' what he would think about that? I can tell you: he would have said, ''It is not possible.''

This bill in no way contemplates that cash payments would be made, but the fact remains that as this program has exploded, $9 billion of cash payments and cash commitments have been made. This basically represents an abuse that needs to be dealt with. In fact, in the one hearing we had on this subject, the spokesman for these reinvestment coalitions admitted there were abuses. He called it ''green mail,'' and he said that it hurt the program. Most people would call it blackmail. The point is, if these abuses exist—and no one disputes they do—why shouldn't we begin to try to do something about them?

Now, let me turn to a quote, and then I will get into some of these abuses.

This is a quote from a Cornell University law professor, Jonathan Macey, who specializes in banking law and is one of the most respected lawyers in banking law in the country. Here is what he said about CRA, as it exists in 1999:

> You see really weird things when you look at the Code of Federal Regulations . . . like Federal regulators are encouraged to leave the room and allowing community groups to negotiate ex parte with bankers in a community reinvestment context . . . Giving jobs to the top five officials of these communities or shake-down groups is generally high up on the list (of demands).
>
> So what we really have is a bit of old world Sicily brought into the United States, but legitimized and given the patina of government support.

It has never been stated more clearly than that.

Now, let me give you an example, if you would give me those agreements.

Part of our problem—and this will be discussed later, and I hope people will listen to this point—part of our problem is that community groups, in negotiating with banks, in virtually every case negotiate for and insist on the confidentiality of these agreements. So one of the problems in evaluating this $9 billion is, we do not have any of the facts as to where this money goes, who it goes to, and what they do with it when they get it.

One of the amendments that Senator BENNETT or someone else will be offering later in the Senate's consideration of financial services modernization is a sunshine amendment, which says that in the future these agreements have to be made public, that they have to go to the regulator, that the regulator has to require that the information be provided, and that they be made public. The logic of that is, nothing disinfects like sunshine.

Now, it so happens that we have three of these agreements that we have obtained on the condition that we not disclose the names of the bank or community group involved. We have redacted those names. I just want to give you a flavor of what these agreements looks like, and I have pieces of three of them here.

This is Bank A: Provide blank—and this is a community group—with a grant of up to $20,000. Provide blank—another community group—with a grant of up to $50,000. Provide blank with a grant of up to $25,000 to pay reasonable and necessary ''soft costs'' to be incurred by blank. Provide blank with a grant of a reasonable amount. . . .

That is the quid; now the quo:

Blank agrees to withdraw on the date hereof the comment letter, dated blank 28, 19 blank, and any related materials collectively, the comment letter filed with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Bank, and the board. I don't have the second sheet.

The point is, the community groups gets all of these cash grants and then agrees to withdraw the complaints they have filed, a classic quid pro quo.

Now, what happened to these complaints? Were they not meritorious or did the community groups suddenly no longer care about the people they were protesting against? What did all of those cash grants do that induced them to withdraw their comment?

Bank A, one more thing, blank and blank agree—this is the community group and the bank—agree not to disseminate or otherwise make available to the public copies of this agreement.

So the community group gets these cash payments and in return agrees to withdraw their protests, and then the bank and group agree that they will keep the agreement secret.

Now, let's look at Bank B: Blank will receive a fee of 2 and three-quarters percent of the face amount of each program loan made by blank. This is an agreement whereby a community activist and their community group receive a rake-off of 2.75 percent of the face value of every loan made under this agreement.

Do you think people receiving that loan know that this individual and this group will get 2.75 percent? In fact, they don't. And, as you will see later, unless we open up this process, they never will. No one will ever know what is happening. Continuing with the Bank B's agreement:

Blank will receive a fee of $200,000 as reimbursement; according to blank, $100,000 is payable upon execution and delivery and $100,000 six months later.

We have the quid, now the quo.

The community group or the individual agrees to withdraw all pending protests of blank regulatory applications and related materials and not to sponsor, either directly or indirectly, the protest or to supply information in connection with any protest relating to pending or future blank applications with regulators.

In other words, the community group is agreeing that in return for this 2.75 percent of the face value of all loans that are made, not only will they withdraw the complaint they have already filed, but they will never make another one. They will never make another one, no matter what.

At blank's request—listen to this one. Many of you wonder why you have gotten letters from banks, and I got a letter from a big North Carolina bank, might I say, and I was shocked. Then I read the letter and it, in essence, said that they are required by a CRA agreement to send me this letter saying they support CRA. I said, how is it possible that somebody could be required to send me a letter? And this is a different bank altogether and a different agreement. Here is how it happens:

In addition, the bank agrees to send letters to customers of blank previously contacted by blank—well, I will get to the point on the next sheet. And then the community group agrees to purge their files and database of all information related to this bank's customers. In other words, they get this breakoff; they get these cash payments. They agree to withdraw their objection. They will never do another objection. They are even going to destroy the computer database they used to do it.

Now I think we are getting to the thing I mentioned. The community group agrees to: immediately cease and desist all activities directed against blank; to maintain the confidentiality of this agreement, to maintain the confidentiality of this agreement and any other agreements; to cooperate with them in getting agreements with other banks. And then is the thing about sending letters. This is called ''public policy partnership.''

In this public policy partnership: blank will work with the blank to establish a clear written declaratory statement indicating support for the Community Reinvestment Act and the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, and the party's opposition to any attempts to weaken the law. Blank will send the final copy of this statement to the blank, the American Bankers Association, the Federal Reserve Board, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the blank Congressional delegation, and all Members of the House and Senate banking committees.

So when you have letters from banks telling you what great things CRA is doing, many of those were dictated by commitments they made as part of contracts, secret agreements they signed with protesters in order to get them out of the way to do their work.

Now, I could go into a hundred other examples—someone who graduates from college, goes to graduate school, and goes to work for the Federal Reserve in acquisitions and mergers, quits and goes into business, spends 4 years harassing a bank and bank presidents, and finally the bank craters and gives them $1.4 million, gives them $200,000 to set up their organization; they now have 20 offices, lending $3.5 billion, getting 2.75 percent of every penny they lend right off the top, that nobody knows about, forcing people to participate in their program and pay $50 a month for 5 years in order to get the loan, and the bank actually collects the money for them as if somehow it were part of the loan. I could go on and on. But we are not here to debate dramatic reforms in CRA. We are only trying to do two things, and here they are; here is the concern. You have heard the number.

Only in 1 percent of the cases is a protest filed. Well, remember that in 90-some-odd percent of the cases, where somebody wants to open or close a branch, regulators generally get no comments. Where the protests come are in the big mergers, and in some of the smaller ones that get contentious. But what happens more often than not is that rather than filing a protest, the protest group simply goes to the bank and says: I am going to file a protest and I am going to say—to quote one of the protesters in what they said about a bank in New England—I am going to say, A, you are a racist; and, B, you are a loan shark. That is my charge. I am going to make that charge, and you can either reach an agreement with me, or I am going to do that.

Now, here is the problem, and I don't think it is that hard to visualize. You have a bank and it has agreed to merge with another bank. And people don't know whether the merger is going to be approved or whether it is good or bad for the bank. So during that period, the stocks of these two banks are just fluttering. The bank literally has hundreds of millions—and sometimes billions with these big bank mergers—at risk. So it doesn't take a lot of imagination to see that when a protester shows up and says, ''Look, I am going to go to the Comptroller of the Currency and tell him you are a racist and that you are a loan shark; I am going to file a complaint and I am going to hold up this merger,'' the bank is under immense pressure to act as quickly as possible. What is happening in America today is that banks that are risking hundreds of millions, or billions, of dollars are settling these threats with secret agreements that the public knows nothing about, and they are often paying thousands, or hundreds of thousands, of dollars in cash payments.

Now, who ever said CRA had anything to do with cash? Yet, according to the CRA groups, $9 billion of cash payments have been made under CRA. I would like to ban cash payments, quite frankly. I don't think they are what CRA is about. I don't think some protester getting a rake-off of interest or getting a cash payment is what community lending is about. I think it is wrong, but I don't have the votes to do it and I didn't try to do it.

So, here are the two modest changes in our bill. Number 1, consider a bank that has been consistently in compliance with CRA. In fact, in its last 3 evaluations it has consistently been in compliance and is in compliance now. What do we require that Senator SARBANES and others so strenuously object to? We require that if a bank has historically been in compliance, if it has been evaluated for meeting its community lending requirements by its Federal regulator three times in a row and was found to be in compliance, and if it is currently in compliance, then somebody can still protest. They can call the bank all the nasty names they want to call them. In fact, the regulator is required to hold a hearing if they provide any complaint just saying ''I oppose it.'' There is a hearing.

None of that has changed. Anybody can say whatever they want to say. All our amendment says, however, is that before you can stop the action from going forward in the normal timeframe, the objector has to present substantial evidence. In other words, a bank that is historically in compliance, and is in compliance now, is deemed to still be innocent until proven guilty. And a protester can protest all they want to. But the regulator can't stop or delay the process unless some substantial evidence is presented.

Now, I know we have some distinguished attorneys here, and I am not going to get into any kind of legal debate with distinguished attorneys. Number 1, I object to duels between armed and unarmed men, especially when I am the unarmed man. Every once in a while, I have mercy on other types of issues where I am armed and others are not. I don't shoot down unarmed men.

But I want to remind those who aren't legal experts that ''substantial evidence'' is not a trivial phrase. It was chosen because it is not trivial. It is referred to 900 times in the United States Code. There have been over 400 instances in case law where the term ''substantial evidence'' has been defined. Let me give you some definitions that came from the Supreme Court, and they are important because they give examples of the evidence that is required to be submitted by a protester in order to stop a bank from doing something that they are qualified to do based on their record.

In other words, what do you have to have in order to say, ''This person is not meeting the requirement of law and I want him stopped''? Knowing that it may cost them hundreds of millions of dollars, even billions of dollars, what is the standard you have to meet? What does ''substantial evidence'' mean?

Here is what it means. Here are four definitions from Supreme Court rulings. ''Substantial evidence'' is understood to mean:

No. 1, ''more than a mere scintilla.'' More than a mere scintilla.

No. 2, ''such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a claim.''

Not that they have to accept it. Notice that the Court said that substantial evidence is ''such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept.'' They might not accept it. But they might accept it as adequate to support a claim.

No. 3, ''real, material, not seeming imaginary.''

And, finally, ''considerable in amount, value and worth.''

I fail to understand why there is an objection when a protester wants to come into a bank which has been in compliance with the lending laws of this country for three evaluations in a row and is currently in compliance, why anyone would object to saying that in order to stop the bank from exercising the right they have earned, the protester has to provide some evidence. I cannot understand why anybody would object to that. Why is it important?

I have spent a lot of time talking about why it is reasonable. But why is it important?

It is important because it eliminates the worst abuses where someone comes in, they have no evidence, they have no facts, there is no abuse. They simply say, ''I will go away if you can give me some money.'' In this case, if they can't provide substantial evidence, they can't stop the process. But it doesn't prevent the regulator from saying, ''You have to do a new CRA review.''

Our colleague talked about what regulators could do. Nothing in our amendment would prevent the regulator from saying, ''Every time you want to merge, we have to have a new CRA evaluation.'' We don't stop that. All we are trying to do is to require some substance—and require someone to have the evidence—before they can stop the application process and cost taxpayers and investors hundreds of millions of dollars.

It is a strange thing to say in America. But I am going to say it, because I believe it. I will never forget when the American Airline pilots were getting ready to go on strike. I met with some Members of Congress to talk about what Congress could do because of the disruption that might be caused by the strike. I finally said, ''Look. You know, it is no secret that most unions do not love me, but I believe in freedom. And people have a right to strike, if they want to strike. And I am not voting for a bill that prevents them from striking.'' One Member of Congress, who will go unnamed, said,

''Well, wait a minute. These pilots make $150,000 a year. I am not worried about their rights.''

Let me tell you why that is relevant. One of the reasons this is so hard to discuss is that everybody has the idea that these bankers are rich. So we are not worried about their rights.

When do our rights end based on how much money we have? I can understand and I accept that you ought not have more rights because you have more money, but you ought not have less.

The idea that we would let someone or some group impose hundreds of millions of dollars of costs on other citizens, many of whom are stockholders—my teacher retirement fund, I am sure, is invested in some financial institution, or in a thrift. I don't know, because I don't keep up with what they are invested in. But every teacher in America is invested in stocks of some of these companies.

How is it right to let somebody literally deprive them of millions of dollars without providing any evidence?

So that is the substance of the first committee provision. I don't know why it requires so much discussion, but it does. I don't mind discussing it, though, because it is something that I feel strongly about.

This is about abuse. This is about a wrong that is going on in America today, right now. The fact that there are many success stories in CRA, the fact that there are probably wonderful people in almost every circumstance, does not justify looking the other way at the kind of abuses that are occurring. We are not trying to fix them here.

We are going to have a lot of hearings this summer. We are going to bring a lot of people in and put them under oath. We are going to have a major GAO study. We are going to look at this thing in great detail.

We are just trying to deal with two little commonsense things that ought to be done in the bill. I talked about the first. What is the second?

The second committee provision exempts little banks in rural areas from CRA. Why? Because the regulatory burden on these very small banks in very rural areas is oppressive.

First of all, these are banks that are not in standard metropolitan areas. They are by and large serving areas that do not have a city, much less an inner city to serve. So making them comply with these laws that are really aimed at inner-city lending makes absolutely no sense.

Why is this provision important? Because these banks—as documented in the letters they have written to us—are spending $60,000 to $80,000 a year complying with CRA.

I have used the figure before, but it fits here, and I want to use it again. Since 1990, there have been 16,380 CRA examinations of these little banks in rural areas, and only three of them have been found to be substantially noncompliant. But even though three bad actors have been found, $1.3 billion in compliance costs has been imposed on these little banks that have only between 6 and 10 employees. It is a very heavy regulatory burden.

Let me read just a couple of letters from the banks that are affected. Our colleague from Illinois was here. I am sorry he left. We probably have more letters from Illinois than any other State. But he won't get to hear it. But I am going read three of his letters, and then the others.

This is a letter from Franklin Bank in Franklin, IL. I don't know how big the bank is, but it is small. Their building looks like a house. Here is what he says:

> Were it not for the time-consuming paperwork involved, we in small banks in rural America would find CRA laughable. Our community is our business. We wrote this book long before the government did. Offering us exemption from the requirements of the Community Reinvestment Act would not change the way we do business, but it would relieve us of the mounting paperwork from this examination for one day every other year.

In other words, relief by exempting them—they don't change their business. They are just not going to have the examination to do and the paperwork and cost of about $80,000 involved in it.

This is from Security Bank of Hamilton, IL:

> Our experience is that regulators struggle to fill out their questionnaires when we are being examined as most sections do not apply. Then we really have to stretch to imagine our community of 3,000 having the same problem as Chicago or Los Angeles as none of the demographic stratifications fit.

This is the First National Bank of Nokomis, IL. It doesn't say how big they are:

> I truly believe we could free up one-half to one employee in our banking operation to put in positive service thereby expanding our service to the community we serve.

That is what they believe they could do if we could reduce the regulatory burden on them.

They don't say in their letter, but my guess is they don't have even 10 employees. So when they are talking about freeing up one half of one employee, they are talking about a tremendous reduction in their cost and their regulatory burden.

Let me read a couple of other letters. This is from the Cattle National Bank in Seward, NE:

> Since the origination of public disclosure of CRA examinations, we have not had one person from our community ever request the information.

I remind Members that CRA went into effect in 1977 and public disclosure went into effect about a decade after that.

So for about 12 years nobody in this little community has ever raised a CRA question. The only people who have raised those questions are bank consultants.

The next bank is Copiah Bank from Crystal Springs, MS:

> Our compliance officer, Gerry Broome, and his assistant have spent many research hours and reams of paper in their efforts to comply with mandated requirement's paper work. We have even had to outsource some of its checkpoints to a compliance consultant from time to time.
>
> * * * * *
>
> As an $83 million community bank, we feel an obligation to help you in your efforts toward easing our paper work burden.

Lakeside State Bank, New Town, ND:

> As a former bank examiner for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which included consumer compliance experience, and as a banker for over 15 years I believe I have a good understanding of the intent and the workings of the CRA.
>
> * * * * *
>
> Over the 47 years of our existence we have provided financing to virtually every main street business in our town, our customer base includes approximately 80 percent of the area farmers and for the last several years over 50 percent of our loans have been to American Indians.
>
> The law [he means the CRA law] is a heavy burden because of the expansiveness of the regulations and the paper requirements of compliance. We spend hours documenting what we have already done, rather than spending that time more efficiently by doing more for our community.

The Farmers and Merchant Bank of Arnett, OK:

> I am the CEO as well as the chief loan officer, compliance officer and CRA officer. I have to wear so many hats because we are small and have a staff of only 7 including myself. CRA compliance, done correctly, takes a lot of time, which takes me away from my primary responsibility of loaning money to my community. It has almost gotten to the point that lending is a secondary function. It seems like we have the choice of lending to our community or writing up CRA plans showing how we would loan to the community if we had time to make loans.
>
> * * * * *
>
> Large banks can hire full time CRA officers and other compliance personnel to administer CRA programs but, small banks cannot. . . .

Redlands Centennial Bank:

> We spent approximately $80 thousand of our shareholders' money last year supporting this ill-defined regulation. Even the regulators who examined us were hard pressed to give us specific definition on how we might better implement this regulation.
>
> * * * * *
>
> I am urging you to get rid of the nonsensical CRA yoke. Keep up the fight because there are a lot of us out here who are too busy balancing, making a living with government regulation in this crazy business.

Chemical Bank North is a bank of $74 million in Grayling, MI:

> As it is, we must devote disproportionate resources to creating and maintaining the ''paper trail'' that the current CRA regulations require. Our board members must attend time consuming CRA Committee meetings and our officers and staff members spend significant valuable time preparing reports and keeping records that serve no purpose other than to keep us in compliance with a regulation that attempts to enforce from a regulatory standpoint what we do everyday in the normal course of our business. . . . I would estimate that we devote the equivalent of a full time employee to all aspects of CRA compliance.

The First National Bank of Wamego, KS—I mispronounced Wamego yesterday; the Presiding Officer was from Kansas and I appreciate him correcting me. This is a $65 million bank, which means this bank probably has five or six employees.

Our bank was listed two years in a row as the ''best'' bank in Kansas to obtain loans for small businesses. . . . [This bank also was rated outstanding on CRA.]

* * * * *

[O]ur outstanding grade did not make us a better bank. The CRA did not make us make loans we wouldn't have made. The CRA did take a lot of employees' time to document that we were an outstanding bank.

This is from Nebraska National in Kearney, NE. This is a very small bank. In fact, I think this might be one of the smallest banks in America that was not a recent start. This bank has $34 million in assets, so we are talking about probably four or five employees working in this bank:

We do not make foreign loans, we don't speculate in derivatives, and we don't siphon deposits from this area to fund loans elsewhere. Instead, like virtually all the banks under $250 million in assets we provide home loans, business loans, farm loans, and construction loans. We don't do this because of the Community Reinvestment Act but because it makes good business sense. . . . I bitterly resent every minute of my time and that of my staff spent to comply with this regulation because it takes time away from productive duties.

I feel the regulation is now being used by consumer activist groups to ''shakedown'' banks seeking regulatory approval for expansion or merger.

Finally, from American State Bank, an independent bank, from Portland, OR:

As one of the oldest and most strongly capitalized African American-owned banks west of the Mississippi River, Portland-based American State Bank supports your position on CRA exemption for non-metropolitan banks.

We also urge you to explore exempting from CRA requirements minority-owned commercial banks. . . . Today, minority-owned banks still maintain their focus on serving our nation's minority communities and their citizens. It is redundant, at best, to impose CRA requirements on banks whose sole purpose is to serve minority citizens. At worst, it compels minority banks to sustain burdensome expenses and administrative costs and subjects banks to a bureaucracy largely unaware of the realities of the inner-city marketplace.

I have covered a lot of territory. Let me sum up with the following points. The Bryan amendment before us has two parts. It does a whole bunch of bad things, and it undoes two little good things. What are the whole bunch of bad things it does? It is the largest expansion in the regulatory burden of CRA in American history; it would expand CRA to noninsured institutions, violating the very logic of CRA, which is, banks get deposit insurance that is partly subsidized by the Government, so it is reasonable for the Government to force them to do things that have a community benefit.

The proposed substitute would expand CRA to institutions that are not insured. It would expand CRA approval as being necessary to sell insurance and securities in a bank, something that is not required today and it is occurring every day today without CRA approval.

The proposed amendment would impose a potential fine of $1-million-a-day on bank officers and bank board members without any evidence whatsoever that abuses occur. In fact, as I pointed out over and over again, with small banks in rural areas having 16,380 examinations at a cost of about $80,000 in annual compliance, where the banks had to pay $1.3 billion to comply with all this regulation, all this paperwork—all of these evaluations, 16,380 of them, found only three banks that were substantially out of compliance. So, the regulatory overkill already exists. Why you would want to come in and subject small banks and large banks, and their officers and board members, to a million-dollar-a-day for if their institution fell out of compliance with CRA, I cannot understand. In fact, I have never heard an explanation for this draconian change in law.

I read earlier, and I will not read again, letters from the American Bankers Association and the Independent Bankers Association saying how the pending amendment will make it virtually impossible for them to get quality people who will serve on bank boards. They also talk about the cost of liability insurance, which will explode if you are going to impose these new potential penalties on banks, their officers and directors, all in the name of abuses that apparently exist at the extreme level in .03 percent of all CRA examinations.

Those are all the bad things the substitute does. What are the good things that it undoes? Is that a word, ''undoes''? I guess so. To try to curb some of the abuses—and the abuses are very similar to the strike lawsuit that we dealt with 2 years ago, and again last year.

The abuse basically occurs during the critical moment when a bank is trying to merge with another bank or sell or engage in some new activity: it's at that moment the bank has a lot at stake and is most vulnerable. Under current law, any protester can come in and threaten to hold the whole thing up. This creates immense pressure on the bank to settle with that protester and either commit some bank action or pay the protester cash in return for not filing a protest.

A lot of rhetoric has been used on this, and I am being redundant because when other people say something wrong, you have to say it right twice to get people to get it straight. Our amendment does not prevent people from protesting. They can protest. Our amendment does not prevent people from filing complaints. They can file complaints whether they have any facts or whether not. Our amendment does not prevent the regulator from holding a hearing. Under current law, the regulator has to hold a hearing if somebody complains. We do not change that. Our amendment does not prevent the regulator from forcing an entirely new CRA evaluation.

All our amendment says is: If you have a bank that has been in compliance with CRA over a 3-year period, and if they are currently in compliance, a protester can still file a protest, but in order to stop the bank's application from going forward, the protester has to provide substantial evidence.

Then I went through and read from Supreme Court cases, how you define ''substantial evidence''—more than a scintilla; enough that a reasonable person might believe that what you are saying is true. Those are not high standards.

Why anybody would want to let protesters potentially impose hundreds of thousands of dollars or millions of dollars in losses on a bank and their stockholders, many of whom are members of teacher retirement programs and other broad investment groups, without providing any evidence whatsoever to back up their claim, I don't know. But that is the debate we are having.

So, that is what the amendment does and does not do. It is not a safe harbor. It is not a safe harbor. It is not a safe harbor. The Secretary of the Treasury came up with the use of that term and now all critics use it, even though it is verifiably false. This is a rebuttable presumption. Stated another way, if a bank has a good record of compliance and it is deemed by the regulator to be in compliance, it is innocent until proven guilty. You have to present some facts to substantiate your claim if you are going to stop it from going forward. You don't have to have any facts to state your opinion. You don't have to have any facts to declare that there ought to be a hearing. You don't have to have any facts to protest. But before the regulator can stop it, you have to present some facts.

The final provision that would be undone here is the eminently reasonable exemption of very, very small, very, very rural banks that on average have a regulatory burden of about $80,000 a year in complying with CRA, even though in the last 9 years, with 16,380 examinations of these small, rural banks, only three have been deemed to be substantially out of compliance with CRA.

If you were from a small town like I am, or you represented a State that had a lot of little bitty towns and a few little bitty banks left and you went to those banks, you would discover why only .03 percent have been found out of compliance in 9 years. If you are from a small town and you have a bank with four or five employees, your bank ends up lending to everybody in town because they have nobody else to lend to. That is basically what the debate is about.

I wish every person could, in some simple form, get all these facts. But it takes time to debate them, and I am grateful to have the opportunity. I am sure we will get some more opportunity today. But I thank my colleagues for their patience, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). The Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Bryan amendment, which contains, in my opinion, a balanced approach to the Community Reinvestment Act as well as a bipartisan spirit enjoyed in the last session of Congress.

I also want to say, to my colleague from the State of Texas, how much I respect his expertise in this area as well as his dedication to this cause. But I must also respectfully disagree and say to all those who are concerned about this issue that if there are problems with this amendment, in terms of the fines that can be imposed or other details, let's correct them. If, in the past, overly zealous advocates have used CRA as an excuse for extortion, then let's prosecute them. If there are other problems, let's correct them.

Let's throw out the bathwater, not the baby. At the dawn of the 21st century, let us not turn back the clock and deny to thousands of Americans, because of the color of their skin, because of their race, because of their income, the right to access one of the basic tools for empowerment and progress, and that is credit and the ability to start a business or build a home. We cannot return to those days.

I should also say I am somewhat disappointed that we have arrived at this impasse, because this is important legislation. It is my great hope we will ultimately get it enacted, because it is important to the financial services industry, insurance, banking, as well as other industries that need access to credit and to consumers across our country. This should not be a partisan debate. In fact, in the very recent past, it has been nonpartisan or even bipartisan. Unfortunately, it has become an issue that has broken down more and more along party lines.

I especially regret this has happened in large part because of efforts to curtail and restrict the Community Reinvestment Act, which the vast majority of evidence has suggested works well, has served the American people well in the past, and I believe is critical to equal opportunity for all Americans as we advance to a new century and a new millennium.

We are increasingly relying upon the use of market forces to create opportunity. We are asking the American people to be self-sufficient, to save, to work hard, to be personally responsible, and I support those trends. At the same time, we need to ensure that the market system works for all Americans and that every American, regardless of whether that person happens to come from the right side of the tracks or the wrong side of the tracks, be he or she Hispanic, African American, Native American or any other race, creed or religion in this society, that they have access to those tools in the marketplace that will allow them to be self-sufficient, to build a better way of life for themselves and their families.

It is important that we pass this law, as I mentioned. It is one of the areas in which we are internationally competitive. It is important that we pass legislation that will allow our financial services industry to provide comprehensive services to their customers and to compete with our foreign competitors.

It is important that consumers be allowed to have access to these services on a coordinated basis, on a one-stop shopping basis. It is better for consumers as well. It means jobs for your State and my State and the rest of the 48 States across the United States of America, not just in insurance, which is important to the State of Indiana, or investment banking or in securities or on the part of insurance company employees, agents, and brokers across this country. It means jobs for small businesses and industries in the State of Indiana and elsewhere that need access to low-cost credit, so that they can invest, be more competitive, more productive and create good-paying jobs across our country. This is an issue not just for Wall Street, but for Main Street and for all of our streets across this country.

Unfortunately, there has been increasing partisanship. I think that is very, very important. Just last year this measure passed out of the Senate Banking Committee on a 16-to-2 vote. This year, unfortunately, it broke down exactly along party lines, 11 to 9.

Earlier this year, this provision, very similar to the amendment I am supporting today, passed out of the House of Representatives Banking Committee 52 to 8, with the vast majority of Republicans and Democrats supporting a continuation of a vital CRA and equal financial opportunity for all Americans.

The administration strongly supports this point of view. It is important to note that there is virtually no significant opposition from industry groups. I find it to be somewhat ironic that in the past, members of my own party have been accused of favoring legislation that would unduly hamstring business for ideological reasons. Today, the shoe seems to be on the other foot.

Let me be very clear what this dispute that has brought us to this impasse is not about. It is not about the organization under which future banking, insurance and security services will be offered. This is not really a dispute about operating subsidiaries versus the affiliates and holding companies, although there is a very serious dispute between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Chairman of the Federal Reserve on this issue. I am convinced that this can be resolved if we are given a chance.

Our dispute in this impasse is really not about the unitary thrift and whether commercial entities should be allowed to get involved in the financial services sector. That is a legitimate issue and a concern that I am convinced that, too, can be resolved if we can only deal with the issue currently before us. No, Mr. President, the dispute that has brought us to this point involves the Community Reinvestment Act.

I say to my colleagues and those listening and watching us at home that the Community Reinvestment Act has been good for America and good for Americans. It is working. Between 1993 and 1997—4 years—loans in low- and middle-income areas across our country for mortgages and building homes increased 45 percent, 45 percent in just 4 years; up 72 percent for African Americans; up 45 percent for Hispanic Americans; up 30 percent for Native Americans.

In the same period of time, actually just last year alone, there were 525,000 loans to small business men and women in low- and moderate-income areas, with total capital investments of $34 billion.

The Community Reinvestment Act has proven to be a boom for the American dream: families wishing to invest in home ownership, entrepreneurs wishing to start small businesses, Americans of every race, creed and religion wanting to participate in the American dream of a better way of life for themselves and for their loved ones.

The Community Reinvestment Act has worked in my own home State of Indiana. I won't go through all the cases here. From Gary, East Chicago, Indianapolis, South Bend, Lafayette, Bloomington, from the north to the south, from the east to the west, in communities large and small across my State, more Hoosiers have opportunities to make investments, make a decent income through a good job, buy a home, or start a small business. It has been good for our country. It has been good for my State.

Mr. President, I have a letter with me today that I think my colleagues will find to be of some interest. It was sent to me 2 days ago. It happens to be from the mayor of the city of Fort Wayne. The reason this may be of interest is that Fort Wayne is the second largest city in the State of Indiana. More than that, Paul Helmke, the mayor of Fort Wayne, happened to be my opponent in the race for the Senate last year.

Paul Helmke is a card-carrying member of the Republican Party. He also believes in opportunities for the citizens of Fort Wayne, business investment expansion, and home ownership. The mayor of Fort Wayne, my opponent in the election last year, has written me asking me to support a vigorous and vital Community Reinvestment Act.

I read from his correspondence:

. . . In Fort Wayne, banks have fulfilled their CRA requirements in creative and meaningful ways that have allowed us to leverage their resources with public and other private influences to help in our urban revitalization efforts.

. . . Perhaps the banking community would continue to see their investment in urban renewal as beneficial without the CRA requirements. But I do not think that it is wise to tempt fate.

Mr. President, neither do I. Involved mayors, like Mayor Helmke, who was the head of the mayors association last year, and I believe concerned Senators should rise to vote in favor of a vital and continually vigorous Community Reinvestment Act. On April 22 of this year, the Los Angeles Times wrote:

Before Congress voted to establish the CRA in 1977, many banks wrote off entire areas, refusing to lend to anyone who lived behind the red line.

The unfortunate truth is that while the vast majority of bankers across our country are involved and caring and doing a good job, both before and afterwards, too often there were bankers who were willing to accept deposits from some parts of our communities and not make loans to those very same parts of our communities. That is what CRA has established. It is a very strong track record of change.

Unfortunately, the bill, as unamended, before us poses a serious threat to the continuation of this progress we have seen across this country and in my State. My understanding is it would make 97 percent of all banks presumptively exempt from the requirements of CRA, 38 percent entirely exempt from the provisions of CRA, and would exclude the whole new areas banks hope to get into, entirely exempt, new users entirely exempt from the provisions of CRA. Mr. President, now is not the time to turn back the clock.

I will summarize before yielding the floor. Access to credit today is as important an opportunity for Americans of every walk of life as rural electrification was in the 1930s. Access to credit today is as important to the future well-being of all of our citizens as universal service to telephones was in the fifties and the sixties.

That is why I believe very strongly, as we ask Americans to be more responsible, to take charge of their own lives, as we encourage them to start homes and build businesses and to build for the future, we must give them the tools within the market economy to get the job done. That means equal access to credit as we approach the new millennium, not just to the few, not just to the powerful, but to Americans of every race, ethnicity, and those of even modest means. That, Mr. President, is why I rise in support of the Bryan amendment and urge my colleagues to vote in the affirmative for it.

Thank you. I yield the floor.

Mr. EDWARDS. Would the Senator from Indiana yield for a question?

Mr. BAYH. I would be glad to yield to my colleague from North Carolina.

Mr. EDWARDS. Thank you.

I am wondering, Senator BAYH, if you have had the same experience I have had. That is, I come from a State with many banks, including some of the largest banks in America, Bank of America being one. And having had many conversations with representatives of banks that are headquartered in my State, what I hear from them is, in fact, they enjoy participating in the Community Reinvestment Act. They take great pride in the work they do in the communities where they are located. They have absolutely no opposition to the Community Reinvestment Act and, in fact, do not oppose the Community Reinvestment Act provisions of the Democratic substitute offered by Senator SARBANES.

I am just curious whether the banks in your State of Indiana have had the same kind of reaction.

Mr. BAYH. I say to the Senator, I appreciate your question. As a matter of fact, one of the things that has been most impressive about this issue has been the uniformity of opinion among our banks in my State, large and small. They find that CRA has not been a significant impediment to their doing business, and really the industry groups are not in opposition at all. As a matter of fact, they support the intent behind this very, very important provision.

So we have a situation here where many of our community groups, including our mayors—as a matter of fact, I should mention for the RECORD I spoke to the mayor or Gary last night, as well, who believes very strongly that a city like Gary, which has been struggling to get back on its feet, needs this provision.

The banks are not opposed and, in fact, find it to be a very positive element.

Mr. EDWARDS. That is exactly the response I have had. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, I seek recognition at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. DODD. Will the Senator from North Carolina yield?

Mr. EDWARDS. Absolutely.

Mr. DODD. I want to say to my colleague from Indiana, before he leaves the floor, that was an excellent set of remarks. I think it points out the importance of this issue. I was particularly taken by the comments of your mayor of—which city was that, I ask?

Mr. BAYH. Fort Wayne.

Mr. DODD. Fort Wayne. This was your former opponent, I think, that my colleague pointed out. And I just say to my colleague, again, I have had a similar reaction from my mayors across my State. I know others have.

We have a tendency to think of these issues in terms of just what the banking community wants. And that is an important consideration for us, as we certainly deal with financial institutions. But I think—and I would ask my colleague from Indiana whether or not he would agree with this—that, in addition to the banking community, we bear a special responsibility, as Members of the Senate, to also consider what occurs to the customers' financial services.

I think sometimes that constituency is given a back seat when it comes to considering the implications of decisions we make. It is the farmer in Wyoming; it is the small businessperson in Connecticut; it is the consumer in Indiana; it is the minority business in North Carolina—all of us have consumers out here who use these financial institutions.

I commend my colleague from Indiana for a very thoughtful set of remarks, pointing out that side of the equation, the consumer side, the user side, the business side of our financial services, and I commend him again for his remarks.

Mrs. BOXER. Before the Senator yields, I wonder if I could pose a question for 20 seconds.

Mr. EDWARDS. Of course.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you. I also want to thank my colleague for his remarks. I wonder if he was aware of the comments made —and this gets to the Senator from North Carolina—by the President of Bank of America about this program. If not, I would like to put them in the RECORD. If he answered that question——

Mr. ENZI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I believe the Senator from North Carolina has the floor. The question was being directed to the Senator from Indiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina does have the floor and may only yield for a question.

Mrs. BOXER. I would be happy to direct this to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. EDWARDS. Yes, absolutely. I am aware, I say to Senator BOXER, of the comment by Hugh McColl, who is head of Bank of America. I think I can quote him exactly.

Mrs. BOXER. I would like you to do that right now in the RECORD, because it is a very telling comment.

Mr. EDWARDS. I think it is, too. He says, ''My company supports the Community Reinvestment Act both in spirit and in fact. We have gone way beyond its requirements. We have had fun doing it. And we have made a business out of it.''

Now, here is the head of the largest, or one of the largest, banks in the country, headquartered in my home State. I happen to know that Mr. McColl has, in fact, strongly supported the Community Reinvestment Act. His bank has gone above and beyond the call of duty in that respect.

Mrs. BOXER. One more question before I yield to my friend.

I find it very interesting that Senators would get up and attack this program as if it were some kind of a giveaway program. These bank presidents have told us that these loans are very profitable. As a matter of fact, I wonder if the Senator is aware, at least in California—and now we do have a tie in because, as you know, Mr. McColl, although headquartered in your fair State, does a lot of business in my fair State—they have told us that they are doing very well with their CRA ratings. As a matter of fact, they are telling us—and I want to know if the Senator was aware of this—that their portfolio of CRA loans—these are loans that never used to be made in the old days—are just as profitable, that portfolio, as their other loans. Is my friend aware of that?

Mr. EDWARDS. Yes, I say to Senator BOXER, I am aware of that, and that is what I have been told consistently by the banks located in North Carolina.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend, and also my friend from Indiana, because I think the notion that somehow, if you are for CRA, you are for doing something with social value and yet interfering with business is simply not true. These loans are profitable loans. They are good for the community. It goes back to the old adage: ''If you do good, you do good things, you will do well.''

I hope we will stand together in favor of this program that does good things for people and does well for the banks.

I yield back to my friend.

Mr. EDWARDS. Thank you, I say to Senator BOXER.

I will add to what she just said: When you do good things and have the impact that the Community Reinvestment Act has had, it does not just inure to the benefit of the people who are directly affected, it inures to the benefit of all of us.

Mrs. BOXER. Absolutely.

Mr. EDWARDS. I want to address that in just a moment. I want to say, first, in relation to the remarks of my friend, the Senator from Indiana, who has become a very close friend and colleague of mine during our tenure—we came to the Senate together—that I am proud of what he had to say. I completely agree with everything he had to say, and his remarks particularly about turning back the clock on this very, very important piece of legislation ring true with me and I think ring true with most Americans.

Mr. President, if I may, there is a really critical thing I want Americans, who are listening to this debate, to understand. This is not some obscure piece of banking legislation that has nothing to do with their lives.

It is really important for Americans to understand that this bill—I refer now to Senator GRAMM's bill—that this bill will have, or has the potential to have, a dramatic effect on the lives of every American, not just the poor, not just minorities, not just the elderly, not just those who run a small business or want to get into the family farming business, and not just those people who are directly impacted by the Community Reinvestment Act.

This bill has the potential to affect every single one of us, every single American. And here is why. Because it weakens the Community Reinvestment Act. Because of CRA, we provide low-income housing, we provide single-family housing, we give families a place to live, we give small businessmen and women, minority and otherwise, a chance to engage in entrepreneurship, to open their own business. We give the people the opportunity, in my home State of North Carolina, to start a small farm, and expand that farm.

Every time we provide these kinds of economic opportunities to people, every time we give families, core families, a chance to live together, to stay together, and not be spread out, we do a number of things: No. 1, we reduce crime; No. 2, we create pride, an extraordinary amount of self-esteem that may not have existed before; and we give people an opportunity to do something they otherwise might not be able to do—own their own home or open their own business.

I speak to every American when I say, crime, core family values, the fact that the folks who benefit directly from the Community Reinvestment Act are folks that we may otherwise, as a Government, have to support, these are things that affect every American. This bill is not some obscure banking bill that has nothing to do with people's lives. The Community Reivestment Act has a dramatic effect and has had a dramatic effect on every single American. I think it is critically important for people to understand that.

I think it is also important for them to understand what exactly Senator GRAMM's bill does to the existence of the Community Reinvestment Act. I have heard the bill described by him and others as being ''Community Reinvestment Act neutral,'' as to the overall purposes of this legislation.

I might add parenthetically that I strongly support the idea that banks ought to be able to expand services and affiliate with other financial institutions. They ought to be able to sell insurance. They ought to be able to sell securities. It is good for banks. We have a lot of banks in my State that need to do this and want to do it and, I think, ought to be able to do it. It is also good for consumers because it creates competition, and it is a good thing for consumers to have access to these services when they go to their banks. I strongly support those opportunities.

Here is the problem. Under existing law, when a bank seeks to expand, either by merger or by opening a branch, then its CRA rating is one of the things that is taken into consideration. Under the provision that is proposed by Senator GRAMM, when a bank seeks to expand services by affiliating with a company that sells insurance, by affiliating with a company that sells securities, CRA, or the Community Reinvestment Act, plays no role whatsoever.

Let me say this in the simplest terms. A bank with a completely unsatisfactory Community Reinvestment Act rating that has been determined by regulators to not be complying with the law, to not be doing what it should be doing with respect to investing in its community, I am talking about a totally noncompliant bank, that factor cannot even be taken into consideration in determining whether that bank should be allowed to sell insurance and whether it should be allowed to sell securities.

This bill, Senator GRAMM's bill, is not CRA neutral for one simple reason. We are, by virtue of this law, expanding what banks can do, allowing them to sell insurance, allowing them to sell securities. If we don't take CRA, which presently applies to applications for branching and mergers, and apply it as a precondition for these new services they are going to engage in, then we have withdrawn from CRA. We will have cut the underpinnings from CRA. It is something we shouldn't do—it is fundamental—we shouldn't do. CRA compliance ought to be a consideration when banks seek to engage in the expanded services permitted under this bill in exactly the same way, in exactly the same fashion that it presently applies to their attempts to merge with other banks or to their attempts to open other branches.

Now, I want to show a couple of examples with the indulgence of my colleagues.

I want to show a couple examples of what the Community Reinvestment

Act has done in North Carolina. I show now a photograph of a neighborhood, an economically disadvantaged neighborhood, a minority neighborhood in Durham, NC. This is a house that existed in that neighborhood.

As a result of the Community Reinvestment Act, and as a result of a bank partnering with local community groups, this house that we have just taken a look at was turned into this house.

If I could hold up the first photo just a minute, this was a crime-ridden, drug-infested community. As a result of the Community Reinvestment Act, we went from this to this—a place that the people who occupy this home are proud of; a low-income family was able to reside there. They take pride in their community. And as Reverend Brooks, who was part of this effort, said:

Before, there were drug dealers sitting on this corner. Now, we have homeowners hoping to be in these houses.

The Community Reinvestment Act. It changes communities. It changes families. It changes people's lives. It also changes the financial obligations that the rest of us, as Americans, have to support opportunities for people who want to support themselves. They just need a chance. What the Community Reinvestment Act does is, it gives those folks a chance.

I want to show one last photo. We have seen one house. This is a neighborhood. This is located in Durham, NC. This is a neighborhood that, again, has gone from a high-crime, drug-dealers-on-the-street-corner neighborhood to a model community. Can you imagine the difference between the way a family feels when they live in a community where right outside their doorstep people are selling drugs and all the houses are in terrible shape versus how they feel when they find themselves in a community that looks like this? Now they take pride in their community. The children growing up in this community take pride in where they live. It gives them a sense of self-esteem. It allows them an opportunity to have pride in themselves and their family that they otherwise might not have.

Now, there are some simple facts that I will speak to briefly that have emerged from the progress of the Community Reinvestment Act during the time it has been in place. If I could have the appropriate chart, please.

First of all, just since 1993, the private sector lending in low- and moderate-income areas, which is what we have been concerned with, has risen. From 1993, I guess this is the number of loans, 185,014 to 268,463 in 1997. Over a period of 4 years, there is an increase of 45 percent, almost a 50-percent increase in just 4 years, as a result of the Community Reinvestment Act.

The argument is made that—and we have heard a lot of it from Senator GRAMM over the course of the last 45 minutes to an hour—that the Community Reinvestment Act places an enormous regulatory burden on banks, unfairly so.

Well, I think, unfortunately, with all due respect to Senator GRAMM, the facts do not bear that argument out. What we find is that among CRA-covered institutions, when they make an application, for example, when a bank decides they are going to merge with another bank, when a bank decides they are going to expand and open a branch, and therefore they file a CRA application, 99 percent of those applications are never even challenged by community groups. So we start with a base of 99 percent where there is no challenge whatsoever. I would love the comments of Senator SARBANES on this in a moment, if he will. It is my understanding that the banks are not required to keep additional information as a result of this expansion of services. In fact, I think they use exactly the same base data that they kept previously. Is that correct, Senator SARBANES?

Mr. SARBANES. I say to the Senator, that is correct. Senator BRYAN spoke to that earlier, about the effort that was made in the mid-1990s to ease the regulatory burden on the banks.

Mr. EDWARDS. That is my understanding.

So we start with this basic idea that 99 percent of all the CRA-covered applications are not challenged at all. Then of the ones that are challenged, in only 1 percent of those cases are the applications denied. So 1 percent are challenged versus 99 percent that are not, and of that 1 percent, only 1 percent of those are denied.

I think the facts prove that CRA has not been an enormous regulatory burden and that banks, as has been the experience of Senator BAYH, as has been the experience of Senator DODD in Connecticut, and as has been my experience in talking to my bankers in North Carolina, the reality is they do not oppose the Community Reinvestment Act. They simply do not.

As the quote from Hugh McColl indicated earlier, banks take great pride in their opportunities to invest in their community. Our banks are good corporate citizens who do what they do because they take pride in it. They believe in the Community Reinvestment Act. They support it. They are not opposed to it.

Finally, this chart depicts what CRA has done in loans to low- and moderate-income communities. This is as of 1997, $34 billion in small business loans. I think it is really important that we understand we are not just talking about housing. We are talking about small businesses, entrepreneurs who want to get started and just need a leg up, giving them a chance to develop their own business, $34 billion as a result of the Community Reinvestment Act; $18.6 billion in community development, the kind of community development that we saw photographs of just a few moments ago; and critically important to my State of North Carolina—and I suspect Senator BAYH's State of Indiana—$11 billion in small farm loans. That is $11 billion going to small farmers as a result of the Community Reinvestment Act.

Here is what we have. We have a bill that makes a great deal of sense on the whole. We want to expand the services of banks. We believe—at least I believe—that banks ought to be able to engage in those services. But it is critically important that we maintain the viability and the vitality of the Community Reinvestment Act. It is important that we maintain it for a lot of reasons: because we need to support minorities; we need to support the elderly; we need to support low-income families; we need to support people who need or want to start their own small business or their own family farm. It makes good business economic sense for the country.

But what I want the American people to hear from me today, if they hear nothing else, is that this is not some obscure piece of banking legislation that is technical or difficult to understand. This legislation can affect their lives and, in fact, will affect the lives of every American every day because to the extent that we keep poor families together, to the extent that we reduce crime in this country, to the extent that we give people an opportunity to seek out good employment, to get jobs to support their own families—all those things that we as Americans believe in—when we do those things in conjunction, we as a country benefit. And to the extent that we look at it selfishly, we as individuals benefit because those people will not be supported by the Government. They won't be supported by taxpayers. They will support themselves. And the reality is that is exactly what they want. They want the opportunity to support themselves and to know the pride of homeownership. That is what community reinvestment is all about. That is the reason Senators SARBANES, KERRY, BAYH, DODD, and myself believe in it so deeply.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. EDWARDS. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. Let me compliment the Senator from Indiana and the Senator from North Carolina for their very strong presentations and their tremendous contributions to the Banking Committee. They both came on the committee this year, and we are barely a few months into their first session and they have both made extraordinary contributions to the work of the committee and to the work of the Senate. I simply want to say, as one Senator who has been here for a while, we are very honored to have them as part of the Senate and thankful and grateful to them for the contributions they make.

I wanted to ask the Senator this: In a letter we received from the U.S. Conference of Mayors, which in effect fits in with the point that both Senators were making about the importance of the Community Reinvestment Act—it is signed by close to 170 mayors from all over the country, besides the ones that are trustees and on the advisory board of the U.S. Conference of Mayors—it says:

. . .As mayors, we recognize that CRA has been an essential tool in revitalizing cities around this nation. In fact, there is now increasing recognition that the strength and economic health of whole regions require strong and vibrant cities. Creating new economic activity—new businesses, new jobs, new homeowners—is key to the revival of urban areas and their surrounding regions, CRA has been a key component to creating this new economic activity.

They go on later to say:

Prior to the enactment of CRA, banks and thrifts routinely redlined low and moderate-income neighborhoods in our nation's cities. The modest requirement in CRA that financial institutions meet the credit needs of their communities has led to the successful channeling of billions of dollars into localities.

Then they note that the bill brought out by the committee would severely weaken CRA. They say:

Unless the onerous CRA provisions are addressed and CRA is preserved and strengthened, we would urge strong opposition to the Senate bill.

I raise that with the Senator because it seems to me that it goes to this very point, including the pictures he was showing. We are talking about the elected officials who are right on the front line, so to speak, trying to deal with the problems of their communities, trying to bring them back and achieve revitalization and renewal. They, obviously, have come in feeling very strongly.

Mr. President, does the Senator feel that this is another perspective on the very point he was trying to make of the importance of CRA—not just for the people who directly benefit from it but for the broader community, for all of us, it seems to me, here is, in a sense, an endorsement of the very position the Senator has been enunciating.

Mr. EDWARDS. I think that is a wonderful indication, as the Senator put it, of the people on the ground, on the spot, seeing what is happening on a day-to-day basis, recognizing how critically important CRA is to this country. They see what is happening. I think it goes hand in hand with the fact that the banks—and I might add, I take great pride in the fact that every bank in North Carolina has a satisfactory CRA rating, every single one of them—are helping make a difference.

I think the fact that the mayors are behind it, the fact that the community groups are behind it, the fact that the banks themselves, the financial institutions, are behind it, I think all these things in combination go to prove a very simple point: The Community Reinvestment Act has been good for America. It is good for the specific groups it directly benefits, and it is good for all of us as Americans because it allows these folks to support themselves, which is what they want to do.

Mr. BAYH. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. EDWARDS. Yes.

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I echo the words of the Senator from Maryland in complimenting my friend from North Carolina for his eloquence and his insightful presentation on a continued, strong CRA. I observe and I can tell that he has taken his advocacy skills from the courtroom to the floor of the Senate, and the American people are better for it.

I compliment the Senator on his statement, which is built upon what the ranking member said in the statement he read from the Conference of Mayors. The Senator from North Carolina has become a dear friend and someone I have admiration and great respect for. I have heard the Senator mention on many occasions his dedication to ensuring that not just big cities or large institutions have opportunities, but that the farmers and small rural areas across North Carolina are afforded the same opportunities as those in the large cities and in the large financial institutions.

My question is this: Very often, this financial modernization bill is portrayed as something that just Wall Street and big institutions are interested in. The Senator touched on this briefly, and there is one thing I was hoping he can expand on. I wonder if his experience in North Carolina is the same as ours in Indiana, which is that CRA can be an engine for making sure that farmers and small businesses in rural areas are afforded the same kinds of opportunities as the mayors indicated the cities enjoy.

Mr. EDWARDS. I thank the Senator for his kind comments. He and I share the same feelings about each other. We share a lot of the same beliefs and values. There is no question that in the State of North Carolina we have had the same experience they have had in Indiana, which is that the Community Reinvestment Act, in fact, reaches out into rural, underserved communities, to small farmers, small businesses and communities that are chronically and economically disadvantaged and so desperately need its help. I think it is another example of how well the CRA has worked.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ABRAHAM). The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Will my colleague yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor.

Mr. KERRY. I would like to ask a question.

Mr. ENZI. The Senator doesn't even know what my statement would be. It would be difficult to yield for a question based on what I haven't said yet. There is a little bit of smoke that needs to be cleared out of the Chamber before we proceed.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I think the Senator was just asking you to yield in order to determine the procedure.

Mr. KERRY. I was just going to ask the Senator how long he was going to speak.

Mr. ENZI. I apologize. I have been listening to a lot of statements made, and I probably reacted in a way that I should not have.

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. ENZI. I will yield for a question, yes.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I will make the following point. We go back and forth to try to keep some balance in the debate.

I think when people have a real question that it is a logical thing to do. But when questions used really disrupt the flow of the debate so that you have long periods of time on one side of the aisle, I don't think it is quite fair. Obviously under the rules we can do it, but it can be done on both sides.

I would like to just suggest—we are going to vote on this at about 7 o'clock. We have plenty of time. Everybody can be heard. I would just like to suggest that we go back and forth. Everybody will get a chance to speak.

I urge our colleagues, if you have a real question on something you don't know—other than, ''Do you realize that our proposal is a great proposal and their proposal is a rotten proposal?''—yes, I realize that—if you have a real question, I think it makes sense. But in fairness to what we try to do in going back and forth, I urge people to wait for their time to speak so we have debate on both sides of the aisle. That is my point.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming has the floor.

Mr. ENZI. The answer to the question of the Senator from Massachusetts is, I think about 10 minutes.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SARBANES. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senator from Wyoming concludes that the Senator from Massachusetts be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I thank you for the recognition. I appreciate this opportunity to speak.

There is a certain amount of tension that builds up as you listen to some of the comments. The comments have been very good about CRA, the Community Reinvestment Act, in general, and in general nothing is going to happen to that CRA. The Community Reinvestment Act will still be in place. There will still be community reinvestment.

There are two changes in this bill that have been suggested. They make some changes. They make some important changes that may make CRA more viable, more valuable, more productive, and more useful.

There has been a tremendous escalation in the number of dollars being given in CRA commitments. We note that in 1995 the annual dollars were 26 million, almost $27 million. In 1998, the annual dollars were 694 million.

What do you suppose caused the increase? Are banks just discovering this? I don't think so.

A while ago you had the opportunity to listen to some of the contents of an agreement that was necessary in order to move on in a banking arrangement. There are a lot of clauses in that which are pretty disturbing to me.

It has been said that you are not hearing from the banks. If that letter has been used by many groups—you can see by the numbers that it is rapidly escalating—how many groups are being brought into this? There is a clause in that which says they cannot complain about CRA. That is freedom of speech? You cannot complain about somebody extorting money from you?

When banks are merging, there are a lot of stockholders who are nervous. There are customers who are nervous. They do not know whether they want to stay with the bank or not just because of the media turmoil that is caused by the merger.

Then you have a group coming in to take advantage of that crisis moment, that interest moment. They raise an issue. The bank isn't found to be out of compliance; the bank is in compliance. Under this bill, they have to have been in compliance for 3 years. For 3 years they have been following this.

We had some discussion earlier that there are audits done on this. They are checked on. It has always been shown that the ones that are most likely to be involved in this, the bigger banks, are also the best respondents. But there is a clause they have that says, first of all, they are not going to complain about CRA; second, they are going to write this Congress and say what a good deal CRA is.

Does that sound like a normal business transaction? Does that sound like something that businesses ought to be involved in?

If these things are really invalid actions by those banks, they ought to be taken to the highest level and the highest opportunity to punish. But that destroys the value of the company. So they enter into agreements like this and send letters that say that the CRA is OK.

This bill does not gut CRA. It keeps the same program in place. If a bank, which is audited regularly, has met the criteria for 3 years, and meets it at the moment, then actual objections have to be lodged. It seems like common sense to me. It doesn't sound like doing away with the program. It is just common sense.

Small banks were mentioned. There is a change for small banks in here, too, if they have under $100 million in assets. I think if any of you look into banks, you will find that it is a very small bank that has five or six employees. You will probably find that one of those employees is dedicated to just doing CRA—doing CRA so they can prove that they don't have a problem. It is only rural banks.

We have had these letters from Fort Wayne and some other cities. Those aren't rural banks. I don't care what their asset base is. They don't get this advantage.

We are talking about the very small communities. I have those in Wyoming. Those very small communities, even if they only have one or two employees, have to have somebody dedicated to doing the CRA. It is a paperwork experience. They are having to fill out paperwork to prove that they are not in violation in a community where there may not even be minorities. So they cannot rest as well, because they don't have a classification they can meet in their customer base in their community.

Three-fourths of the banks are rural banks. It was said that we had an amendment that put that at $2 million. I also want to point out a comment that was made about these small banks. There were over 16,000 of them audited for CRA. There were three out of compliance. According to my record, there were three out of compliance. There are some that get lower ratings, and I have explained why they are lower ratings. But even if they were considerably more out of compliance, it is not good auditing to do it under that basis.

I am an accountant. I am the only accountant in the Senate. When you have criteria for auditing businesses, you come up with higher statistics than that kind of a base, or even a higher base than that. You have to. Otherwise, you are wasting resources.

What I am saying is that some of these benefits that are talked about may not have been worth it even on the basis of the auditing costs. We are talking about the basis of the business cost as well complying with this law.

These banks are community banks—rural banks. In Wyoming, the bank may be 100 miles from another bank. Who do you think they serve? People from other States in the Nation don't mail their money there. It is the people who live in that community, and they expect and they get service, or the bank goes out of business.

We have heard some statistics about how business has increased because of the CRA. We have heard statistics about how loans have increased because of the CRA. Take a look at the timeframe. It wasn't the CRA that drove up the number of people buying houses or drove up the opportunity for more people to go into business. It was the interest rate. The interest rate plummeted. More people could make house payments. More people bought houses. It wasn't that the banks were being forced into this; the banks are already precluded from having to do bad loans. They are not loaning to just anybody who comes in the door. They are just doing a lot of paperwork to show that the loans they are granting are valid loans and the ones they are not are not valid loans.

The economy makes the difference in whether new businesses start and whether people buy more houses. The exemption for small banks will solve some problems for small banks, and it probably ought to be a higher amount than that.

Again, if you are looking at auditing statistics, you could double or triple that number without affecting the numbers that are out of compliance; hardly at all.

I want to reiterate again that that amount of extortion to the big banks has gone from $27 billion up to $694 billion. That is going to be something on an ever-increasing basis. As more people get into the business of taking on CRA, taking a base and a commission off of that, none of this goes to the sector of the community we are talking about.

CRA is important. CRA is included in the bill. CRA only makes two changes. It does not gut the bill. There are two changes: One for small, rural banks so we don't have to spend so much annually complying with CRA and they instead can put it into their community, which is where they put their money; the other one is for the big banks so they don't have to write these required letters we heard to their Congressman saying they don't have any problem with CRA.

This is not an attempt to gut CRA. This is an attempt to make it more valuable, more useful and more applicable in the banks.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank particularly the Senator from Maryland, the ranking member, for his leadership on this issue. I regret that the Senate is in the position it is in on this particular bill.

I have previously supported financial modernization. We have voted on it in several incarnations. Last year I was among those who happily sent this bill, what was then H.R. 10, to the Senate with a very significant vote of support in the Banking Committee, because we believed overwhelmingly that we had the right balance between the interests of the financial services community, whom we are all concerned about and we all understand need the needs of that community; at the same time we had what most people thought was a very fair and sensible recognition of the virtues of the CRA.

In the waning hours of the last Congress, all Members remember there was a single, very adamant voice of opposition, the now chairman of the committee, who in fairness has deep-rooted beliefs about it, but who frankly stood in a very, very small number last year who ultimately, because of the timing of the bill, was able to prevent an entire bill from passing the Senate.

Now we are back here once again revisiting the important imperatives of financial modernization. This year many of us who want to vote for that financial modernization are put in the very difficult position of having to take a position of fundamental principle that because we believe so deeply that the CRA provision is so disturbed by this bill that a strong relationship that has existed and worked with a profound, positive impact for people in this country, is being sufficiently undone, even attacked, and requires that we oppose the bill in its current form.

I am used to going through Pyrrhic exercises in the Senate, regrettably with increased frequency. It is a sad commentary on the nature of the legislative process today that sometimes measures move through here in a very partisan way and then we ultimately wind up in the conference committee with the administration negotiating and things are changed.

That may or may not happen here. It certainly didn't have to be this way. We could have arrived at some kind of fairminded compromise that reflected the views of the vast majority of Senators. Instead, we find ourselves with a bill that is not just about financial modernization. It is also about a significant reduction in the capacity of the Community Reinvestment Act to work. Many Members believe very, very deeply we can do better than that.

I think we obviously need to recognize that U.S. financial institutions as a whole are the most efficient providers of financial services in the world today. There have been remarkable changes in the marketplace in the last years. All Members ought to pay proper tribute to the virtues of the entrepreneurs who have themselves undertaken to put those changes in place.

I don't think Congress can stand here with a straight face and take entire credit for the virtues of the economy that we are living in today. I do think we take partial credit because I think it was a courageous effort in 1993 to face up to the realities of the deficit and to come up with a solid deficit reduction act. In addition to the congressional efforts, Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Fed, deserves enormous credit for his courage during the banking crisis of the last years of the 1980s and the beginning of the 1990s when he took bold action to help refinance the banks, as well as his remarkable stewardship of monetary policy itself.

Finally, it seems to me a very significant amount of the credit goes to the companies themselves and the CEOs who saw a change coming down the road, who responded to the demands of the 1980s when people were writing books about Japan, Inc. and writing off American enterprise and suggesting we needed a wholesale adoption of another model. Indeed, our model has proven perhaps at times to be excessive and at times even to be insensitive, but nevertheless to be way ahead of any other capacity or structure in the world in the marketplace.

Increasingly, one of the reasons for that success has been the blurring of the lines between banking, insurance, and securities. We need to do our part. We are way behind the curve, years behind the curve. Were it not for the thoughtful and judicious steps taken by the regulators themselves without congressional impetus we perhaps wouldn't have been able to accomplish some of what we have.

Now is the time to respond by breaking down the artificial legal barriers of an outdated era, the barriers that prevented banks, security firms and insurance companies from affiliating. It is time we take the step to ratify the liberation of financial service companies so they can provide a broader array of services to consumers and corporate customers. I don't think we should hesitate to do it. This is several years overdue.

It is regrettable that we find ourselves in this position, after the Senate Banking Committee overwhelmingly by a 16–2 vote passed legislation. That is a fairly profound statement of the Senate Banking committee's willingness to move forward.

Here we are again, notwithstanding the challenge of financial modernization, with too many Members having to say no to moving forward because of the extreme measures being applied to the CRA itself.

That judgment is not ours alone. The Treasury Secretary, whose expertise and judgment over the last years, I think, has been without parallel, and the President of the United States, clearly on Secretary Rubin's recommendation, have stated that if the CRA measure stays as it is, this measure will be vetoed. Very simple: It is going to be vetoed.

We have a choice. We can either take a look at the CRA and make a judgment about what it accomplishes or we can go through another Senate exercise, send the bill out for veto and accept failure in the end for our capacity to be able to recognize the importance of the vast changes that I referred to a moment ago.

Let me say a few words about the CRA, if I may. The CRA is now more than 20 years old. It is very straightforward in concept. It is imminently reasonable. It says simply that banks have to provide credit to all the communities in which they take deposits. In other words, if a bank accepts deposits from a neighbor, that bank has some kind of responsibility to make loans available to creditworthy borrowers in those neighborhoods. That is common sense and it is fundamentally fair. This statement of reciprocity, of mutual responsibility, says an awful lot about the kind of country we want to be and the kind of country we are as a consequence of that kind of effort.

Let me speak for a moment to what the CRA has accomplished. It has helped to make more than $1 trillion in good, profitable loans to low-income areas, loans that bankers in my State and in States all across the country have said would not have been made without the law. It has given low-income communities of working families access to capital that is absolutely crucial to start a small business or to buy a home. And it has created new business opportunities for the banks themselves.

I would say that CRA is a fundamentally conservative, procapitalist law because it is not a handout; it is not something for nothing. It requires responsibility. It broadens the tax base. It broadens the capitalization capacity of a community. It brings people into the economic mainstream. It is a law that provides that all Americans, low- and moderate-income Americans, very often African Americans or Hispanic Americans, with the opportunity to buy a home or build a business if they are creditworthy.

The law is very clear on the last point, about creditworthiness. Loans have to be made with all of the normal concerns for safety and for soundness. The act itself could not have been more clear on that. It says that it has to help meet the credit needs of the local communities from which it is chartered, ''consistent with the safe and sound operation of such institutions.''

So, when the chairman of the committee says it is just an extortion program, I think there is such a level of extreme exaggeration and rhetoric in that, measured against what happens —and I will speak for a moment later to the question of extortion—because any bank has the ability to prove that any particular request was not able to meet the requirement of safe and sound operation of that institution. It is clear there are plenty of ways of doing that. And the balance of the weight is on the bank; it is really against the person requesting the credit, based upon the normal standards by which banks do business.

If you talk to most bankers, they will tell you the CRA loans perform as well as the rest of their portfolios. We are not looking at some enormous drag on banking institutions. In fact, some banks have begun to sell CRA loans on Wall Street in order to acquire more capital to make more CRA loans. Those are market forces that are being harnessed to expand opportunity and to grow our economy.

Here in the Senate, lately, we have heard a lot of talk about the ''opportunity society.'' The fact is, the Community Reinvestment Act exemplifies that notion. Credit is the economic lifeblood of every community, whether it is rich or poor. In our society, I think it is fair to say that historically we know that credit denied is also opportunity denied. When you deny hardworking Americans the chance to buy their own homes or start their own businesses, you are denying them the opportunity to share in the American promise.

This is a country where we have demanded a lot of our citizens. We expect them to make the most of their own lives, to take responsibility for themselves and for their families—largely because of the kinds of public policy decisions we have had the privilege of supporting here in the Senate with respect to this kind of economic sharing, if you will. We say to Americans: If you take the effort to live by the rules, to show your creditworthiness, to stand up within the economic structure, then we have the ability to help provide some of the tools to build that decent life for yourself. CRA was built on that.

But what we are considering today—and I heard the Senator from Wyoming and I have heard other Senators try to suggest this is really just a fixing of the CRA, that it doesn't really take it apart, it is going to leave it in place; we are just going to take, whatever, about 38 percent of the banks out from under it—those are the banks under the $100 million mark—and then we are going to make it a lot more difficult to apply any real measurement because we are going to change the standard by which we measure a violation; and, we are also going to change—according to the chairman—we are going to exempt banks from protest based on a 3-year satisfactory CRA record no matter what. And of course for the new activities we are empowering in this bill, it doesn't apply at all.

If ever there was a reason to make judgments about whether or not people are in compliance, it is when they are going to go out and engage in new activities that involve a whole series of new, larger roles within the economic community.

It seems to me it is inconceivable that, when they are going to take on those new kinds of responsibilities, you are suddenly going to say: We are not going to apply it; we are going to hold it where it is based on the theory of what CRA is supposed to be.

There is a reason that there is this kind of semi-subtle approach—I would not call it that subtle in the end. It is sort of a sledgehammer, but it is hidden enough in a way that people who are not completely familiar with it or with the process might say there are some redeeming factors here. But the fact is, the reason it is done in this sort of backdoor approach is that they learned they cannot do a frontal assault. They are not going to strike it altogether. It does not give people enough cover. So then you are left sort of analyzing: What is it that it is really going to do? What is going to happen here, in terms of this effort?

I believe the Bryan amendment will preserve the appropriate relationships by simply requiring that banks have and maintain a satisfactory CRA rating as a condition of exercising the new affiliations allowed in this bill. The Bryan amendment also strikes the safe harbor language and the exemption from CRA regulations for banks with less than $100 million of assets.

I listened to the chairman in the committee and I addressed this directly—raised this issue of extortion. I acknowledged at the time, and I will acknowledge on the floor, that I know of instances where people have come into a bank at the last minute, or at the moment of a merger, feeling the iron is hot, and of course when the bank wants the merger to move—carefully and without ruffled feathers. When the banks don't want the regulators suddenly getting their dander up at this critical moment of merger. So people take advantage of this opportunity.

Let me say, I know of some instances where there have been some marginally meritorious requests. But the record of the numbers of challenges—and I will address that in a moment—is very clear. It is so de minimis that no one can come to the floor with anything except pure anecdote, sort of a story here or there, that suggests that somehow there is some massive problem. What bank does not deal with community groups, all the time—this is not some sort of a last minute thing where there are a bunch of unknown people sitting at a table who can walk into the bank and the newspapers and the local television are all going to take them seriously. We are dealing, after all, with communities in which there are sets of relationships which everybody understands.

Most of the people within that community—the political leaders, the elected political leaders, the opinion leaders, the bankers, the businesspeople, the news people—understand the difference between legitimacy and extortion. They understand the difference between a community that is getting its fair share of community investment from a bank and a community that has been starved.

The fact is, if somebody is walking in, in some sort of bald-faced ''extortion effort,'' the bank can tell them no way and probably stand there with impunity and justification in doing so. If some banker is complaining about some illegitimate group coming in and holding them up, then that banker, frankly, ought to be fired for not having the courage and the guts to say: Look, we are meeting our standards. We have covered all the people who have made legitimate requests. Your request is not legitimate. It will not withstand the scrutiny in the light of day, and I am not going to be blackmailed, period.

Moreover, there are laws in this country already on the books, Federal laws, State laws and local—within counties—which district attorneys can prosecute with respect to those kinds of extortion efforts.

To suggest we are going to hold up the financial modernization efforts of the United States of America in a global marketplace over these anecdotal stories and not be able to find a common ground where we could fix or address the question of legitimacy—there are any number of language changes you could make in the standards or in the review process or in the process, all of which would be adequate to deal with the questions that the Senator from Texas has raised. But none of those is on the table, none of them. What is on the table is an entire exemption for a whole set of banks for whom this has worked very effectively. Moreover, what is on the table is an exemption of any consideration at all for these remarkable new powers that are going to be given to the banks which demand that you make some kind of judgment about what their commitment really is in their community.

You can talk to most of the bankers in the country right now.

The Wall Street Journal summed it up this way:

> Few Republicans share (the Chairman's) passion for the (CRA) issue. Bankers don't love the CRA but have largely made their peace with it. . . . ''CRA is part of the way we do business—we don't have any problems with it,'' says Pamela Flaherty, a vice president at Citigroup, Inc.

It is not industry leaders or community leaders who are driving this effort to undermine the CRA; it is the tendency in this Chamber and in our politics for ideology sometimes to work against the needs of communities and the interests of good public policy. When you measure what we are doing against the broad-based effort of the House of Representatives and the House Banking Committee to develop a more broad-based effort, you have a real confrontation with that approach.

If you look at some of the language we have heard about the CRA—comparing it to slavery—that is the kind of statement that just ignores the reality of what the CRA has accomplished.

The CRA, accepted by most bankers in this country, supported by people like Alan Greenspan, supported by major bankers in the country, has brought billions of dollars of credit into African communities, Hispanic communities, and Asian-American communities where thousands of banks have become active partners in creating opportunities for working families so they can become new homeowners and by providing the capital to budding entrepreneurs.

Slavery? That is an extraordinary comment. Too many of our colleagues are willing to forget the redlining and the racism that plagued lending in too many low-income communities in previous years. Before 1977, when the Community Reinvestment Act became law, many financial institutions believed they had absolutely no responsibility to the communities they served. Some financial institutions accepted racial and economic discrimination as part of their mortgage credit and business lending policy. It is because we found that too many banking institutions saw an ease to the profit line by moving into certain areas and an unwillingness to do business and reach out to Main Street with access to credit that we put the CRA in place.

Studies from that time period show that some financial institutions routinely invested more than 90 percent of their deposits that they received from low-income and minority neighborhoods into other areas. Ninety percent of the deposits that came from certain low-income communities went out to other areas. We have a fundamental responsibility not to start segmenting and dividing up the financial marketplace in a way that is going to allow people to turn away from that responsibility of inclusion that has benefited everybody in this country and has made this country a better place.

In Roxbury, MA, a low-income minority neighborhood within the city of Boston, only 20 percent of home sales were financed by financial institutions between 1975 and 1976. But in the prosperous suburbs of Boston, 83 percent of home sales were financed by financial institutions in the same time period.

The residents of Roxbury who were able to obtain financing were forced to use private mortgage companies, often at substantially greater expense than at financial institutions. The cost of denying private mortgage credit and business lending was literally devastating to the social and economic growth of Roxbury and other low-income neighborhoods in the inner city and in rural areas. Over time, property values and small business activity plummeted, and then crime and poverty escalated.

We can recreate that cycle if we want to go backward in time, Mr. President. Activities like that are exactly what brought the Congress to pass the Community Reinvestment Act in 1977, to encourage bank and thrift regulatory agencies to help meet the credit needs in all areas of the communities that they serve.

I don't think we can afford as a nation to roll ourselves back to those days when it was more power to the powerful, more money to those who already had the money, and less concern and less effort to try to be the country that all the speeches are about and all our days of celebration are about.

CRA has worked in Massachusetts where there has been more than $1.6 billion in commitments made by financial assistance institutions to assist low-income neighborhoods. These funds have been invested in home ownership, affordable housing development, minority small business development, new banking facilities and services, and it has made a difference in our inner-city neighborhoods from Roxbury to Jamaica Plain to the South End. Let me give a direct example.

Stacy Andrus, from Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, was a restaurateur struggling to make ends meet and retain her clientele in a competitive environment. She knew she had to be creative just to keep pace. She began toasting chips out of pita bread to serve as finger food before meals. As one might expect, those chips soon became the most popular item on the menu.

Like so many businessowners who know they have latched on to a great idea, she wanted to expand the operation. She tried to bring the concept to scale, but capital and credit were not available to her; they were not available in Jamaica Plain. Even though their deposits went into the bank, they did not come back into the community.

She could not find the help she needed until finally she started working with the Jamaica Plain Neighborhood Development Corporation. This corporation works within a network of small business providers that use CRA programs at local banks to secure funding for small businesses. With their help, Stacy obtained a $60,000 loan from BankBoston. As a result, her business expanded rapidly: She has leased a production plant in Jamaica Plain; she has residents of the low-income community working for her; she has put former welfare recipients on the payroll; she has 900 bags of chips rolling off the assembly line every single day. Thanks to CRA she has now made them one of the top selling gourmet snack foods in all of Boston, and she has major airlines interested in serving her chips to first-class customers. Without the CRA, Mr. President, the community of Jamaica Plain would not have received those kinds of benefits from economic development that has been generated. In addition, it is also giving low-income communities a shot at home ownership.

Julie Orlando is a single working mother of three. She wanted to buy a home for her family in Leominster, MA, which is Northwest of Boston. In the days before CRA, she would not have possibly been considered a likely candidate to own a home, but because the Fidelity Cooperative Bank was involved in the CRA coalition, she was able to obtain a $72,000 mortgage with no points. The city of Leominster provided additional assistance to Julie and her family. Because the Fidelity Cooperative Bank participated in the CRA coalition, she and her children can live with their first home, which is, after all, Mr. President, not just the American dream, but it is good for the community.

How many times have we heard of the problem of crime that comes from transient members of the community, people who do not have a stake in the community. That is exactly the type of assistance that CRA was designed to provide.

It is my hope we are not going to take measures here that deny a whole generation of CRA success stories in the future. The CRA and the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act data continue to show that blacks and Hispanics face significantly higher mortgage rejection rates.

The Boston Federal Reserve showed conclusively that African Americans get turned down for a mortgage 1.6 times more often than whites, even after you control for many of the economic income and creditworthiness differences.

A New York Newsday study, looking at 100,000 mortgage applications on Long Island, showed that blacks' applications were rejected three times as often as whites', even when they had the same income.

In a study right here in the Washington, DC, area, completed last year, we found that significant lending discrimination exists against blacks and Hispanics.

Mr. President, the need for the CRA remains very much alive in the United States. Let's put the rhetoric aside. Let's put the ideology aside. Let's find the common ground within the Senate whereby we can guarantee that we can build a coalition that will support the best of financial modernization and the best of our effort to broaden the economic base of this country.

I might add, some have suggested there is sort of a legalized concept to what has been called the ''legalized extortion.'' In fact, some people have suggested that the regulators have assisted that process.

Let me say, Mr. President, I find it very hard to believe that people would suggest that Alan Greenspan, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve, for whom we have—all of us—such respect for, is complicitous in that process. This is what he said about the CRA:

> . . . the CRA process is something that we clearly have been supportive of and think is crucial and necessary to the development of communities. We think that it's in the interest of the banks. We think that it's in the interest of communities.

Mr. President, the data from the regulators—let me just close on this—the data from the regulators is clear. The chairman of the Banking Committee wants the Senate to fundamentally weaken CRA. He will stand up and argue, this is not taking it away. He is going to try to point to the exemption for the small banks. And he will come back to the notion that it somehow is still in effect, even though it does not apply to the new services that will be provided, and even though the 3-year safe harbor provision is included.

But the fact is, that fewer than 1 percent of bank applications have been receiving an adverse CRA comment. Fewer than 1 percent of the 660 applications that received the adverse comment were denied on CRA grounds—1 percent of the 1 percent. Not a single application receiving adverse comments has been denied since 1994.

So here we are with the entire regulatory structure of our modernization effort of the financial services of our country held hostage to a few people's perceptions, based on ideology, of 1 percent of 1 percent, notwithstanding that all of the banks in the country have learned that this is, in fact, good economic policy, good banking policy, and they have accepted the CRA.

It is my hope that our colleagues will recognize that, even as this country has grown strong and the economy and the marketplace has grown, even as the stock market is reaching the extraordinary 11,000 level, the fact is that there are more Americans who are poor, there are more Americans who are living on 1989 wages, there are more children in poverty today than there were 3 years ago or 4 years ago in this country, by a figure of about 400,000, and the fact that too many families are working too hard at the bottom level just to make ends meet.

For us to backtrack on a fundamental commitment about the relationship of financial institutions within the communities in which they do business, would be to turn our backs on what has made America stronger and better. And I hope my colleagues will not do that. I yield the floor.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SESSIONS). The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, you will hardly know where to begin when you have listened to these speeches for a couple hours, and most of them have nothing whatsoever to do with what we are talking about on the floor.

It reminds me of the old Lincoln adage, where Lincoln was engaged in a debate, and the guy debating Lincoln got up and gave a wonderful speech that had nothing to do with the subject being debated; and Lincoln got up and said that his colleague had given a wonderful speech that would be appropriate for another day and another occasion.

I want to go through, roughly, 10 points that have been raised in all these speeches, and then go back to what we are debating.

No. 1, we have had a lot of speeches for CRA. And one would get the idea in listening to these speeches that someone is proposing to repeal CRA. In fact, as far as I am aware, no one has ever offered an amendment or bill since 1977 proposing repeal of CRA.

Whether the record for CRA is as wonderful as our colleagues have claimed, have we built more houses because the economy is better or because of CRA? Who wants to get into that debate? Because it is not relevant to what we are talking about, nobody is talking about repealing CRA.

No. 2, nobody is talking about ''turning back the clock.'' What we are talking about is dealing with abuses that exist in the current system, and that can and should be fixed. One of those abuses basically has to do with extraordinary power that protesters and protest groups have at critical moments when banks are trying to make decisions. The second has to do with the relevancy of CRA, and which banks under what circumstances have relevant requirements, and what are the regulatory burdens and costs involved.

In terms of a point that was made way back so many speeches ago—I forget which one it was—that in 99 percent of the cases where banks apply to do something that requires CRA evaluation, nobody challenges that action, that is a very misleading number, really, for a number of reasons.

First, most of these applications concern the opening or closing branches. They are not very relevant. It is basically the mergers and acquisitions that are relevant to CRS protests.

Second, as I have pointed out on many occasions, most of the CRA action takes place not in the formal complaint, but basically when the protester goes to the bank threatening that unless the bank takes certain action, often giving that person money, that they are going to file a complaint. So it never shows up in the statistics. So that is all interesting but largely irrelevant.

One of our colleagues said that I said, or someone had said, that CRA is just an extortion program. No one ever made that statement. What I have said is that CRA has become a vehicle where a tremendous number of actions occur that certainly look like extortion. When you look at contracts that are being signed, these individuals and groups are given large sums of money, and then they sign a commitment that they will withdraw their objection. That is a classic quid pro quo, that is the essence of extortion or bribery or kickbacks. There are a lot of names you can use. But no one has suggested any of them in this debate. Many, most, almost all of the people involved in CRA are conscientious and honest.

We are talking about people here who are abusing the system. And even spokesmen for CRA, even spokesmen for community groups, say there are abuses, that the abuses undercut the system. As everybody who is on the Banking Committee knows, when the CRA advocates testified before the Banking Committee, a clear point was made that abuses do occur. They called the abuses ''greenmail.'' I think the standard term is ''blackmail,'' but nobody disputes that they occur. What we are trying to do is to deal with them.

In terms of half the banks being out of compliance, half the banks being affected, there isn't any proposal that would let half the banks out of CRA. Basically, the proposal in the underlying bill is that banks with less than $100 million in assets and which are also in nonmetropolitan areas, in rural areas, that these banks be exempt from CRA. Now, why?

First of all, since 1990, over a 9-year period, there have been 16,380 examinations of these small rural banks; 16,380 times Federal regulators have gone to these rural banks. They have sat down for days and weeks, looking through their records. They have done reports to determine whether these rural banks are lending in their community and meeting their community reinvestment requirements.

After 16,380 examinations, only 3 banks have been found to be substantially out of compliance. The cost of complying with CRA for these examinations to the small banks has been roughly $80,000 a year, according to the 488 letters we have received from small banks on this subject.

That is $1.3 billion of cost imposed on small banks. I have read at great length letters about how small banks can't serve their customers because they have to do all this paperwork and how it is interfering with community lending. I have read some passionate letters on this subject on the floor of the Senate in this debate. I am not going to reread them now.

The point is, $1.3 billion later, 16,380 examinations later, crushing paperwork, cost burden on very small banks, many of them between 6 and 10 employees, $1.3 billion of costs banks have paid, and only 3 small rural banks have been found to be substantially out of compliance.

What does our bill do? It exempts from CRA very small, very rural banks. In total, in terms of the number of banks, that is about 38 percent of the banks in America. In terms of available capital, as you can see from this chart, that is 2.7 percent of all the assets in all the banks and S&Ls in America.

Now, the logical question is this: 44 percent of our auditing effort is going into banks that have only 2.7 percent of the assets, and they have been found to be substantially out of compliance only 3/100 of 1 percent of the time. Is this not massive regulatory overkill? What does this have to do with meeting community needs for loans? If there has ever been an overreach in regulatory terms, imposing $1.3 billion of cost on little banks and little communities to turn up three banks in 9 years that have been substantially out of compliance, this is regulatory overkill. We are trying to fix it.

In terms of exemption based on a 3-year record, one of my frustrations in debating on the Senate floor—and I guess all of us can be accused of doing it; I try to, at least within my own mind, be careful about things I say. I try to put my argument in the best light I can. Everybody else does. I try not to say things I don't believe to be true. But we continue to hear these things like, if a bank has been in compliance three times, they are exempt from CRA. That is not what our bill does.

Here is what our bill does. Let me explain the problem. In fact, let me have that quote from the law professor at Cornell. This quote is from Cornell law professor Jonathan Macey. Jonathan Macey is one of our Nation's premier experts in banking law and is very knowledgeable in this whole area of application of CRA. In evaluating what is happening, this is basically what he says:

> You see really weird things when you look at the code of Federal regulations . . . like Federal regulators are encouraged to leave the room and allowing community groups to negotiate ex parte with bankers in a community reinvestment context. . . . Giving jobs to the top five officials of these communities or shake-down groups is generally high up on the list (of demands). So, what we really have is a bit of old world Sicily brought into the U.S., but legitimized and given the patina of government support.

Let me see those CRA agreements, if you will stack all those back up there one more time. I am going to zip through them real quickly.

One of our problems in evaluating what happened to the $9 billion of cash payments that were made under CRA—something never contemplated; nobody on the Banking Committee in 1977, I don't believe, thought CRA would ultimately produce cash payments being made to individuals and to groups; they thought, as we have heard arguments all day, that CRA is about lending—we don't know where all this money goes. We don't know what percentage of rake-offs, for example, these groups get on loans banks make, because we don't have the records. These CRA agreements are confidential; they are not made public. That is something later that we hope to change.

But let me just say, I have three pieces of CRA agreements. These are all private agreements where the parties have agreed not to make them public. We have redacted the names to protect the people who committed not to make them public.

The point I am trying to make here is how far away from lending, as we conventionally know it, this is.

This is from Bank A: Provide blank—this is the CRA group—with a grant of up to $20,000. Provide blank with a grant of up to $50,000. Provide blank with a grant of up to $25,000. And on this one they say why: to pay reasonable and necessary soft costs incurred. Provide blank with a grant of a reasonable amount.

And then after they agree to pay that money, look at this provision: Blank agrees to withdraw on the date hereof the comment letter, dated blank 28, 19 blank, and any related materials filed by blank with the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Bank, and the board—and it goes on.

The point is, on one page they give all these grants to groups, and then on the second page the groups agree to withdraw the complaints they filed against the action the banks want to make.

Here is the point: Did the groups file the complaints to get the money? What about the legitimacy of the complaint? Did it go away when they got the money?

It goes on. We are getting more and more of these every day. Then, in every one of these agreements we have seen, there is an agreement by the community group or the individual and the bank not to disseminate or otherwise make available to the public copies of this agreement.

Here is a second bank agreement, Bank B: Blank will receive a fee of 2 and three quarters percent of the face amount of each program loan made by blank.

Now, I wonder if people in that community realize that this undisclosed individual, or group, is getting a rake-off of 2.75 percent of the face value of every loan that is being made by this bank. Blank will receive a $200,000 fee as reimbursement, $100,000 payable fund, execution and delivery, $100,000 6 months from now. That is the quid. Here is the quo: The group commits to withdraw all pending protests of regulatory applications and related matters, but not to sponsor, either directly or indirectly, to protest or supply information in connection with any protest relating to the pending or future blank applications with bank regulators.

In other words, it doesn't matter what abuses the bank might do in the future. They are never going to protest again because of this. At the request to send letters to the customers of the bank—well, let me go on. Not only do they agree never to protest again on any issue, but they agree to purge the files and data bases of all information relating to the bank's customers.

Now, it goes on: to immediately cease all activities directed against the bank; to maintain the confidentiality of this agreement—they have confidentiality again here—and then: to cooperate with the community group, to help them use this agreement to leverage other financial institutions to get money from them. In other words, not only are they paying this money, they are going to help them get other banks to pay it.

It is funny how little things grab you. Maybe it is just me, but this one hits me the hardest. I was wondering why we were getting these letters from banks in favor of CRA when the bank officers were telling me—and in some cases saying publicly—that CRA was blackmail. Yet, I was getting letters from these banks saying CRA is great. Well, here is the reason:

Blank will work with the blank to establish a clear, written declaratory statement indicating support for the Community Reinvestment Act and the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, and the party's opposition to any attempts to weaken the law. Blank will send the final copy of this statement to the blank.

In other words, they will let them go over and rewrite the letter they are going to send. And they are going to send the letter to the American Bankers Association, Federal Reserve Board, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, the whole congressional delegation of their State, and to all members of the House and Senate Banking Committees.

So, Senator BENNETT, when you got a letter from this bank telling you that CRA is the greatest thing that has ever been, you probably did not know that was the result of a CRA agreement so that a bank could do business in America. And we are not talking about Honduras; we are not talking about Thailand. We are talking about the United States of America, and we have banks—some of the richest and most powerful institutions in America—that are having dictated to them at this very moment that they have to write us letters telling us things they do not believe. How is that happening? How can that be happening in America? I ask you, how can it happen?

Not only is it happening, it is being condoned because, as the law professor from Cornell said, we have given the patina of Government support to something that if it happened to an American bank in Thailand, we would file an unfair trade practice against them.

So when you are getting all these letters telling you how wonderful CRA is from banks, remember this agreement. In fact, I received such a letter from a particular bank. Fortunately, to show you this is a very good and honorable bank, they say in their letter they have been forced to send this letter as a result of a CRA agreement.

I discovered this letter because there was an editorial written attacking the bill quoting this bank, or this letter, interestingly enough. There was an editorial written quoting a letter from First Union Corporation, a wonderful, great bank. They were quoted in the editorial as saying how great CRA was and why we should not be making any changes to the bill. Well, I said I want to see this letter. So we got the letter. Let me read the first paragraph:

> As part of a CRA pledge we made during our merger with CoreStates, First Union National Bank committed to send a written statement to certain individuals or organizations clearly expressing our position on CRA and HMDA regulations. We, as an organization, are very committed to serving all of our communities, including underserved areas. We are happy to provide this statement.

Then they go on to say that nothing in the letter is meant to be an endorsement or opposition to any particular bill. I know we have one of the most distinguished former prosecutors in America sitting in the Chair. I have to say—not to speak for him, because in his role as Presiding Officer, he can't speak until he comes down here—what is the difference between this and the old protection racket that existed when I was a child? I am proud to say that my uncles, as sheriffs and police officers, broke up some of those protection rackets. But the only difference is that this is Government; this is the Federal Government that is basically allowing this to happen.

Now, we are not talking about repealing CRA. We are not talking about ending a program that obviously has had many successes. We are talking about trying to deal with abuse. So what are the two things we do? No. 1, we say that if a bank has a history of being in compliance with the law, if they have been evaluated 3 years in a row and been found to be in compliance with CRA, and if they are presently in compliance with CRA, then any individual or group can protest, file a complaint; and under the existing regulations of the Comptroller of the Currency, there has to be a hearing for any complaint that is lodged.

But what our amendment adds is the requirement that if this bank has a long history of being in compliance, before the regulator can stop the action that they have earned the right to undertake, the protester must present some substantial evidence. In other words, if you are a good actor and you have been evaluated 3 years in a row and were found to be in compliance, you are innocent until proven guilty. Somebody can't just walk in and say a banker is a racist and a loan shark.

Some protesters have done exactly that. There is a CRA protester who calls himself an ''urban terrorist,'' who used those charges against a bank, harassed them for 4 years, went to a speech of the president of the bank at Harvard University, disrupted the speech, made this man's life miserable for 4 long years, until the bank gave him $1.4 million and a $200,000 grant and set up an organization that now lends $3.5 billion, totally unregulated by the Federal Government. He gets a 2.75-percent rake-off of each one of those loans, and nobody knows what he does with the money. He is not accountable to anybody.

Now, all we want to do is say if a bank has consistently been in compliance and you want to stop them from merging with another bank, or opening a branch, you have to present some evidence. Now, what is the standard we have used? The Presiding Officer, as a distinguished attorney and former prosecutor, knows that substantial evidence is the most defined term in American law. It is referred to over 900 times in the United States Code.

There have been 400 court decisions that have defined ''substantial evidence.''

So what standard do we require a protester to meet if he tries to impose potentially hundreds of millions of dollars in costs on a bank, and to stop a bank from doing what it appears to be qualified to do? They have to present evidence.

Here are four standards set by the Supreme Court as to what ''substantial evidence'' means:

They have to present evidence that is understood to mean ''more than a mere scintilla.''

That is a standard we are setting. You can't come in and stop a bank with a consistent record of CRA compliance. You can't automatically stop, shut down, and delay the process unless you present evidence that is ''more than a mere scintilla.''

Unless you present such relevant evidence as a ''reasonable mind might''—notice it didn't say ''would,'' but ''might''— ''accept as adequate to support a claim.''

You have to present evidence that is real, material, not ''seeming or imaginary,'' and considerable in amount, value, and worth.

Why in the world would we stand by and allow a bank that has complied with the law of the land and been evaluated three times in a row as being in compliance to be prevented from exercising a right they have earned unless somebody presents credible evidence, substantial evidence, to the contrary? I don't understand. Why would anybody be against this change?

I continue to be stunned that our colleagues talk about CRA and how wonderful it is. That is not what we are talking about.

Should you have to present some evidence if you are going to try to deny people the rights they earned under the law? How can that be unfair? How can that be reaching? How can that be burdensome? Who could be against that?

The second provision of the bill provides relief to small banks in rural areas. I have gone through the figures: $1.3 billion later, in this decade of audits and costs imposed on the banks, three small rural banks—three one-hundredths of 1 percent—are bad actors. Is that not regulatory overkill?

We have forced little banks, many with just 6 to 10 employees, to pay $1.3 billion in compliance costs, and in 16,380 examinations, only 3 of them have been deemed to be substantially out of compliance. Does that make sense? Is that crazy? Did I miss something?

I could read to you letter after letter. We have had 488 letters from banks urging the committee to take this action. I have read them before; I will not do so again.

Finally, let me remind my colleagues that the amendment that is pending doesn't just strike these two provisions—the ''integrity and relevance'' provisions—it does far more than that. It would create a situation where individual officers and directors of a bank could potentially be fined up to $1 million a day for noncompliance.

Remember, in these little banks you have 16,380 examinations over the decade, and just 3 banks have been found to be substantially out of compliance. What is the justification for this $1-million-a-day fine?

I have letters from the American Bankers Association, and from the Independent Bankers Association, pointing out the obvious.

This provision that has been offered by our colleague from Nevada, and was offered in committee by Senator SARBANES, will make it virtually impossible for small banks to get quality directors, because who can afford that potential liability? It will make it virtually impossible for small banks, who can't buy the insurance to protect people from liability, to hire quality bank officials.

The bill goes on and on and on in the most massive overkill of expanding CRA to nonbanking activities. Currently, a bank can sell insurance without CRA approval. This substitute that is now pending would require CRA approval for that. Banks can sell securities without CRA approval. This takes CRA out of banking and into other areas.

What is the justification for that? The justification for requiring CRA was that banks have a federal subsidy through deposit insurance. So that is public insurance, and making banks do things in the public interest could be justified. But how does expanding that requirement outside banking make any sense? Are we simply going to keep writing laws telling people what to do with this money?

Basically we have a choice. The choice is the following:

Both of these provisions concern CRA. The bill that was adopted by the Banking Committee has two reforms—one an integrity provision, and one a relevancy provision. The amendment that has been offered strikes both of those reforms and imposes all of these new regulations.

So I think it is as clear a choice as you can make.

Just a couple of other points, and I will stop, because I know that others want to speak. One of our colleagues quoted the Wall Street Journal. The Wall Street Journal has editorialized not once but twice in favor of the position the committee has taken here.

I urge my colleagues again to look at the debate—not get carried away or be confused by people who say the committee has gutted CRA, is killing CRA, or is repealing CRA. We are not doing any of those things. But we are dealing with abuses of CRA. They need to be dealt with. They scream out to be dealt with.

If I could make a plea to the other side, it would be a simple and short plea: If we don't fix the abuses of CRA, by the time we are through letting people know what is happening in terms of these $9 billion of cash payments, and by the time we finally do run down and know where all of this money is going, and we find that much of it—or some of it—is not being used to benefit people who are supposed to be benefiting from community loans, I think it is going to undercut CRA.

If I were a strong proponent of CRA, I would be for these reforms, because they clean up a program that clearly has had an impact. But our colleagues—as they did on welfare—it was abused and abused and abused and abused and abused. But they would never ever, ever, ever say that it should be fixed. Finally, the American people rose up and elected a new Congress. We are probably in the majority because of their intransigence. So God does provide His services from time to time. And then it was fixed. They probably could have had it closer to what they wanted had they been willing to fix it.

But the position we have heard today over and over is, never ever, ever, ever will we allow any change whatsoever, no matter how bad the abuse is in CRA.

I don't understand it. I think it is an extreme view. I hope that even yet, by the time we get through conference, by the time we have had a chance to discuss this over many more times, perhaps there can be a compromise.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Karen Brown of my office, a fellow, be granted floor privileges during the consideration of S. 900.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for 2 minutes without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. DODD. Fine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I have refrained from taking a lot of debate time this afternoon, because a lot of our colleagues want to speak. I recognize that. Of course, the temptation is very great to sort of rise every time the chairman of the committee speaks. He has done that at some length here this afternoon. So I am not going to do it now, because I have colleagues here. I hope before we get to 7 o'clock I will get a chance to have a few minutes to make a statement.

But I want to say that there is kind of an Alice-in-Wonderland quality to this debate. The chairman pulls these figures out of the air. I don't really know where they come from. I asked him where they come from. He says there have been 16,000 something examinations of banks under $100 million in nonmetropolitan areas.

I don't know where he gets that figure. The figure from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is 11,445. He says only 3 have been found in substantial noncompliance; the figure is 18, and another 320 have been found a need to improve. This chart is from the FDIC.

The Chairman says only three—it is not only three. I want to make that point.

Mr. GRAMM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SARBANES. I yield.

Mr. GRAMM. These are figures from the interagency CRA rating.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator said earlier today that the cost this is imposing on small banks is $1.3 trillion.

I am thinking to myself, $1.3 trillion from these examinations? So I asked him, How did you get that figure? He took the number of examinations—about which we have just disagreed—and he multiplied it by 80,000. I am not sure where he got the 80,000 figure. Someone must have written in and said: That is what it costs our bank.

Mr. GRAMM. That is right, a small bank said that.

Mr. SARBANES. I don't know any study that validates that figure as the right figure.

Even assuming for the purpose of this Alice-in-Wonderland discussion that both the number of exams and the costs which we were then told came to a $1.3 trillion burden, the fact is, it is $1.3 billion. That is still a lot of money. I don't pretend to the contrary, but it is a lot different from $1.3 trillion. It was escalated 1,000 times.

Let me give one other example. We were told the CRA is allocating more money each year than the gross domestic product of Canada. The CRA commitments are over a 10-year period. Those commitments, factored out over a 10-year period, do not begin to approach the gross domestic product of Canada.

These are only a few examples. We could give a lot more. I want to underscore these figures that come floating in out of the air, and we hear this long disquisition. When we start probing these figures, we discover it is not there; it is Alice in Wonderland.

I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Bryan amendment. My fervent hope is that we can adopt this amendment and move on with passage of this bill. There are other outstanding issues that need to be resolved. No issue is as galvanizing or as important as this issue of the Community Reinvestment Act and how it is to be handled.

My friend from Texas, the chairman of the committee, and I have worked very closely together over many years. We have been each other's chairman and ranking minority member, depending on who was in control of this August body. We have dealt with securities matters, we have written legislation together, passed it together here on the floor, carried it through conference, overrode the President's veto—the only time a veto by this President has been overridden.

It is not easy for me to disagree with a man with whom I have agreed on many occasions in dealing with financial issues. However, on this we have a fundamental disagreement. I listened for a good part of the chairman's presentation, especially the last part of the presentation dealing with the alleged abuses that have occurred. I know of nothing in the bill violating existing federal laws on extortion. We may do some things in this bill Members do not want, but to the best of my knowledge the criminal code is left intact. Nowhere in this bill do we touch on the issue of whether or not people are going to be excused from engaging in extortion, blackmail, green mail—call it what you will.

The suggestion that there are serious violations of law—State and Federal that I know of—ought to be brought to the proper authorities. If someone believes they have been extorted, then we have Federal prosecutors and State prosecutors to bring those matters to the light of day and those accused can be brought to the bar of justice.

Second, I have never known the banking community to be terribly shy about things that they want. They are usually pretty vociferous. They are never reluctant to tell us how they want us to vote on matters that affect their institutions. They lobby quite effectively. They do a good job. The idea that the banking constituency, the thousands of banks all across this country, are somehow afraid of some community-based groups, and would not bring to light their concerns because of fear of some retribution, just doesn't hold up when it comes to how the banking community generally makes its concerns known.

The fact of the matter is, here on this issue there really is not a constituency for the provisions in this bill dealing with CRA. Usually we have a litany of organizations that are in favor of or against a provision, organizations and groups which have felt outraged or discriminated against in some way and will stand up and defend in a very loud and clear voice their rights or how their rights are being infringed upon.

In the last almost 6 hours of debate, I defy anyone to show me a list of organizations here across the country that feel as though the Community Reinvestment Act is somehow a great infringement on their ability to conduct their business. It is nonexistent. In fact, the only time we have ever actually voted on these matters prior to today is when the House Banking Committee recently voted—51–8, Democrats and Republicans, voted for provisions we are seeking here contained within the Bryan amendment. The Banking Committee last year voted 16–2, Democrats and Republicans, in favor of the provisions that we are trying to reinsert into this legislation. There is overwhelming evidence from the Federal Reserve Board, the banking regulators, banks all across the country, that the Community Reinvestment Act is working, and working well.

Let me quickly add I have never met any institution which was overly enthusiastic about any regulation—State, local or Federal. They usually do not welcome these and I understand why. There is a cost associated with it. I appreciate that they try to keep their costs down.

Most banks, certainly in my State, have been active in our community and do a great deal of good. However, as the Presiding Officer who has been identified as a distinguished scholar of the legal codes of our country knows, we do not write laws for the overwhelming majority of Americans who obey the law, who try to do the right thing. Laws are written for those who try to abuse what we believe is proper behavior. Only a small percentage of Americans violate the law. But that is not an excuse for not writing laws, because, unfortunately, some do in fact break the law.

So when it comes to the Community Reinvestment Act, we seek here not to lay a burden on the overwhelming majority of banks who do a good job. We must recognize that there are institutions which have discriminated against various groups in this country based on race, religion, ethnicity. So several years ago, we decided to enact the Community Reinvestment Act to require that lending institutions, depository institutions, pay attention to our nation's underserved, pay attention to our small farmers, and pay attention to our small businesses. If you are going to do business in Alabama or business in Connecticut as a depository institution, we do not want you to neglect the people in your communities, in your States, on any basis.

So we passed CRA and it has worked well. My colleague from Texas has said that there are extortionate practices ongoing. Let me quote him, from a statement made last October. The chairman of the committee said:

> It has now become common practice in CRA for professional protest groups to protest a bank's community service record and in turn to use the leverage of those protests to extract bribes, kickbacks, set-asides in purchases, quotas, hiring and promotion, none of which has anything to do with CRA and the lending practices of banks in the communities that they serve.''

It is a pretty broad statement. Now, let me give you the facts. Mr. President, four-tenths of 1 percent—let me repeat that, four-tenths of 1 percent of applications have resulted in agreements with community groups; four-tenths of 1 percent have resulted in these agreements. We have had them up here on placards and the easel here today. A great amount of time has been spent talking about these outrageous provisions in these agreements. If one sort of casually tuned into the debate the assumption would be, as the Senator from Texas has said: It is common practice. Common practice? Four-tenths of 1 percent of all the applications? Under any estimation that is not a common practice, less than 1 percent of all the applications.

During the past 21 years, there have been approximately 360 agreements reached. How many applications do you think there have been in the past 21 years? Mr. President, 86,000; 86,000 applications and 360 agreements. When you stand up here for an hour and a half or so and list these agreements that have been reached, you leave our colleagues and others with the impression that this has, to quote my friend from Texas, ''become common practice in CRA.'' That is an exaggeration. That is an extreme exaggeration.

I do not like what I heard in these agreements. It bothers me a bit. I would like to know more about it. A great deal of information was redacted. We do not have the whole agreement. But I tell my friend from Texas, I am concerned about it, too, and we ought to take a good look at this. Let us remember, however, that we ought to take a look at the 360 agreements, and many of those probably are proper and worthwhile agreements. In fact, many lenders also require counseling for certain loan practices because they improve the quality of loans. To meet commitments, banks sometimes provide payments to community groups for services provided. It is not some outrageous behavior. It goes on all the time. But, nonetheless, if problems exist, let's look at them.

But with all due respect to my good friend from Texas, it appears as though we were sort of squirrel hunting with a machine gun here. That is not what his amendment or the language of the bill does. All we are saying here is we want to preserve the Community Reinvestment Act in a new financial framework. This modernization bill allows for the consolidation of financial services. If we are going to do that—and I think we should, I am a strong supporter of it—then it seems to me we should be preserving the Community Reinvestment Act to ensure that we do not have discrimination in lending. We must ensure that Hispanics, African Americans, Asian Americans, and Native Americans, as well as small businesses and small farmers, are not going to get short shrift. We are going to have a lot of large institutions, a lot of large banks. We want to make sure the average citizen is not going to find himself or herself denied fair access to credit. That is what the Community Reinvestment Act has been able to do for millions of Americans.

I listened to my colleague from Massachusetts and others here today go over the statistics of how vastly the availability of credit has increased to groups who in the past were denied those opportunities. We in this country cherish the notion of equal opportunity. We have never achieved the perfection that our Constitution and our Founding Fathers sought in creating equal opportunity for every citizen in this country, regardless of where they come from or the color of their skin. We all know, painfully, the discrimination that existed for a long time in all parts of our country.

Let me reiterate—all parts of our country. I could take you to the Northeast. You do not have to go to the home of my friends from the South in this country to find discrimination in lending. In Connecticut, a year or two ago, you could see the redlining that went on. People talked about this being a southern issue. That is untrue. I could take you to places all across this land where redlining occurred, where neighborhoods and communities were denied equal opportunity. If they are creditworthy people, they ought to get the credit and financing to buy a home, start a business, and get on their feet. Because of these discriminatory practices, we passed the Community Reinvestment Act. It has made quite a difference in our country. It is not a perfect condition yet, but we have reached into the communities of people who never had a chance before and they have a chance today.

Now we are going to allow these institutions to affiliate, and engage in new financial activities. With this legislation, are we now going to deny them the very benefit that the Community Reinvestment Act has afforded during the past 22 years? I do not think we ought to deprive them of that.

That is what the Bryan amendment attempts to address in part. It says we ought not to exclude certain creditworthy consumers in the process of allowing banks to expand in these new financial areas. To suggest that the extortion of banks by community groups is somehow a common practice—again, four-tenths of 1 percent, 360 applications out of 86,000, is not legitimate. Under anyone's estimation, that is not justification for weakening the Community Reinvestment Act in the 21st century.

Again, there is no constituency here. Most people, I think most of my colleagues from all across this country, believe the Community Reinvestment Act is doing a good job. Nobody here wants to be on the side of an equation that says: Having made these gains now we are going to turn back the clock. We should not do that. I do not believe the people who have communicated with us, who write us—bankers, consumers—said that.

One of the things we need to keep in mind as we talk about banking legislation and financial institutions in general, is that one of our major responsibilities is to ensure that our nation's financial institutions are going to work well. So we pay a lot of attention to their needs, as we should. But we also need to pay attention to the people who do business with our financial institutions. They are an important part of the equation here as well. Let us not forget the people who show up at that bank window, who go in nervous about whether or not they can get a home loan. Let us not forget the person with a good idea to start a business who needs to know if that local banker will take a chance on him, back him, give him a chance to get on his feet. Those are our constituents, too. They are a fundamental part of this equation.

It is not just the person behind the grate; it is the person in front of the grate, too, who we have an obligation to watch out for when we pass financial services modernization legislation. It is those people out there tonight who would like to start a new business, buy a new home, get a chance to share in the American dream. And the Community Reinvestment Act has been the engine for many achieving those desired results.

Again, in the past, we have seen votes of support on CRA by our colleagues, Democrats and Republicans. It would be a great pity, indeed, for this bill to fail over this issue.

It would be a great pity, indeed. This issue ought not to be the one that causes this bill either to be defeated or to be vetoed by a President and sent back after all the years we tried to get this done.

We are 240 days away from the next millennium, the year 2000. The world and its financial markets are getting more complicated. The United States of America has always been a leader in financial services. I do not want to see us lag behind because we couldn't come to terms with what is essentially a fundamental civil rights issue. I do not want to see us lose our leadership role in the global marketplace because we decided we were not going to expand the equal opportunities that are so much a part of this country's heritage. I am concerned that we are willing to give up all the other things we are trying to achieve in financial modernization over CRA provisions that are not supported by the banks they purport to help.

In fact, Mr. President, I will include in the RECORD, and others have already, countless statements from many others— the Federal Reserve Chairman, the Treasury, and major banks in all parts of this country who have said the Community Reinvestment Act is working. Sometimes conflicts occur; it is difficult. Sometimes we have two groups we admire and support, that are fighting hard for their points of view, and we are asked to make a choice between them. That can be a hard decision.

This is not a hard decision. There is no one on the other side of this equation. Yet we are dangerously close to killing an otherwise great bill that does a lot of good things.

As I said a moment ago, we have an obligation to make sure our financial institutions are strong. We have an obligation as well to see to it that the users of these financial institutions are not going to be adversely affected by legislation we pass.

Let me focus for a second on the small, rural bank exemption that is included in this bill. The bill exempts rural banks with less than $100 million in assets from the requirement of CRA. This exemption addresses that there is some undue burden imposed on small banks complying with CRA, and there may be some merit in that. But the provision in this bill which the Bryan amendment would take out exempts 76 percent of rural banks from CRA, 38 percent of all the banks and thrifts in the United States.

Again, I can understand if you just hate CRA, you just think it is a bad idea and we ought to get rid of it. Then I accept that—I disagree with it, but I accept your position. But if you believe CRA makes a difference and it actually helps rural people have greater access to fair credit, then you must acknowledge that this bill exempts 76 percent of rural banks in this country. Virtually one out of every three banks in the country will be exempt from CRA. That seems to me to go too far.

CRA loans in rural areas assist small farmers in obtaining credit. Small bankers have historically received lower CRA ratings, quite candidly, than larger banks and have invested less in their communities. On average, 50 percent of large banks have a loan-to-deposit ratio below 70 percent. 25 percent of small banks have a loan-to-deposit ratio of less than 58 percent.

The supporters of the small bank exemption contend the CRA creates an onerous regulatory burden. However, the federal banking regulators specifically reduced the regulatory burden on banks when the new CRA enforcement rules went into effect 3 years ago. These efforts streamlined CRA, facilitated easier compliance by lenders, and reduced paperwork requirements.

Addressing the specific point the Senator from Texas made that sometimes these banks have a few employees—and, again, I do not want to overload that small bank—in 1996 we streamlined that process considerably for them.

If there are some other ideas that will help achieve that, I think we ought to listen to them. Again, think not only about the 8 or 10 employees of that small bank, but think about those small farmers who do not have any other choice but to do business at that bank. Small communities do not give you much of a choice. Your local farmers in Alabama or Connecticut have one bank to go to. It is not like living in New York City or Washington, DC, where you can walk down the street and compare which bank will give you the better deal.

Under this bill, if you have only one bank window to go to, and you are living in rural America, you will be told that your bank is exempt from having to see to it that you are going to be dealt with fairly. There is something seriously wrong here.

Streamlining the process for rural small banks is something I applaud; it is something we ought to move ahead on to make it easier. I do not want people to be denied options, denied choices, and to be discriminated against when it comes to getting the credit they need.

According to Christopher Williston, the president of the Independent Bankers Association of Texas:

Most small banks are really very accustomed to complying with CRA. . .. Now they know exactly what the regulators are looking for, many of my members would say CRA is here and I can live with it.

Mr. President, again, if there are specific problems with the implementation of CRA, if there are certain activities that should be considered that are not considered, then the appropriate way to address those specific concerns is to work with the regulators or come up with a specific legislative approach.

The Senator from Texas, our distinguished chairman, should remember our conversations to address this and have some hearings to look into the issues he raised.

Again, don't exaggerate and turn four-tenths of 1 percent of the applications into a common practice, and then miss the opportunity to include reasonable CRA provisions in this consolidation of financial services.

I hope there will be enough votes on the other side to support the Bryan amendment. I am fearful if we do not do so, this bill is doomed. I mentioned at the outset of my remarks the other day that my colleague from Maryland and I have been at this together for the full 18 years I have served in the Senate. He has been at it longer than that, having served a bit longer than I have in the Senate. Nothing—nothing—would make me happier than to pass this bill and expand and consolidate financial services to serve consumers' needs and keep America in a leadership position on these issues.

However, I cannot support a bill that turns its back on my constituents at home. I want to help my financial institutions in Connecticut. I want to help banks across the country. But I cannot, in doing so, turn the clock back on the gains, on the strengthening of America that we have made with the Community Reinvestment Act.

Whatever shortcomings it has—and I am certain they are there, CRA is not perfect—let's fix the shortcomings. Let's deal with those, but do not deprive people in this country of the increased opportunities. We have a CRA bill on the books that has worked well, even by those who must bear the burden of implementing these regulations. We must no place in jeopardy an otherwise fine bill that, in my opinion, deserves broad-based support in this Chamber and the other body.

I hope that we will stand at 7 p.m. tonight when the votes are cast, in what may be the only civil rights vote of this Congress, and the Bryan amendment will be adopted. Maybe other civil rights votes will come along, but as of right now, this will be the only test as to where people stand when it comes to seeing that equal opportunity in America is going to be at least preserved in this Congress and not set back.

I hope at 7 o'clock, when the vote begins and as Members come to the Chamber to cast their ballots, they will keep in mind the importance of this bill. And to a far greater extent, keep in mind those who depend upon us to see to it that they are going to have equal opportunity in America, a chance to participate in the American dream in the 21st century, and will not be denied because of an action we take tonight by denying the preservation of CRA in a new financial services framework.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I have listened to this debate with some interest. I have enormous respect for members of the Banking Committee on which I have served since I came to the Senate. I know there is good intention on both sides of the issue, on both sides of the aisle.

I echo the comments of the chairman of the committee in that much of the debate that I have heard has been focused on the wrong issue; that is, you would think that this was an attempt on the part of the majority in the committee to repeal CRA. I do not condone redlining. I recognize that the decision which was made by the Congress in 1977 to create CRA was motivated by a genuine abuse that required a genuine Federal fix.

At the same time, I recognize also that under Secretary Rubin's leadership, attempts have been made to alleviate the regulatory burden of CRA, that there has been a recognition on the part of this administration—I think belatedly, but nonetheless I will accept it whenever I can get it—a recognition that CRA has gotten out of hand and has become, in some instances, a paperwork burden that is nonproductive and anticompetitive and puts an undue burden on places where it should not be.

The question is not, Should we abolish CRA? The answer to that is clearly no. The question is not, Should we turn our backs on those people who have been benefited by CRA? The answer to that is no.

The question is, Can we streamline CRA, as we are going through the process of modernizing our financial institutions, in a way that recognizes the reality of the marketplace? And there the answer is yes.

One of the criticisms which has been made, and I think with some justification, is that a good part of the debate has been anecdotal; that is, one situation has been described, and we extrapolate from that, and then another has been described, and we extrapolate from that.

I agree with those members of the committee who have suggested at some point it would be well for the committee to have hearings on the whole CRA matter and examine it at great detail. I think that is a salutary thing to do.

But we have an opportunity here in this bill to take some steps which I consider to be relatively modest and relatively straightforward. The one I want to focus on is the exemption of CRA, the CRA requirement for institutions that have $100 million or less in aggregate assets.

I want to share with the Senate the reaction of banks from my home State that have been contacted about this. And this is their information. This is not some professor at some university. This is the everyday banker doing business in the everyday community. And I will go beyond simply quoting the letters because I want to put it in context so you can understand the market.

I have said around here before—and undoubtedly in the spirit of the Senate where there is no such thing as repetition—I will say, again, that if I could control what we engrave in the marble around here to remind us of our duty—not to denigrate the marvelous phrases that are here—I would have engraved in stone, at least in our committee rooms, the phrase: ''You cannot repeal the law of supply and demand.''

We try to do that continually in Congress. We try to think that markets do not matter, that governments are smarter than markets, that governments can make decisions that interfere with the law of supply and demand and produce beneficial results with no side effects. People have been trying to do that in government not only for centuries but for millennia. And they always fail.

Here are the market realities with respect to CRA.

I first quote from a letter of the Cache Valley Bank. No one in this Chamber knows where Cache Valley is; but I know where Cache Valley is. I have spent a lot of time there. My family has done business there. We have owned a business there. The president of the Cache Valley Bank says in his letter:

Our community is a middle class farming community with a university. Most all of our customers are of modest income, small businesses and small farms. The rich professionals have gravitated to the local credit unions where they know they can get something for nothing.

That last sentence indicates how he feels about the competitive impact of credit unions in Cache Valley.

He says:

We are chartered to serve our community. We have no business going outside our community. We live off the ability to say we are a hometown institution.

Let me underscore that last sentence again. ''We live off the ability to say we are a hometown institution.''

In Cache Valley, there are branches of large banks, large banks that are located someplace else. There are, as an earlier somewhat sarcastic comment indicated, credit unions. They happen to be very large credit unions. We have some of the largest credit unions in the United States in Utah because of Utah's law. There is competition in Cache Valley for the banking customer.

How does he deal with that competition? He says:

My bank is . . . a $90 million institution operating from one office . . .

One office—so he does not have branches around the city. The credit union does. He does not have the reach of advertising that the large banks which are there as his competition do. He has one office. And he makes his living advertising himself as a hometown institution.

This, in marketing, is what is known as a marketing niche. He recognizes that he cannot compete with the big banks throughout the entire city. He recognizes that he has a particular niche in the market that he can fill, and he goes after it and he fills it.

He says:

We do what the CRA regulation intended us to do because it makes good sense. The documentation and time spent telling the regulators that that is what we do is just wasted by both us and the regulators. I have never had a customer come in and ask to see our CRA file.

Then, with the optimism that comes from every small businessman, he says:

As I will probably [pass] the $100 million proposed limit some day, I can see that not having to comply would give smaller institutions a slight advantage from costs they would save. The real issue is if the whole rule for community oriented institutions makes any sense. It doesn't and no one has provided any evidence that it does.

He is not operating in a vacuum. He is not operating in a situation where there is no credit available to anybody else if he does not serve his niche. He is operating in a highly competitive situation, and yet he is examined as if he is the only institution, and he is looked at in terms of his lending to his market niche.

All right. Let me go down the highway a little from Cache Valley to the First National Bank of Morgan. This is a smaller bank. This is a smaller community. The president of this bank says that they have $37 million in current assets. They serve a county, the population of which is approximately 7,000. In Utah, given our family size, a total population of 7,000 means that there are probably about 2,000 families there. I do not know how many of those are borrowers. This is a relatively small base for him to serve.

Once again, while it is an isolated farming community, in today's modern world there is competition there. The big banks can go after his customers on the Internet if they want. They can open ATM stations or put branches there, if they want. There is a big bank just down the highway, within 20 miles of this small institution. How does he survive under these competitive conditions? He survives by serving the community. This is what he has to say:

Exempting our institution from CRA requirements would allow bank personnel to spend more time with our customers in developing new products rather than gathering information to satisfy CRA documentation requirements. Competition is the greatest enforcer of CRA. The delivery of financial services is a highly competitive business. If my institution is not offering free checking or mortgage loans, then my competitor down the road will be taking advantage of my financial institution's shortcomings.

I think he is absolutely right. In today's competitive world, you do not operate in a vacuum. If he wasn't doing his job, even though he is in a small, rural community, with Internet banking and advertising over television, the large institutions would come in.

It is interesting, again, referring to Utah's somewhat unique situation, in many communities where the local bank was perceived as having something of a monopoly or a free ride in the community because of the physical isolation, it was not another bank that came in to offer competition; it was a credit union, operating under Utah's credit union laws. The competition produced the kinds of challenges that competition always produces. Once again, you cannot repeal the law of supply and demand. If there was demand in that community that was not being met by the local institution, competition came in and met it.

Now, a little further down the highway, I want to refer to the Frontier Bank of Park City. Here the president of the bank says:

As president of a nonmetropolitan community bank, I am of the opinion that existing CRA regulations are largely superfluous for both my institution and its direct competitors. The fact remains that we have and will continue to lend to all segments of our community because it is good business, not because it has been defined by regulation. Additionally, the time spent documenting our community lending efforts for regulatory purposes is in itself counterproductive as we could instead redirect our energies towards additional lending and community development activities.

An interesting quote, Mr. President. He feels that CRA gets in the way of community developing activities that he would otherwise engage in.

When I first went on the Banking Committee, some 6 years ago, I had never heard of the CRA. I heard at that time institutions coming in and complaining that the CRA documentation burden was overwhelming and that CRA had become more of a documentation issue than it had been a lending issue, that if they could fill out the documents in such a way as to satisfy the regulators, it didn't matter what their lending practices were.

We had some testimony—I can't go back and put my hand on it now—that made it clear that CRA was failing in its purpose to produce a meaningful impact for those in need in communities where they were not getting served.

I am hoping that the reforms established by Secretary Rubin have begun to lift that burden and change that situation, but I am satisfied now that we have enough evidence that indicates that the vast majority of small banks with capitalization under $100 million are spending their time on CRA, filling out documents and meeting with regulators, spending their time performing the bureaucratic chores necessary to file a report, where they could be spending their time better serving their communities.

Therefore, I will vote to see to it that the language that was adopted in the committee report remains there. I will oppose the Bryan amendment.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the Community Reinvestment Act. The CRA was enacted in 1977 to encourage banks to serve the credit needs of the entire community including low and middle income areas. The obligations that banks owe to the entire community stem from their charters and the public benefits they receive through the Federal Reserve. The CRA is a way to encourage banks to live up to their public obligation.

Nationwide the CRA has been recognized as an effective way to increase credit availability in underserved areas. In his testimony before the House Banking Committee in February, Federal Reserve Chairman Greenspan remarked, that the CRA has ''very significantly increased the amount of credit in communities'' and the changes have been ''quite profound.'' In 1997 alone, almost 2,000 banks and thrifts reported $64 billion in CRA loans, including 525,000 small business loans worth $34 billion; 213,000 small farm loans totaling $11 billion; and 25,000 community development loans totaling $19 billion. Those loans went to affordable housing projects, economic development through financing small businesses or farms, and activities that revitalize or stabilize low or moderate income areas. CRA has also encouraged a dramatic increase in home ownership by low and moderate income individuals. Between 1993 and 1997, private sector conventional home mortgage lending in low and moderate income census tracts increased by 45%.

And the CRA has done so without forcing a large paperwork burden onto banks and without forcing banks to make bad loans. During the same House hearing, Chairman Greenspan alluded to the mutual benefit of the CRA to consumers and banks when he said, ''CRA has helped financial institutions to discover new markets that may have been underserved before.''

While there are countless examples of the Act's effectiveness in encouraging lending in underserved areas all over the country. Here's some examples from Michigan. Lake Osceola State Bank in Baldwin just completed their CRA exam under the reformed 1996 regulations. They said it was not a burden, and they received a rating of outstanding. Under the terms of S. 900, the bill before us today, Lake Osceola State Bank would qualify for an exemption from the CRA because of their size and location, but the bank has told my office that they are not seeking a CRA exemption. To the contrary, they are justifiably proud of the contributions they are making to community development in the Baldwin area.

We Care, Inc. is a small non-profit that rehabilitates a few houses a year in Detroit's Van Dyke and 7 Mile area. They say the CRA and National City Bank have been their life-line for credit.

Northwest Detroit Neighborhood Development, Inc. is yet another nonprofit organization that has contacted me in support of the CRA. They praised the National Bank of Detroit and Comerica for extending credit to them and supporting their mission of homebuilding in the Brightmore area of Detroit.

The Local Initiatives Support Corporation (LISC), a nationally prominent community development group that operates in five Michigan cities, considers the CRA critical to their efforts. In an effort to boost their CRA scores, lenders have sought out groups like LISC and the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation to develop ''shared risk'' loan pools that offer financing to first time home buyers. Over the past 5 years, more than 400 mortgages were written in six Michigan cities. This has generated over $16 million in direct public and private investment in central city neighborhoods. According to LISC, without the CRA ''these types of programs would not have been established.'' Other Michigan community development groups like U-SNAP-BAC, SWAN and New Hope also rely on loans encouraged by the CRA.

Many Michigan mayors have expressed their support for the CRA. They praise the CRA for encouraging private business investment and creating new jobs and businesses in their communities. In addition, money from federal grants is leveraged to obtain millions of dollars in private investment. There are twelve mayors from all over Michigan on this letter from the U.S. Conference of Mayors supporting the CRA. I oppose the provisions weakening the CRA included in S. 900, a bill intended to modernize the financial sector of our economy. Both small and large banks in Michigan have received outstanding CRA ratings. The community groups and nonprofits make great use of the resources which are made available through the CRA. The federal independent agency that oversees the nation's banking system says its not onerous and has been very successful. Therefore, I will not support a bill that weakens a program that has been so important to community development efforts in Michigan and nationally.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Bryan amendment. While my comments today will be brief, my conviction on the issue of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) is strong.

CRA came into being in 1977 thanks to my Wisconsin colleague, Senator Bill Proxmire. While there's been talk of CRA as merely an urban concern, in fact, it has enriched and addressed inequities in both urban and rural areas in Wisconsin and across the country. We are all familiar with the numbers—more than $1 trillion in community development, small business and home mortgage loans—to communities that were once deemed unworthy.

CRA has been, and remains, vital to our common efforts of ensuring that credit is extended to all Americans without prejudice. But CRA lending has also proven that the ability and willpower of a borrower is often just as important, if not more important, than a loan determination based solely on income or economic history. In other words, new and innovative lending inspired by CRA has promoted fairness, but also made good business sense and delivered profits to lending institutions. And, fortunately, we've made substantial progress at making CRA compliance less burdensome.

While impressive, this progress has not reduced the need for an effective CRA. In 1977, Senator Proxmire's legislation was timely and appropriate, but in 1999, it has proven timeless and visionary. We are contemplating an era of more diversified, and potentially bigger, actors in the financial marketplace—one in which vigilance to ensure fair lending is all the more important. Overall, with adequate safety and soundness protections and an effective CRA, this new financial marketplace will yield benefits for consumers—more financial products delivered more conveniently and rapidly and at a better price.

I strongly support financial modernization and want to help send a signable, bipartisan and well-balanced piece of legislation to the President's desk. Last year, we secured a compromise bill that passed out of Committee by a vote of 16 to 2 that would have had my support. It is regrettable that this year we find this legislation and the financial industry held hostage to a counterproductive agenda to scale back CRA.

Financial modernization is about moving forward, paving the way for marketplace innovation and consumer benefits. But Senator GRAMM's bill and his proposed CRA restrictions move us backward. I urge my colleagues to support the Bryan amendment and ensure that CRA will remain strong and viable for all American communities, whether urban or rural, in the new financial era that we hope to create.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support for preserving current law with regard to the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and striking the provisions of S. 900 which will harm this important and worthwhile program. CRA was enacted in 1977 to help prevent ''redlining'' of poor neighborhoods by banks, which denied loans to residents and businesses in those areas.

For more than twenty years, CRA has been a key means of increasing capital and credit to underdeveloped areas through market based loans. CRA has created jobs and contributed to the economic revitalization of many depressed urban and rural areas. It has been a force for the capital needed to increase home ownership and business development. CRA has contributed greatly toward the revitalization of many areas, helping to generate an estimated one trillion dollars in lending over 22 years. Put simply, CRA is good public policy.

Mr. President, community groups, housing groups, farm groups, minority groups, civil rights groups, mayors and rural organizations all support a vibrant CRA and are opposed to S. 900's CRA provisions.

In my State of Iowa, many rural residents remain in desperate need of affordable capital, especially during the farm crisis gripping the mid-West. Under S. 900, as it is now written, 276 of the 325 banks and thrifts in rural Iowa counties would be exempt from CRA requirements. That's 85 percent of all the rural banks in Iowa. If the provision exempting banks under 100 million dollars in assets remains, the benefits of CRA would not be available to a large share of the rural communities in Iowa.

I have here a letter from the Iowa Coalition for Housing and the Homeless, which describes the importance CRA has for our communities. It reads, in part, ''Through increasing the access to capital and credit, CRA provides a market-based solution for economic revitalization and even job creation. A strong and vibrant CRA has meant that hundreds of billions worth of new home mortgage loans and small business loans have been made in low and moderate income, urban and rural communities throughout the country in the past several years.''

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this letter be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I would just like to mention briefly the CRA reforms already in place to protect small and rural banks. In 1995, new regulations dramatically simplified the CRA exam process for small banks under 250 million dollars in assets. Under the new rules, small banks are not subject to the lending, investment and service tests applied to large institutions. Additionally, for small banks, examiners look at only five factors: loan to deposit ratio; percentage of loans inside bank's CRA assessment area; record of lending to borrowers of different income levels and businesses of different sizes; geographic distribution of loans; and a bank's record of taking action in response to written complaints about its CRA performance. Finally, small banks are not subject to any data collection requirements for CRA. So, we have already addressed these issues. This Senator would certainly welcome hearings on the current state of those reforms and their effectiveness. In fact, I would ask the Banking Chairman to consider holding such hearings on CRA before we make changes to an important and effective program.

Mr. President, CRA has provided jobs, helped our economy to grow, and ensured all of our citizens are considered for loans based on their financial history, not their address. I urge all my colleagues to support removal of these provisions.

EXHIBIT 1

IOWA COALITION FOR HOUSING AND THE HOMELESS,
Des Moines, IA, May 3, 1999.

Rep. TOM LATHAM,
Cannon House Office Building,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN LATHAM: As organizations that work with and on behalf of low-income and homeless individuals, we join today to share our concerns regarding the proposed financial modernization legislation currently being considered in Congress. By combating discrimination and promoting bank-community partnerships, the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) extends the American dream of home and small business ownership to millions of Americans. Without this sustained access to capital and credit, our neighborhoods die. We ask that you support a strong CRA and the benefits it has brought our communities.

Through increasing the access to capital and credit, CRA provides a market-based solution for economic revitalization and even job creation. A strong and vibrant CRA has meant that hundreds of billions worth of new home mortgage loans and small business loans have been made in the low- and moderate-income urban and rural communities throughout the country in the past several years. Any bill that threatens to eviscerate the effectiveness and application of CRA will only destroy this promotion of wealth creation and entrepreneurial development in minority and working-class neighborhoods. While the various versions of financial modernization that have been introduced and contemplated may not directly attack CRA, they will eventually undermine the law by preventing its evolution with the rapid changes in the financial industry.

The current versions of financial modernization only demonstrate its fundamental problem: the ability of financial conglomerates to offer loans through their holding company affiliates, without having to conform to CRA requirements. Stated simply, holding companies will be able to shift assets from CRA-covered banks to mortgage and insurance companies, securities firms, and other institutions exempt from CRA-like requirements. Banks, therefore, will be left with fewer resources with which to make affordable housing economic development, and small business loans. If any financial modernization bill fails to extend CRA to the lending and bank services activities of mortgage companies and other non-depository affiliates, CRA will cover an ever-shrinking amount of traditional banking products and services.

In addition to the expansion of CRA, financial modernization could further serve low-income consumers if it improved upon data disclosure requirements. Such data disclosure requirements help communities identify missed market opportunities and eliminate discriminatory practices. These requirements help leverage reinvestment by making financial institutions publicly accountable to serve all borrowers in a fair and equitable manner. Insurance companies and others affiliating with banks should be required to report data on policies and services issued by income and race and small business data should include the race and gender of the borrower as well as the neighborhood in which the business is located.

We would also urge you to fight attempts to directly attack or weaken CRA; specifically, proposals such as safe harbors, small bank exemptions, and ''anti-greenmail'' bills or amendments. Mergers and acquisitions can disrupt the lives of thousands of citizens in a community through job losses, closing of offices, decreases in lending, and higher fees. CRA reviews are critical to ensure that lenders involved in mergers can preserve their CRA performance after such enormous institutional changes. Moreover, affected citizens ought to have the right to speak up and have their concerns addressed before a merger application is approved, regardless of the pre-merger CRA ratings.

Small bank exemptions would also be extremely harmful to communities because they eliminate community reinvestment requirements for most of the banks in the country. Small towns and rural areas that depend on these banks for home and small business lending would only suffer a new round of credit and capital flight. as proposed, the current legislation would exempt small rural banks under $100 million in assets from CRA altogether. Almost 40% of all lenders in the country will then have no obligation to serve minority and working-class neighborhoods. Seventy-two percent of all rural banks would be exempt from CRA. In Iowa, this exemption would include 85% of the lenders in non-metropolitan areas, many of whom enjoy a near monopoly in their service areas.

It would be detrimental to the wealth-building efforts in this country to pass a financial modernization bill that would halt community reinvestment progress by failing to keep CRA on pace with the evolution in the financial industry. Congress has required that banks serve ''the convenience and needs'' of the communities in which they are chartered because of the vital role they play in our lives. We believe that this same standard should be applied to the entire financial industry. A financial modernization bill that carefully modernizes the Community Reinvestment Act to the entire financial industry could have a profound effect in democratizing access to credit and capital accumulation tools in our society. Clearly, that would be good for America.

Sincerely,

SANDI MURPHY,
Policy Director.

The organizations listed below support the position of the Iowa Coalition for Housing and the Homeless and strongly encourage you to oppose the current financial modernization legislation and demand a strong, and protected, CRA.

John Boyne, United Action for Youth, Street Outreach, Iowa City.

Crissy Canganelli, Emergency Housing Project of Iowa City.

Jan Capaccioli, Domestic Violence Intervention Program.

Amy Covreia, Iowa City, Iowa.

Mike Coverdale, Iowa Community Action Network.

Bill Holvoet, Southeast Iowa Community Action.

Greg Jaudon, Iowa Homeless Youth Centers.

Gene Jones, Des Moines Coalition for the Homeless.

Mike Kratz, Veteran Affairs Medical Center.

Lora J. Morgan, Goodwill Industries of S.E. Iowa.

Mark Patton, Muscatine Center for Strategic Action.

Linda Severson, Johnson County LHCB.

Lisa Wageman, Operation Threshold, Waterloo.

---

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the Bryan CRA amendment. This amendment would strike the small bank exemption and the CRA safe harbor provisions included in S. 900 and require banks to have a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating as a condition for engaging in the expanded powers allowed under this bill.

The language of this amendment is similar to language that was included in the financial modernization bill which passed the House and Senate Banking Committee by a vote of 16 to 2 last year and which enjoyed broad industry support. Similar language has also been incorporated in the H.R. 10 bill that recently passed the House Banking Committee and is pending in the House Commerce Committee.

In short, the Community Reinvestment Act requires financial institutions to meet the credit needs of the local communities in which they are chartered, including low- and moderate-income communities, consistent with safe and sound practices. Let me reiterate, CRA requires banks to make credit-worthy loans. It does not require banks to make bad loans.

Despite this fact, some have argued that CRA is tantamount to government-mandated credit allocation. Nothing could be further from the truth. Neither the Act nor its regulations specify the number of loans, the type of loans, or the parties to CRA loans. To the contrary, CRA relies on market forces and private sector ingenuity to promote community lending. This is evidenced by the tremendous flexibility that financial institutions have in satisfying CRA. For example, loans to low-income individuals; loans to nonprofits serving primarily low- and moderate-income housing needs; loans to financial intermediaries such as Community Development Financial Institutions; and loans to local, state, and tribal governments may qualify for CRA coverage. Moreover, loans to finance environmental clean-up or redevelop industrial sites in low- and moderate-income areas also qualify as CRA loans.

In addition to lending, CRA is satisfied through investments by financial institutions in organizations engaged in affordable housing rehabilitation, and facilities that promote community development such as child care centers, homeless centers, and soup kitchens.

Even Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan has weighed in on this issue, arguing, ''The essential purpose of the CRA is to try to encourage institutions who are not involved in areas where their own self-interest is involved, in doing so. If you are indicating to an institution that there is a foregone business opportunity in an area X or loan product Y, that is not credit allocation. That, indeed, is enhancing the market.''

As illustrated by these examples and Chairman Greenspan's comments, it is clear that CRA is a far cry from government-mandated credit allocation. To be sure, CRA is predicated on two simple assumptions that were well-articulated by the legislative architect of CRA, former Senate Banking Committee Chairman Proxmire, who stated, ''(1) Government through tax revenues and public debt cannot and should not provide more than a limited part of the capital required for local housing and economic development needs. Financial institutions in our free economic system must play the leading role, and (2) A public charter for a bank or savings institution conveys numerous benefits and it is fair for the public to ask something in return.''

In the words of former Comptroller of the Currency Eugene Ludwig, ''CRA is in many respects a model statute. It requires no public subsidy, no private subsidy, and no massive Washington bureaucracy.''

It is this simple concept that has resulted in more than $1 trillion in loan commitments for low- and moderate-income borrowers since CRA's enactment in 1977. Indeed, the record home ownership rate that the U.S. is now enjoying—66.3 percent of Americans own their homes—is in large measure due to CRA lending to minorities and low-income individuals. Minorities have accounted for a disproportionately large share of home ownership growth since 1994—roughly 42 percent.

Also, since 1993, home mortgage loans to low- and moderate-income census tracts have risen by 22 percent, which is more than twice as fast as the rate of growth in all home mortgage loans. In view of these statistics, it is clear that CRA has played a tremendous role in the home ownership boom.

In addition to increases in home mortgage lending, CRA has also been responsible for an increase in community development lending. In the past four years, banks have invested four times as much in community development projects, as they did in the previous thirty years.

This increased investment in community development by banks has also furthered the evolution of a secondary market for community development loans, which ultimately provides additional capital for community development. For many years, the development of a secondary market for community development loans had been limited. This development was limited for a number of reasons including the lack of conformity in the underlying loans, as well as the fact that community development securities typically do not receive a rating from a nationally-recognized rating agency. Also, the underlying loans lacked long-term performance data, making them difficult to rate.

However, because of CRA, a secondary market for community development securities is beginning to emerge. This is happening for two specific reasons: (1) The federal banking regulators have interpreted CRA to allow banks to get CRA credit for purchasing community development securities, even if they lack ratings or performance data, if the purchases are consistent with safe and sound banking practices, (2) Also, as banks have increased their community development lending, they have been able to draw on this experience to improve underwriting standards and create greater conformity in underwriting, which is important for investors in the secondary market. Also, this experience has provided banks with greater empirical data on loan performance, which is another important consideration for secondary market investors. These are trends that we should clearly be excited about and should seek to further.

Instead, S. 900 would undermine this progress. Specifically, one provision of S. 900 would exempt rural banks with assets under $100 million from CRA. Although this exemption is limited to the smallest institutions, over 76 percent of rural banks would be covered. This is of great concern since small banks have historically received the lowest CRA ratings. In fact, institutions with less than $100 million in assets accounted for 92 percent of institutions receiving ''non-compliance'' CRA ratings in 1997–1998.

I am also concerned about this exemption because smaller banks are typically the primary sources of credit in rural communities. Hence, absent CRA, it is likely that many rural communities could become credit-starved.

The bill also includes a provision that would provide a safe harbor for banks with a ''satisfactory'' or better CRA rating. Specifically, institutions receiving a satisfactory CRA rating at their most recent examination would be presumptively in compliance with CRA, unless ''substantial verifiable information'' to the contrary was presented. I am concerned about this provision because it establishes a very difficult-to-satisfy burden of proof for individuals or groups wishing to protest a bank merger on CRA grounds. Indeed, I fear this provision will greatly inhibit the ability of groups to get the necessary information from banks to protest a merger. Also, when considering the fact that 97 percent of institutions receive a satisfactory or better CRA rating, it is clear that this provision will effectively eliminate CRA comment on a bank merger.

If these provisions of S. 900 are not eliminated, I fear a return to the days prior to CRA's enactment when access to credit was limited for many minorities and those living in low-income neighborhoods. In fact, testimony before the Senate Banking Committee during the consideration of CRA in 1977 revealed how bad things were. Witnesses recounted stories of financial institutions that had previously been active in urban lending, that disinvested in those same urban neighborhoods as minorities increasingly moved in. Testimony before the Senate Banking Committee also brought to light a 1974 study of six Chicago banks. In the study, it was found that these banks, which held $144 million in deposits from low-income and minority communities, returned one-half cent on the dollar in home loans. Such was the deplorable state of lending in low-income and minority communities before CRA.

While certainly we have come a long way since CRA's passage in 1977, lending discrimination, unfortunately, persists. In a study published earlier this year by the Fair Housing Council of Greater Washington, it was revealed that Washington area lenders discriminate against two out of five African American and Hispanic mortgage applicants. In one incident cited in the study, a Rockville lender advised a black tester that the lender did not make loans to first-time home buyers. The same lender later met with a white tester, also posing as a first-time home buyer, giving the tester an appointment and encouraging him to apply for a mortgage loan. Lending studies by other organizations reveal similar findings. These studies have shown that minority borrowers receive fewer bank loans even when their financial status is the same as or better than white borrowers.

By encouraging lenders to extend credit to all communities, CRA has been an important weapon in fighting lending discrimination. The Bryan amendment will ensure the potency of CRA in fighting lending discrimination and providing fair access to credit to low-income and minority communities.

In closing, Mr. President, let me reiterate how important it is to include CRA in any modernization legislation that passes. It is very likely that if S. 900 is enacted, we will see increased consolidation in the financial services industry. As we know from recent experience, this consolidation will likely lead to layoffs and bank branch closings. Absent the CRA language included in the Bryan amendment, I fear that this consolidation could have a significant and adverse impact on access to banking services and credit in low-income and minority communities. By adopting the Bryan amendment, we will at least ensure that industry consolidation will not decrease access to credit in these communities.

In fact, I feel so strongly about these provisions that I plan on opposing the bill if this amendment is not adopted. I would hope my colleagues can support this amendment.

Mrs. BOXER. I have been a longstanding supporter of financial services modernization and affirmed such support in a letter to Secretary Rubin about two years ago, and last year, as a member of the Banking Committee, I voted in support of H.R. 10—the Financial Services Modernization bill reported out of the Banking Committee with strong bi-partisan support.

I believe it is important that our financial services sector adapt to contemporary market conditions, marketplace innovations and to growing financial competition from abroad. Moreover, I understand and appreciate the desire of our financial services industries—banks, securities firms, and insurance firms—to further expand their traditional lines of business.

I joined the Banking Committee in 1993 when I was first elected to the Senate, and I proudly served on that Committee until this year. So I realize the process of financial services reform has been long, tedious, and often quite contentious. I also realize that many financial services firms are looking forward to the Senate putting an end to that long process by passing a financial services modernization bill. And I would like to see us pass a good bill—a fair and balanced bill.

Nonetheless, it is important to remember that the U.S. already has the best banking system in the world. It is the best capitalized, the most transparent, has the highest accounting standards, is very innovative and its safety and soundness is unsurpassed.

Therefore, it is appropriate to ask, ''why is financial services modernization necessary?'' It is necessary because the financial marketplace has changed, brought on by, among other things, a combination of new and innovative products and services, as well as technological advances.

Regulators must keep pace with these innovations, and we, as legislators must set the appropriate parameters for this changed financial services marketplace. We cannot leave it up to piecemeal regulation and legislation as, all to often, has been the case.

Our goal should be to create a regulatory framework which provides measurable benefits to consumers and businesses, enhances competitiveness of the financial services sector on a global basis, and ensures the continued safety and soundness of our financial institutions. While the bill before us goes a long way toward achieving that goal, unfortunately I believe, it falls short.

It falls short, principally in my opinion, because it fails to ensure the continued strength of the Community Reinvestment Act. CRA has been invaluable in helping to assure low and moderate income consumers, communities and small businesses have sufficient access to credit.

The Community Reinvestment Act has been important to both urban and rural communities. Every CRA dollar is a loan—it is the leveraging of capital. Over the past seven years or so, approximately $400 billion of community development has been leveraged. It has proven to be an effective tool in my home state of California and in states throughout the country.

CRA encourages federally insured financial institutions to help meet the credit needs of the communities in which they do business. As Senator Proxmire said in 1974, ''CRA is intended to establish a system of regulatory incentives to encourage banks and savings institutions to more effectively meet the credit needs of the localities they are chartered to serve, consistent with sound lending practices.''

CRA does not, despite many implications to the contrary, impose any requirement upon banks to make unsound or unsafe loans. CRA does not require banks to engage in risky lending or investments. It does not require banks to make loans outside of the lending criteria they have established. I would suggest, in fact, that given how well banks are doing these days, one would be hard pressed to make a reasonable case that CRA has been detrimental to the bottom line of banks or to their safety and soundness.

I think it is wonderful banks are doing so well, I appreciate the contributions they are making to our economy. I remember all too well when banks were not doing so well. Thus, I would not support CRA, or any other requirement, which encouraged banks to engage in unsafe lending practices.

My specific concerns as relate to the CRA provisions in this bill are as follows. First, as I understand it, there are no enforcement mechanisms or penalties for failing to maintain a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating. By contrast, the bill passed last year by the Senate Banking Committee required all banks in a holding company structure to have a satisfactory CRA rating as a condition of affiliation, and maintain a satisfactory CRA rating in order to continue to engage in new financial activities.

Second, this bill provides for a CRA ''safe harbor.'' Under this provision, all institutions which received at least a satisfactory CRA rating on their most recent examination, and received a satisfactory rating in each of the past 3 years, would be deemed to be in compliance with CRA. Such a safe harbor, I believe, would often effectively eliminate the opportunity for public comment. Banks and thrifts are usually examined every two to three years. CRA performance can change in the interim.

Third, S. 900 exempts those banks with less assets of less than $100 million, and those that are not located in metropolitan areas, from CRA. While I think we can all agree that institutions with assets of less than $100 million are small, the amendment would exempt more than 75 percent of rural institutions from CRA requirements—that is almost 40 percent of all U.S. banks and thrifts. Ironically, I would note, it has traditionally been these smaller institutions that have had the worst CRA records. Moreover, the new CRA rules, which went into effect in January 1996, provide a streamlined examination for banks and thrifts with assets less than $250 million. In fact, pursuant to the changes which took effect in 1996, small banks do not have any data collection or reporting requirements.

I do not believe the CRA changes envisioned in S. 900 are appropriate, or needed at this time. If there are abuses or specific problems, let's deal with them—let regulators, and, if appropriate, law enforcement deal with them. Such abuses are hurtful to CRA and to those who can potentially benefit from CRA. These abuses, I would suggest however, are extraordinarily rare. On the whole, bankers have found CRA to be an extremely minimal intrusion at most.

CRA has not been a problem to most bankers in my home state of California. BankAmerica, Wells Fargo and others have made important CRA commitments in my state.

Between 1992 and 1997, BankAmerica made $3 billion in conventional small business loans and lines of credit for less than $50,000. In 1997, it made more than $1 billion in loans and lines of credit for $100,000 or less. And BankAmerica has often noted their CRA loans have performed as well as other more traditional loans made by the bank. These loans have also been profitable for the bank. In fact, Hugh McColl, the Chairman and CEO of BankAmerica Corp. has said, ''My company supports the Community Reinvestment Act both in spirit and in fact. We have had fun doing it. We've made a business out of it.''

Moreover, in Los Angeles, as a result of CRA, loans to African American owned businesses increased a whopping 171 percent between 1992 and 1997. However, it is important to note that small business owners of every race have obtained credit as a result of CRA-related programs. For example, in San Diego, at least 25 percent of the loans made by local community development organizations were to white business owners.

So Mr. President, although I am a enthusiastic supporter of financial services modernization, I cannot support S. 900 if the CRA provisions contained in the bill are maintained. Access to capital and economic development, I believe, will potentially be some of the most important tools available to low and moderate income Americans in the coming century. Without such access to capital, far too many Americans, particularly those in urban and rural areas, will not be able to share in the economic wealth of our remarkably exuberant economy.

Mr. SARBANES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I have refrained from speaking all day. I do need to speak for a brief period of time, but I want to try to accommodate colleagues as well. If I can inquire of Senator SCHUMER, how much time would he need to speak, 5 minutes or thereabouts?

Mr. SCHUMER. Yes, that would be fine.

Mr. SARBANES. And Senator SHELBY?

Mr. SHELBY. About 10.

Mr. SARBANES. I would like to propound a request that Senator SCHUMER be allowed to speak and then Senator SHELBY and then after Senator SHELBY that I would be recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Could we add to it that, after the Senator from Maryland, I be recognized?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I thank my friend, the Senator from Maryland, as well as the Senators from Alabama and Texas for their courtesy here this evening.

I also thank Senator SARBANES for his indefatigable efforts to defend the Community Reinvestment Act.

And I'd like to thank my Democratic colleagues as well as Secretary Rubin for their strong commitment to CRA.

In 1977 when CRA was enacted, the thinking was that banks—though privately owned—receive public benefits in the form of deposit insurance and access to the Federal Reserve's discount window and payments system.

And in return, they would have an obligation to ''serve the convenience and needs'' of their communities.

Over 20 years later, banks still CRA as an obligation—but as an obligation that a minimum they can live with—and in many cases, that they endorse.

Does CRA work?

The answer has been a resounding yes.

Since its enactment, CRA has resulted in $1 trillion of investments in underserved communities. It's been a driving force for community economic development; one of the best ways to bring people together, to bring poor people and people of color upward, which we all want to do.

It's also driven a 30 percent increase in home ownership among low-income families since 1990, making the American Dream of home ownership a more commonplace reality for our minority communities.

And in 1997, large banks and thrifts made approximately 525,000 small business loans totaling $34 billion to entrepreneurs located in low and moderate communities.

CRA works.

And we know it works because banks who have never been shy in fighting what they view as burdensome or intrusive Federal regulation are not pushing to repeal CRA or even to roll it back.

In fact, they're supporting it. Every major bank in my State has contacted me in favor of CRA.

Some have been honest enough to admit that because of CRA they are reaching out to communities that they would not otherwise have served.

And they're serving them profitably.

Hugh McColl, Jr., Chairman and CEO of BankAmerica Corp., stated earlier this year; ''My company supports the Community Reinvestment Act in spirit and in fact. To be candid, we have gone way beyond its requirements * * *. We're quite happy living with the existing rules.''

A Federal Reserve study showed that banks with higher volumes of loans to low-income communities were on average more profitable than those with a lower volume.

And we know that banks have had some of their most profitable years even as CRA loans have reached record heights.

Finally, our regulators, who are committed to ensuring the safety and soundness of our financial institutions, have been very vocal in their support of CRA.

So there's more evidence that CRA has been effective in communities' edification than in any invidious exploitation of banks, as some of its critics have been charging.

The question is, then, with everyone in support of CRA, why do we want to throw away our best chance to pass financial modernization solely to end a law that we know is working?

The President has stated very clearly that with these CRA provisions, this bill will end in veto. His veto letter states:

> We cannot support the ''Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999'' * * *. In its current form, the bill would undermine the effectiveness of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA), a law that has helped to build homes, create jobs, and restore hope in communities across America. The CRA is working, and we must preserve its vitality as we write the financial constitution for the 21st Century.

Contrary to what many think, this amendment does not expand CRA. It simply maintains the status quo.

First, it requires that banks have at least a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating as a precondition for affiliation with securities and insurance firms. Today our insured depository institutions have this obligation. And 97 percent of them meet it. They meet it precisely because it is not a tremendous burden.

Second, this amendment would remove the small bank exemption that narrowly passed the Banking Committee. Small banks account for 70 percent of the ''needs improvement'' ratings handed out to banks by the regulators last year. So the idea that we should exempt the institutions that are most likely to be in noncompliance seems ill-advised.

Finally, the amendment eliminates the safe harbor provisions in the Committee print. The safe harbor sets up an unnecessary burden of proof that is simply unnecessary.

In sum, these provisions would restore CRA to today's potency.

As I said yesterday, I say, it is my hope that we can set aside our partisanship for the sake of pragmatism.

And set aside confrontation for the sake of compromise.

Mr. President, I strongly support this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

A vote for this amendment is a vote for modernization.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Bryan CRA amendment. This amendment not only strikes the small rural bank exemption that we have in the Banking Committee bill and that we adopted on a bipartisan vote, but it also replaces that language with a significant expansion in CRA—the same language Chairman GRAMM and I vehemently opposed on the Senate floor this past year.

Community banks, as the Presiding Officer knows, by their very nature, serve the needs of their communities and do not need a burdensome Government mandate to force them to allocate credit or to originate profitable loans. And, contrary to the assertions of critics, there is no evidence whatsoever that the small bank exemption would have ''devastating consequences'' for low- and moderate-income rural communities. There remains no documented evidence to prove such an assertion, just as there is no tangible evidence that CRA has ever helped rural communities in America.

What is documented, though—and Chairman GRAMM has worked tirelessly to do so—is the kinds of blackmail agreements and extortion practices that the Community Reinvestment Act enables community groups to engage in. The truth of the matter is that the small bank exemption would exempt less than 3 percent of bank assets nationwide. Thus, 97 percent of all bank assets would still be subject to the Community Reinvestment Act.

Just bear with me a minute on this chart. We have bank assets of $5.711 trillion. But banks above $100 million, rural and nonrural, control 97 percent of the bank assets in America. The small banks in America that we are talking about, those under $100 million in assets—there are 3,667 of them—control only $165 billion, or 2.9 percent of all the banking assets. Can you imagine? BankAmerica, for example, has $614 billion in assets. And I commend them for that. They are a well-run bank. But that is more than all 3,667 small rural banks in America put together; it is about 4 times more. So let's look at this in a realistic situation, as this chart here depicts.

Mr. President, critics will point out that the small rural bank exemption which I and Senator GRAMM have in the bill would exempt 3,700 banks. That is true. But to put that into context again, and to reiterate, one needs to understand that BankAmerica, as I have just shown, is four times the size of all small rural banks in America.

Indeed, BankAmerica possesses $614 billion in assets, or 10.7 percent of all bank assets in this country. If one looks at the list of large banks, one will soon realize that the vast majority of bank assets are concentrated in the large, multibillion-dollar banks that can most easily shoulder the burden of CRA.

The assertions of those who oppose the small bank exemption that we have in the banking legislation also do not comport with the comments I have received from small banks across the country. In fact, I have many letters from small bankers who complain about the burden of CRA, as well as the regulators' subjective reporting requirements dealing with CRA.

I would like to take a moment to read some letters from some small bankers in Alabama. I believe they have a right to be heard. I will quote from some of these. The first one says:

> I don't think, in these small community banks, that we have to be examined by people who usually don't understand our purpose, to enforce us to service our community * * *. Small community banks are a Service Institution. I know because I have just completed 39 years this month. All this time in small home-owned banks that deliver services that are essential to rural life. Where services have been rendered over the years even before we knew anything about CRA.

That was from Charles Willmon, chairman of the First Bank of the South in the small town of Rainsville, AL.

I have another letter, from John Mullins, president and CEO of First Commercial Bank of Cullman, AL, which says:

> Exempting small banks would be a wonderful opportunity for me to spend less time on unnecessary and nonproductive paperwork and more time helping the citizens of my market area improve their financial well-being . . . CRA examiners spend many unnecessary hours examining our loan track record. Banks our size are an integral part of the local community and we are always sensitive to the needs of our citizens. They are not faceless names, but people whom we know. We don't need a law to require us to help them with credit, we do it anyway.

I have another letter from a small banker in Clanton, AL. He is Leland Howard, Jr., of Peoples Southern Bank. He says:

> We in the community banks feel that the CRA exception for banks with aggregate assets of $100 million or less is a very good start on the road to easing the regulatory burden.

I have a letter from John Hughes, CEO of First National Bank of Hartford, AL, a small town in south Alabama. He says:

> Extra work created by the CRA is tremendous. Most rural banks know at least 95 percent of all their customers, their family, and their situation. The rating system that most examiners used is highly subjective and the rural banks have a hard time to achieve a grade higher than satisfactory. Again, it would be a great day in Alabama if you . . . could get this amendment passed.

Those are just a few letters, and they come from all over the Nation.

Mr. President, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond published its 1994 annual report on ''Neighborhoods and Banking,'' where it reported its findings on the costs of CRA. The report found:

> The regulatory burden [of CRA] would fall on bank-dependent borrowers in the form of higher loan rates and on bank-dependent savers in the form of lower deposit rates. And to the extent that lending induced by the CRA regulations increases the risk exposure of the deposit insurance funds, taxpayers who ultimately back those funds bear some of the burden as well.

The report goes on to say that, basically, the CRA imposes a tax on banks. CRA, then, is a tax on community banks and raises the costs of inputs to banks by increasing their regulatory burden and compliance costs. Mr. President, in addition, CRA forces banks to make loans according to a Federal quota, increasing the risks, and therefore the costs, of borrowing to consumers. Make no mistake about it, the Community Reinvestment Act raises the cost of borrowing through higher loan rates and punishes savers in the form of lower savings rates.

Critics of the small bank exemption claim that small banks get the worst CRA ratings. The truth of the matter is that one size does not fit all in any business. These critics point to lower than average loan-to-deposit ratios of small banks as evidence that they are not serving their communities. That is nonsense. That is like saying the average male wears a size 42 regular suit and that every male in America who does not fit in that size suit should be reprimanded by the Federal Government.

Every community in this great country is different. Most of us take pride in such diversity. That is the foundation on which this country was built.

However, the Community Reinvestment Act punishes banks who do not comport with national averages. Indeed, the loan demand in Prattville, AL, is not the same as in Lafayette, LA. Nor is it the same as in Shelbyville, TN. Nonetheless, CRA judges banks based largely on their loan-to-deposit ratios that the regulators deem to be appropriate. That, my friends, is nothing but a quota. When everything is said and done, CRA promotes quotas and creates a regulatory burden.

As if that is not bad enough, Mr. President, the Bryan amendment would also expand the reach and the scope of the Community Reinvestment Act.

Specifically his amendment would:

One, increase administrative enforcement authority of the regulators to fine directors and officers up to $1 million a day for CRA noncompliance. Just think about that.

Two, it would make expanded activities subject to CRA compliance on all depository institution affiliates on an ongoing basis.

And it would give the regulators the authority to shut down any affiliate within the holding company if just one subsidiary depository institution falls out of CRA compliance.

The Bryan amendment dramatically expands, Mr. President, CRA enforcement authority to allow civil money penalties for bank directors and officers, as I have pointed out.

The amendment would require bank holding companies who seek to become financial holding companies to be compliant with the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977 just in order to be eligible. If even one subsidiary depository institution ever falls out of compliance, the holding company, including the nonbank affiliate, would then be subject to section 8 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act, which is 12 U.S.C. 1818, which authorizes bank regulators to invoke cease and desist orders, civil penalties, and fines.

Regulators would be authorized to fine bank directors and officers up to $1 million a day. This, Mr. President, is a dramatic expansion in the enforcement authority and reach of bank regulators.

Such authority does not exist today. The Clinton Justice Department even agrees.

In late 1994, Comptroller of the Currency, Eugene Ludwig, tried to invoke the administrative enforcement powers under Section 8 of FDIA (12 U.S.C. 1818) to enforce CRA. The Justice Department issued a memorandum stating:

[T]o move from an enforcement scheme that relies upon a system of regulatory incentives to a scheme that entails cease-and-desist orders and potentially substantial monetary penalties is a leap that we do not believe can be justified on the basis of the text, purpose, and legislative history of CRA. We therefore conclude that enforcement under 12 U.S.C. 1818 is not authorized by CRA.

Bank trade associations were very pleased with the Justice Department decision. The Bankers Roundtable, the American Bankers Association, the Consumer Bankers Association, and the Savings and Community Bankers of America, filed joint letters focusing in substantial part on the regulators claims of enforcement authority.

The Bryan amendment also permits regulators to force divestiture since banks cannot ''retain shares of any company'' if ever out of CRA compliance. This provision also explicitly states that a bank holding company may not ''engage in any activity'' unless the institution is CRA compliant always and forever.

Think about it.

If just one subsidiary depository institution of a financial holding company falls out of compliance with CRA, the substitute authorizes the Federal Reserve Board to ''impose such limitations on the conduct or activities of the company or any affiliate of the company as the Board determines to be appropriate * * *'' This, too, is a dramatic expansion of enforcement authority under CRA. For the first time, regulators will be able to impose restrictions on activities throughout the entire holding company. This means a bank regulator could prohibit a securities affiliate from underwriting securities or an insurance affiliate from underwriting insurance.

Regulators do not have such authority today. Currently, CRA only allows regulators to prohibit the merger, acquisition or branch expansion of an institution that is not compliant with CRA.

Current law does not give bank regulators the authority to prohibit eligible activities of a given charter due to CRA non-compliance. The Bryan amendment requires an operating subsidiary who wants to engage in agency activities to maintain CRA compliance on all depository institution affiliates.

Thus, non-banking financial agency activities would be held hostage to CRA, with the bank regulators given the authority to enforce such law. This is the first time CRA has ever been expanded to cover the approval of non-depository activities.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Bryan amendment and support what is in the bill.

I yield the floor.

Mr. SARBANES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, shortly we will be voting with respect to the Bryan amendment.

I, again, want to underscore the very strong and powerful statement which I think Senator BRYAN made shortly after noon at the outset of this debate, and I am deeply appreciative to him for the strong leadership he has shown with respect to this amendment.

We have tried to give all Members a chance to speak. I, in fact, have refrained from doing so in the course of the day in order to make sure that our colleagues had a chance to speak. I would like to take just a few minutes now.

I want to speak in support of the amendment. But I really do not want to repeat a lot of the extensive discussion of the issues which have taken place, both during opening statements on the bill, and on the alternative amendment, and now on this amendment itself, although they may well bear repeating.

I want to make sure my colleagues appreciate the intense feeling and the critical importance which civil rights groups, mayors, rural groups, Hispanic groups, and Native American groups attach to this issue of CRA. They have all sent letters to the committee.

I ask unanimous consent those letters be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, these letters reflect how CRA has benefited communities all over this country—small, urban, and rural. They demonstrate how CRA has expanded economic opportunities for people of all races, colors, and ethnic affiliations.

Yesterday morning, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, our preeminent civil rights group, held a press conference in support of CRA. I would like briefly just to quote some of the comments made by civil rights leaders at the press conference, as well as comments made by individuals who benefited from CRA.

Dr. Dorothy Height, chairman of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, president emeritus of the National Council of Negro Women, spoke, and said:

Since its enactment in 1977, the Community Reinvestment Act has served as one of the crowning achievements in the civil rights movement.

The premise of the legislation is simple—to make sure that economic opportunity for families and communities is available to every American.

Opportunities for home ownership, small business development, and sustaining rural communities are critical to the strength of this Nation.

With CRA our neighborhoods have a chance. Without it, they are discriminated against.

Just as civil rights legislation enacted a decade ago sought to break down the walls of discrimination that separated us in schools, restaurants, and places of work by the color of our skin, the CRA has meant opportunity for everyone, whatever race or color. As a result of CRA, millions of minorities across this Nation now have access to the capital that will allow them to build new homes, to create new businesses, and to improve education.

She concluded her introductory remarks at the press conference by saying:

Leaders you see before you represent dozens of organizations galvanized by an assault on the Community Reinvestment Act. Those organizations represent millions of Americans who have been touched by CRA and millions more who deserve the same opportunity.

Make no mistake about it, this issue is seen by the civil rights community as a critical civil rights issue. Fair access to credit is fundamental to hopes for economic progress in our minority communities.

Another speaker at the press conference was Hugh Price, president of the National Urban League, who said:

We of the National Urban League strongly support financial services modernization because we believe it is in tune with the times. But we staunchly oppose any effort to gut the CRA. We at the Urban League work with the leaders of many financial institutions. Just last week I talked with Kenny Lewis, president of Bank America, who said that his bank stands strongly behind the renewal of CRA.

I know that belief is echoed by many leaders in the financial services and banking community who see it as good business for their corporations.

Charles Kamasaki, senior vice president of the National Council of La Raza, stated:

The National Council of La Raza is the Nation's largest Hispanic civil rights organization. We represent more than 200 local community-based organizations who provide a range of services, many of them supported by CRA-related funds in over 32 States.

Mr. Kamasaki, the head of the National Council of La Raza, introduced Richard Farias as president of the Tejano Center for Community Concerns in Houston, a member organization of La Raza. Mr. Farias stated, in speaking of the importance of CRA:

Now because of CRA, a number of banks in Houston created a consortium to help us purchase a $2.1 million school building. The building has 7.5 acres and 80,000 square feet of space, including a gymnasium, a cafeteria, an auditorium and 25 classrooms. They now have a charter school for success that houses 400 students and is expected to grow to 650 students.

He goes on to say that it is very important to understand that CRA is not just about community development; it is about empowerment of the people; it is about being able to give low-income children and families the right that they have to not only good housing but to good education and to good health services.

Daphne Kwok, executive director of the Organization of Chinese Americans, also took part in the press conference. She stated that the Organization of Chinese Americans supports the Community Reinvestment Act because it has enabled home ownership among minority and low- and moderate-income individuals:

Asian Pacific-Americans, especially Chinese-Americans, Korean-Americans, Vietnamese-Americans, Asian Indian-Americans are small business owners, and many of them are seeking to open up businesses in low and moderate income areas.

JoAnn Chase, executive director of the National Congress of American Indians, then spoke and stated:

Founded in 1944, the National Congress of American Indians is the oldest, largest and most representative national organization devoted to promoting and protecting the rights of American Indian tribal governments and their citizens. One of our key missions has been to continuously advocate for Indian self determination and self sufficiency, and toward that end from its very inception, our communities, our governments, our people have supported the Community Reinvestment Act, which has proven to be an effective means of encouraging federally insured financial institutions to extend prudent and profitable loans in traditionally underserved areas, particularly in Indian country.

Specifically, the CRA has helped focus attention to the challenges of extending credit to reservations and has acted as a catalyst to reservation-based economic development. Since the implementation of the CRA, Native American governments and citizens and our own banks have negotiated agreements for lending more than $155 million within the Indian country which has substantially advanced efforts toward economic self-sufficiency. It is a law that has helped build homes for our people, has inspired hope and has created jobs in many native communities.

The final speaker at the press conference was Hillary Shelton, Washington bureau director of the NAACP, who stated:

* * * on behalf of the NAACP * * * we are honored to strongly support and continue to endorse the Community Reinvestment Act and consequently oppose any attempts to weaken it.

The CRA has been instrumental in the revitalization of literally tens of thousands of communities nationwide, and continues to be an important tool in the NAACP's ongoing efforts to help people and communities achieve the goals of community resurrection, development, and growth, at no cost to American taxpayers.

Mr. President, there has been printed in the RECORD a letter from the U.S. Conference of Mayors which was quoted from earlier, a letter from a coalition of 19 family farm and rural groups, which states:

Rural areas continue to suffer from a serious shortage of affordable housing. Farmers are facing the worst financial conditions in more than a decade due to declining commodity prices. Rural Americans continue to need the tools of the CRA to ensure accountability of their local lending institutions. CRA helps to meet the credit demands of millions of family farmers, rural residents and local businesses.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD other letters from a number of organizations which have written to us in very strong support of the CRA, as well as editorials.

There being no objection, the material ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MISCHIEF FROM MR. GRAMM

Cities that were in drastic decline 20 years ago are experiencing rebirth, thanks to new homeowners who are transforming neighborhoods of transients into places where families have a stake in what happens. The renaissance is due in part to the Federal Community Reinvestment Act, which requires banks to reinvest actively in depressed and minority areas that were historically written off. Senator Phil Gramm of Texas now wants to weaken the Reinvestment Act, encouraging a return to the bad old days, when banks took everyone's deposits but lent them only to the affluent. Sensible members of Congress need to keep the measure intact.

The act was passed in 1977. Until then, prospective home or business owners in many communities had little chance of landing loans even from banks where they kept money on deposit. But according to the National Community Reinvestment Coalition, banks have committed more than $1 trillion to once-neglected neighborhoods since the act was passed, the vast majority of it in the last six years.

In New York City's South Bronx neighborhood, the money has turned burned-out areas into havens for affordable homes and a new middle class. The banks earn less on community-based loans than on corporate business. But the most civic-minded banks have accepted this reduced revenue as a cost of doing business—and as a reasonable sacrifice for keeping the surrounding communities strong.

Federal bank examiners can block mergers or expansions for banks that fail to achieve a satisfactory Community Reinvestment Act rating. The Senate proposal that Mr. Gramm supports would exempt banks with assets of less than $100 million from their obligations under the act. That would include 65 percent of all banks. The Senate bill would also dramatically curtail the community's right to expose what it consider unfair practices. Without Federal pressure, however, the amount of money flowing to poorer neighborhoods would drop substantially, undermining the urban recovery.

Mr. Gramm argues that community groups are ''extorting'' money from banks in return for approval, and describes the required paperwork as odious. But community organizations that build affordable housing in Mr. Gramm's home state heartily disagree. Mayor Ron Kirk of Dallas disagrees as well, and told the Dallas Morning News that he welcomed the opportunity to explain to Mr. Gramm that ''there is no downside to investing in all parts of our community.''

In a perfect world, lending practices would be fair and the Reinvestment Act would be unnecessary. But without Federal pressure the country would return to the era of redlining, when communities cut off from capital withered and died.

---

[From the Washington Post, May 4, 1999]

BANKING ON REFORM

The Senate today is scheduled to begin considering a bill that would remake the financial services industry, allowing banks and insurance companies and investment firms to merge and compete. Similar legislation is making its way through the House. The thrust of both bills is sound. But while the industries have lobbied hard to shape a law satisfactory to them, the current legislation doesn't adequately protect low-income communities or consumers' privacy. Financial modernization should apply to them, too.

Since the Depression, federal law has sought to keep the banking, insurance and securities industries separate. The idea, in part, was to make sure that federally insured bank deposits didn't wind up somewhere risky and unregulated. But in recent years, even without a change in the law, that separation has eroded. Banks have found ways to offer mutual funds to their customers; investment firms function like deposit institutions; etc. It makes sense now to bring legislation—and regulation—in line with reality.

Congress has been trying to do so, and failing, for more than a decade, and may again. But on the major issues, the administration, the Federal Reserve and Congress have pretty well agreed. They would let the financial services industries meld while for the most part keeping them out of other businesses, a wise decision. They've come up with fire walls and regulatory schemes that, while still not entirely agreed upon, have satisfied most concerns about protecting federally insured deposits.

But there is no consensus yet on safeguarding the interests of underserved communities. Since 1977 federally insured banks have been subject to the Community Reinvestment Act, requiring them to seek business opportunities in poor areas as well as middle-class and wealthy neighborhoods. The law, a response originally to clear evidence of bias in lending, has worked well. It doesn't force banks to make unprofitable loans, but it encourages them to look beyond traditional customers, and it's had a beneficial effect on home ownership and small-business lending.

Sen. Phil Gramm, chairman of the Banking Committee, now wants to scale the law way back. He argues that community groups use it to extort money from banks; there's scant evidence for that. The real danger is that, with financial modernization, banks will gradually escape their community obligations by transferring capital to affiliates that aren't covered by the law. The law should be extended and modernized to keep pace with a changing industry.

Consumer privacy also could be in danger as barriers among industries break down. An example: Should your life insurance medical records be shipped over, without your knowledge, to the loan officer considering your mortgage application? Sen. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland and Rep. Ed Markey of Massachusetts, among others, would give consumers more control over the sale and sharing of personal data. As the financial industry moves into a new era, privacy laws should also keep pace.

JESUIT CONFERENCE, THE SOCIETY OF JESUS IN THE UNITED STATES.
Washington, DC, March 3, 1999.

Hon. PAUL SARBANES,
Seante Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: We are writing you on behalf of the Jesuit Conference Board of the Society of Jesus in the United States. With the House and Senate Banking Committees scheduled to mark-up financial modernization legislation this week and vigorous discussions already underway we call your urgent attention to the status of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) in this debate. We urge your vocal and unconditional support for safeguarding and effectively applying CRA to any proposed financial modernization legislation. By maximizing the capital available to undeserved urban and rural areas, CRA has proven to be an exceptional means of promoting vital and sustainable communities. CRA should be allowed to continue its invaluable work.

There are approximately 4,000 U.S. Jesuit priests and brothers working abroad and in our domestic projects which include: 28 Jesuit-affiliated universities and colleges, more than 50 Jesuit high schools and middle schools, nearly 100 Jesuit parishes, and various other apostolic programs throughout the country. We have an overriding commitment to empower individuals, families and communities who are most at-risk in our society. In essential ways, CRA enables these marginalized groups to fully integrate into society.

Propelled by a mission of justice and social progress, Jesuit institutions have CRA-type goals of investing in the communities where they are located. For example, Fordham University is situated in one of the poorest urban counties in the nation. In 1983, Fordham formalized a long-standing partnership with the Northwest Bronx Community and Clergy Coalition to form the University Neighborhood Housing Corporation (UNHP). UNHP believes in working aggressively to develop and preserve innovative, community-controlled, affordable housing. With the strength and leverage of CRA, UNHP, has built a positive, working relationship with Chase Manhattan Bank. From the late 1980s, this relationship has resulted in millions of dollars of capital for affordable housing and economic development in the northwest Bronx. Recently, this successful partnership yielded $25 million in housing rehabilitation funding from Fannie Mae. The force of community leaders working with university, banking and Fannie Mae representatives is not merely a lifeline for the northwest Bronx; it has added self-sustaining stability and growth to an historically distressed, densely populated neighborhood. This is one example of an estimated $1 trillion in CRA-leveraged financial commitments since 1977.

We ask for your continued support for national economic development policies which equip people with the means to lead respectful and dignified lives. CRA is in the interest of underserved communities; it is in the interest of our Jesuit institutions; and it is in our collective, national interest.

Thank you for your consideration and efforts.

Sincerely,

REV. RICHARD RYSCAVAGE, S.J.,
Secretary, Jesuit Social & International Ministries.

MS. BRITISH ROBINSON,
National Director, Jesuit Social & International Ministries.

DEPARTMENT OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND WORLD PEACE
Washington DC, March 4, 1999.

Hon. PAUL SARBANES,
Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: I write to ask that you oppose any provisions in the Financial Services Act of 1999 that may eliminate consumer protections and/or dilute the fair lending laws.

The United States Catholic Conference has vigorously supported the disclosure of lending patterns since 1975 and was one of the original supporters of the Home Mortgage Disclosure Act. We believe people must have access to information about the lending practices and patterns of the financial institutions in their communities that are seeking their business. In the past banks, mortgage companies, insurance brokers and other financial institutions have discriminated against minority populations, low-income individuals and the communities in which they live with virtual impunity. The Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and the effective enforcement of its regulations have proved significant tools in ensuring that financial institutions meet the credit needs of the local communities in which they are located, particularly by increasing the flow of credit to low-income and minority communities.

Since 1977, CRA has channeled tens of billions of dollars profitably back into rural and urban communities. This success of local communities gaining access to private capital should not be jeopardized. Communities and neighborhoods need the investment of private capital particularly as government curtails its spending on housing and social services programs and local communities are being asked to assume more responsibility for their own development. Low and moderate income families of all races and ethnicities have benefited from CRA with increased opportunities to purchase homes, open small businesses or operate farms.

As Congress seeks to modernize the banking and financial industry, fair lending laws must not be undermined. Once more, we urge you to oppose any efforts to diminish consumer protections and to weaken fair lending laws.

Sincerely,

CARDINAL ROSER MAHONY,
Archbishop of Los Angeles, Chairman, Domestic Policy Committee.

---

NATIONAL LOW INCOME HOUSING COALITION/LIHIS
Washington, DC, April 6, 1999.

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
United States Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: On behalf of the National Low Income Housing Coalition, I must express in the strongest terms possible our objection to the evisceration of the Community Reinvestment Act in the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 recently reported out of the Senate Banking Committee.

The National Low Income Housing Coalition represents thousands of local housing organizations that are doing the hard work at the local level to rebuild neighborhoods that have been depleted by disinvestment, and to produce safe, decent, and affordable housing for people at the low end of the economic spectrum. These are organizations that are masterful at the management of multiple funding streams, bringing together the public and private resources required to stimulate and produce new housing and economic development initiatives at the local level. Each of our members can attest to the necessity of the Community Reinvestment Act in putting together the resources required to do the job we all expect of them. At a time when responsibility for solving serious community problems is being devolved to local organizations, it is mystifying as to why one of their most critical resource development tools would be pulled out from underneath them.

Especially serious is the provision in the Senate bill which allows banks not in compliance with CRA to expand their affiliations and engage in new powers. This would essentially render the CRA useless in the new world of financial modernization.

We also object to the creation of so-called ''safe harbors'' for institutions with at least a satisfactory CRA rating, which in effect eliminates opportunity for public comment on the community reinvestment activities of the banks, while maintaining opportunity for public comment on all other aspects of the institutions' functioning.

Finally, the small bank exemption would mean that rural communities have no options for acquiring credit, as small banks are often the only source of credit in many rural parts of the country.

The Community Reinvestment Act is a model of the Federal government at its best, stimulating investment in poor neighborhoods and creating a true partnership among the private, for profit sector; the private, not for profit sector, and the public sector. As we move into an era of a bigger and more comprehensive banking system, building on, not tearing down, this core element of community reinvestment should be an essential principle.

We urge that the Senate not take this action, and prevent the dire consequences that would result in its wake of its passage.

Sincerely,

SHEILA CROWLEY,
President.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, as I draw to a close, let me again say to the distinguished Senator from Nevada we very much appreciate his very strong and powerful statement.

EXHIBIT 1

APRIL 8, 1999

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
Senate Hart Office Building,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: The undersigned organizations write to express strong opposition to the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of the Senate Banking Committee on March 4th. The Act would restructure the financial services industry in the United States by allowing broad affiliations among banks, insurance companies, and security firms. Currently, the law strictly limits ownership among different financial entities and between financial companies and commercial corporations. The Act seeks to ease these restrictions, without commensurate expansion of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) to cover insurance companies, securities firms, mortgage companies, and other financial entities allowed to affiliate with banks. The Act would undermine one of the most effective revitalization vehicles for underserved low-income and minority communities, including Hispanic American communities across the country.

We have found, and research confirms, that all too often the credit and financial needs of these communities are severely underserved. Historically, many financial institutions have avoided investing in these communities due to their perceived higher level of risk. Unfortunately, ''perceived higher level of risk'' is often code for ''low-income'' or ''minority.'' But the facts show that low-income and minority communities are not inherently riskier than other communities. In fact, most financial institutions find them to be quite profitable, once they begin investing in them. Unfortunately, without the CRA, many financial institutions have not and would not be encouraged to do so.

As the data show, Hispanics are the fastest-growing population in the United States. We are a growing force in the expansion of homeownership and small business development, two leading indicators of the economic well-being of this country. For example, between 1987 and 1992, Hispanic-owned business grew by over 76%, compared to 26% for U.S. businesses overall. According to a 1997 Harvard study, ''the number of Hispanic homeowners has shown the most spectacular rise'' in recent years compared to that of Whites and of other minority groups. Population projections forecast Hispanics to be the largest minority group in the U.S. by the year 2005, causing the U.S. economy to be increasingly dependent on the continued prosperity of the Hispanic American community. Without the CRA, this growth may be impeded.

As reported out of the Senate Banking Committee, the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 would hinder that growth by weakening the CRA in the following three ways. First, ''satisfactory'' CRA rating is not required in order for financial institutions to enjoy the new powers afforded to them by the legislation, thereby allowing banks to exercise their privilege, even if they are not meeting the credit needs of the communities where they do business.

Second, banks receiving a ''satisfactory'' CRA rating would be given a ''safe harbor'' from public comment on CRA performance. Since over 95% of banks receive a ''satisfactory'' rating, this would undermine the effectiveness of the law by restricting a community's right to voice its experience with banks. While a ''satisfactory'' rating provides a helpful guide to a bank's overall performance, it may not provide an accurate picture at the neighborhood level.

Third, the Act proposes to exempt all small rural banks (those with less than $100 million in assets) from CRA, thereby releasing 76% of all rural banks from their CRA obligations. As with the safe harbor provision, this undermines the spirit and the effectiveness of the law by exempting most rural banks. This would have particularly adverse consequences in low-income rural communities where often the only source of credit is a small bank. Moreover, researchers have found that small banks have disproportionately poor CRA records compared to larger banks, thereby highlighting the need for CRA in rural communities and small towns.

CRA is one of the strongest incentives to encourage investment in low-income and minority communities. Over the last twenty-two years, neighborhoods across the country have benefited from CRA-encouraged investments. This has resulted in increases in homeownership and business development, leading to the rebirth of many American neighborhoods. However, many communities remain underserved by capital and investment vehicles. For this reason, reinforcement, not weakening, of CRA is critically needed. We urge you to support the continued strengthening of America's communities by vigorously opposing the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 as reported out of Committee, and supporting amendments that would strengthen the Bill's CRA protections. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Rick Dovalina, National President, League of United Latin American Citizens; Arturo Vargas, Executive Director, NALEO Educational Fund; Ruth Pagani, Executive Director, National Hispanic Housing Council (NHHC); Juan Figueroa, President and General Counsel, Puerto Rican Legal Defense and Education Fund (PRLDEF); Antonia Hernandez, President and General Counsel, MALDEF; Raul Yzaguirre, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Council of La Raza (NCLR); Manuel Mirabal, President and Chief Executive Officer, National Puerto Rican Coalition (NPRC).

---

NATIONAL FARMERS UNION,
Washington, DC, March 24, 1999.

DEAR SENATOR: On behalf of the 300,000 farm and ranch families of the National Farmers Union, I write to express our strong opposition to the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999, as reported out of the Senate Banking Committee earlier this month. Specifically, we are concerned that the bill would undercut the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA)—a law that has significantly expanded access to credit in rural communities across the nation.

The Community Reinvestment Act prohibits redlining, and encourages banks to make affordable mortgage, small farm and small business loans. Under the impetus of CRA, banks and thrifts made $11 billion in farm loans in 1997. CRA loans assisted small farmers in obtaining credit for operating expenses, livestock and real estate purchases. Low- and moderate-income residents in rural communities also benefited from $2.8 billion in small business loans in 1997.

In 1999, access to credit is tighter than usual, making it critical to maintain the CRA. There are three provisions in the pending legislation that jeopardize the CRA.

First, the bill exempts banks and thrifts that are located in rural areas and have less than $100 million in assets, from CRA requirements. This provision would exempt 76 percent of all banks and thrifts in rural communities. A Congressional Research Service study of data from 1997 to mid-1998 found that banks with less than $100 million in assets receive 70 percent of the ''below satisfactory'' CRA ratings.

Second, the banking bill fails to require that banks have a satisfactory CRA rating in order to affiliate with securities and insurance firms. In the absence of this requirement, banks could ignore local credit needs in favor of expanding to other areas.

Third, the bill has the effect of eliminating the public's opportunity to comment on a bank's performance pending expansion, if that bank has had a satisfactory CRA rating during the previous 36 months.

There is no compelling reason to weaken the CRA. In fact, CRA regulations were revised in 1995 to reduce compliance burdens on small banks and allow for streamlined examination.

The CRA has been extremely successful in encouraging financial institutions to help meet the credit needs of rural communities across the nation. Therefore, we urge you to oppose the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999 until the provisions against the CRA are removed.

Sincerely,

LELAND SWENSON,
President.

---

SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1999.

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
Ranking Member, Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: I am writing to express my concern with provisions of the Financial Services Modernization legislation that would weaken the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA). The President has made clear that he would veto legislation that weakens CRA, and it is my hope that the U.S. Senate will not move to undermine this important statute.

The CRA is a vital tool in providing access to capital in communities traditionally underserved and once perceived as high-risk lending areas. Financial institutions have found, through CRA, that creditworthy borrowers and sound investments do exist in these areas. The CRA has resulted in viable small businesses creating jobs and stimulating local economies. Without CRA, lending institutions might never realize the maximum potential of these marketplaces, and many communities could lose access to bank credit, which is so important to small businesses.

The CRA focus for banks strikes at the heart of fulfilling the U.S. Small Business Administration's (SBA) mission. SBA is in the business of providing credit to those who cannot obtain it elsewhere, and we do this largely through our partners—local financial institutions. Everyday, SBA and banks across the country help entire communities grow through SBA-backed equity investments and guaranteed loans, many of which fall under CRA goals. Additionally, studies analyzing CRA data identify and quantify what would have been only hunches just 4 years ago, and the result is a more accurate depiction of the patterns and gaps of small business lending across the Nation. The CRA is essential in meeting the credit and investment needs of our America's small businesses.

Weakening CRA could reverse the progress we have made in small business lending in this country. As you seek to modernize the financial industry, I urge you to oppose any provision that actually moves us back in time.

Sincerely,

AIDA ALVAREZ
Administrator.

---

CHAIRMAN GREENSPAN COMMENTS ON CRA

''Anecdotal information seems to suggest that loans to low- and moderate-income people perform, with respect to repayment, as well as loans to others, though some studies have suggested that delinquency rates on some types of affordable mortgage loans are higher. . . . there is little or no evidence that banks' safety and soundness have been compromised by such lending, and bankers often report sound business opportunities.''—January 12, 1998.

''When conducted properly by banks who are knowledgeable about their local markets, who use this knowledge to develop suitable products, and have adequately promoted those products to the low- and moderate-income segments of the community, CRA can be a safe, sound and profitable business.''—May 17, 1995.

Chairman Greenspan noted during testimony before the House Banking Committee on February 11, 1999 that CRA has ''very significantly increased the amount of credit in communities'' that the changes have been ''quite profound.''

''CRA has helped financial institutions to discover new markets that may have been underserved before.''—May 17, 1995 repeated January 12, 1998.

---

CRA ADMINISTRATION AND DEMOCRATIC SUPPORTERS

''We must pass a stronger Community Reinvestment Act that challenges to lend to entrepreneurs and promotes development projects that reinforce community and neighborhood goals.''—Governor Bill Clinton and Senator Al Gore, ''Putting People First,'' 1992.

''[T]he town banker is doing pretty well where you live—in a big city or a small town. And yet, unbelievably enough, when we are proving it is working, the Community Reinvestment Act is under fire again.''—President Clinton to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, January 29, 1999.

The CRA has ''helped to build homes, create jobs, and restore hope in communities across America.''—President Clinton, Letter to Senator Paul Sarbanes and Senator Phil Gramm, March 2, 1999.

''We must protect the Community Reinvestment Act, which expands access to capital from mainstream financial institutions. We have greatly improved CRA by streamlining its regulations so that they focus on performance, not paperwork. CRA has been an enormous success.''—Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin, Letter to Senator Phil Gramm, February 1, 1999.

''It's very significantly increased the amount of credit that's available in the communities, and if one looks at the detailed statistics, some of the changes have been quite profound.''—Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, Testimony before the House Banking and Financial Services Committee, February 11, 1999.

''[C]redit is the key to the American dream. Without it, people cannot share the tremendous wealth of our free market system—cannot buy a home, own a car, or send a child to college.''—Former Rep. Joseph Kennedy (D–MA), House Floor Statement during the Debate on the Financial Institutions Safety and Consumer Choice Act, November 1, 1991.

WHAT SENATOR GRAMM HAS SAID ABOUT CRA

''I believe that perhaps the greatest national scandal in America . . . is a scandal where a law is being used in such a way as to extract bribes and kickbacks and in such a way as to mandate the transfer of literally hundreds of millions of dollars and to misallocate billions and tens of billions of dollars of credit.''—Senate Floor Statement, October 5, 1998.

''[A]ll over the country banks that have exemplary records in community lending and that have received the highest ratings on CRA are routinely shaken down every time they want to open a branch, every time they want to start a new bank, every time they want to engage in a merger.''—Senate Floor Statement, October 5, 1998.

''[CRA] conjures up in my mind the ''protection'' racket of an earlier era, where the little merchant had the gangster come into his place of business and say, 'You know, somebody could come in here and do you some real harm, and I am willing to protect you.' ''—Senate Floor Statement, September 30, 1998.

''Let this evil, like slavery in the pre-Civil War period, let it exist, but do not expand it.''—Senate Banking Committee Markup Hearing, September 11, 1998.

''CRA has since been corrupted into a system of legalized extortion, often with the assistance of regulators. Moreover, it has increasingly replaced market-directed financial activity with politically directed and motivated channeling of private sector financial resources. . . . This cronyizing (sic) of the American economy is more typical of a third world economy and will undoubtedly be damaging to our national economic growth.''—Letter to Senate Committee on the Budget, March 5, 1999.

---

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 2, 1999.

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR PAUL: This Administration has been a strong proponent of financial legislation that would reduce costs and increase access to financial services for consumers, businesses and communities. Nevertheless, we cannot support the ''Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999,'' as currently proposed by Chairman Gramm, now pending before the Senate Banking Committee.

In its current form, the bill would undermine the effectiveness of the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA), a law that has helped to build homes, create jobs, and restore hope in communities across America. The CRA is working, and we must preserve its vitality as we write the financial constitution for the 21st Century. The bill would deny financial services firms the freedom to organize themselves in the way that best serves their customers, and prohibit a structure with proven advantages for safety and soundness. The bill would also provide inadequate consumer protections. Finally, the bill could expand the ability of depository institutions and nonfinancial firms to affiliate, at a time when experience around the world suggests the need for caution in this area.

I agree that reform of the laws governing our nation's financial services industry would promote the public interest. However, I will veto the Financial Services Modernization Act if it is presented to me in its current form.

Sincerely,

BILL CLINTON.

---

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE,
Washington, DC, March 2, 1999.

Re the Financial Services Modernization Act and the Community Reinvestment Act.

Hon. PAUL S. SARBANES,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SARBANES: The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the nation's oldest and largest grassroots civil rights organization, strongly supports the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) and opposes any attempts to weaken it. The CRA has been instrumental in the revitalization of literally tens of thousands of communities nationwide, and is an important tool in the NAACP's efforts to help people and communities achieve their goals at no cost to the taxpayer.

Through CRA, financial institutions are discovering that there are benefits to working in and with low to moderate income and minority communities. Since its enactment in 1977, CRA has helped lenders tap into previously unchartered areas and consequently they are learning what a viable, profitable market the low-moderate and minority communities are.

One example of a CRA success story would be the NAACP's Community Development and Resource Centers (CDRCs). The NAACP, working together with NationsBank, opened our first CDRC in 1992 in part to help NationsBank comply with CRA. Since that time, NAACP–CDRCs have made mortgage, consumer and small business loan referrals amounting to over $100 million, and more than 10,000 individuals and businesses have received counseling or technical assistance through CRDCs.

Due to the vital role the banking industry plays in the success or failure of every American neighborhood, CRA is a necessary tool for the sustained economic development of our nation. Thus the NAACP urges you, in the strongest terms possible, to oppose any amendments or bills that would in any way weaken the effectiveness of CRA. The NAACP also urges you, again in the strongest terms possible, to support any move to expand or modernize CRA as the financial services industry is allowed to change and grow. By not including CRA in any restructuring of the financial services industry, you would effectively be denying whole communities access to much-needed mortgages, consumer or small business loans, or basic financial assistance.

I hope that you will feel free to contact me if you have any questions regarding the NAACP position on CRA, or if there is any way that I can work with you to ensure that CRA is allowed to continue to prosper and provide assistance to people and communities across the nation.

Sincerely,

HILARY O. SHELTON,
Director.

Mr. BRYAN. I note that the distinguished chairman wants to speak. The Senator from Nevada would like to get 5 to 6 minutes at some point, if that can be accommodated.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, under the unanimous consent request, I was to be recognized next.

I suggest we let Senator MACK speak for 4 minutes, have the distinguished Senator from Nevada speak for 4 minutes, and then I will speak for 4 minutes and we will be through. Would that work?

Mr. BRYAN. That is fine.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I thank Senator GRAMM and the other Members on the floor for this time. I will be brief.

I have spoken on this issue throughout my time in the Senate serving on the Banking Committee which now is into its 11th year. I also make these comments from the perspective of an individual who was president of a small bank in southwest Florida for 5 years out of a 16-year banking career.

One would think, listening to the comments that have been made by the distinguished Senator from Maryland, that we were proposing to repeal CRA. We are not proposing that at all. There may be Members who want to do that, but that is not what the issue is about. The issue is about regulatory overkill.

This little bank that I was president of had about $60 million in assets—very small bank—in a community that was developed, one of these Florida developments, that began in the late 1950s. To suggest that this small community bank in a very well-defined and confined market was not providing resources to that market is just absurd. If we did not lend money into that market, we would, in fact, have gone broke. So all I am suggesting is the amendment being proposed here is being sold as if we were trying to repeal CRA. The information I have is with the committee position: Only 2.8 percent of the total assets of the banking industry in America are affected by this carve-out, 2.8 percent. There were 16,000 banks audited over a 9-year period and only three of those banks—I am talking about small banks now—only three of those banks were found to be significantly out of compliance.

Small banks in America need some regulatory relief. That is all we are suggesting here. Again, my experience was this little bank of $60 million in assets had to assign one individual whose job it was to put pins into a map in our market showing where we had made real estate loans. That is all we had to do. But I had to assign one person to do that. She had to put programs into effect in the bank to make sure we were complying with lending to our community. It was the only place we could have loaned.

So the idea that we needed to have the Community Reinvestment Act for my bank and for small community banks is absurd. I ask my colleagues to reject the amendment and to support the committee position.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. I thank the chairman for accommodating me and allowing me to speak for 4 minutes.

Let me say we had much debate and much discussion. There are amendments on bills that come and go. They really do not impact the overall outcome. This amendment is the most important amendment that will be considered in this debate. If the Bryan amendment loses, we convert what can be a bipartisan effort to get this legislation, which I strongly support and supported in the last Congress—and it becomes immediately a partisan vote, and that legislation has no chance in that form of becoming law. Whatever one's view is on CRA, and I understand we have widely different views, I respectfully submit this is not the vehicle to make this the issue. If, as the distinguished chairman and others have said, CRA needs to be revisited, let's do so in the context of some type of other legislation that is presently before the Banking Committee. We have had no hearings at all on this.

The Bryan amendment does two very simple things. One, it retains the current CRA provisions, including those provisions which relate to small banks that eliminate their need to even file a report. All they have to do is to point for the bank examiner and say the records are in the file cabinet. They need do no more. So this is not, in my judgment, an onerous burden.

And with respect to the new services that we permit banks to participate in, if Secretary Rubin and other experts who are looking at the banking field are correct, that is the wave of the future. If we do not require CRA as the condition of availing oneself of these new financial services, securities and insurance, in effect we marginalize and relegate CRA to a much lesser role.

What is accomplished? Hundreds of millions of dollars have been invested in the inner cities in our country. Thousands of minority businesses have had an opportunity to participate, which they would not otherwise have gotten, and home ownership opportunities have expanded for literally millions of Americans. It would seem to me those are the kind of issues we can agree on—Democrats, Republicans, conservatives and liberals. CRA has accomplished much.

We have gone through this before. A year ago, we nearly got a bill. It passed by a bipartisan majority in the House, with virtually the identical provisions that relate to CRA as contained in the Bryan amendment. It passed 16 to 2 out of the Banking Committee in this session of Congress; in the House Banking Committee by a vote of 51 to 8. This legislation has progressed with, again, virtually the identical provisions as it relates to CRA that the Bryan amendment contains.

So why are we going through this? The protagonists, the bankers, the insurance companies and the securities industry, do not oppose this legislation. We are going through this because our able chairman, whom we all greatly respect, says he needs leverage in dealing with the House. The last time I looked at the record of the composition of the House, the Republican Party was in the majority. Among its leaders were people such as TOM DELAY and DICK ARMEY, not exactly what you would call liberal exponents, bleeding-heart types.

It seems to me the argument that we need leverage makes no sense at all.

Finally, let me say this may be the only opportunity in this Congress to vote on a civil rights amendment, a process that has worked well and has served the nation well. It is not objected to by those who are struggling to reach the compromises on this piece of legislation. We should enact the Bryan amendment and move forward and get this bill over to the House, get it to conference and signed into law by the President. We have that opportunity only if the Bryan amendment prevails.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, this has been a long debate and I think a good debate. Rather than trying to go back and answer specific points that have been made, and correct statements, let me just try to cut to the heart of this. This is not about banks, even though the Independent Bankers, the American Bankers Association, the Bankers Roundtable oppose this amendment and support the underlying bill.

This is not about insurance companies. This is not about securities companies. This is about right and wrong. I have presented today, from redacted agreements, secret agreements that have been entered into by community groups and banks, three examples, the only three we have, where over and over again community groups are paid cash payments in return for them withdrawing objections which they have made to banks taking specific action, or where they have agreed not to raise an objection.

So the first thing we are trying to do is bring integrity to the process by preventing people, in essence, from paying witnesses. How do we try to do that? We try to do it in the following way: If you are a bank and you have an excellent CRA record, you have been in compliance for three audits in a row and you are in compliance now—we do not in any way limit the ability of anybody to object to that bank doing what it has a right to do under law—all we are saying is you are innocent until proven guilty if you have a long record of compliance. If you are going to come in and prevent a bank from taking an action they have earned the right to do based on audits on community lending, and you come in and say they are racists, or they are loan sharks, that is not enough. What we require is you present substantial evidence.

How is that defined? The Supreme Court defines substantial evidence as ''more than a mere scintilla . . . such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a claim.''

That is not a high standard. That is simply a credibility standard. And all over America—we have professional protesters in Boston who are protesting bank mergers in Illinois. What do they have to do with community lending in Illinois? Nothing. But they file a protest. The bank is deathly afraid of being held up in its merger, for example. Obviously, they do not want to be called bad names by people who are professionals at calling people bad names. So they end up paying these groups cash. That is not right.

This is an issue of right and wrong. The second issue is the issue relating to small banks. Little banks in rural communities in total hold only 2 percent of the assets of banks, but in 16,300 audits of these banks, each one of them on average cost the bank $80,000 to comply with. They found three banks in 9 years that are substantially out of compliance. They made these little banks pay $1.3 billion to find three bad actors. And little banks all over America are threatened by this regulatory burden. So we exempt them from it.

Mr. President, 44 percent of the enforcement effort is going to banks with 2.8 percent of the capital. Take that enforcement effort and put it where the money is and you will get more community lending, not less.

Finally, it is not as if the Sarbanes amendment simply strikes our provisions. But the Sarbanes amendment is the largest expansion of CRA in American history.

It would impose a million-dollar-a-day fine on bank officers and board members if they fell out of compliance. The American Bankers Association and the Independent Bankers Association have urged us not to do this, because they will not be able to get board members to serve and they will not be able to hire officers if they have to buy insurance to potentially pay a million-dollar-a-day fine if they fall out of compliance with this regulation.

What is the justification for this regulatory overkill when you have had three cases of substantial noncompliance out of 16,300 audits over 9 years? What is wrong with this picture?

What is wrong with the picture is, sadly, that many of our Democrat colleagues have decided, even though the spokesman for CRA testifying before our committee said, yes, there are abuses and, yes, they hurt the process and, yes, there is what they call green mail. Most people call it blackmail. But our colleagues have taken the extreme position that not only will they not address these abuses, they are going to vastly expand this to insurance, to securities and, with these million-dollar-a-day fines, producing a situation where every abuse we are concerned about today is going to be greatly expanded.

I urge our Democrat colleagues, if you support CRA, to help us bring an end to these abuses. If you support CRA, end the regulatory paperwork burden overkill so we can focus in this law on the real problem. While groups claim we are endangering CRA, it is those who will not fix clear wrongs that scream out that endanger it.

Mr. President, I move to table the pending amendment and ask for the yeas and the nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 303. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG) is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) is absent attending a funeral.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG) and the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) would each vote ''no.''

The result was announced—yeas 52, nays 45, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 101 Leg.]

YEAS—52

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Abraham | Frist | Murkowski |
| Allard | Gorton | Nickles |
| Ashcroft | Gramm | Roberts |
| Bennett | Grams | Roth |
| Bond | Grassley | Santorum |
| Brownback | Gregg | Sessions |
| Bunning | Hagel | Shelby |
| Burns | Hatch | Smith (NH) |
| Campbell | Helms | Smith (OR) |
| Chafee | Hutchinson | Snowe |
| Cochran | Hutchison | Stevens |
| Collins | Inhofe | Thomas |
| Coverdell | Kyl | Thompson |
| Craig | Lott | Thurmond |
| Crapo | Lugar | Voinovich |
| DeWine | Mack | Warner |
| Domenici | McCain | |
| Enzi | McConnell | |

NAYS—45

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Akaka | Edwards | Lieberman |
| Baucus | Feingold | Lincoln |
| Bayh | Feinstein | Mikulski |
| Biden | Graham | Moynihan |
| Bingaman | Harkin | Murray |
| Boxer | Hollings | Reed |
| Breaux | Inouye | Reid |
| Bryan | Jeffords | Robb |
| Byrd | Johnson | Rockefeller |
| Cleland | Kennedy | Sarbanes |
| Conrad | Kerrey | Schumer |
| Daschle | Kerry | Specter |
| Dodd | Kohl | Torricelli |
| Dorgan | Leahy | Wellstone |
| Durbin | Levin | Wyden |

ANSWERED ''PRESENT''—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING—2

| | |
|---|---|
| Landrieu | Lautenberg |

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. SARBANES. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to table was agreed to.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I rise today in support of S. 900, which will modernize our financial services laws.

If our financial industries are going to be able to compete in the world market in the next century, we must modernize our depression-era banking laws.

The next century is almost here. We all talk about a Y2K problem. What about the antique banking law problem? Entering the new century with antiquated banking laws would be foolhardy. We have to reform our financial service system.

Most of the financial services and bank laws that are on the books today are based on the Glass-Steagall Act, legislation passed in 1935, over 60 years ago!

The world has changed a great deal since then, and it is going to change further and faster as we move into the 21st century. We need to update our outdated laws to account for this change and to give flexibility to American companies.

At the same time, we must make sure that any bill we pass treats all the segments of the financial industry fairly, and that there is a level playing field for all of the groups involved.

If history is any indication, any new law we pass will be with us for a long time, so we had better get it right.

We've been working to get it right for a long time. Eleven years ago, when I was a member of the House Banking Committee, we were able to report a financial services modernization bill to the floor.

Last year the House passed a bill and the Senate was able to pass a bill out of committee.

As a Member of the House last year, I supported the bill that passed by one vote in the House. It wasn't perfect. There were things I would have liked to change.

But I believed at the time that we couldn't allow the search for perfection to block real progress.

That's even more true this year.

We can talk about banking reform—and negotiate issues—for another twelve years—and we won't ever be able to make everyone totally happy.

There are too many competing interests and too much complexity is involved in the rapidly changing financial services industry for us ever to find a regulatory framework that will completely satisfy all of the players involved.

It's not going to happen.

At some point, we just have to do the best we can and move ahead. I'm convinced we have reached that point now—we should pass this bill.

Fortunately, the bill our committee approved this year is even better than the bills we considered last year. Chairman GRAMM and his staff did a good job—the committee did a good job.

It is time to move ahead.

We should pass a clean bill quickly and send a message to the other body that we are serious about financial services reform.

This bill has many important provisions. And I'm not going to talk about them all, but I would like to mention one issue in particular.

The one issue my bankers bring up every time they come to visit is Community Reinvestment Act or CRA reform.

I am very pleased the chairman has agreed to put CRA provisions in the bill and that we were able to pass Senator SHELBY's amendment in committee that will provide CRA relief, especially to small banks in my State and across the Nation.

Senator SHELBY's amendment will exempt 154 small banks in Kentucky from Federal CRA burdens.

These banks have always invested in the community. That is where their business is. A bank in Clinton, Kentucky does not lend in Louisville or Lexington, it lends in Clinton.

I have a letter from Robert Black, president and CEO of the Clinton Bank. Mr. Black says: ''We were using good CRA practices long before the burdensome regulation was passed. This regulation is now requiring much of our time preparing documentation and placing pins in a map just to prove that we made loans in every community.''

I should mention that Clinton, Kentucky was not named after Bill Clinton.

I would also like to read a passage from a letter from E.L. Williams, president of the Citizens Deposit Bank of Arlington, in Arlington Kentucky.

Mr. Williams states: ''In our opinion, the time and money afforded to CRA compliance in small banks could be used to a much greater advantage, such as lending and assisting the low to moderate income population for which the CRA was originally implemented.''

These small banks will lend in their own communities with or without CRA. They don't need Federal regulators breathing down their necks to make sure they are doing what they would be doing anyway.

I would personally like to see even greater reform of CRA—across the board—but our small banks really need and deserve relief and this bill provides it.

In closing, Mr. President, I repeat that this bill is not perfect. But it is a dramatic improvement over the antique financial laws we are operating under now and it is a dramatic improvement over the Sarbanes substitute.

We must enter the 21st century ready to compete and this bill will make that possible.

It is a good bill—I urge my colleagues to support it.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Tuesday, May 4, 1999, the federal debt stood at $5,563,049,386,516.94 (Five trillion, five hundred sixty-three billion, forty-nine million, three hundred eighty-six thousand, five hundred sixteen dollars and ninety-four cents).

One year ago, May 4, 1998, the federal debt stood at $5,477,263,000,000 (Five trillion, four hundred seventy-seven billion, two hundred sixty-three million).

Five years ago, May 4, 1994, the federal debt stood at $4,572,995,000,000 (Four trillion, five hundred seventy-two billion, nine hundred ninety-five million).

Ten years ago, May 4, 1989, the federal debt stood at $2,770,422,000,000 (Two trillion, seven hundred seventy billion, four hundred twenty-two million).

Fifteen years ago, May 4, 1984, the federal debt stood at $1,489,259,000,000 (One trillion, four hundred eighty-nine billion, two hundred fifty-nine million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $4 trillion—$4,073,790,386,516.94 (Four trillion, seventy-three billion, seven hundred ninety million, three hundred eighty-six thousand, five hundred sixteen dollars and ninety-four cents) during the past 15 years.

CINCO DE MAYO

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, today, May 5, or ''Cinco de Mayo,'' marks an important holiday for Mexicans and Mexican-Americans alike, and it will be observed with celebrations and festivities across the United States. Contrary to a popular misconception, Cinco de Mayo does not commemorate Mexico's independence from Spain. That holiday is celebrated on September 16. Instead, Cinco de Mayo marks the victory in 1862 of the Mexican army over a larger, better armed and better trained invading French army at La Batalla de Puebla.

After gaining independence in 1821, Mexico endured a series of set backs while trying to establish a republic. By the late 1850s, Mexico was in the grips of a severe economic crisis, and the treasury was bankrupt. In 1861, President Benito Juarez placed a moratorium halting payments on foreign debt. Since much of Mexico's debt was owed to France, Napoleon III responded by invading Mexico. After landing in the port of Veracruz, the French army, which was considered the finest military force of the period, expected to march through the country and easily capture the capital, Mexico City. However, a small Mexican army, under the command of General Ignacio Zaragosa, mounted a strong defense at the town of Pueblo and routed the invading force.

The stunning victory was short-lived, though. The French returned with reinforcements and were able to defeat Mexican forces the following year. But they were only able to control Mexico for four years, and President Juarez regained power in 1867.

Although, in the end, La Batalla de Puebla had little lasting military significance, it was, culturally, a watershed event for the fledging nation, and for Latin America as a whole. After seeing Europe's best army routed by a hastily gathered and largely untrained Mexican defense, European leaders became more wary of exerting military force in the Americans. Europe never sent another invading force to the Americas after this episode.

The victory at Puebla also instilled a great sense of pride and patriotism in the people of Mexico. They proved their military mettle to themselves and the world, and their government, led by President Juarez, secured legitimacy in the eyes of other nations.

Finally, La Batalla de Puebla asserted the right of people living in former European colonies to self determination and national sovereignty, and it unified all the citizens of Mexico, from landowners to laborers, in a common cause. It marks the point when people stopped seeing themselves as subjects of monarchy in a distant land or restricted their loyalty to a particular state or region, but instead viewed themselves as citizens of a new nation, a nation united under the green, white and red colors of the Mexican flag.

Much has been said in recent years about the ''commercialization'' of Cino de Mayo, and it is true that importance of this holiday often has been overlooked. However, to most Mexican-Americans, or Chicanos, Cinco de Mayo has a special meaning. Many scholars believe La Batalla de Puebla produced the first military hero from the American Southwestern region in General Ignacio Zaragosa, who was born in Texas. The holiday has long been a lesson in overcoming great odds through determination and unity. Today, Cinco de Mayo is an occasion for people of Mexican descent to come together to express pride in their history, and I encourage all Americans to enjoy this opportunity to celebrate and appreciate the contributions of Mexican culture.

RUMORS OF NURSING HOME BANKRUPTCY

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I serve as chairman of the Senate Aging Subcommittee and I feel a necessity to inform my colleagues about the issue of rumors about the pending bankruptcy of some nursing home chains in the United States.

There are reports in the press, and in discussions with my colleagues I have received information, indicating that one and possibly two large nursing home chains may be facing bankruptcy in the near future. That has an economic side and it has a human side. I will speak first about the human side.

Should one or both of these nursing home chains go bankrupt, we would have an immediate challenge to ensure the continued care of somewhere between 35,000 residents, on the one hand, and 70,000, on the other, in these respective homes where they are currently under care. This would be a significant task. Nursing home residents are frail and are not easily moved. Moving them runs the risk of causing ''transfer trauma,'' a condition that can result in death. Therefore, it is critical that we keep focused on preventing avoidable harm and take precautions to prevent this from happening.

I have introduced legislation to ensure that the quality of patient care is monitored if there would be bankruptcy. My legislation requires the appointment of an ombudsman to act as an advocate for the patient. This change will ensure that bankruptcy judges are fully aware of all the facts when they guide a health care provider through the process of bankruptcy. Prior to a chapter 11 filing, or immediately thereafter, the debtor employs a health care crisis consultant to help it in its reorganization effort. The first step is usually cutting costs. Sometimes this step may result in a lower quality of care for the patients who live there. The appointment, then, of an ombudsman, should balance the interests between the creditor and the patient. These interests need balancing because the court-appointed officials owe fiduciary duties to creditors and the estate but not necessarily to the patients.

There will be occasions which illustrate that what may be in the best interest of creditors may not always be consistent with the patients' best interest. The trustee's interest, for example, is to maximize the amount of the estate to pay off the creditors. The more assets the trustee disburses, the more his payment will be. On the other hand, the ombudsman for the patient is designed to ensure continued quality of care at least above some minimum standards. Such quality of care standards currently exist throughout the health care environment, from the health care facility itself to State standards and even Federal standards that were adopted in 1987.

I would like to have my colleagues consider the following excerpt from the Los Angeles Times on September 28, 1997, which describes the unconscionable, pathetic, and traumatizing consequences of a sudden nursing home closing because of bankruptcy:

> It could not be determined Saturday how many more elderly or chronically ill patients may be affected by the health care company's financial problems. Those at the Reseda Care Center in the San Fernando Valley, including a 106-year-old woman, were rolled into the streets late Friday in wheelchairs and on hospital beds, bundled in blankets as relatives scurried to gather up clothes and other personal belongings.

The presence of an ombudsman should help prevent a recurrence of instances similar to what I just described, where trustees quickly close health care facilities without notifying appropriate state and federal agencies and without notifying the bankruptcy court.

I began discussions with the Health Care Financing Administration at the beginning of April to urge them to take seriously the rumors we were hearing about possible nursing home bankruptcies and to encourage them to make preparations. I called for contingency plans that would prepare, well in advance, for the daunting challenges bankruptcies would pose to various federal and state agencies. HCFA briefed the staff of the Aging Committee, as well as staff from the Finance Committee and Budget Committee. While the HCFA staff appreciated the severity and size of the problem of ensuring resident safety in the event of a bankruptcy, they did not have a plan—or even a plan for a plan.

I wrote to the HCFA Administrator urging her to take the effort very seriously, to keep at the planning and to stay in touch with my office. Only on April 28th did I hear from her office that we could expect to see the plan in the next two weeks. That is why I wrote to her again on April 29, to tell her to get on with the effort and to let me and interested Members know of the plan to ensure that the people in the affected nursing homes will be protected.

Once we are assured that residents will be safe we can turn to the financial part of the bankruptcies. Now I will address these financial issues.

Before we take any action involving the taxpayers' hard-earned dollars, we should ask, and get solid answers to, some critical questions.

The first is this: if the rumors of financial distress are true, how is it that some providers are in such distress while others seem not to be? What factors have put certain companies at particular risk? The answer to that question will go a long way to help us know what kind of response their situation demands.

At this point, I'd like to make an observation about the Medicare element of this situation.

This is in response to the one excuse you are going to find from some of these changes why something ought to be done in the balanced budget amendment of 1997.

A Prospective Payment System (PPS) for Skilled Nursing Facilities was mandated by the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA). Some argue that, comparing CBO's 1997 baseline with its 1999 baseline, Medicare has saved $7 billion more than originally anticipated, and that this pushed these companies over the edge.

But we need to ask whether or not it did.

CBO has recently clarified its baselines, explaining that the alleged difference between the two baselines comes from an apples-to-oranges comparison: the 1997 baseline included Part B spending on patients in these facilities, while the 1999 baseline does not. When apples are compared to apples, CBO tells us, the Medicare Part A baseline for Skilled Nursing Facilities has decreased by only $200 million over 5 years—not by the $7 billion that we are hearing. Of course this doesn't tell us what is going on in the real world—it only tells us that the discussion should not be about CBO's baselines, it should be about what is really going on out there.

And that is what we need to find out.

Next, questions have been raised by shareholders, in class action suits against the management of these companies, about the competence and effectiveness of the management of these two companies. Did these companies try to grow too large, too fast? Did they take on more debt than they could manage? Was their business strategy flawed? A host of questions need to be answered about the internal operation of these companies—to see if they were being well run—before we assume that more taxpayer dollars will fix the problem. Otherwise we could wind up subsidizing the mistakes of well compensated executives.

These are serious questions that should be answered by the committees of this body. We should make full use of the evaluators who work for Congress. And the Administration should devote some effort to the inquiry as well. We need to understand the problem before we propose a solution.

Yet, some solutions are being presumed, and they are being presumed based on that apples-to-oranges comparison which says there has been $7 billion more saved from Medicare than was anticipated in the 1997 balanced budget amendment. We should make haste to get these answers, and not rush blindly into what could otherwise be a thoughtless bailout.

COMMENDING THE EFFORTS OF THE REVEREND JESSE JACKSON

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to join all Americans in expressing my profound relief at the safe return of Sergeant Andrew Ramirez, Sergeant Christopher Stone, and Specialist Steven Gonzales from captivity in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

I was necessarily absent from the Senate this morning in order to attend a technology conference in my home State of North Dakota. Had I been present, I would have gladly joined 92 of my colleagues in commending the Reverend Jesse Jackson, and the delegation of religious and political leaders he led, for their instrumental efforts in securing the release of these three Americans. A grateful nation owes them its gratitude.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 12:35 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hays, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 118. An act to designate the Federal building located at 300 East 8th Street in Austin, Texas, as the ''J.J. 'Jake' Pickle Federal Building.''

H.R. 459. An act to extend the deadline under the Federal Power Act for FERC Project No. 9401, the Mt. Hope Waterpower Project.

H.R. 509. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to the personal representative of the estate of Fred Steffens of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land comprising the Steffens family property.

H.R. 510. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to John R. and Margaret J. Lowe of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land so as to correct an error in the patent issued to their predecessors in interest.

H.R. 560. An act to designate the Federal building and United States courthouse located at the intersection of Comercio and San Justo Streets, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''Jose V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse.''

H.R. 686. An act to designate a United States courthouse in Brownsville, Texas, as the ''Garza-Vela United States Courthouse.''

H.R. 1121. An act to designate the Federal building and United States courthouse located at 18 Greenville Street in Newnan, Georgia, as the ''Lewis R. Morgan Federal Building and United States Courthouse.''

H.R. 1162. An act to designate the bridge on United States Route 231 that crosses the Ohio River between Maceo, Kentucky, and Rockport, Indiana, as the ''William H. Natcher Bridge.''

The message also announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolutions, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 84. Concurrent resolution urging the Congress and the President to fully fund the Federal Government's obligation under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

H. Con. Res. 88. Concurrent resolution urging the Congress and the President to increase funding for the Pell Grant Program and existing Campus-Based Aid Programs.

The message further announced that pursuant to the provisions of section 503(b)(3) of the National Skill Standards Act of 1994 (20 U.S.C. 5933) and upon the recommendation of the Minority Leader, the Speaker reappoints the following members to the National Skill Standards Board on the part of the House for a four-year term: Ms. Carolyn Warner of Phoenix, Arizona and Mr. George Bliss of Washington, D.C.

The message also announced that pursuant to section 2(b) of Public Law 98–183 and upon the recommendation of the Minority Leader, the Speaker appoints the following member to the Commission on Civil Rights on the part of the House, effective May 4, 1999, to fill the existing vacancy thereon: Mr. Christopher F. Edley, Jr. of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The message further announced that the House has passed the following bills, without amendment:

S. 453. An act to designate the Federal building located at 709 West 9th Street in Juneau, Alaska, as the ''Hurff A. Saunders Federal Building.''

S. 460. An act to designate the United States courthouse located at 401 Michigan Street in South Bend, Indiana, as the ''Rock K. Rodibaugh United States Bankruptcy Courthouse.''

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills were read the first and second times by unanimous consent and referred as indicated:

H.R. 118. An act to designate the Federal building located at 300 East 8th Street in Austin, Texas, as the ''J.J. 'Jake' Pickle Federal Building''; to the Committee on Environmental and Public Works.

H.R. 459. An act to extend the deadline under the Federal Power Act for FERC Project No. 9401, the Mt. Hope Waterpower Project; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

H.R. 560. An act the Federal building and United States courthouse located at the intersection of Comercio and San Justo Streets, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, as the ''Jose V. Toledo Federal Building and United States Courthouse''; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

H.R. 686. An act to designate a United States courthouse in Brownsville, Texas, as the ''Garza-Vela United States Courthouse''; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

H.R. 1121. An act to designate the Federal Building and United States courthouse located at 18 Greenville Street in Newnan, Georgia, as the ''Lewis R. Morgan Federal Building and United States Courthouse''; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

H.R. 1162. An act to designate the bridge on United States Route 231 that crosses the Ohio River between Maceo, Kentucky, and Rockport, Indiana as the ''William H. Hatcher Bridge''; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

The following concurrent resolution was read and referred as indicated:

H. Con. Res. 84. Concurrent resolution urging the Congress and the President to fully fund the Federal Government's obligation under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following bills were read the first and second times and placed on the calendar:

H.R. 509. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to the personal representative of the estate of Fred Steffens of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land comprising the Steffens family property.

H.R. 510. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to John R. and Margaret J. Lowe of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land so as to correct an error in the patent issued to their predecessors in interest.

H.R. 1480. An act to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the United States Army Corps of Engineers to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United Sates, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC–2850. A communication from the Architect of the Capitol, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report of expenditures for the period April 1, 1998 through September 30, 1998; to the Committee on Appropriations.

EC–2851. A communication from the Chief Financial Officer and Plan Administrator, Production Credit Association Retirement Committee, First South Production Credit Association, transmitting, pursuant to law, the annual pension plan report for calendar year 1998; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–2852. A communication from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Prevailing Rate Systems; Change in Survey Cycle for the Southwestern Michigan Appropriated Fund Wage Area'' (RIN3206–A168), received on April 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–2853. A communication from the Director, Office of Insurance Programs, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Program; New Premiums'' (RIN3206–A154), received on April 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC–2854. A communication from the Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife and Parks, Department of the Interior, transmitting, a draft of proposed legislation relative to the Wilderness Battlefield; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC–2855. A communication from the Director, Office of Regulations Management, Veterans Benefits Administration, Department of Veterans Affairs, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Claims and Effective Dates for the Award of Educational Assistance'' (RIN2900–AH76), received on May 3, 1999; to the Committee on Veterans Affairs.

EC–2856. A communication from the Director, Policy Directives and Instructions Branch, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Additional Authorization to Issue Certification for Foreign Health Care Workers'' (RIN115–AF43), received on May 2, 1999; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

EC–2857. A Communication from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to workforce reductions for fiscal year 1999; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2858. A Communication from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a retirement; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2859. A communication from the General Counsel, Department of Defense, transmitting, a draft of proposed legislation relative to various management concerns; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2860. A communication from the General Counsel, Department of Defense, transmitting, a draft of proposed legislation relative to various management concerns; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2861. A communication from the Assistant Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the fiscal year 1999 National Defense Authorization Act; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2862. A communication from the Under Secretary of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Patriot PAC–3 major defense acquisition program; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2863. A communication from the Under Secretary of the Navy, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to a decision to study certain functions for possible performance by private contractors; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2864. A communication from the Alternate Office of the Secretary of Defense Federal Register Liaison Officer, Department of Defense, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''OSD Privacy Program'', received April 27, 1999; to the Committee on Armed Services.

EC–2865. A communication from the Deputy Secretary, Division of Market Regulation, Securities and Exchange Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Amendments to Form BDW and related rules 15b1–1, 15b3–1, 15b6–1, 15Ba2–2, 15Bc3–1, 15Ca1–1 and 15Cc1–1 under the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934'' (RIN3235–AG69), received May 3, 1999; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

EC–2866. A communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, a draft of proposed legislation relative to a nonprofit education foundation; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

EC–2867. A communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, a draft of proposed legislation relative to amending the Packers and Stockyards Act of 1921; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC–2868. A communication from the Administrator, Agricultural Marketing Service, Marketing and Regulatory Programs, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Peanut Production, Research and Information Order; Referendum Procedures'' (Docket No. FV–98–703–FR), received on April 30, 1999; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC–2869. A communication from the Deputy Executive Secretariat, Administration for Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Temporary Assistance for Needy Families'' (RIN0970–AB77), received on April 22, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2870. A communication from the Board of Trustees, Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance Trust Funds, transmitting, pursuant to law, the 1999 annual report; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2871. A communication from the Board of Trustees, Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, transmitting, pursuant to law, the 1999 annual report; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2872. A communication from the Board of Trustees, Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, transmitting, pursuant to law, the 1999 annual report; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2873. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Medicare program; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2874. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the Medicare prospective payment system; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2875. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled ''Chiropractic Services in Medicare HMOs and Medicare+Choice (M+C) Organizations''; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2876. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled ''Medicare Alzheimer's Disease Demonstration Evaluation''; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2877. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled ''Early Implementation of the Welfare-to-Work Grants Program''; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2878. A communication from the Assistant Secretary for Children and Families, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Child Support Enforcement Program; Grants to States for Access and Visitation Programs: Monitoring, Evaluation, and Reporting'' (RIN0970–AB72); to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2879. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Office of Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Notice of Significant Reduction in the Rate of Future Benefit Accrual'' (RIN1545–AT78), received on April 22, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2880. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Office of Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Announcement 99–40'', received on April 6, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2881. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Office of Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Revenue Ruling 99–18'', received on April 9, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2882. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Office of Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Revenue Ruling 99–18'', received on April 6, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EC–2883. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Office of Chief Counsel, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled ''Revenue Procedure 99–23'', received on April 6, 1999; to the Committee on Finance.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEE

The following executive reports of committee were submitted:

By Mr. MCCAIN, for the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation:

The following named officer for appointment as Commander, Atlantic Area, United States Coast Guard, and to the grade indicated under title 14, U.S.C., section 50:

To be vice admiral

Rear Adm. John E. Shkor

Captain Evelyn J. Fields, NOAA for appointment to the grade of Rear Admiral (O–8), while serving in a position of importance and responsibility as Director, Office of NOAA Corp Operations, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, under the provisions of Title 33, United States Code, Section 853u.

Captain Nicholas A. Prahl, NOAA for appointment to the grade of Rear Admiral (O–7), while serving in a position of importance and responsibility as Director, Atlantic and Pacific Marine Centers, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, under the provisions of Title 33, United States Code, Section 853u.

(The above nominations were reported with the recommendation that they be confirmed, subject to the nominees' commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.)

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, for the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, I report favorably the following nomination lists which were printed in the RECORDS of March 8, 1999 and April 15, 1999, at the end of the Senate proceedings, and ask unanimous consent, to save the expense of reprinting on the Executive Calendar, that these nominations lie at the Secretary's desk for the information of Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Coast Guard nomination of James W. Bartlett, which was received by the Senate and appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 8, 1999.

Coast Guard nomination beginning William L. Chaney, and ending William E. Shea, which nominations were received by the Senate and appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 8, 1999.

Coast Guard nomination beginning Ashley B. Aclin, and ending Michael J. Zeruto, which nominations were received by the Senate and appeared in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of April 15, 1999.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first and second times by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. KERRY, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. THURMOND, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. CLELAND, and Mr. WYDEN):

S. 959. A bill to establish a National Ocean Council, a Commission on Ocean Policy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. BREAUX):

S. 960. A bill to amend the Older Americans Act of 1965 to establish pension counseling programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

By Mr. BURNS (for himself, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 961. A bill to amend the Consolidated Farm And Rural Development Act to improve shared appreciation arrangements; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

By Mr. LEAHY (for himself and Mr. DODD):

S. 962. A bill to allow a deduction from gross income for year 2000 computer conversion costs of small businesses; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. GREGG:

S. 963. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to preserve family-held forest lands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. DASCHLE:

S. 964. A bill to provide for equitable compensation for the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. LEAHY, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. 965. A bill to restore a United States voluntary contribution to the United Nations Population Fund; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. REID:

S. 966. A bill to require medicare providers to disclose publicly staffing and performance in order to promote improved consumer information and choice, to protect employees of medicare providers who report concerns about the safety and quality of services provided by medicare providers or who report violations of Federal or State law by those providers, and to require review of the impact on public health and safety of proposed mergers and acquisitions of medicare providers; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. LAUTENBERG:

S. 967. A bill to provide a uniform national standard to ensure that consealed firearms are available only to authorized persons for lawful purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. MACK, Mr. CLELAND, Mrs. LINCOLN, and Mr. ROBB):

S. 968. A bill to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to make grants to State agencies with responsibility for water source development, for the purposes of maximizing the available water supply and protecting the environment through the development of alternative water sources, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

By Mr. ASHCROFT:

S. 969. A bill to amend the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and the Gun-Free Schools Act of 1994 to authorize schools to apply appropriate discipline measures in cases where students have weapons or threaten to harm others, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. LEAHY (for himself, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. REED, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. MOYNIHAN, and Mr. KOHL):

S. Res. 96. A resolution expressing the sense of the Senate regarding a peaceful process of self-determination in East Timor, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. COVERDELL (for himself, Mr. FRIST, Mr. GORTON, Mr. LOTT, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. MACK, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. HATCH, Mr. LUGAR, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. GRAMS, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. WELLSTONE):

S. Res. 97. A resolution designating the week of May 2 through 8, 1999, as the 14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week, and designating Tuesday, May 4, 1999, as National Teacher Day; considered and agreed to.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. KERRY, Mr. INOUYE, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. THURMOND, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. CLELAND, and Mr. WYDEN):

S. 959. A bill to establish a National Ocean Council, a Commission on Ocean Policy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

THE OCEANS ACT OF 1999

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Oceans Act of 1999, legislation that the Senate unanimously passed in November 1997. I am pleased to be joined in this endeavor by Senators STEVENS, KERRY, BREAUX, INOUYE, KENNEDY, BOXER, BIDEN, LAUTENBERG, AKAKA, MURKOWSKI, THURMOND, MURRAY, CLELAND, and WYDEN. Mr. President, plainly and simply, this bill calls for a plan of action for the twenty-first century to explore, protect, and use our oceans and coasts through the coming millennium.

This is not the first time we have faced the need for a national ocean policy. Three decades ago, our Nation roared into space, investing tens of billions of dollars to investigate the moon and the Sea of Tranquility. During that golden era of science, some of us also recognized the importance of exploring the seas on our own planet. In 1966, Congress enacted the Marine Resources and Engineering Development Act in order to define national objectives and programs with respect to the oceans. That legislation laid the foundation for U.S. ocean and coastal policy and programs and has guided their development for three decades. I was elected to the Senate just three months after the 1966 Act was enacted into law, but I am pleased that both Senators INOUYE and KENNEDY, the two cosponsors of the 1966 Act still serving in the Senate, have agreed to join me today in introducing the Oceans Act.

One of the central elements of the 1966 Act was establishment of a presidential commission to develop a plan for national action in the oceans and atmosphere. Dr. Julius A. Stratton, a former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and then-chairman of the Ford Foundation, led the Commission on an unprecedented, and since unrepeated, investigation of this nation's relationship with the oceans and the atmosphere. The Stratton Commission and its congressional advisors (including Senators Warren G. Magnuson and Norris Cotton) worked together in a bipartisan fashion. In fact, the Commission was established and carried out its mandate in the Democratic Administration of Lyndon Johnson and saw its findings implemented by the Republicans under President Richard Nixon. With a staff of 35 people, the commissioners hear and consulted over 1,000 people, visited every coastal area of this country, and submitted some 126 recommendations in a 1969 report to Congress entitled Our Nation and the Sea. Those recommendations led directly to the creation of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in 1970, laid the groundwork for enactment of the Coastal Zone Management Act (CZMA) in 1972, and established priorities for federal ocean activities that have guided this Nation for almost thirty years.

While the Stratton Commission performed its job with vision and integrity, the world has changed since 1966. Today, half of the U.S. population lives within 50 miles of our shores and more than 30 percent of the Gross Domestic Product is generated in the coastal zone. Ocean and coastal resources once considered inexhaustible are severely depleted, and wetlands and other marine habitats are threatened by pollution and human activities. In addition, the U.S. regulatory and legal framework has developed over the years with the passage of a number of statutes in addition to CZMA. These include the Endangered Species Act, the Marine Mammal Protection Act, the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act, the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act, the Coastal Barrier Resources Act, and the Oil Pollution Act. It is time to conduct a review that looks at coordination and duplication of programs and policies developed under these laws.

Today people who work and live on the water face a patchwork of confusing and sometimes contradictory federal and state regulations. This bill would allow us to reduce conflicts while maintaining environmental and health safeguards. One illustration of the type of situation that must be corrected is the southeast shrimp trawl fishery. Shrimpers are required under the Endangered Species Act to use panels or grates (known as turtle excluder devices or TEDs) in their nets to protect endangered sea turtles. The panels also reduce catches of small fish (bycatch), a new requirement of the Magnuson-Stevens Act. Unfortunately, however, the government has approved one TED for turtle protection and another for bycatch reduction—forcing the fishermen to use two separate devices, cut two holes in their nets, and double their shrimp loss. Anyone who wonders about public interest in regulatory reform has only to talk to a McClellanville, SC shrimper.

The Oceans Act is vital to the continued health of the oceans and prosperity of our coasts. It is patterned after and would replace the 1966 Act. Like that Act, it is comprised of three major elements:

First, the bill calls for development and implementation of a coherent national ocean and coastal policy to conserve and sustainably use fisheries and other ocean and coastal resources, protect the marine environment and human safety, explore ocean frontiers, create marine technologies and economic opportunities, and preserve U.S. leadership on ocean and coastal issues.

Second, the bill would establish a 16-member Commission, similar to the Stratton Commission, to examine ocean and coastal activities and report within 18 months on recommendations for a national policy. Commission members would be drawn from State and local governments, industry, academic and technical institutions, and public interest organizations involved in ocean and coastal activities. In developing its recommendations, the Commission would assess federal programs and funding priorities, ocean-related infrastructure requirements, conflicts among marine users, and technological opportunities. The bill authorizes appropriations of $6 million over two years to support Commission activities; last year's Omnibus Appropriations bill included $3.5 million to fund such a Commission.

Third, the bill would create a high-level federal interagency Council that would include the heads of the Departments of Commerce, Navy, State, Transportation, and the Interior, the Environmental Protection Agency, the National Science Foundation, the Office of Science and Technology Policy, the Office of Management and Budget, the Council on Environmental Quality, and the National Economic Council. This Council would advise the President and serve as a forum for developing and implementing an ocean and coastal policy, provide for coordination of federal budgets and programs, and work with non-federal and international organizations.

By establishing an action plan for ocean and coastal activities, the Oceans Act should also contribute substantially to national goals and objectives in the areas of education and research, economic development, and public safety. With respect to education and research, our view of the oceans thirty years ago was based on a remarkably small amount of information. When Jack Kennedy was in the White House, we were just beginning to develop the capability for exploring the oceans, and the driving factor was the military need to hide our submarines from the Soviets during the Cold War. What we knew of the oceans at that time was based as much on what fishermen brought up in their nets as it was on reliable scientific investigation.

Nowhere is the need for U.S. leadership more evident than in the area of ocean exploration. Today, we still have explored only a tiny fraction of the sea, but with the use of new technologies what we have found is truly incredible. For example, hydrothermal vents, hot water geysers on the deep ocean floor, were discovered just 20 years ago by oceanographers trying to understand the formation of the earth's crust. Now this discovery had led to the identification of nearly 300 new types of marine animals with untold pharmaceutical and biomedical potential. In recent years, scientists from 19 nations have joined in an international partnership, headed by Admiral Watkins, to explore the history and structure of the Earth beneath the oceans basins. Their ship, the Resolution, is the world's largest scientific research vessel and can drill in water depths of up 8,200 meters. Over the past 12 years, it has recovered more than 115 miles of core samples through the world oceans. Recently ship scientists worked off the coast of South Carolina collecting new evidence of a large meteor that struck the Earth 65 million years ago, and is thought to have triggered climate change that may be linked to the disappearance of the dinosaurs.

Many of our marine research efforts could have profound impacts on our economic well-being. For example, research on coastal ocean currents and other processes that affect shoreline erosion is critical to effective management of the shoreline. Oceanographers are working with federal, state, and local managers to use this new understanding in protecting beachfront property and the lives of those who reside and work in coastal communities. Development of underwater cameras and sonar, begun in the 1940s for the U.S. Navy, has led to major strides not only for military uses, but for marine archaeologists and scientists exploring unknown stretches of sea floor. Consumers have benefited from the technology now used in video cameras. Sonar has broad applications in both the military and commercial sector.

Finally, marine biotechnology research is thought to be one of the greatest remaining technological and industrial frontiers. Among the opportunities which it may offer are to: restore and protect marine ecosystems; monitor human health and treat disease; increase food supplies through aquaculture; enhance seafood safety and quality; provide new types and sources of industrial materials and processes; and understand biological and geochemical processes in the world ocean.

In addition to the economic opportunities offered by our marine research investment, traditional marine activities play an important role in our national economic outlook. Ninety-five percent of our international trade is shipped on the ocean. In 1996, commercial fishermen in the United States landed almost 10 billion pounds of fish with a value of $3.5 billion. Their fishing-related activities contributed over $42 billion to the U.S. economy. During the same period, marine anglers contributed another $20 billion. Travel and tourism also contribute over $700 billion to our economy, much of which is generated in coastal areas. With a sound national ocean and coastal policy and effective marine resource management, these numbers have nowhere to go but up.

With respect to public safety, it is particularly important to develop ocean and coastal priorities that reflect the changes we have seen in recent years. Before World War II, most of the U.S. shoreline was sparsely populated. There were long, wild stretches of coast, dotted with an occasional port city, fishing village, or sleepy resort. Most barrier islands had few residents or were uninhabited. After the war, people began pouring in, and coastal development began a period of explosive growth. In my state of South Carolina, our beaches attract millions of visitors every year, and more and more people are choosing to move to the coast—making the coastal counties the fastest growing ones in the state. Seventeen of the twenty fastest growing states in the nation are coastal states—which compounds the situation that the most densely populated regions already border the ocean. With population growth comes the demand for highways, shopping centers, schools, and sewers that permanently alter the landscape. If people are to continue to live and work on the coast, we must do a better job of planning how we impact the very regions in which we all want to live.

There is no better example of how our ocean and coastal policies affect public safety, than to look at the effects of hurricanes. Throughout the 1920s, hurricanes killed 2,122 Americans while causing about $1.8 billion in property damages. By contrast, in the first five years of the 1990s, hurricanes killed 111 Americans, and resulted in damages of about $35 billion. While we have made notable advances in early warning and evacuation systems to protect human lives, the risk of property loss continues to escalate and coastal inhabitants are more vulnerable to major storms than they ever have been. In 1989, Hurricane Hugo came ashore in South Carolina, leaving more than $6 billion in damages. Of that total from Hugo, the federal government paid out more than $2.8 billion in disaster assistance and more than $400 million from the National Flood Insurance Program. The payments from private insurance companies were equally staggering. In 1992, Hurricane Andrew struck southern Florida and slammed into low lying areas of Louisiana, forever changing the lives of more than a quarter of a million people and causing an estimated $25 to $30 billion dollars in damage. Hurricanes demonstrate that the human desire to live near the ocean and along the coast comes with both a responsibility and a cost.

The oceans are part of our culture, part of our heritage, part of our economy, and part of our future. Those who doubt the need for this legislation need only pick up a newspaper and they will be face to face with pressing ocean and coastal issues. And while our coastal waters are governed by the United States or all of us, beyond our waters progress relies primarily on international cooperation. There are no boundaries at sea, no national borders with fences and checkpoints. Deciding how to manage all these problems and use the seas is one of the most complicated tasks we can tackle.

Therefore, we need to be smart about ocean policy—we need the best minds to come together and take a look at what the real challenges are. It is not enough to sit back and assume the role of caretakers. We must be proactive and develop a plan for the future.

The United Nations declared 1998 to the be the Year of the Ocean in part to encourage governments and the pubic to pay adequate attention to the need to protect the marine environment and to ensure a healthy ocean. This is an unprecedented opportunity to follow up the Year of the Ocean activities by celebrating and enhancing what has been accomplished in understanding and managing our oceans.

The Stratton Commission stated in 1969: ''How fully and wisely the United States uses the sea in the decades ahead will affect profoundly its security, its economy, its ability to meet increasing demands for food and raw materials, its position and influence in the world community, and the quality of the environment in which its people live.'' Those words are as true today as they were 30 years ago.

Mr. President, it is time to look towards the next 30 years. This bill offers us the vision and understanding needed to establish sound ocean and coastal policies for the 21st century, and I thank the cosponsors of the legislation for joining with me in recognizing it significance. We look forward to working together in the bipartisan spirit of the Stratton Commission to enact legislation that ensures the development of an integrated national ocean and coastal policy well into the next millennium. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 959

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Oceans Act of 1999''.

SEC. 2. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS; PURPOSE AND OBJECTIVES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Covering more than two-thirds of the Earth's surface, the oceans and Great Lakes play a critical role in the global water cycle and in regulating climate, sustain a large part of Earth's biodiversity, provide an important source of food and a wealth of other natural products, act as a frontier to scientific exploration, are critical to national security, and provide a vital means of transportation. The coasts, transition between land and open ocean, are regions of remarkable high biological productivity, contribute more than 30 percent of the Gross Domestic Product, and are of considerable importance for recreation, waste disposal, and mineral exploration.

(2) Ocean and coastal resources are susceptible to change as a direct and indirect result of human activities, and such changes can significantly impact the ability of the oceans and Great Lakes to provide the benefits upon which the Nation depends. Changes in ocean and coastal processes could affect global patterns, marine productivity and biodiversity, environmental quality, national security, economic competitiveness, availability of energy, vulnerability to natural hazards, and transportation safety and efficiency.

(3) Ocean and coastal resources are not infinite, and human pressure on them is increasing. One half of the Nation's population lives within 50 miles of the coast, ocean and coastal resources once considered inexhaustible are not threatened with depletion, and if population trends continue as expected, pressure on and conflicting demands for ocean and coastal resources will increase further as will vulnerability to coastal hazards.

(4) Marine transportation is key to United States participation in the global economy and to the wide range of activities carried out in ocean and coastal regions. Inland waterway and ports are the link between marine activities in ocean and coastal regions and the supporting transportation infrastructure ashore. International trade is expected to triple by 2020. The increase has the potential to outgrow—

(A) the capabilities of the marine transportation system to ensure safety; and

(B) the existing capacity of ports and waterways.

(5) Marine technologies hold tremendous promise for expanding the range and increasing the utility of products from the oceans and Great Lakes, improving the stewardship of ocean and coastal resources, and contributing to business and manufacturing innovations and the creation of new jobs.

(6) Research has uncovered the link between oceanic and atmospheric processes and improved understanding of world climate patterns and forecasts. Important new advances, including availability of military technology have made feasible the exploration of large areas of the ocean which were inaccessible several years ago. In designating 1998 as ''The Year of the Ocean'', the United Nations high-lighted the value of increasing our knowledge of the oceans.

(7) It has been more than 30 years since the Commission on Marine Science, Engineering, and Resources (known as the Stratton Commission) conducted a comprehensive examination of ocean and coastal activities that led to enactment of major legislation and the establishment of key oceanic and atmospheric institutions.

(8) A review of existing activities is essential to respond to the changes that have occurred over the past three decades and to develop an effective new policy for the twenty-first century to conserve and use, in a sustainable manner, ocean and coastal resources, protect the marine environment, explore ocean frontiers, protect human safety, and create marine technologies and economic opportunities.

(9) Changes in United States laws and policies since the Stratton Commission, such as the enactment of the Coastal Zone Management Act, have increased the role of the States in the management of ocean and coastal resources.

(10) While significant Federal and State ocean and coastal programs are underway, those Federal programs would benefit from a coherent national ocean and coastal policy that reflects the need for cost-effective allocation of fiscal resources, improved interagency coordination, and strengthened partnerships with State, private, and international entities engaged in ocean and coastal activities.

(b) PURPOSE AND OBJECTIVES.—The purpose of this Act is to develop and maintain, consistent with the obligations of the United States under international law, a coordinated, comprehensive, and long-range national policy with respect to ocean and coastal activities that will assist the Nation in meeting the following objectives:

(1) The protection of life and property against natural and manmade hazards.

(2) Responsible stewardship, including use, of fishery resources and other ocean and coastal resources.

(3) The protection of the marine environment and prevention of marine pollution.

(4) The enhancement of marine-related commerce and transportation, the resolution of conflicts among users of the marine environment, and the engagement of the private sector in innovative approaches for sustainable use of living marine resources.

(5) The expansion of human knowledge of the marine environment including the role of the oceans in climate and global environmental change and the advance of education and training in fields related to ocean and coastal activities.

(6) The continued investment in and development and improvement of the capabilities, performance, use, and efficiency of technologies for use in ocean and coastal activities.

(7) Close cooperation among all government agencies and departments to ensure—

(A) coherent regulation of ocean and coastal activities;

(B) availability and appropriate allocation of Federal funding, personnel, facilities, and equipment for such activities; and

(C) cost-effective and efficient operation of Federal departments, agencies, and programs involved in ocean and coastal activities.

(8) The enhancement of partnerships with State and local governments with respect to oceans and coastal activities, including the management of ocean and coastal resources and identification of appropriate opportunities for policy-making and decision-making at the State and local level.

(9) The preservation of the role of the United States as a leader in ocean and coastal activities, and, when it is in the national interest, the cooperation by the United States with other nations and international organizations in ocean and coastal activities.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) The term ''Commission'' means the Commission on Ocean Policy.

(2) The term ''Council'' means the National Ocean Council.

(3) The term ''marine environment'' includes—

(A) the oceans, including coastal and offshore waters and the adjacent shore lands;

(B) the continental shelf;

(C) the Great Lakes; and

(D) the ocean and coastal resources thereof.

(4) The term ''ocean and coastal activities'' includes activities related to oceanography, fisheries and other ocean and coastal resource stewardship and use, marine aquaculture, energy and mineral resource extraction, marine transportation, recreation and tourism, waste management, pollution mitigation and prevention, and natural hazard reduction.

(5) The term ''ocean and coastal resource'' means, with respect to the oceans, coasts, and Great Lakes, any living or non-living natural resource (including all forms of animal and plant life found in the marine environment, habitat, biodiversity, water quality, minerals, oil, and gas) and any significant historic, cultural or aesthetic resource.

(6) The term ''oceanography'' means scientific exploration, including marine scientific research, engineering, mapping, surveying, monitoring, assessment, and information management, of the oceans, coasts, and Great Lakes—

(A) to describe and advance understanding of—

(i) the role of the oceans, coasts and Great Lakes in weather and climate, natural hazards, and the processes that regulate the marine environment; and

(ii) the manner in which such role, processes, and environment are affected by human actions;

(B) for the conservation, management and stewardship of living and nonliving resources; and

(C) to develop and implement new technologies related to the environmentally sensitive use of the marine environment.

SEC. 4. NATIONAL OCEAN AND COASTAL POLICY.

(a) EXECUTIVE RESPONSIBILITIES.—The President, with the assistance of the Council and the advice of the Commission, shall—

(1) develop and maintain a coordinated, comprehensive, and long-range national policy with respect to ocean and coastal activities consistent with obligations of the United States under international law; and

(2) with regard to Federal agencies and departments—

(A) review significant ocean and coastal activities, including plans, priorities, accomplishments, and infrastructure requirements;

(B) plan and implement an integrated and cost-effective program of ocean and coastal activities including, but not limited to, oceanography, stewardship of ocean and coastal resources, protection of the marine environment, maritime transportation safety and efficiency, marine recreation and tourism, and marine aspects of weather, climate, and natural hazards;

(C) designate responsibility for funding and conducting ocean and coastal activities; and

(D) ensure cooperation and resolve differences arising from laws and regulations applicable to ocean and coastal activities which result in conflicts among participants in such activities.

(b) COOPERATION AND CONSULTATION.—In carrying out responsibilities under this Act, the President may use such staff, interagency, and advisory arrangements as the President finds necessary and appropriate and shall consult with non-Federal organizations and individuals involved in ocean and coastal activities.

SEC. 5. NATIONAL OCEAN COUNCIL.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The President shall establish a National Ocean Council and appoint a Chairman from among it members. The Council shall consist of—

(1) the Secretary of Commerce;

(2) the Secretary of Defense;

(3) the Secretary of State;

(4) the Secretary of Transportation;

(5) the Secretary of the Interior;

(6) the Attorney General;

(7) the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency;

(8) the Director of the National Science Foundation;

(9) the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy;

(10) the Chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality;

(11) the Chairman of the National Economic Council;

(12) the Director of the Office of Management and Budget; and

(13) such other Federal officers and officials as the President considers appropriate.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—

(1) The President or the Chairman of the Council may from time to time designate one of the members of the Council to preside over meetings of the Council during the absence or unavailability of such Chairman.

(2) Each member of the Council may designate an officer of his or her agency or department appointed with the advice and consent of the Senate to serve on the Council as an alternate in the event of the unavoidable absence of such member.

(3) An executive secretary shall be appointed by the Chairman of the Council, with the approval of the Council. The executive secretary shall be a permanent employee of one of the agencies or departments represented on the Council and shall remain in the employ of such agency or department.

(4) For the purpose of carrying out the functions of the Council, each Federal agency or department represented on the Council shall furnish necessary assistance to the Council. Such assistance may include—

(A) detailing employees to the Council to perform such functions, consistent with the purposes of this section, as the Chairman of the Council may assign to them; and

(B) undertaking, upon request of the Chairman of the Council, such special studies for the Council as are necessary to carry out its functions.

(5) The Chairman of the Council shall have the authority to make personnel decisions regarding any employees detailed to the Council.

(c) FUNCTIONS.—The Council shall—

(1) assist the Commission in completing its report under section 6;

(2) serve as the forum for developing an implementation plan for a national ocean and coastal policy and program, taking into consideration the Commission report;

(3) improve coordination and cooperation, and eliminate duplication, among Federal agencies and departments with respect to ocean and coastal activities; and

(4) assist the Presdient in the preparation of the first report required by section 7(a).

(d) SUNSET.—The Council shall cease to exist one year after the Commission has submitted its final report under section 6(h).

(e) SAVINGS PROVISION.—

(1) Council activities are not intended to supersede or interfere with other Executive Branch mechanisms and responsibilities.

(2) Nothing in this Act has any effect on the authority or responsbility of any Federal officer or agency under any other Federal law.

SEC. 6. COMMISSION ON OCEAN POLICY.

(A) ESTABLISHMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall, within 90 days after the enactment of this Act, establish a Commission on Ocean Policy. The Commission shall be composed of 16 members including individuals drawn from State and local governments, industry, academic and technical institutions, and public interest organizations involved with ocean and coastal activities. Members shall be appointed for the life of the Commission as follows:

(A) 4 shall be appointed by the President of the United States.

(B) 4 shall be appointed by the President chosen from a list of 8 proposed members submitted by the Majority Leader of the Senate in consultation with the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

(C) 4 shall be appointed by the President chosen from a list of 8 proposed members submitted by the Speaker of the House of Representatives in consultation with the Chairman of the House Committee on Resources.

(D) 2 shall be appointed by the President chosen from a list of 4 proposed members submitted by the Minority Leader of the Senate in consultation with the Ranking Member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

(E) 2 shall be appointed by the President chosen from a list of 4 proposed members submitted by the Minority Leader of the House in consultation with the Ranking Member of the House Committee on Resources.

(2) FIRST MEETING.—The Commission shall hold its first meeting within 30 days after it is established.

(3) CHAIRMAN.—The President shall select a Chairman from among such 16 members. Before selecting the Chairman, the President is requested to consult with the Majority and Minority Leaders of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Minority Leader of the House of Representatives.

(4) ADVISORY MEMBERS.—In addition, the Commission shall have 4 Members of Congress, who shall serve as advisory members. One of the advisory members shall be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives. One of the advisory members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the House of Representatives. One of the advisory members shall be appointed by the majority leader of the Senate. One of the advisory members shall be appointed by the minority leader of the Senate. The advisory members shall not participate, except in an advisory capacity, in the formulation of the findings and recommendations of the Commission.

(b) FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Commission shall report to the President and the Congress on a comprehensive national ocean and coastal policy to carry out the purpose and objectives of this Act. In developing the findings and recommendations of the report, the Commission shall—

(1) review and suggest any necessary modifications to United States laws, regulations, and practices necessary to define and implement such policy, consistent with the obligations of the United States under international law;

(2) assess the condition and adequacy of investment in existing and planned facilities and equipment associated with ocean and coastal activities including human resources, vessels, computers, satellites, and other appropriate technologies and platforms;

(3) review existing and planned ocean and coastal activities of Federal agencies and departments, assess the contribution of such activities to development of an integrated long-range program for oceanography, ocean and coastal resource management, and protection of the marine environment, and identify any such activities in need of reform to improve efficiency and effectiveness;

(4) examine and suggest mechanisms to address the interrelationships among ocean and coastal activities, the legal and regulatory framework in which they occur, and their inter-connected and cumulative effects on the marine environment, ocean and coastal resources, and marine productivity and biodiversity;

(5) review the known and anticipated demands for ocean and coastal resources, including an examination of opportunities and limitations with respect to the use of ocean and coastal resources within the exclusive economic zone, projected impacts in coastal areas, and the adequacy of existing efforts to manage such use and minimize user conflicts;

(6) evaluate relationships among Federal, State, and local governments and the private sector for planning and carrying out ocean and coastal activities and address the most appropriate division of responsibility for such activities;

(7) identify opportunities for the development of or investment in new products, technologies, or markets that could contribute to the objectives of this Act;

(8) consider the relationship of the ocean and coastal policy of the United States to the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea and other international agreements, and actions available to the United States to effect collaborations between the United States and other nations, including the development of cooperative international programs for oceanography, protection of the marine environment, and ocean and coastal resource management; and

(9) engage in any other preparatory work deemed necessary to carry out the duties of the Commission pursuant to this Act.

(c) DUTIES OF CHAIRMAN.—In carrying out the provisions of this subsection, the Chairman of the Commission shall be responsible for—

(1) the assignment of duties and responsibilities among staff personnel and their continuing supervision; and

(2) the use and expenditures of funds available to the Commission.

(d) COMPENSATION OF MEMBERS.—Each member of the Commission who is not an officer or employee of the Federal Government, or whose compensation is not precluded by a State, local, or Native American tribal government position, shall be compensated at a rate equal to the daily equivalent of the annual rate payable for Level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, for each day (including travel time) during which such member is engaged in the performance of the duties of the Commission. All members of the Commission who are officers or employees of the United States shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their services as officers or employees of the United States.

(e) STAFF.—

(1) The Chairman of the Commission may, without regard to the civil service laws and regulations, appoint and terminate an executive director who is knowledgeable in administrative management and ocean and coastal policy and such other additional personnel as may be necessary to enable the Commission to perform its duties. The employment and termination of an executive director shall be subject to confirmation by a majority of the members of the Commission.

(2) The executive director shall be compensated at a rate not to exceed the rate payable for Level V of the Executive Schedule under section 5316 of title 5, United States Code. The Chairman may fix the compensation of other personnel without regard to the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, United States Code, relating to classification of positions and General Schedule pay rates, except that the rate of pay for such personnel may not exceed the rate payable for GS–15, step 7, of the General Schedule under section 5332 of such title.

(3) Upon request of the Chairman of the Commission, after consulting with the head of the Federal agency concerned, the head of any Federal Agency shall detail appropriate personnel of the agency to the Commission to assist the Commission in carrying out its functions under this Act. Federal Government employees detailed to the Commission shall serve without reimbursement from the Commission, and such detailee shall retain the rights, status, and privileges of his or her regular employment without interruption.

(4) The Commission may accept and use the services of volunteers serving without compensation, and to reimburse volunteers for travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code. Except for the purposes of chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code, relating to compensation for work injuries, and chapter 171 of title 28, United States Code, relating to tort claims, a volunteer under this section may not be considered to be an employee of the United States for any purpose.

(5) To the extent that funds are available, and subject to such rules as may be prescribed by the Commission, the executive director of the Commission may procure the temporary and intermittent services of experts and consultants in accordance with section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, but at rates not to exceed the daily rate payable for GS–15, step 7, of the General Schedule under section 5332 of title 5, United States Code.

(f) ADMINISTRATION.—

(1) All meetings of the Commission shall be open to the public, except that a meeting or any portion of it may be closed to the public if it concerns matters or information described in section 552b(c) of title 5, United States Code. Interested persons shall be permitted to appear at open meetings and present oral or written statement on the subject matter of the meeting. The Commission may administer oaths or affirmations to any person appearing before it.

(2) All open meetings of the Commission shall be preceded by timely public notice in the Federal Register of the time, place, and subject of the meeting.

(3) Minutes of each meeting shall be kept and shall contain a record of the people present, a description of the discussion that occurred, and copies of all statements filed. Subject to section 552 of title 5, United States Code, the minutes and records of all meetings and other documents that were made available to or prepared for the Commission shall be available for public inspection and copying at a single location in the offices of the Commission.

(4) The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) does not apply to the Commission.

(g) COOPERATION WITH OTHER FEDERAL ENTITIES.—

(1) The Commission is authorized to secure directly from any Federal agency or department any information it deems necessary to carry out its functions under this Act. Each such agency or department is authorized to cooperate with the Commission and, to the extent permitted by law, to furnish such information to the Commission, upon the request of the Chairman of the Commission.

(2) The Commission may use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as other departments and agencies of the United States.

(3) The General Services Administration shall provide to the Commission on a reimbursable basis the administrative support services that the Commission may request.

(4) The Commission may enter into contracts with Federal and State agencies, private firms, institutions, and individuals to assist the Commission in carrying out its duties. The Commission may purchase and contract without regard to sections 303 of the Federal Property and Administration Services Act of 1949 (41 U.S.C. 253), section 18 of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 416), and section 8 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637), pertaining to competition and publication requirements, and may arrange for printing without regard to the provisions of title 44, United States Code. The contracting authority of the Commission under this Act is effective only to the extent that appropriations are available for contracting purposes.

(h) REPORT.—The Commission shall submit to the President, via the Council, and to the Congress not later than 18 months after the establishment of the Commission, a final report of its findings and recommendations. The Commission shall cease to exist 30 days after it has submitted its final report.

(i) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to support the activities of the Commission a total of up to $6,000,000 for fiscal years 2001 and 2002. Any sums appropriated shall remain available without fiscal year limitation until the Commission ceases to exist.

SEC. 7. REPORT AND BUDGET COORDINATION.

(a) BIENNIAL REPORT.—Beginning in January, 2000, the President shall transmit to the Congress biennially a report, which shall include—

(1) a comprehensive description of the ocean and coastal activities (and budgets) and related accomplishments of all agencies and departments of the United States during the preceding 2 fiscal years; and

(2) an evaluation of such activities (and budgets) and accomplishments in terms of the purpose and objectives of this Act. Reports made under this section shall contain such recommendations for legislation as the President may consider necessary or desirable.

(b) BUDGET COORDINATION.—

(1) Each year the President shall provide general guidance to each Federal agency or department involved in ocean or coastal activities with respect to the preparation of requests for appropriations.

(2) Each agency or department involved in such activities shall include with its annual request for appropriations a report which—

(A) identifies significant elements of the proposed agency or department budget relating to ocean and coastal activities; and

(B) specifies how each such element contributes to the implementation of a national ocean and coastal policy.

SEC. 8. REPEAL OF 1966 STATUTE.

The Marine Resources and Engineering Development Act of 1966 (33 U.S.C. 1101 et seq.) is repealed.

---

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. BREAUX):

S. 960. A bill to amend the Older Americans Act of 1965 to establish pension counseling programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

PENSION ASSISTANCE AND COUNSELING ACT OF 1999

● Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce legislation to achieve one of my primary objectives as chairman of the Special Committee on Aging: to help workers and retirees achieve a secure retirement.

As with any discussion about retirement planning, it is the norm to point to the ''three-legged stool'' of retirement—Social Security, personal savings, and a pension. Unfortunately, the legs of the stool may be getting warped.

This legislation is the result of a hearing held by the Aging Committee in the 105th Congress. The Aging Committee confronted an issue that is affecting hundreds of thousands of workers and retirees—miscalculation of their hard-earned pensions. This hearing was intended to raise consumer awareness about the need to be pro-active about policing your pension. As one of our witnesses said, ''never assume your pension is error-free.''

While it is impossible to know how many pension payments and lump sum distributions may be miscalculated, we know the number is on the rise. An audit conducted last Congress by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation—focused on plans that were voluntarily terminated—showed that the number of people underpaid has increased from 2.8 to 8.2 percent. Anecdotal evidence suggests that the number of people receiving lump sum distributions who end up getting shortchanged could be 15 to 20 percent. Those numbers are very disturbing. The practical impact is that retirees, and young and old workers alike, are losing dollars that they have earned.

Workers and retirees need to be aware that they are at risk. They can help themselves by knowing how their benefits are calculated, that they should keep all the documents their employer gives them, and to start asking questions at a young age—don't wait until the eve of retirement.

Unfortunately, policing your pension is not easy. Employers are trying to do a good job but they are confronted with one of the most complex regulatory schemes in the Federal Government. Pensions operate in a complex universe of laws, rules, and regulations. Over the last 20 years, 16 laws have been enacted that require employers to amend their pension plans and then notify their workers of changes. It is not a simple task. If employers have problems trying to comply with Federal requirements, it is understandable that workers and retirees are having trouble getting a grasp on how their pension works.

Trying to educate yourself about pensions implies that someone is out there providing information to those who need it. That is where the legislation that I am introducing today comes in. People who are concerned about their pensions—whether it's an unintentional mistake or outright fraud—often don't have anywhere to go for expert advice.

Fortunately, there is an answer. Already authorized by the Older Americans Act, seven pension counseling projects have assisted thousands of people around this country with their pension problems. These projects provide information and counseling to retirees, and young and old workers in a very cost-effective manner.

Each project received $75,000 of Federal assistance over a 17-month period. As is normal for other programs under the Older Americans Act, these dollars were supplemented by money raised from private sources. During their operation, the projects recovered nearly $2 million in pension benefits and payments. That is a return of $4 for every $1 spent.

My legislation contains three key provisions: first, it updates the Older Americans Act to encourage the creation of more pension counseling projects. While 10 projects in 15 states currently exist, they are not enough to reach the 80 million people who are covered by pensions in this country. Hopefully, more counseling projects can be established to provide more regionally comprehensive assistance.

Second, the legislation would create an 800 number that people could call for one-stop advice on where to get assistance. Jurisdiction over pension issues is spread across three government agencies—none of which are focused on helping individuals with individual problems—especially if the problem does not seem to be a clear fiduciary breach or indicate that there may be criminal wrongdoing. An 800 number linking people to assistance will help close that gap.

Finally, the legislation would transfer authority for the demonstration projects to Title VII of the Older Americans Act in order to make them permanent in nature. They provide a much needed service to workers and retirees. These demonstration projects have existed since 1992 and have proven to be very successful. However, they have outgrown their pilot-project beginnings and should become a permanent fixture.

I want to thank Senator BREAUX for his support of this legislation. Furthermore, I encourage all of my colleagues to support these projects and show their support by co-sponsoring this legislation.●

---

By Mr. BURNS (for himself, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 961. A bill to amend the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act to improve shared appreciation arrangements; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

CONSOLIDATED FARM AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT ACT AMENDMENTS

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, shared appreciation agreements have the potential to cause hundreds of farm foreclosures across the nation, and especially in my home state of Montana. Ten years ago, a large number of farmers signed these agreements. At that time they were under the impression that they would be required to pay these back at the end of ten years, at a reasonable rate of redemption.

However, that has not proved to be the case. The appraisals being conducted by the Farm Service Agency are showing increased values of ridiculous proportions. By all standards, one would expect the value to have decreased. Farm prices are the lowest they have been in years, and there does not seem to be a quick recovery forthcoming. Farmers cannot possibly be expected to pay back a value twice the amount they originally wrote down. Especially in light of the current market situation, I believe something must be done about the way these appraisals are conducted.

I am aware of one case in which the amount of the shared appreciation agreement was estimated at $167,500. The increased value was estimated at $335,000! When agricultural prices are at nearly an all-time low, farmers can barely keep up with their current payment schedules. They certainly cannot pay twice what they already owe.

USDA is attempting to fix the problem with proposed rules and regulations but farmers need help with these agreements now. I cannot stand idly by and wait for bureaucratic regulations to go through the ''process'' while farmers and ranchers are forced out of business.

The USDA has issued an emergency rule which will allow people who are unable to pay their shared appreciation agreement on time, to extend their current loan for up to three years. The interest rate on this extension will be at the government's cost of borrowing. Also, the USDA is allowing farmers to take out an additional loan at an interest rate of 9.25% to pay off the amount owed on the shared appreciation agreement.

There is also consideration being given to decreasing the number of years on shared appreciation agreements from ten to five. I appreciate the efforts by the USDA to alleviate the financial burden these shared appreciation agreements impose upon farmers, and hope that farmers are able to take advantage of them.

However, as I have stated, time is of the essence. Another proposed regulation, which will require a public comment period of 60 days, will exclude capital investments from the increase in appreciation. However, this proposal has not yet been published and is not expected to be for at least another month. After that, the comment period will further drag out the process and in the meantime more farmers will be forced into foreclosure.

To ensure this regulation on excluding capital investments from the increase in value is carried out, I intend to make it mandatory by legislation. Farmers should not be penalized for attempting to better their operations. Nor can they be expected to delay capital improvements so that they will not be penalized.

Additionally, my legislation will require the appraisal to be conducted by a certified appraiser from the state where the land is located. This will prevent out-of-state appraisal businesses from conducting appraisals in land areas they know nothing about. How can an appraisal company in Arizona be expected to do an accurate appraisal on land in Montana? It is not fair to the producers on that land to have their appraisal conducted by outside interests.

I look forward to working with members in other states to alleviate the financial burdens imposed by shared appreciation agreements. I hope that we may move this through the legislative process quickly to provide help as soon as possible to our farmers.

I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 961

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHARED APPRECIATION ARRANGEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 353(e) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 2001(e)) is amended by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

''(2) TERMS.—A shared appreciation agreement entered into by a borrower under this subsection shall—

''(A) have a term not to exceed 10 years;

''(B) provide for recapture based on the difference between—

''(i) the appraised value of the real security property at the time of restructuring; and

''(ii) that value at the time of recapture, except that that value shall not include the value of any capital improvements made to the real security property by the borrower; and

''(C) be based on appraisals that are conducted by persons with a principal place of business that is located in the State containing the real property.''.

(b) APPLICATION.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to a shared appreciation arrangement entered into under section 353(e) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 2001(e)) that is in effect on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

---

By Mr. LEAHY (for himself and Mr. DODD):

S. 962. A bill to allow a deduction from gross income for year 2000 computer conversion costs of small businesses; to the Committee on Finance.

THE SMALL BUSINESS Y2K COMPLIANCE ACT OF 1999

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Small Business Y2K Compliance Act of 1999. I am pleased to be joined by Senator DODD, the ranking member of the Senate Special Committee on the Year 2000 Technology Problem, as an original cosponsor of this measure.

Our legislation would offer small businesses a tax deduction of up to $40,000 towards the expenses of purchasing and installing Year 2000 compliant computer hardware and software in 1999. In addition, our bill would reward those small businesses that have acted responsibly by allowing an accelerated depreciation of up to $40,000 for the purchase and installation of Year 2000 compliant computer hardware and software made in 1997 and 1998. These tax incentives have been endorsed by thousands of small business owners at last year's White House Conference on Small Business, the American Small Business Alliance and the Small Business Administration.

Unfortunately, not all small businesses are doing enough to address the year 2000 issue because of a lack of resources in many cases. They face Y2K problems both directly and indirectly through their suppliers, customers and financial institutions. As recently as last October a representative of the National Federation of Independent Businesses testified: ''A fifth of them do not understand that there is a Y2K problem. . . . They are not aware of it. A fifth of them are currently taking action. A fifth have not taken action but plan to take action, and two-fifths are aware of the problem but do not plan to take any action prior to the year 2000.''

Indeed, the Small Business Administration recently warned that 330,000 small businesses are at risk of closing down as a result of Y2K problems, and another 370,000 could be temporarily or permanently hobbled.

Federal and State government agencies have entire departments working on this problem. Utilities, financial institutions, telecommunications companies, and other large companies have information technology divisions working to make corrections to keep their systems running. They have armies of workers—but small businesses do not.

Small businesses are the backbone of our economy, from the city corner market to the family farm to the small-town doctor. In my home State of Vermont, 98 percent of the businesses are small businesses with limited resources. That is why it is so important to provide small businesses with the resources to correct their Y2K problems now.

A few months ago, I hosted a Y2K conference in Vermont to help small businesses prepare for 2000. Hundreds of small business owners from across Vermont attended the conference to learn how to minimize or eliminate their Y2K computer problems. Vermonters are working hard to identify their Y2K vulnerabilities and prepare action plans to resolve them. They should be encouraged and assisted in these important efforts.

This is the right approach. We have to fix as many of these problems ahead of time as we can. Ultimately, the best business policy and the best defense against any Y2K-based lawsuits is to be Y2K compliant.

That is why it is so important to provide small businesses with the resources to correct their Y2K problems now. Our legislation would provide targeted tax incentives to encourage small businesses round the country in their Y2K remediation efforts. Our bill encourages Y2K compliance now to avoid computer problems next year.

Moreover, the tax incentives in our legislation would have a negligible revenue cost. Indeed, the Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated that companion legislation introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative KAREN THURMAN, H.R. 179, would reduce revenue by $171 million from 1990–2003, but would increase revenues by the same $171 million from 2004–2008. Thus, this bill is fiscally prudent as well.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor and support the ''Small Business Y2K Compliance Act of 1999.''

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 962

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Small Business Y2K Compliance Act of 1999''.

SEC. 2. DEDUCTION FOR COSTS OF MAKING COMPUTERS AND COMPUTER SOFTWARE YEAR 2000 COMPLIANT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) PROPERTY PLACED IN SERVICE IN 1999.—A taxpayer may elect to treat the cost of a business Y2K asset placed in service during the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning in 1999 as an expense which is not chargeable to capital account. The cost so treated shall be allowed as a deduction from gross income for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

(2) PROPERTY PLACED IN SERVICE IN 1997 OR 1998.—A taxpayer may elect to deduct from gross income an amount equal to the unrecovered basis of a business Y2K asset placed in service during the 2 taxable years preceding the first taxable year beginning in 1999 and which is otherwise subject to depreciation under such Code.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The aggregate amount allowed as a deduction under subsection (a) shall not exceed $40,000.

(2) APPLICATION OF BUSINESS LIMITATIONS OF SECTION 179.—Rules similar to the rules of paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of section 179(b) of such Code shall apply for purposes of this section. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the cost of property to which the limitation in paragraph (2) of such section 179(b) applies shall be the sum of—

(A) the amounts elected under subsection (a)(1) with respect to property placed in service during the taxpayer's first taxable year beginning in 1999, and

(B) the amounts elected under subsection (a)(2) with respect to the unrecovered basis of business Y2K assets placed in service during the 2 taxable years preceding the first taxable year beginning in 1999.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) BUSINESS Y2K ASSET.—The term ''business Y2K asset'' means an asset acquired by purchase for use in the active conduct of a trade or business which is—

(A) any computer acquired to replace a computer where such replacement is necessary because of the year 2000 computer conversion problem, and

(B) any of the following items which are of a character subject to the allowance for depreciation under such Code:

(i) the modification of computer software to address the year 2000 computer conversion problem, and

(ii) computer software which is year 2000 compliant acquired to replace computer software which is not so compliant.

(2) COMPUTER.—The term ''computer'' means a computer or peripheral equipment (as defined by section 168(i)(2)(B)) of such Code.

(3) COMPUTER SOFTWARE.—The term ''computer software'' has the meaning given to such term by section 167(f) of such Code.

(4) UNRECOVERED BASIS.—The term ''unrecovered basis'' means the adjusted basis of the business Y2K asset determined as of the close of the last taxable year beginning before January 1, 1999.

(d) SPECIAL RULES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Rules similar to the rules of subsections (c) and (d) (other than paragraph (1) thereof) of section 179 of such Code shall apply for purposes of this section.

(2) TREATMENT AS DEDUCTION UNDER SECTION 179.—For purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, the deduction allowed under this section shall be treated in the same manner as a deduction allowed under section 179 of such Code.

(3) ORDERING RULE.—For purposes of section 179 of such Code, subsection (b)(3)(C) of such section shall be applied without regard to the deduction allowed under this section.

---

By Mr. GREGG:

S. 963, A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to preserve family-held forest lands, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

FAMILY FOREST LAND PRESERVATION TAX ACT OF 1999

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Family Forestland Preservation Tax Act of 1999. This bill amends several key tax provisions to help landowners keep their lands in long-term private forest ownership and management. Without these changes, many landowners will continue to be forced to sell or change the use of their land.

This bill derives from four years of work by the Northern Forest Lands Council (NFLC). The NFLC was created in 1990 to seek ways for Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, and New York to maintain the ''traditional patterns of land ownership and use'' in the forest that covers this nation's Northeast. The Northern Forest is a 26-million-acre stretch of land, home to one million residents and within a two-hour drive of 70 million people. Nearly 85% of the Forest is privately owned. Times have changed, however, and social and economic forces have begun to affect the traditional patterns of land use with more and more land being marketed for development.

This bill will help maintain traditional patterns and, thus, preserve the forest by adjusting several estate tax provisions. This bill would allow heirs to make postmortem donations of conservation easements on undeveloped estate land and allow the valuation of undeveloped land at current use value for estate tax purposes if the owner or heir agrees to maintain the land in its current use for a period of twenty-five years. This bill also would establish a partial inflation adjustment for timber sales by allowing a tax credit not to exceed 50%. This will encourage landowners to maintain their timberland for long-term stewardship, which is both economically and environmentally desirable. Also, the bill would eliminate the requirement that landowners generally must work 100-hours-per-year in forest management on their forest properties to be allowed to deduct normal management expenses from timber activities against nonpassive income. Currently, landowners are required to capitalize these losses until timber is harvested. This legislation, though prompted by the NFLC's work, will benefit not only the four states that make up the Northern Forest, but also all states with forestland and all who enjoy the multiple uses of forestland. I urge my colleagues to support this bill, which will not only protect the historic current use patterns, but also allow the rustic beauty of our forests to be enjoyed by all.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 963

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Family Forest Land Preservation Tax Act of 1999''.

(b) AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

TITLE I—ESTATE TAX PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. EXCLUSION FOR LAND SUBJECT TO A QUALIFIED CONSERVATION EASEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2031(c) (relating to estate tax with respect to land subject to a qualified conservation easement) is amended to read as follows:

''(c) ESTATE TAX WITH RESPECT TO LAND SUBJECT TO A QUALIFIED CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—If the executor makes the election described in paragraph (4), then, except as otherwise provided in this subsection, there shall be excluded from the gross estate the value of land subject to a qualified conservation easement, reduced by the amount of any deduction under section 2055(f) with respect to such land.

''(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN INDEBTEDNESS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The exclusion provided under paragraph (1) shall not apply to the extent that the land is debt-financed property.

''(B) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this paragraph—

''(i) DEBT-FINANCED PROPERTY.—The term 'debt-financed property' means any property with respect to which there is acquisition indebtedness (as defined in clause (ii)) on the date of the decedent's death.

''(ii) ACQUISITION INDEBTEDNESS.—The term 'acquisition indebtedness' means, with respect to any property, the unpaid amount of—

''(I) any indebtedness incurred by the donor in acquiring such property,

''(II) any indebtedness incurred before the acquisition of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition,

''(III) any indebtedness incurred after the acquisition of such property if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition and the incurrence of such indebtedness was reasonably foreseeable at the time of such acquisition, and

''(IV) any indebtedness which constitutes an extension, renewal, or refinancing of other indebtedness described in this clause.

''(3) TREATMENT OF RETAINED DEVELOPMENT RIGHT.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the value of any development right retained by the donor in the conveyance of a qualified conservation easement.

''(B) TERMINATION OF RETAINED DEVELOPMENT RIGHT.—If every person in being who has an interest (whether or not in possession) in the land executes an agreement to extinguish permanently some or all of any development rights retained by the donor on or before the date for filing the return of the tax imposed by section 2001, then any tax imposed by section 2001 shall be reduced accordingly. Such agreement shall be filed with the return of the tax imposed by section 2001. The agreement shall be in such form as the Secretary shall prescribe.

''(C) ADDITIONAL TAX.—Any failure to implement the agreement described in subparagraph (B) not later than the earlier of—

''(i) the date which is 2 years after the date of the decedent's death, or

''(ii) the date of the sale of such land subject to the qualified conservation easement, shall result in the imposition of an additional tax in the amount of the tax which would have been due on the retained development rights subject to such agreement. Such additional tax shall be due and payable on the last day of the 6th month following such earlier date.

''(D) DEVELOPMENT RIGHT DEFINED.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'development right' means any right to use the land subject to the qualified conservation easement in which such right is retained for any commercial purpose which is not subordinate to and directly supportive of the use of such land as a farm for farming purposes (within the meaning of section 2032A(e)(5)).

''(4) ELECTION.—The election under this subsection shall be made on or before the due date (including extensions) for filing the return of tax imposed by section 2001 and shall be made on such return.

''(5) CALCULATION OF ESTATE TAX DUE.—An executor making the election described in paragraph (4) shall, for purposes of calculating the amount of tax imposed by section 2001, include the value of any development right (as defined in paragraph (3)) retained by the donor in the conveyance of such qualified conservation easement. The computation of tax on any retained development right prescribed in this paragraph shall be done in such manner and on such forms as the Secretary shall prescribe.

''(6) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

''(A) LAND SUBJECT TO A QUALIFIED CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—The term 'land subject to a qualified conservation easement' means land—

''(i) which was owned by the decedent or a member of the decedent's family at all times during the 3-year period ending on the date of the decedent's death, and

''(ii) with respect to which a qualified conservation easement has been made by an individual described in subparagraph (C) as of the date of the election described in paragraph (4).

''(B) QUALIFIED CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—The term 'qualified conservation easement' means a qualified conservation contribution (as defined in section 170(h)(1)) of a qualified real property interest (as defined in section 170(h)(2)(C)), except that clause (iv) of section 170(h)(4)(A) shall not apply.

''(C) INDIVIDUAL DESCRIBED.—An individual is described in this subparagraph if such individual is—

''(i) the decedent,

''(ii) a member of the decedent's family,

''(iii) the executor of the decedent's estate, or

''(iv) the trustee of a trust the corpus of which includes the land to be subject to the qualified conservation easement.

''(D) MEMBER OF THE DECEDENT'S FAMILY.—The term 'member of the decedent's family' means any member of the family (as defined in section 2032A(e)(2)) of the decedent.

''(7) TREATMENT OF EASEMENTS GRANTED AFTER DEATH.—In any case in which the qualified conservation easement is granted after the date of the decedent's death and on or before the due date (including extensions) for filing the return of tax imposed by section 2001, the deduction under section 2055(f) with respect to such easement shall be allowed to the estate but only if no charitable deduction is allowed under chapter 1 to any person with respect to the grant of such easement.

''(8) APPLICATION OF THIS SECTION TO INTERESTS IN PARTNERSHIPS, CORPORATIONS, AND TRUSTS.—This subsection shall apply to an interest in a partnership, corporation, or trust if at least 30 percent of the entity is owned (directly or indirectly) by the decedent, as determined under the rules described in section 2057(e)(3).''

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 102. INCREASE IN SPECIAL ESTATE TAX VALUATION; SPECIAL RULES FOR FOREST LANDS.

(a) INCREASE IN LIMIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 2032A(a) (relating to value based on use under which property qualifies) are each amended by striking ''$750,000'' each place it appears and inserting ''$1,000,000''.

(2) INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.—Section 2032A(a)(3) is amended—

(A) by striking ''1998'' and inserting ''2000'', and

(B) by striking ''calendar year 1997'' and inserting ''calendar year 1999''.

(b) FOREST LAND TREATED AS QUALIFIED REAL PROPERTY.—Section 2032A(b) (defining qualified real property) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(6) SPECIAL RULE FOR QUALIFIED WOODLANDS.—In the case of qualified woodland, paragraph (1) shall be applied without regard to subparagraph (A) or (C)(ii) thereof.''

(c) DEFINITIONS AND FAILURES TO USE FOR QUALIFIED USE.—Section 2032A(c) (relating to tax treatment of definitions and failures to use for qualified use) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(9) SPECIAL RULES FOR QUALIFIED WOODLAND.—In the case of qualified woodland—

''(A) this subsection shall be applied by substituting '25 years' for '10 years' in paragraph (1) and by substituting '25-year period' for '10-year period' in paragraph (7)(A)(ii) and subsection (h)(2)(A),

''(B) the qualified heir shall not be treated as disposing of the property or ceasing to use the property for a qualified use if—

''(i) the qualified heir transfers the property to another person, and

''(ii) such other person (or their qualified heir) agrees to continue to use the property for a qualified use and files an agreement described in subsection (d)(2) with respect to the property,

''(C) the qualified heir shall be treated as ceasing to use the property for a qualified use if any depreciable improvements are made to the property (other than improvements required for the qualified use), and

''(D) a qualified heir or transferee described in subparagraph (B) shall not be treated as disposing of timber if the disposal is done in accordance with any program described in subsection (e)(13)(E).''

(d) QUALIFIED WOODLAND.—Section 2032A(e)(13) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(E) OTHER REQUIREMENTS.—Real property shall not be treated as qualified woodland unless such property—

''(i) qualifies for a differential use value assessment program for forest land in the State in which the property is located, or

''(ii) if a State has no differential use value assessment program—

''(I) is forest land,

''(II) is a minimum of 10 acres, exclusive of a dwelling unit or other non-forest related structure and its curtilage, and

''(III) is subject to a forest management plan.''

(e) VALUATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 2032A(e) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(15) SPECIAL RULES FOR VALUING FOREST LAND.—The value of forest land shall be determined according to whichever of the following methods results in the least value:

''(A) Assessed land values in a State which provides a differential or use value assessment for forest land.

''(B) Comparable sales of other forest land which is in the same geographical area and which is far enough removed from a metropolitan or resort area so that nonforest use is not a significant factor in the sales price.

''(C) The capitalization of income which the property can be expected to yield for timber operations over a reasonable period of time under prudent management, determined by using traditional forest management for the area, and taking into account soil capacity, terrain configuration, and similar factors.

''(D) Any other factor which fairly values the timber value of the property.''

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 2032A(e)(8) is amended by striking ''paragraph (7)(A)'' and inserting ''paragraph (7)(A) or (15)''.

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying after December 31, 1999.

TITLE II—INCOME TAX TREATMENT

SEC. 201. PARTIAL INFLATION ADJUSTMENT FOR TIMBER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of subchapter P of chapter 1 (relating to treatment of capital gains) is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

''SEC. 1203. PARTIAL INFLATION ADJUSTMENT FOR TIMBER.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—At the election of any taxpayer who has qualified timber gain for any taxable year, there shall be allowed as a deduction from gross income an amount equal to the applicable percentage of such gain.

''(b) QUALIFIED TIMBER GAIN.—For purposes of this section, the term 'qualified timber gain' means the lesser of—

''(1) the net capital gain for the taxable year, or

''(2) the net capital gain for the taxable year determined by taking into account only gains and losses from the sale or exchange of—

''(A) any standing timber (or the right to sever any standing timber), or

''(B) any qualified woodland (as defined in section 2032A(e)(13)(B)) or any interest therein.

Such term shall not include any gain excludable from gross income under section 139.

''(c) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of this section, the term 'applicable percentage' means the percentage (not exceeding 50 percent) determined by multiplying—

''(1) 3 percent, by

''(2) the number of years in the holding period of the taxpayer with respect to the timber.

''(d) ESTATES AND TRUSTS.—In the case of an estate or trust, the deduction under subsection (a) shall be computed by excluding the portion (if any) of the gains for the taxable year from sales or exchanges of capital assets which, under sections 652 and 662 (relating to inclusions of amounts in gross income of beneficiaries of trusts), is includible by the income beneficiaries as gain derived from the sale or exchange of capital assets.''

(b) COORDINATION WITH EXISTING LIMITATIONS.—

(1) Subsection (h) of section 1 (relating to maximum capital gains rate) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(14) QUALIFIED TIMBER GAIN.—For purposes of this subsection, net capital gain shall be determined without regard to qualified timber gain with respect to which an election is made under section 1203.''

(2) Subsection (a) of section 1201 (relating to alternative tax for corporations) is amended by adding at the end the following flush sentence:

''For purposes of this section, net capital gain shall be determined without regard to qualified timber gain with respect to which an election is made under section 1203.''

(c) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION IN COMPUTING ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—Subsection (a) of section 62 (relating to definition of adjusted gross income) is amended by inserting after paragraph (17) the following new paragraph:

''(18) PARTIAL INFLATION ADJUSTMENT FOR TIMBER.—The deduction allowed by section 1203.''

(d) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part I of subchapter P of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

''Sec. 1203. Partial inflation adjustment for timber.''

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales or exchanges after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 202. EXCLUSION OF GAIN FROM SALES OF INTERESTS IN FOREST LAND FOR CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 139 as section 140 and by inserting after section 138 the following new section:

''SEC. 139. SALES OF INTERESTS IN CERTAIN FOREST LAND FOR CONSERVATION PURPOSES.

''(a) EXCLUSION.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Gross income shall not include the applicable percentage of any gain from a qualified timber sale.

''(2) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'applicable percentage' means—

''(A) 35 percent, or

''(B) in the case of a qualified timber sale of a qualified real property interest described in section 170(h)(2)(C), 100 percent.

''(b) LIMITATION.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The total amount of gain which may be excluded from gross income under subsection (a) for any taxable year shall not exceed the sum of—

''(A) the amount of gain from a qualified timber sale described in subsection (a)(2)(B), plus

''(B) $800,000 ($400,000 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return).

''(2) AGGREGATION RULE.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(B), all persons treated as a single employer under subsection (a) or (b) of section 52 shall be treated as one taxpayer.

''(c) QUALIFIED TIMBER SALE.—For purposes of this section—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified timber sale' means the sale or exchange of a qualified real property interest in real property which is used in timber operations to a governmental unit described in section 170(c)(1) for conservation purposes.

''(2) SPECIAL RULE FOR SALES TO NONGOVERNMENTAL ENTITIES.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified timber sale' shall include a sale or exchange to a qualified organization described in section 170(h)(3) if such interest is transferred to a governmental unit described in section 170(c)(1) during the 2-year period beginning on the date of the sale or exchange.

''(B) TIME FOR EXCLUSION.—If the transfer to which paragraph (1) applies occurs in a taxable year after the taxable year in which the sale or exchange occurred—

''(i) no exclusion shall be allowed under subsection (a) for the taxable year of the sale or exchange, but

''(ii) the taxpayer's tax for the taxable year of the transfer shall be reduced by the amount of the reduction in the taxpayer's tax for the taxable year of the sale or exchange which would have occurred if subparagraph (A) had not applied.

''(d) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

''(1) QUALIFIED REAL PROPERTY INTEREST.—The term 'qualified real property interest' has the meaning given such term by section 170(h)(2).

''(2) TIMBER OPERATIONS.—The term 'timber operations' has the meaning given such term by section 2032A(e)(13)(C).

''(3) CONSERVATION PURPOSES.—The term 'conservation purposes' has the meaning given such term by section 170(h)(4)(A) (without regard to clause (iv) thereof).''

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 is amended by striking the item relating to section 139 and inserting the following new items:

''Sec. 139. Sales of interests in certain forest land for conservation purposes.

''Sec. 140. Cross references to other Acts.''

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 203. APPLICATION OF PASSIVE LOSS LIMITATIONS TO TIMBER ACTIVITIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Treasury regulations sections 1.469–5T(b)(2) (ii) and (iii) shall not apply to any closely held timber activity if the nature of such activity is such that the aggregate hours devoted to management of the activity for any year is generally less than 100 hours.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of subsection (a)—

(1) CLOSELY HELD ACTIVITY.—An activity shall be treated as closely held if at least 80 percent of the ownership interests in the activity is held—

(A) by 5 or fewer individuals, or

(B) by individuals who are members of the same family (within the meaning of section 2032A(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986).

An interest in a limited partnership shall in no event be treated as a closely held activity for purposes of this section.

(2) TIMBER ACTIVITY.—The term ''timber activity'' means the planting, cultivating, caring, cutting, or preparation (other than milling) for market, of trees.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

---

By Mr. DASCHLE:

S. 964. A bill to provide for equitable compensation for the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

CHEYENNE RIVER SIOUX TRIBE INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT TRUST FUND ACT

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation to compensate the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe for losses the tribe suffered when the Oahe dam was constructed in central South Dakota and over 100,000 acres of tribal land was flooded. Its passage will help the tribe rebuild their infrastructure and their economy, which was seriously crippled by the Oahe project during the 1950s. It is extraordinary that it has taken four decades to reach this point. The importance of passing this long-overdue legislation as soon as possible cannot be stated too strongly.

This legislation was developed with the assistance of Chairman Gregg Bourland and Council Member Louis Dubray of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe. Both men have worked tirelessly to bring us to this point and I am grateful for their assistance. This legislation represents one element of their progressive vision for providing the members of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe with greater opportunities for economic development and to fulfill the debts owned to the tribe by the federal government.

The Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe Equitable Compensation Act is the companion bill to the Lower Brule Sioux Tribe Infrastructure Development Trust Fund Act, which passed by unanimous consent in November of 1997, and the Crow Creek Sioux Tribe Infrastructure Development Trust Fund Act of 1996, which passed the Congress unanimously in 1996.

The bill is based on an extensive analysis of the imp[act of the Pick-Sloan Dam Projects on the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe which was performed by the Robert McLaughlin Company. The McLaughlin report was reviewed by the General Accounting Office, which found that the losses suffered by the tribe justify the establishment of a $290 million trust fund, which is the amount called for in this legislation.

It represents an important step in our continuing effort to fairly compensate the tribes of South Dakota for the sacrifices they made decades ago for the construction of the dams along the Missouri River and will further the goal of improving the lives of Native Americans living on those reservations.

To fully appreciate the need for this legislation, it is important for the committee to understand the historic events that are prologue to its development. The Oahe dam was constructed in South Dakota pursuant to the Flood Control Act (58 Stat. 887) of 1944. That legislation authorized implementation of the Missouri River Basin Pick-Sloan Plan for water development and flood control for downstream states.

The Oahe dam flooded 104,000 acres of tribal land, forcing the relocation of roughly 30 percent of the tribe's population, including four entire communities. Equally as important, the tribe lost 80 percent of its fertile river bottom lands—lands that represented the basis for the tribal economy. Prior to the flooding, the tribe relied on these lands for firewood and building material, game wild fruits and berries, as well as cover from the severe storms that characterize winters in South Dakota and shelter from the heat of the prairie summer. Indian ranchers no longer had places to shelter their cattle in the wintertime, causing a significant loss in the value of their operations.

The loss of these important river bottom lands can be felt today. During the extreme winter of 1996–1997, the tribe lost roughly 30,000 head of livestock, including 25,000 head of cattle. Without adequate natural shelter, the remaining Indian ranchers along this stretch of river can expect to continue to have difficulty scratching out a living in future years when the winter turns particularly hard.

Mr. President, the damage caused by the Pick-Sloan projects touched every aspect of life on the Cheyenne River reservation. Ninety percent of the timber on the reservation was wiped out, causing shortages of building material and firewood. Wildlife, once abundant in the river bottom, became more scarce. The entire lifestyle of the tribe changed as it was forced to relocate much of its people from the lush river bottom lands to the windswept prairie.

Most Americans, if not all, are familiar with the many broken promises of the United States Government to Native Americans during the 1800's. For Indian tribes located along the Missouri River in the state of South Dakota, the United States Government still has not met its responsibilities for compensation for losses suffered as a result of the construction of the Pick-Sloan dams. This proposed legislation is intended to correct that situation as it applies to the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe.

We cannot, of course, remake the lost lands and return the tribe to its former existence. We can, however, help provide the resources necessary to the tribe to improve the infrastructure on the Cheyenne River reservation. This, in turn, will enhance opportunities for economic development which will benefit all members of the tribe. Perhaps most importantly, it will fulfill part of our commitment to improve the lives of Native Americans—in this case the Cheyenne River Sioux.

I strongly urge my colleagues to approve this legislation this year. Providing compensation to the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe for past harm inflicted by the federal government is long-overdue and any further delay only compounds that harm. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 964

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe Equitable Compensation Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) by enacting the Act of December 22, 1944, (58 Stat. 887, chapter 665; 33 U.S.C. 701–1 et seq.), commonly known as the ''Flood Control Act of 1944'', Congress approved the Pick-Sloan Missouri River Basin program (referred to in this section as the ''Pick-Sloan program'')—

(A) to promote the general economic development of the United States;

(B) to provide for irrigation above Sioux City, Iowa;

(C) to protect urban and rural areas from devastating floods of the Missouri River; and

(D) for other purposes;

(2) the Oahe Dam and Reservoir project—

(A) is a major component of the Pick-Sloan program, and contributes to the economy of the United States by generating a substantial amount of hydropower and impounding a substantial quantity of water;

(B) overlies the eastern boundary of the Cheyenne River Sioux Indian Reservation; and

(C) has not only contributed little to the economy of the Tribe, but has severely damaged the economy of the Tribe and members of the Tribe by inundating the fertile, wooded bottom lands of the Tribe along the Missouri River that constituted the most productive agricultural and pastoral lands of the Tribe and the homeland of the members of the Tribe;

(3) the Secretary of the Interior appointed a Joint Tribal Advisory Committee that examined the Oahe Dam and Reservoir project and correctly concluded that—

(A) the Federal Government did not justify, or fairly compensate the Tribe for, the Oahe Dam and Reservoir project when the Federal Government acquired 104,492 acres of land of the Tribe for that project; and

(B) the Tribe should be adequately compensated for the land acquisition described in subparagraph (A);

(4) after applying the same method of analysis as is used for the compensation of similarly situated Indian tribes, the Comptroller General of the United States (referred to in this Act as the ''Comptroller General'') determined that the appropriate amount of compensation to pay the Tribe for the land acquisition described in paragraph (3)(A) would be $290,722,958;

(5) the Tribe is entitled to receive additional financial compensation for the land acquisition described in paragraph (3)(A) in a manner consistent with the determination of the Comptroller General described in paragraph (4); and

(6) the establishment of a trust fund to make amounts available to the Tribe under this Act is consistent with the principles of self-governance and self-determination.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are as follows:

(1) To provide for additional financial compensation to the Tribe for the acquisition by the Federal Government of 104,492 acres of land of the Tribe for the Oahe Dam and Reservoir project in a manner consistent with the determinations of the Comptroller General described in subsection (a)(4).

(2) To provide for the establishment of the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribal Recovery Fund, to be managed by the Secretary of the Treasury in order to make payments to the Tribe to carry out projects under a plan prepared by the Tribe.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) TRIBE.—The term ''Tribe'' means the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe, which is comprised of the Itazipco, Siha Sapa, Minniconjou, and Oohenumpa bands of the Great Sioux Nation that reside on the Cheyenne Reservation, located in central South Dakota.

(2) TRIBAL COUNCIL.—The term ''Tribal Council'' means the governing body of the Tribe.

SEC. 4. CHEYENNE RIVER SIOUX TRIBAL RECOVERY TRUST FUND.

(a) CHEYENNE RIVER SIOUX TRIBAL RECOVERY TRUST FUND.—There is established in the Treasury of the United States a fund to be known as the ''Cheyenne River Sioux Tribal Recovery Trust Fund'' (referred to in this Act as the ''Fund''). The Fund shall consist of any amounts deposited into the Fund under this Act.

(b) FUNDING.—Out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the Secretary of the Treasury shall deposit $290,722,958 into the Fund not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUND.—It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to invest such portion of the Fund as is not, in the Secretary of Treasury's judgment, required to meet current withdrawals. Such investments may be made only in interest-bearing obligations of the United States or in obligations guaranteed as to both principal and interest by the United States. The Secretary of the Treasury shall deposit interest resulting from such investments into the Fund.

(d) PAYMENT OF INTEREST TO TRIBE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—

(A) WITHDRAWAL OF INTEREST.—Beginning at the end of the first fiscal year in which interest is deposited into the Fund, the Secretary of the Treasury shall withdraw the applicable percentage amount of the aggregate amount of interest deposited into the Fund for that fiscal year (as determined under subparagraph (B)) and transfer that amount to the Secretary of the Interior for use in accordance with paragraph (2). Each amount so transferred shall be available without fiscal year limitation.

(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE AMOUNTS.—The applicable percentage amount referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be as follows:

(i) 10 percent for the first fiscal year for which interest is deposited into the Fund.

(ii) 20 percent for the 2d such fiscal year.

(iii) 30 percent for the 3rd such fiscal year.
(iv) 40 percent for the 4th such fiscal year.
(v) 50 percent for the 5th such fiscal year.
(vi) 60 percent for the 6th such fiscal year.
(vii) 70 percent for the 7th such fiscal year.
(viii) 80 percent for the 8th such fiscal year.
(ix) 90 percent for the 9th such fiscal year.
(x) 100 percent for the 10th such fiscal year, and for each such fiscal year thereafter.

(2) PAYMENTS TO TRIBE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of the Interior shall use the amounts transferred under paragraph (1) only for the purpose of making payments to the Tribe, as such payments are requested by the Tribe pursuant to tribal resolution.

(B) LIMITATION.—Payments may be made by the Secretary of the Interior under subparagraph (A) only after the Tribe has adopted a plan under subsection (f).

(C) USE OF PAYMENTS BY TRIBE.—The Tribe shall use the payments made under subparagraph (B) only for carrying out projects and programs under the plan prepared under subsection (f).

(D) PLEDGE OF FUTURE PAYMENTS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii), the Tribe may enter into an agreement under which the Tribe pledges future payments under this paragraph as security for a loan or other financial transaction.

(ii) LIMITATIONS.—The Tribe—

(I) may enter into an agreement under clause (i) only in connection with the purchase of land or other capital assets; and

(II) may not pledge, for any year under an agreement referred to in clause (i), an amount greater than 40 percent of any payment under this paragraph for that year.

(e) TRANSFERS AND WITHDRAWALS.—Except as provided in subsections (c) and (d)(1), the Secretary of the Treasury may not transfer or withdraw any amount deposited under subsection (b).

(f) PLAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the governing body of the Tribe shall prepare a plan for the use of the payments to the Tribe under subsection (d) (referred to in this subsection as the ''plan'').

(2) CONTENTS OF PLAN.—The plan shall provide for the manner in which the Tribe shall expend payments to the Tribe under subsection (d) to promote—

(A) economic development;

(B) infrastructure development;

(C) the educational, health, recreational, and social welfare objectives of the Tribe and its members; or

(D) any combination of the activities described in subparagraphs (A) through (C).

(3) PLAN REVIEW AND REVISION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Tribal Council shall make available for review and comment by the members of the Tribe a copy of the plan before the plan becomes final, in accordance with procedures established by the Tribal Council.

(B) UPDATING OF PLAN.—The Tribal Council may, on an annual basis, revise the plan to update the plan. In revising the plan under this subparagraph, the Tribal Council shall provide the members of the Tribe opportunity to review and comment on any proposed revision to the plan.

(C) CONSULTATION.—In preparing the plan and any revisions to update the plan, the Tribal Council shall consult with the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(4) AUDIT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The activities of the Tribe in carrying out the plan shall be audited as part of the annual single-agency audit that the Tribe is required to prepare pursuant to the Office of Management and Budget circular numbered A–133.

(B) DETERMINATION BY AUDITORS.—The auditors that conduct the audit described in subparagraph (A) shall—

(i) determine whether funds received by the Tribe under this section for the period covered by the audit were expended to carry out the plan in a manner consistent with this section; and

(ii) include in the written findings of the audit the determination made under clause (i).

(C) INCLUSION OF FINDINGS WITH PUBLICATION OF PROCEEDINGS OF TRIBAL COUNCIL.—A copy of the written findings of the audit described in subparagraph (A) shall be inserted in the published minutes of the Tribal Council proceedings for the session at which the audit is presented to the Tribal Council.

(g) PROHIBITION ON PER CAPITA PAYMENTS.—No portion of any payment made under this Act may be distributed to any member of the Tribe on a per capita basis.

SEC. 5. ELIGIBILITY OF TRIBE FOR CERTAIN PROGRAMS AND SERVICES.

No payment made to the Tribe under this Act shall result in the reduction or denial of any service or program with respect to which, under Federal law—

(1) the Tribe is otherwise entitled because of the status of the Tribe as a federally recognized Indian tribe; or

(2) any individual who is a member of the Tribe is entitled because of the status of the individual as a member of the Tribe.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated such funds as may be necessary to carry out this Act, including such funds as may be necessary to cover the administrative expenses of the Fund.

---

By Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. LEAHY, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. DURBIN):

S. 965. A bill to restore a United States voluntary contribution to the United Nations Population Fund; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

UNITED NATIONS POPULATION FUND (UNFPA) FUNDING ACT OF 1999

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, today I am introducing the ''United Nations Population Fund Funding Act of 1999.'' Senators CHAFEE, SNOWE, LEAHY, MURRAY, and DURBIN join me as original cosponsors.

I will celebrate the memory of my mother this Sunday on Mother's Day. Very sadly, I know that there are millions of children in the developing world who have very few, or even no memories of their mothers. Nearly all maternal deaths are in developing countries. More than 585,000 women, many of them already mothers, die each year from causes related to pregnancy, including obstructed labor, hemorrhage and postpartum infection, and ectopic pregnancies caused by a sexually transmitted disease. Mothers also die from HIV, malnutrition and anemina, or complications of an unsafe abortion.

These are only a few examples of how poverty, lack of knowledge, and lack of basic maternal health care claim the lives of millions of mothers all over the world every year. But the importance of maternal health care to the well-being of women and their families is clear. We can support mothers in poorer countries around the world by removing the ban on U.S. funding for UNFPA. UNFPA is currently the leading maternal health care provider around the world.

During the heated debate surrounding international family planning and U.S. funding for UNFPA, ''the baby often gets thrown out with the bath water.'' The ''baby'' in this debate is the vast array of work UNFPA does around the world to improve pre- and post-natal mother's health, access to voluntary family planning programs, STD and HIV education and prevention, and programs to end the practice of female genital mutilation. UNFPA provides couples all over the world access to contraception. It seeks to reduce abortions and related deaths by improving access to family planning and to treatment for complications of unsafe abortion. UNFPA's priorities include preventing teen pregnancy. Too frequently, the bulk of UNFPA's work is overlooked in the international family planning controversy.

Many people do not even realize that UNFPA also assists women in crisis situations. UNFPA recently announced it is sending emergency reproductive health hits, including equipment for safe delivery of babies and emergency contraceptives for rape victims, to Albania for thousands of Kosovar Albanian refugee women.

The lives of pregnant women and newborns are at particular risk among refugees fleeing Kosovo. These kits include supplies for women who give birth in areas without medical facilities, including materials like soap, plastic sheeting, pictorial instructions for delivering a baby, and razor blades for cutting the umbilical cord of a newborn. These are the most basic of items. But they can mean the difference between life and death for mothers and their newborn babies. The U.S. should contribute to this humanitarian work.

The whole world has been horrified by reports released by human rights organizations stating that the Serbs are using rape as a weapon of war. UNFPA has responded and is leading international efforts to help Kosovar Albanian women who have been raped by Serb forces. UNFPA provides trauma treatment and counseling for other mental health consequences of this form of human rights abuse.

As the legislative year progresses, the controversy over international family planning programs will intensify. My legislation calling for renewal of the U.S. contribution to UNFPA will get caught up in the controversy as well. But I will not let one of the most important issues get lost—the health of mothers in poor countries. In the coming months I will work with the cosponsors to this bill and many health care organizations to keep the issue of maternal health visible in the international family planning debate.

By Mr. REID:

S. 966. A bill to require Medicare providers to disclose publicly staffing and performance in order to promote improved consumer information and choice, to protect employees of Medicare providers who report concerns about the safety and quality of services provided by the Medicare providers or who report violations of Federal or State law by those providers, and to require review of the impact on public health and safety of proposed mergers and acquisitions of Medicare providers; to the Committee on Finance.

PATIENT SAFETY AT OF 1999

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Patient Safety Act of 1999. This legislation focuses on the major safety, quality, and workforce issues for nurses employed by health care institutions and the patients who receive care in these facilities.

Health care consumers need access to information about health care institutions in order to make informed decisions about where they or their loved ones will receive care. My bill would require health care facilties to make information publicly available about staffing levels, patient care outcomes, and specific kinds of errors and avoidable patient care problems—such as bedsores. The Patient Safety Act would not require action to correct these problems. This is not a bill to regulate health care, but one that would provide individuals with the information they want and need when it comes time to make important health care choices.

As our front-line health care workers, nurses are usually the first to recognize dangerous patient care conditions. The Patient Safety Act would provide nurses and other hospital employees with ''whistleblower'' protections it they report problems that threaten patient safety to their employers, government agencies, or others.

Finally, the Patient Safety Act would dirct the Department of Health and Human Services to review mergers and acqusitions of hospitals to determine their long-term effects on the well-being of patients, the community and employees. While these types of transactions are regularly evaluated from a financial standpoint, little information is made available to the public about hwo such a change would affect the health care services available to them.

The Patient Safety Act is a valuable information resource for consumers. I urge you to join my efforts to provide consumers with the data necessary to make informed decisions about their health care providers.

By Mr. LAUTENBERG:

S. 967. A bill to provide a uniform national standard to ensure that consealed firearms are available only to authorized persons for lawful purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

CONCEALED FIREARMS PROHIBITION ACT

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation, the Concealed Firearms Prohibition Act, that would help make our communities safer.

Across the country, citizens are looking for ways to stop gun violence. They see their families torn apart, their friends lost forever, and their communities shattered. And they wonder what has gone wrong in a nation where more than 30,000 people are killed by gunfire each year.

One area of growing concern is concealed weapons. Recently, the NRA tried to push a measure that would have allowed more concealed weapons in Missouri. They spent about $4 million trying to pass their referendum. But the voters responded with a resounding ''no.'' They do not want more people secretly carrying weapons in their schoolyards, malls, stadiums and other public places.

Regrettably, there are still too many politicians who will not listen to the people. They insist on marching in lockstep with the NRA. They actually want to escalate the arms race on our streets. They try to suggest that if more people are carrying guns, our neighborhoods will be safer. That position simply defies common sense. The answer to gun violence is not a new version of the Wild West, with everyone carrying a gun on his or her hip, taking the law into their own hands.

Every day people get into arguments over everything from traffic accidents to domestic disputes. Maybe these arguments lead to yelling, or even fisticuffs. But if people are carrying guns, those conflicts are much more likely to end in a shooting, and death. And since some States allow individuals to carry concealed weapons with little or no training in the operation of firearms, there is a greater chance that incompetent or careless handgun users will accidentally injure or kill innocent bystanders.

More concealed weapons on our streets will also make the jobs of law enforcement officers more dangerous and difficult. But you do not need to take my word for this, Mr. President. Just ask the men and women in law enforcement. In fact, the Police Executive Research Forum did just that. In their 1996 survey, they found that 92 percent of their membership opposed legislation allowing private citizens to carry concealed weapons.

Mr. President, although the regulation of concealed weapons has been left to States, it is time for Congress to step in to protect the public. All Americans have a right to be free from the dangers posed by the carrying of concealed handguns, regardless of their State of residence. And Americans should be able to travel across State lines for business, to visit their families, or for any other purpose, without having to worry about concealed weapons.

Besides the strong Federal interest in ensuring the safety of our citizens, there are other reasons why this area requires Congressional intervention. Beyond the lives lost and ruined, crimes committed with handguns impose a substantial burden on interstate commerce and lead to a reduction in productivity and profitability for businesses around the Nation. Moreover, to ensure its coverage under the Constitution's commerce clause, my bill applies only to handguns that have been transported in interstate or foreign commerce, or that have parts or components that have been transported in interstate or foreign commerce. This clearly distinguishes the legislation from the gun-free school zone statute that was struck down in the Supreme Court's Lopez case.

Mr. President, the bottom line is that more guns equal more death. This legislation will help in our struggle to reduce the number of guns on our streets, and help prevent our society from becoming even more violent and dangerous.

I hope my colleagues will support the bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 967

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Concealed Firearms Prohibition Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) crimes committed with firearms threaten the peace and domestic tranquility of the United States and reduce the security and general welfare of the people of the United States;

(2) crimes committed with firearms impose a substantial burden on interstate commerce and lead to a reduction in productivity and profitability for businesses around the country whose workers, suppliers, and customers are adversely affected by gun violence;

(3) the public carrying of firearms increases the level of gun violence by enabling the rapid escalation of otherwise minor conflicts into deadly shootings;

(4) the public carrying of firearms increases the likelihood that incompetent or careless firearm users will accidently injure or kill innocent bystanders;

(5) the public carrying of firearms poses a danger to citizens of the United States who travel across State lines for business or other purposes; and

(6) all Americans have a right to be protected from the dangers posed by the carrying of concealed firearms, regardless of their State of residence.

SEC. 3. UNLAWFUL ACT.

Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after subsection (y) the following:

''(z) FIREARMS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), it shall be unlawful for a person to carry a firearm, any part of which has been transported in interstate or foreign commerce, on his or her person in public.

''(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) does not apply to—

''(A) a person authorized to carry a firearm under State law who is—

''(i) a law enforcement official;

''(ii) a retired law enforcement official;

''(iii) a duly authorized private security officer;

''(iv) a person whose employment involves the transport of substantial amounts of cash or other valuable items; or

''(v) any other person that the Attorney General determines should be allowed to carry a firearm because of compelling circumstances, under regulations that the Attorney General may promulgate;

''(B) a person authorized to carry a firearm under a State law that permits a person to carry a firearm based on an individualized determination, based on a review of credible evidence, that the person should be allowed to carry a firearm because of compelling circumstances (not including a claim of concern about generalized or unspecified risks); or

''(C) a person authorized to carry a firearm on his or her person under Federal law.

''(3) EFFECT ON OTHER LAWS.—

''(A) FEDERAL LAWS.—Nothing in this subsection supersedes or limits any other Federal law (including a regulation) that prohibits or restricts the possession or transportation of a firearm.

''(B) STATE AND LOCAL LAWS.—Nothing in this subsection supersedes or limits any law (including a regulation) of a State or political subdivision of a State that—''(i) grants a right to carry a concealed firearm that is more restrictive than a right granted under this subsection;

''(ii) permits a private person or entity to prohibit or restrict the possession of a concealed firearm on property belonging to the person;

''(iii) prohibits or restricts the possession of a firearm on any property, installation, building, facility, or park belonging to a State or political subdivision of a State; or

''(iv) permits a person to—

''(I) transport a lawfully-owned and lawfully-secured firearm in a vehicle for hunting or sporting purposes; or

''(II) use a lawfully-owned firearm for hunting or sporting purposes.''.

---

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mr. MACK, Mr. CLELAND, Mrs. LINCOLN, and Mr. ROBB):

S. 968. A bill to authorize the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency to make grants to State agencies with responsibility for water source development, for the purposes of maximizing the available water supply and protecting the environment through the development of alternative water sources, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

ALTERNATIVE WATER SOURCES ACT OF 1999

● Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleagues, Senators MACK, CLELAND, LINCOLN, and ROBB, to discuss an issue of great importance to the people of Florida and the nation: the availability of adequate water supplies. During the last decade, many states have experienced unprecedented population growth. For example, Florida's population increased by 15 percent, or almost 2 million people, over the last 8 years. We have directed resources towards improvements in our highway infrastructure to accommodate increased use. However, an area that has not received adequate attention but has the potential to negatively impact human health and the environment as well as limit economic growth is the conservation and development of adequate water supplies.

A number of eastern states, including Florida, are now experiencing water supply problems similar to those in the arid West. We must act now to prevent salt water intrusion into our aquifers, additional loss of wetlands, and curbs on economic development due to inadequate water supplies. As we prepare for the 21st century, demand for water for domestic, industrial, and agricultural uses will continue to increase.

In just one of Florida's regional water management districts, the Governing Board has committed $10 million per year since 1994 to providing financial assistance for local alternative water source projects such as conservation, wastewater reclamation, stormwater reuse, and desalination. When fully implemented, the 23 currently active or completed projects will provide more than 150 million gallons of water per day to supply existing and future needs. These projects will also reduce groundwater withdrawals, rehydrate stressed lakes and wetlands, increase ground water recharge, enhanced wildlife habitat, and improve flood control.

We are today introducing legislation to address this critical public health, environmental, and economic issue. The ''Alternative Water Sources Act of 1999'' establishes a federal grant program for eastern states that is similar to a program already operated by the Bureau of Reclamation for western states. The program will provide federal matching funds for the design and construction of water reclamation, reuse, and conservation projects. The bill authorizes the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to make grants to agencies with responsibility for water resource development, for the purpose of maximizing available water supplies while protecting the environment. Under this program, water supply agencies will submit grant proposals to EPA. The proposed projects must be part of a long range water resource management plan. If approved, the federal government would provide half the cost of the project. This legislation authorizes $75 million per year over the next five years to fund alternative water source projects.●

---

By Mr. ASHCROFT:

S. 969. A bill to amend the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act and the Gun-Free Schools Act of 1994 to authorize schools to apply appropriate discipline measures in cases where students have weapons or threaten to harm others, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SCHOOL SAFETY ACT OF 1999

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, in the past two weeks since the tragedy occurred at Columbine High School in Littleton, Colorado, we have all had time to reflect on a number of issues. Our thoughts and prayers go to the families, friends, and other loved ones affected by this incident. We have asked ourselves why this happened. How it happened.

The Littleton tragedy requires reflection, thought and corrective action within our spheres of influence and responsibility. Children must learn respect and responsibility. Parents must be responsible for their children, including what they watch and what they do. Schools must have firm, fair and consistent discipline policies. Schools must be free to expel violence-prone students. State legislators must review state laws. Congress must review federal laws.

As a member of the United States Senate, I have been prompted to stop and examine our current federal education laws involving school safety, and see if our policies are promoting and encouraging school safety—or are in some way hindering our teachers, parents, principals, superintendents, and school boards from maintaining a safe place for our children to learn and our teachers to teach.

For much of the past year and before the Littleton tragedy, I traveled through Missouri talking to teachers, principals, school superintendents and school officials about the issue of school safety and school discipline. What I heard and learned was disturbing. After listening to school officials, I have concluded that there is, in fact, at least one federal law that actually jeopardizes our schools' efforts to provide a safe learning environment. Today I am introducing legislation, the School Safety Act, to amend this law and give schools the ability to remove from the classroom students who possess weapons or threaten to use weapons in the classroom, so that we can keep our children and teachers safe.

Once enacted, this legislation will help foster a safer environment in schools. If this legislation had been enacted years ago, would it have prevented the Littleton tragedy? It would be wrong to claim for certain that it would. The truth of the Littleton tragedy is that those involved in the massacre violated at least 13 federal laws. The existence of those 13 laws did not stop the Littleton massacre. Still, we must examine our current federal education laws involving school safety and make necessary changes.

Across America, parents, teachers, and communities have made it clear that we want our schools to offer our students a world-class education that boosts student achievement and elevates them to excellence. If children are to attain high levels of academic performance, our schools must be able to provide safe and secure learning environments free of undue disruption or violence.

When we think of school safety, we obviously turn to one element that poses a threat to a secure environment: weapons in schools.

Our general federal policy is commendable: to have zero tolerance for weapons at schools. The federal Gun-Free Schools Act requires states receiving federal education funds to have a law requiring a one year expulsion of a student who has a weapon at school. I know that my state of Missouri has such a law on the books.

We would think that the Gun-Free Schools Act settles the issue of weapons in schools. But it doesn't. This law contains an exception for nearly one in seven students in my state, and one in eight nationally. This exception is for students covered by the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

Hidden among the provisions of the Gun-Free Schools Act is section (c), entitled ''Special Rule,'' which says: ''The provisions of this section shall be construed in a manner consistent with the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.'' When you turn to the IDEA law, you see a complex and elaborate set of roadblocks and barriers that hamstring schools in applying discipline to any IDEA student for situations involving weapons possessions.

When we talk about students who are subject to the IDEA law, we are not talking about any small number of children: In Missouri, over 129,000—or nearly 14% of our 893,000 students—are classified as ''disabled.'' That's one in seven students. Nationally, there are about 12–13% of all students who are under the IDEA law. We have to keep this in mind as we talk about this issue of school discipline and safety.

We must also consider which individuals qualify as ''disabled'' under IDEA. We are not just talking about blindness, deafness, orthopedic impairments, or MS. The federal IDEA definition of disability also includes individuals with serious emotional disturbances or specific learning disabilities.

Unlike the Gun-Free Schools Act, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act does not have a zero tolerance for students with weapons. In fact, the IDEA law makes it very difficult for schools to act effectively when a student subject to this law has a weapon at school.

While the Gun-Free Schools Act would require that any other student be expelled for a year, the ''special rule'' for an IDEA student who brings a gun or knife to school provides that he could be back in the regular classroom within 45 days.

Here is a federal law that creates dangerous situations by not allowing school officials to keep those students who have possessed weapons in school out of the classroom.

IDEA also hinders schools from taking effective action to protect their students and teachers from students who make threats to use weapons. School districts have developed policies to address student weapons threats. For example, a superintendent in my state told my office that under his school district's policy, he could suspend a student for up to 180 days for threatening to bring a weapon to school and shoot another student.

However, if that superintendent is dealing with a student under IDEA, the law makes it very difficult for him to remove the student even if he considers the student a serious threat to the safety of others. In fact, the school may be unable to remove this child from the classroom if he has already been suspended for a certain number of days during the school year.

Here is a federal law that creates dangerous situations by not allowing school officials to act on early warning signs to remove potentially violent students from school.

The costs involved with trying to keep a dangerous child out of the classroom are astronomical under IDEA. Schools have told me that the ''due process'' proceedings a parent can invoke in response to any disciplinary action taken toward a child is so expensive and time-consuming that schools do all they can to avoid these proceedings. The easiest, simplest due process hearing costs a school about $7500 in Missouri!

Not only must schools pay their own legal fees for a due process hearing under IDEA, but they also face the prospect of being responsible for the parents' attorneys fees in some cases.

Here is a federal law that discourages safe classrooms because schools cannot afford to take steps they deem essential to maintaining safety without risking serious financial jeopardy.

The problems created by IDEA are not simply theoretical. Just three weeks ago—before the Littleton incident—I traveled around Missouri to talk to parents, teachers, principals, and administrators about ways to offer each child a world class education. Again and again, I was told that schools are handcuffed by federal law in dealing with violent and dangerous behavior—often connected with weapons. Let me give you a few examples:

In one rural Missouri school, a 15-year-old IDEA student had been making numerous threats against both students and staff. He said such things as, ''I'm going to shoot you. I'm going to get a gun and blow you away.'' School officials were aware of the threats, but the federal law hindered them from taking steps they thought most appropriate to deal with the student. Unfortunately this student ended up shooting another student off school grounds. Fortunately, because he remained in the custody of law enforcement authorities, the student was not returned to the classroom. School officials in this district told me that had this student not been subject to the IDEA laws, they could have—and would have—removed him from the classroom when he made the threats of killing other students and personnel.

In an eastern Missouri school district, an IDEA student who was under school suspension was asked to leave a Friday night school dance that he tried to attend in violation of school policy. The student tried continually to regain entry into the school and said to the principal, a teacher, and a parent who was helping supervise the dance: ''I'm going to go home, get my shotgun, come back, and blow your [expletives deleted] heads off.'' The superintendent says that the federal IDEA law constrained him to return this potentially dangerous student to the classroom early the next week. If the student had not had been under IDEA, the superintendent could have imposed a far longer suspension for threatening school personnel.

I learned of a Missouri grade schooler, subject to IDEA law, who announced at school, ''I'm going to bring a knife and cut the bus driver's throat.'' Was this an idle threat? This child had transferred from another school where he had been found with a knife and was suspended for 10 days. The federal IDEA law prevents this new school from imposing any more suspensions upon this child for the rest of the school year unless he actually shows up with a weapon again!

Let me emphasize that the vast majority of disabled students under the IDEA law—just like the vast majority of nondisabled students—are good kids who don't pose discipline problems in school. However, when it comes to something as serious as a student bringing a weapon to school or threatening to kill or harm someone with a weapon, school officials must have the ability to respond in the way they believe most appropriate to maintain a safe and stable school for all children.

When I hear these incidents from Missouri schools, I cannot help but think that there is something drastically wrong with our federal education laws. We have a mass tragedy waiting to happen if federal law keeps teachers from getting teenagers with weapons out of schools. We cannot afford to keep laws on the books that preclude schools from dealing with early warning signs of danger and handcuff them from taking swift action to prevent violence. We must give schools the power to keep our children safe by allowing them to remove all students who have weapons or threaten to use them.

Schools all over my state have told me that they need the authority to discipline all students in a fair and consistent manner—for the safety of their schools and for the benefit of disabled children. Here are some examples of what schools have told me:

Maynard Wallace, Superintendent of the Ava R-I School District, has written: ''The discipline code must be the same for all if public education is to survive.'' He says that treating children with handicaps differently than other children in the area of discipline ''not only undermines the entire discipline of the school but is a definite disservice to the handicapped child as well.''

Betty Chong, Assistant Superintendent for Special Services in the Cape Girardeau school district, writes: ''The educators are themselves advocates for children with disabilities. . . . Special educators directors and many principals were first teachers who were dedicated (and still are) to the education of students with disabilities.'' She goes on to say: ''Students with disabilities are held to the same standards as students without disabilities when they are adults. When do they learn how to be law abiding citizens?''

Lyle Laughman, the superintendent of the Lincoln County R-IV school district has written: ''It is in the total best interest of the child and society for that [discipline] determination to be made on the local, individual case level rather than the Federal law which greatly restricts what a school can do in an individual set of circumstances.''

Dale Walkup, Board of Education President of the Blue Springs School District gave me a copy of a letter he sent to President Clinton which says, ''The reauthorization of IDEA has not supported impartial and appropriate consequences for those students who choose drugs and are violent or dangerous to others. We hope the IDEA regulations become more reasonable, appropriate, and considerate of the needs of our total student population.''

In response to both the incidents and recommendations that I have heard from schools, I am introducing the School Safety Act, which will allow schools to remove from the classroom any student who has a weapon or threatens to use a weapon at school. This legislation, which has been endorsed by the Missouri School Boards Association, will repeal the federal law that handcuffs schools from taking measures they believe appropriate to maintain a safe and secure learning environment for students and teachers.

A safe and secure setting is vital to success in the classroom. Any student who has a weapon at school, or who threatens to kill or harm someone with a weapon, should be removed from the classroom immediately. Whether a student is ''disabled'' under federal law should not prevent school administrators from dealing appropriately with weapons in school. We can no longer afford to keep a federal law that threatens the safety of the classroom. We can no longer afford to tolerate federal policy that invites a mass tragedy. Under the School Safety Act, schools will be empowered with the flexibility and authority they need to remove any dangerous and violent student from the classroom when weapons are involved.

This is not the first time I have introduced school safety legislation since I have been in the Senate. I have already worked to make improvements in the federal law to create a safer learning environment for students and teachers.

I began working on this issue in 1995, after a young woman was found dead in the restroom of a North St. Louis County high school. The male special education student convicted of murdering the woman had a history of dangerous behavior, but his discipline record hadn't been disclosed to his new school. In response to this situation, I sought for ways to give schools the crucial information they need to maintain a secure school environment. I authored legislation signed into law in June 1997 providing for the transfer of discipline records when students with dangerous behavior change schools.

In the recent ''ed-flex'' bill signed into law on April 29, 1999, I secured a provision that closes a loophole in federal law concerning weapons possession in school. Missouri school board officials had alerted me to a federal provision that allows a school to discipline a student only for carrying a weapon onto school grounds, but not for possessing a weapon at school. In response to this concern, I had the law amended to ensure that school officials can remove a student from the classroom whether he possesses—or carries—a weapon at school.

The legislation I am offering today builds upon this previous safe schools legislation by giving schools authority to remove any student from the classroom if he or she brings a weapon to school or threatens to kill or harm someone with a weapon.

Mr. President, a little over a year ago, the Senator from Washington, Senator GORTON, read from an editorial in the Seattle Post Intelligencer that recounted the story of a disabled student who attacked other students with a knife on a school bus. The editorial pointed out the disparities caused by the federal IDEA laws. It said: ''If the school district really is required by law to allow students back into class who carry weapons or otherwise have demonstrated intent to harm others, that law is in error and must be changed.''

I could not agree more with this editorial. It is time to change this erroneous law, which jeopardizes students and teachers by forcing school officials to ignore early warning signs of disaster. Maintaining a safe learning environment requires that local school officials have the authority and flexibility to discipline all students in an equitable and effective manner, especially when it comes to weapons. Let's unshackle our teachers, principals, superintendents, and school boards from a law that prevents them from keeping our children safe and secure. Let's give them the power to stop a tragedy before it happens.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 969

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''School Safety Act of 1999''.

SEC. 2. AMENDMENTS TO THE INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES EDUCATION ACT.

(a) PLACEMENT IN ALTERNATIVE EDUCATIONAL SETTING.—Section 615(k) of the Individual with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1415(k)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A)(ii), by striking ''45 days if—'' and all that follows through ''(II) the child'' and inserting ''45 days if the child'';

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking ''A hearing'' and inserting ''Except as provided in paragraph (10), a hearing'';

(3) by redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (11);

(4) by inserting after paragraph (9) the following new section:

''(10) EXPULSION OR SUSPENSION WITH RESPECT TO WEAPONS.—

''(A) AUTHORITY OF SCHOOL PERSONNEL WITH RESPECT TO WEAPONS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, school personnel may suspend or expel a child with a disability who—

''(i) carries or possesses a weapon to or at a school, on school premises, or to or at a school function under the jurisdiction of a State or a local educational agency; or

''(ii) threatens to carry, possess, or use a weapon to or at a school, on school premises, or to or at a school function under the jurisdiction of a State or a local educational agency; in the same manner in which such personnel would suspend or expel a child without a disability.

''(B) DEFINITIONS.—For the purposes of this paragraph:

''(i) WEAPON.—The term 'weapon' has the meaning given the term under applicable State law.

''(ii) THREATENS TO CARRY, POSSESS, OR USE A WEAPON.—The term 'threatens to carry, possess, or use a weapon' includes behavior in which a child verbally threatens to kill another person.

''(C) FREE APPROPRIATE PUBLIC EDUCATION.—

''(i) CEASING TO PROVIDE EDUCATION.—A child expelled or suspended under subparagraph (A) shall not be entitled to continued educational services, including, but not limited to a free appropriate public education, under this Act, during the term of such expulsion or suspension, if the State in which the local educational agency responsible for providing educational services to such child does not require a child without a disability to receive educational services after being suspended or expelled.

''(ii) PROVIDING EDUCATION.—Notwithstanding clause (i), the local educational agency responsible for providing educational services to a child with a disability who is expelled or suspended under subparagraph (A) may choose to continue to provide educational services to such child. If the local educational agency so chooses, then—

(I) nothing in this Act shall require the local educational agency to provide such child with a free appropriate public education, or any particular level of service; and

(II) the site where the local educational agency provides the services shall be left to the discretion of the local educational agency.

(5) in paragraph (11) (as redesignated in paragraph (3)), by striking subparagraph (D).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 612(a)(1)(A) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1412(a)(1)(A)) is amended by inserting before the period ''(except as provided in section 615(k)(10))''.

(2) Section 615(f)(1) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1415(f)(1)) is amended by inserting at the beginning of the first sentence ''Except as provided in section 615(k)(10),''.

SEC. 3. AMENDMENT TO THE GUN-FREE SCHOOLS ACT OF 1994.

Subsection (c) of section 14601 of the Gun-Free Schools Act of 1994 (20 U.S.C. 8921) is amended to read as follows:

''(c) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, this section shall be subject to section 615(k)(10) of the Individual with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1415(k)(10)).''.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 42

At the request of Mr. HELMS, the name of the Senator from Ohio (Mr. DEWINE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 42, a bill to amend title X of the Public Health Service Act to permit family planning projects to offer adoption services.

S. 196

At the request of Mrs. BOXER, the name of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 196, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to waive in the case of multiemployer plans the section 415 limit on benefits to the participant's average compensation for his high 3 years.

S. 206

At the request of Mr. MOYNIHAN, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 206, a bill to amend title XXI of the Social Security Act to provide for improved data collection and evaluations of State Children's Health Insurance Programs, and for other purposes.

S. 285

At the request of Mr. MCCAIN, the name of the Senator from Montana (Mr. BURNS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 285, a bill to amend title II of the Social Security Act to restore the link between the maximum amount of earnings by blind individuals permitted without demonstrating ability to engage in substantial gainful activity and the exempt amount permitted in determining excess earnings under the earnings test.

S. 343

At the request of Mr. BOND, the name of the Senator from Michigan (Mr. ABRAHAM) was added as a cosponsor of S. 343, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a deduction for 100 percent of the health insurance costs of self-employed individuals.

S. 345

At the request of Mr. ALLARD, the name of the Senator from New York (Mr. SCHUMER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 345, a bill to amend the Animal Welfare Act to remove the limitation that permits interstate movement of live birds, for the purpose of fighting, to States in which animal fighting is lawful.

S. 398

At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 398, a bill to require the Secretary of the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of Native American history and culture.

S. 487

At the request of Mr. GRAMS, the name of the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. HAGEL) was added as a cosponsor of S. 487, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide additional retirement savings opportunities for small employers, including self-employed individuals.

S. 512

At the request of Mr. GORTON, the names of the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. LOTT), the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. T4Cochran), the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN), the Senator from Maine (Ms. SNOWE), and the Senator from Oregon (Mr. SMITH) were added as cosponsors of S. 512, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for the expansion, intensification, and coordination of the activities of the Department of Health and Human Services with respect to research on autism.

S. 514

At the request of Mr. COCHRAN, the names of the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. BRYAN), and the Senator from Arkansas (Mrs. LINCOLN) were added as cosponsors of S. 514, a bill to improve the National Writing Project.

S. 542

At the request of Mr. ABRAHAM, the name of the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT) was added as a cosponsor of S. 542, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand the deduction for computer donations to schools and allow a tax credit for donated computers.

S. 566

At the request of Mr. LUGAR, the name of the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. DASCHLE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 566, a bill to amend the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 to exempt agricultural commodities, livestock, and value-added products from unilateral economic sanctions, to prepare for future bilateral and multilateral trade negotiations affecting United States agriculture, and for other purposes.

S. 600

At the request of Mrs. MURRAY, her name was added as a cosponsor of S. 600, a bill to combat the crime of international trafficking and to protect the rights of victims.

S. 631

At the request of Mr. DEWINE, the name of the Senator from New York (Mr. SCHUMER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 631, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to eliminate the time limitation on benefits for immunosuppressive drugs under the medicare program, to provide continued entitlement for such drugs for certain individuals after medicare benefits end, and to extend certain medicare secondary payer requirements.

S. 659

At the request of Mr. LEAHY, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 659, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require pension plans to provide adequate notice to individuals whose future benefit accruals are being significantly reduced, and for other purposes.

S. 660

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from Montana (Mr. BURNS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 660, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for coverage under part B of the medicare program of medical nutrition therapy services furnished by registered dietitians and nutrition professionals.

S. 697

At the request of Mrs. BOXER, the name of the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. WELLSTONE) was added as a cosponsor of S. 697, a bill to ensure that a woman can designate an obstetrician or gynecologist as her primary care provider.

S. 752

At the request of Mr. MOYNIHAN, the name of the Senator from California

(Mrs. BOXER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 752, a bill to facilitate the recruitment of temporary employees to assist in the conduct of the 2000 decennial census of population, and for other purposes.

S. 757

At the request of Mr. LUGAR, the name of the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 757, a bill to provide a framework for consideration by the legislative and executive branches of unilateral economic sanctions in order to ensure coordination of United States policy with respect to trade, security, and human rights.

S. 805

At the request of Mr. DURBIN, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 805, a bill to amend title V of the Social Security Act to provide for the establishment and operation of asthma treatment services for children, and for other purposes.

S. 864

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the names of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. FITZGERALD), the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. TORRICELLI), the Senator from California (Mrs. BOXER), and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. CONRAD) were added as cosponsors of S. 864, a bill to designate April 22 as Earth Day.

S. 890

At the request of Mr. WELLSTONE, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) was added as a cosponsor of S. 890, a bill to facilitate the naturalization of aliens who served with special guerrilla units or irregular forces in Laos.

S. 897

At the request of Mr. HAGEL, the name of the Senator from Montana (Mr. BURNS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 897, a bill to provide matching grants for the construction, renovation and repair of school facilities in areas affected by Federal activities, and for other purposes.

S. 901

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. ROCKEFELLER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 901, a bill to provide disadvantaged children with access to dental services.

S. 931

At the request of Mr. MCCONNELL, the name of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. TORRICELLI) was added as a cosponsor of S. 931, a bill to provide for the protection of the flag of the United States, and for other purposes.

S. 956

At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the name of the Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 956, a bill to establish programs regarding early detection, diagnosis, and interventions for newborns and infants with hearing loss.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION 21

At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the names of the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. DORGAN), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAIG), the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), and the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE) were added as cosponsors of Senate Joint Resolution 21, a joint resolution to designate September 29, 1999, as ''Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States Day.''

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 9

At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the names of the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES), and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) were added as cosponsors of Senate Concurrent Resolution 9, a concurrent resolution calling for a United States effort to end restrictions on the freedoms and human rights of the enclaved people in the occupied area of Cyprus.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 11

At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the name of the Senator from Alaska (Mr. MURKOWSKI) was added as a cosponsor of Senate Concurrent Resolution 11, a concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress with respect to the fair and equitable implementation of the amendments made by the Food Quality Protection Act of 1996.

SENATE RESOLUTION 59

At the request of Mr. LAUTENBERG, the name of the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD) was added as a cosponsor of Senate Resolution 59, a bill designating both July 2, 1999, and July 2, 2000, as ''National Literacy Day.''

SENATE RESOLUTION 96—TO EXPRESS THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING A PEACEFUL PROCESS OF SELF-DETERMINATION IN EAST TIMOR, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. LEAHY (for himself, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. REED, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. MOYNIHAN, and Mr. KOHL) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. RES. 96

Whereas United Nations-sponsored negotiations between the Governments of Indonesia and Portugal have resulted in significant and encouraging progress toward a resolution of East Timor's political status;

Whereas on January 27, 1999, President Habibie expressed a willingness to consider independence for East Timor if a majority of the East Timorese reject autonomy in a planned August 8, 1999 ballot organized by the United Nations;

Whereas despite President Habibie's efforts to bring about a peaceful resolution of the political status of East Timor, the arming of anti-independence militias by some members of the Indonesian military has contributed to increased political tension and violence;

Whereas since January 1999, violence and human rights abuses by anti-independence militias has increased dramatically resulting in the displacement of thousands of East Timorese villagers and scores of deaths;

Whereas since March 1999, hundreds of civilians may have been killed, injured or disappeared in separate attacks by anti-independence militias;

Whereas there are also reports of killings of anti-independence militia members;

Whereas the killings in East Timor should be fully investigated and the individuals responsible brought to justice;

Whereas access to East Timor by international human rights monitors, humanitarian organizations is severely limited, and members of the press have been threatened;

Whereas a stable and secure environment in East Timor is necessary for a free and fair ballot on East Timor's political status;

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the United States should promptly contribute to the United Nations Trust Fund which will provide support for the East Timor ballot process;

(2) the President, Secretary of State and Secretary of Defense should intensify their efforts to urge the Indonesian Government and military to—

(a) disarm and disband anti-independence militias; and

(b) grant full access to East Timor by international human rights monitors, humanitarian organizations, and the press;

(3) the President, after consultation with the United Nations Secretary General, should report to the Congress not later than 15 days after passage of this Resolution, on steps taken by the Indonesian government and military to ensure a stable and secure environment in East Timor, including those steps described in subparagraphs (2) (a and b); and

(4) any agreement for the sale, transfer, or licensing of any military equipment for Indonesia entered into by the United States should state that the equipment will not be used in East Timor.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, today I am submitting a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate regarding a peaceful process of self-determination in East Timor. I am joined by Senators FEINGOLD, REED, HARKIN, MCCONNELL, MOYNIHAN, and KOHL.

A year ago I doubt anyone would have predicted that a settlement of East Timor's political status would be in sight.

While there are many obstacles and dangers ahead, we should take note of what has been accomplished. In the past year:

President Suharto relinqushed power.

The Indonesian Government endorsed a ballot on autonomy, which is planned for August 8th.

The United Nations, Indonesia, and Portugal are to sign an agreement today on the procedures for that vote.

If the East Timorese people reject autonomy, there is every expectation that East Timor will be on the road to independence.

The resolution that I am submitting today recognizes the positive steps that have been taken.

But it also expresses our deep concern that since January, when Indonesian President Habibie expressed the willingness to consider independence for East Timor, violence and intimidation by anti-independence militias backed by members of the Indonesian military has increased dramatically.

The perpetrators of the violence want to sabotage the vote on East Timor's future.

I spoke with one East Timorese man today, Mr. Franciso Da Costa, who witnessed the April 6th massacre of scores of people in the village of Liquica.

An Op Ed article in today's New York Times by East Timorese lawyer Aniceto guterres Lopez says it all. He wrote: ''With arms, money and a license for reckless rampages, the militia leaders have openly threatened death to anyone opposed to continued Indonesian occupation.''

I received a report earlier today that Mr. Lopez' house is surrounded and he has been threatened with death. Bishop Belo, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize and one of the most courageous people I have ever had the privilege to meet, has also been threatened.

Hundreds of East Timorese civilians have been killed, injured or disappeared. Thousands have fled their homes to escape the violence, and are struggling to survive. Food and medicines are in short supply because the Indonesian Government has severely restricted access.

This resolution sounds an alarm. The situation is extremely fragile. The militias are sowing chaos and terror. Far stronger steps are needed by the Indonesian Government and military to rein in the paramilitary groups.

The resolution calls on the President and Secretary of State to intensify their efforts to urge the Indonesian Government and military to disarm the paramilitary groups. This must be done.

Another recommendation we make is that the United States contribute to the U.N. Trust Fund which will set up polling booths and put people on the ground to monitor the vote. I plan to work with Senator MCCONNELL, who is a cosponsor of this resolution and Chairman of the Foreign Operations Subcommittee, to obtain the funding as soon as possible.

The resolution says that any agreement to sell or transfer military equipment to Indonesia should state that the equipment will not be used in East Timor. We would prefer that there be no military equipment. But at the very least, we do not want our equipment ending up in the hands of thugs who are trying to derail the vote.

We know from history how much blood can be shed in East Timor. Nobody—not the Indonesian Government, not the Indonesian military, and certainly not the East Timorese people, benefits from a return to those days.

Mr. President, this resolution should receive overwhelming bipartisan support. I ask unanimous consent that the New York Times Op Ed article by Mr. Lopez be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the item was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times, May 5, 1999]

EAST TIMOR'S BLOODIEST TRADITION

(By Aniceto Guterres Lopes)

Dili, East Timor—April 6, 1999. Another massacre. April 17. Another. Two more to add to an already lengthy list in East Timor. Since Indonesia invaded my homeland in 1975 and officially annexed it the following year, our history has seemed little more than a succession of massacres, one following the other in a depressingly predictable pattern.

Although the recent attacks have many precedents, they were committed when we were filled with unprecedented hope. Only four months ago, the Government of President B.J. Habibie offered us the chance to vote on whether to remain in Indonesia or become independent. Indonesia began working out the logistics of the vote with the United Nations and Portugal (the former colonial power still acknowledged under international law as the administering authority over East Timor). Today the Foreign Minister, Ali Alatas, is due to sign the final agreement on the vote at the United Nations.

The recent wave of violence here reveals that the Habibie Government is reneging on the promise of a peaceful resolution to East Timor's disputed political status. Although the Habibie Government denies it, the military, since last December, has organized its hardened East Timorese camp followers into militias. With arms, money and a license for reckless rampages, the dozen or so militia leaders have openly threatened death to anyone opposed to continued Indonesian occupation. Their spokesman, Basilio Araujo, told an Australian television crew, ''We will kill as many people as we want.''

The militia bosses boast that they are countering pro-independence guerrillas, but they have not fought a single battle with the guerrillas. They have only attacked unarmed civilians and created a refugee crisis. In sweeps through the countryside, the militias have threatened to kill the families of any male, young or old, who refuses to join their ranks. Many ''members'' of the militias are ordinary villagers, some of whom I know personally. They are forced recruits sullenly going through the motions and hoping to avoid being hurt and hurting others.

The human rights organization I direct has been trying to care for those who fled the villages to escape the militia threats. According to our figures, about 18,000 refugees are now sheltered in the towns. With little food, money and medicine, they are slowly succumbing to disease.

By unleashing the militias, the Indonesian Government's apparent strategy is to create the appearance of a civil war. Indonesia falsely claims to be an enlightened and neutral arbiter between a factious and primitive people not yet ready for independence.

As is clear to all observers, the militias have not been engaged in any pitched battles with pro-independence forces. They attacked, with axes and machetes, hundreds of helpless refugees sheltered in a church in Liquica on April 6. My staff has recorded the names of 57 dead, many of them women and children. Here in East Timor's capital, they attacked another group of about 150 refugees on April 17. Meanwhile, the pro-independence guerrillas, observing a cease-fire since December, refrained from responding to the militias' attacks on civilians until mid-April, as the Indonesian military spokesman in East Timor has admitted.

The militias have no other aim than to sow chaos and terror. Instead of allowing us to vote on whether to remain within Indonesia, the militia bosses are killing those who oppose them and vowing to wreck the United Nations-supervised vote scheduled for August. Bishop Carlos Ximenes Belo, who won the Novel Peace Prize in 1996, is on their hit list, as are Australian journalists, East Timorese students and human rights workers (myself included). The militia bosses are even threatening to attack United Nations officials who will come to administer the vote.

Sadly, President Habibie and his top military commander, Gen. Wiranto, have done nothing to stop the militias. Over the past five months, the gang leaders have, in public view, committed atrocities and issued death threats. Yet they move around with impunity. The much-publicized ''peace pact'' Gen. Wiranto arranged in Dili on April 21 was nothing more than a public relations stunt. The militias continue to attack unarmed civilians unilaterally.

For a free and fair vote to be held, Portugal and the United States will have to insist on a disarming of the militias and a substantial withdrawal of Indonesia's all-pervasive troops. The United States, holding considerable leverage over bankrupt Indonesia, should take strong action, like cutting off all military aid and training until a valid vote on independence is held in East Timor.

Every day my staff records more cases of torture, disappearances and killings. All East Timorese, except for a few deranged militia leaders, have experienced enough violence in their lives. We are desperate for a peaceful resolution. Yet the Indonesian military, by allowing these militias to be deployed, is drowning our hopes in blood.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr President, I rise today to join my distinguished colleague from Vermont [Senator LEAHY] to offer this resolution to encourage a peaceful process of self-determination in East Timor. We are introducing this resolution because of serious obstacles that have appeared en route to a ballot to determine the future status of East Timor.

Earlier this year it appeared that there was finally some progress in East Timor. President Habibie announced on January 27 that the government of Indonesia was finally willing to seek to learn and respect the wishes of the people in that territory. There appears to be an agreement between the governments of Indonesia and Portugal to hold a vote, currently scheduled for August 8, to determine East Timor's future political status. This latter accord is expected to be finalized today at the United Nations.

Despite this positive development, excitement and tension over the possibility of gaining independence have in recent months led to an incredible level of violence and intimidation. The situation on the ground continues to worsen as East Timor has been wracked by violence throughout the last several weeks. Militias, comprised of individuals determined to intimidate the East Timorese people into support for continued integration with Indonesia and widely believed to be supported by the Indonesian military, are responsible for a sharp increase in violence.

Let me recount some of the horror stories I have heard coming out of East Timor in the last few weeks. To cite just a few examples, pro-government militias, backed by Indonesian troops, reportedly shot and killed 17 supporters of independence on April 5. Shortly thereafter, pro-independence groups reported clashes, arrests and deaths, as well as civilians fleeing violence in six cities. One of those cities was Liquica where at least 25 people were brutally murdered by pro-government militias when up to 2000 civilians sought shelter in the local Catholic church. Later, on April 17, hundreds of East Timorese fled the capital of Dili as knife-wielding militias attacked anyone suspected of supporting independence. At least 30 were killed in this incident as Indonesian troops made little effort to stop the violence. The perpetrators have not all been on the government side. Over the years there have been atrocities on the pro-independence side as well. In recent months, however, the overwhelming majority of the violence has come from army elements and militias under their effective control. Overall, hundreds of civilians have been killed, wounded or disappeared in separate militia attacks.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, there is no sign that the tension will ease between now and the August ballot. Pro-integration militia leaders announced on April 29 that they reject the concept of the upcoming ballot, or anything that could be considered a referendum. They have further stated that if a ballot leads to independence, they are prepared to fight a guerrilla war for decades if necessary to defend Indonesian rule of the territory. Independent observers fear that neither side will accept a loss in the August 8 ballot, thus setting the stage for a prolonged conflict in East Timor. This type of rhetoric does not reassure us about the prospects for a successful transition for the people of East Timor, regardless of which form of government they choose. The climate in East Timor today, sadly, may have become too violent for a legitimate poll to take place. Worse yet, the agreement on the ballot process that we hope will be announced today in New York will be rendered meaningless if people will fear for their lives if they dare to participate in the process.

The government of Indonesia must shoulder particular responsibility. Whether Indonesian troops have actually participated in these types of incidents or not, the authorities certainly must accept the blame for allowing, and in some cases, encouraging the bloody tactics of the pro-integration militias. As a long time observer of the situation there, I see the continuation of this violence as a threat to the very sanctity and legitimacy of the process that is underway. It is for this reason that Senator LEAHY and I have submitted our resolution to encourage the government in Jakarta to do all it can to seek a peaceful process and a fair resolution to the situation in East Timor.

Mr President, I believe the United States has a responsibility, an obligation, to put as much pressure as possible on the Indonesian government to help encourage an environment conducive to a free, fair, peaceful ballot process for the people of East Timor. Administration officials are saying the right things, but perhaps have not fully used the leverage we have at our disposal to make things happen. If we are ever going to resolve this issue, now is the time for us, the whole U.S. government, to act decisively.

In order to further bring pressure on the government of Indonesia to ensure the conditions necessary for the ballot on a settlement for East Timor, the Leahy/Feingold resolution would link the transfer of defense articles and services to effective measures by the Indonesian government and military to ensure a stable environment in East Timor.

Though non-binding, it is strongly worded. Specifically, our resolution recognizes progress in negotiations on a settlement proposal for East Timor, and the Indonesian government's apparent willingness to seek a peaceful resolution to the status of East Timor, but highlights the resultant increase in violence and human rights abuses by anti-independence militias and urges the Habibie government to curtail Indonesian military support to the militias. Nevertheless, despite that progress and the prospect of today's finalization of ballot procedures, access to East Timor by international monitors remains restricted, threatening the very environment needed to conduct a free and fair ballot

Most importantly, our resolution makes positive recommendations about what the United States can do to create an environment conducive to a free election. It states that it is the Sense of the Senate that we should urge the U.S. government to contribute to the United Nations Trust Fund to provide support for the East Timor ballot process. It also encourages the Administration to urge the Indonesian government to disarm the militias and grant full access to East Timor by international monitors.

Mr. President, it is not in our power to guarantee the free, fair exercise of the rights of the people of East Timor to determine their future. It is, however, in our interest to do all that we can to work with the United Nations, other concerned countries, the government of Indonesia and the people of East Timor to create an opportunity for a successful ballot process. We cannot forget that the Timorese have been living with violence and oppression for more than 23 years. These many years have not dulled the desire of the East Timorese for freedom, or quieted their demands to have a role in the determination of East Timor's status. We have to do all we can to support an environment that can produce a fair ballot in East Timor. Now. And throughout the rest of this process.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of a May 3, 1999, editorial from the Wall Street Journal be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Wall Street Journal, May 3, 1999]

EAST TIMOR'S POISONED CHOICE

For more than two decades, the world has recoiled in horror at periodic reports of atrocities by Indonesian troops in East Timor, the former Portuguese colony that Jakarta invaded in 1975 and then annexed amid great protest in 1976. Despite the outrage, sympathy with the plight of East Timorese and the repressed desire of many for independence didn't stop foreigners from doing business with Jakarta over the years. In fact, East Timor largely appeared on the world's radar screen only during peaks of suffering there—as in 1991 after Indonesian troops fired on a funeral procession and killed an estimated 180 people in the capital of Dili.

Even so, when President B.J. Habibie announced in January that East Timor could choose between autonomy or independence, a great cheer of moral satisfaction went up around the globe. After all these years and all that struggle, liberation was at hand! Even in recent weeks, as local antiseparation militiamen with ties to the Indonesian army went on killing sprees in East Timor, the independence juggernaut churned on. Representatives from Portugal and Indonesia recently agreed to sign a U.N.-sponsored proposal that could bring a vote to East Timor by this summer and an end to Indonesian rule by 2000.

The fact that President Habibie didn't actually sign, but requested a delay until early next month, has led to speculation that he may be getting cold feet about a proposal that Indonesia's powerful military does not support. As ominous as that sounds for all who thought the end was in sight, what strikes independence enthusiasts as sad may not be entirely bad. Even before the emergence of East Timorese anti-independence militas added to an already volatile mixture featuring armed separatists, there was evidence that the ordinary people of East Timor might be getting a raw deal on a silver platter. Though the entire exercise, vote and all, is supposed to be about self-determination, in some ways it appears that they are being thrown to the wolves—and not only by Indonesia.

Consider the reckless manner in which Mr. Habibie acknowledged that the cost of maintaining a grip on the turbulent province was too high for Indonesia. Former colonial power Portugal departed from many of its possessions in a fit of spiteful destruction, smashing infrastructure and leaving arms in the hands of the baddest locals it could find.

Similarly, Mr. Habibie offered East Timor what was in effect a poisoned choice of immediate autonomy or immediate independence. That frightened even separatists among the Timorese, some of whom have been pleading for a more gradual process that would enable the province to better prepare for an orderly transition and successful independence.

But such is the rush to complete the voting process that East Timorese expressions of concern about timing have been largely brushed aside by outsiders who claim to be on their side. Such concerns have been unheard, or dismissed as impossible to address given Mr. Habibie's all-or-nothing adamancy. Better to take what you can get, and take it now, the rest of the world has been telling the Timorese. It's a shame it has to be so hurried, and now so bloody, but these things do happen.

If outsiders are not willing to protect East Timorese from the violent consequences of the process now under way, they should stop cheering so hard for the process. Having come so far, nobody likes to think of delay, not least because that would be seen as a victory for the dark forces within the Indonesian military and elsewhere. But standing idly by while the people of East Timor are propelled into a situation that is not simply risky but more or less expected to bring death and destruction will be a crime in itself.

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, having just returned from Cambodia, Indonesia, Australia and New Zealand, I was impressed by how deeply concerned regional leaders were over the status and conditions in East Timor.

Although the first really democratic elections to be held in Indonesia are coming up in June, the U.N. autonomy agreement, which should be announced today, was the focus of most of my discussions. While I was in the region, there was yet another explosive round of violence which left 17 dead. There is absolutely no question that most of these attacks are being carried out by militias which enjoy military support from the Indonesian armed forces.

I do not believe these militias are directly commanded by Indonesian officers. However, I do think these militias are both encouraged and equipped by individuals in the military who oppose autonomy or independence for East Timor. There clearly are officers with a vested interest in controlling the ports and trade through Timor. These individuals have put self interest above their nation's interest.

While in Jakarta I raised these specific concerns directly with General Wiranto. I believe he recognizes that these events damage Indonesia's stability and stature. I hope he will pursue a more aggressive course in the days to come to assure this spiral of violence ends.

In the meantime, I think we should make clear we will not allow US equipment to be used to further the violence in East Timor. I also believe it is essential to deploy civilian poll watchers and police to restore calm and credibility to the election process. To accomplish this goal in a timely and effective manner, I have initiated discussions with key congressional members to add funds to the supplemental bill to support a peacekeeping presence in East Timor. I understand that the UN estimates an election team supported by civilian police observers may cost as much as $50 million. I fully expect our regional partners and Portugal to assume a leadership role in meeting these needs, but we have key interests in promoting Indonesian stability and security. I would hope we can commit roughly $10 million to this endeavor. I am convinced that our support for an international monitoring initiative administered through the United Nations Trust Fund will help ease this crisis and offer the citizens of East Timor a real opportunity for reconciliation, peace and democracy.

SENATE RESOLUTION 97—DESIGNATING THE WEEK OF MAY 2 THROUGH 8, 1999, AS THE 14TH ANNUAL TEACHER APPRECIATION WEEK, AND DESIGNATING TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1999, AS NATIONAL TEACHER DAY

Mr. COVERDELL (for himself, Mr. FRIST, Mr. GORTON, Mr. LOTT, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. MACK, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. HATCH, Mr. LUGAR, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. GRAMS, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. KENNEDY, and Mr. WELLSTONE) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 97

Whereas the foundation of American freedom and democracy is a strong, effective system of education where every child has the opportunity to learn in a safe and nurturing environment;

Whereas a first rate education system depends on a partnership between parents, principals, teachers, and children;

Whereas much of the success of our Nation during the 20th Century (the American Century) is the result of the hard work and dedication of teachers across the Nation;

Whereas in addition to a child's family, knowledgeable and skillful teachers can have a profound impact on the child's early development and future success;

Whereas many people spend their lives building careers, teachers spend their careers building lives;

Whereas our Nation's teachers serve our Nation's children beyond the call of duty as coaches, mentors, and advisers without regard to fame or fortune; and

Whereas across our Nation nearly 3,000,000 men and women experience the joys of teaching young minds the virtues of reading, writing, and arithmetic: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates the week of May 2 through 8, 1999, as the ''14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week'';

(2) designates Tuesday, May 4, 1999, as ''National Teacher Day''; and

(3) calls upon the people of the United States to take a moment out of their busy lives to say thanks and pay tribute to our Nation's teachers.

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

FINANCIAL SERVICES MODERNIZATION ACT OF 1999

BRYAN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 303

Mr. BRYAN (for himself, Mr. DODD, and Mr. KERRY ) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 900) to enhance competition in the financial services industry by providing a prudential framework for the affiliation of banks, securities firms, insurance companies, and other financial service providers, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 14, strike lines 8 and 9 and insert the following: ''are well managed;

''(C) all of the insured depository institution subsidiaries of the bank holding company have achieved a rating of 'satisfactory record of meeting community credit needs', or better, at the most recent examination of each such institution under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977; and

''(D) the bank holding company has filed).

On page 14, line 20, strike ''and (B)'' and insert '', (B), and (C)''.

On page 18, between lines 4 and 5, insert the following:

''(5) LIMITATION.—A bank holding company shall not be required to divest any company held, or terminate any activity conducted pursuant to, subsection (k) solely because of a failure to comply with subsection (l)(1)(C).

On page 66, strike lines 7 and 8 and insert the following: ''bank is well capitalized and well managed;

''(E) each insured depository institution affiliate of the national bank has achieved a rating of 'satisfactory record of meeting community credit needs', or better, at the most recent examination of each such institution under the Community Reinvestment Act of 1977; and

''(F) the national bank has received the''.

On page 66, line 12, strike ''subparagraph (D)'' and insert ''subparagraphs (D) and (E)''.

On page 66, line 16, insert before the period '', except that the Comptroller may not require a national bank to divest control of or otherwise terminate affiliation with a financial subsidiary based on noncompliance with paragraph (1)(E)''.

On page 96, strike line 23 and all that follows through page 98, line 4.

On page 104, strike line 20 and all that follows through page 105, line 14.

Redesignate sections 304 through 307 and sections 309 through 311 as sections 303 through 309, respectively.

Amend the table of contents accordingly.

REID AMENDMENT NO. 304

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. REID submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 900), supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . FEDERAL RESERVE AUDITS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 221 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 11A the following:

''SEC. 11B. ANNUAL INDEPENDENT AUDITS OF FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS.

''(a) AUDIT REQUIRED.—Each Federal reserve bank shall annually obtain an audit of the financial statements of each Federal reserve bank (which shall have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) using generally accepted auditing standards from an independent auditor that meets the requirements of subsection (b).

''(b) AUDITOR'S QUALIFICATIONS.—The independent auditor referred to in subsection (a) shall—

''(1) be a certified public accountant who is independent of the Federal Reserve System; and

''(2) meet any other qualifications that the Board may establish.

''(c) CERTIFICATION REQUIRED.—In each audit required under subsection (a), the auditor shall certify to the Federal reserve bank and to the Board that the auditor—

''(1) is a certified public accountant and is independent of the Federal Reserve System; and

''(2) conducted the audit using generally accepted auditing standards.

''(d) CERTIFICATION BY FEDERAL RESERVE BANK.—Not later than 30 days after the completion of each audit required under subsection (a), the Federal reserve bank shall provide to the Comptroller General of the United States—

''(1) a certification that—

''(A) the Federal reserve bank has obtained the audit required under subsection (a);

''(B) the Federal reserve bank has received the certifications of the auditor required under subsection (c); and

''(C) the audit fully complies with subsection (a).

''(e) DETECTION OF ILLEGAL ACTS.—

''(1) AUDIT PROCEDURES.—Each audit required by this section shall include procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material effect on the determination of financial statement amounts.

''(2) REPORTING POSSIBLE ILLEGALITIES.—If, in the course of conducting an audit required by this section, the independent auditor detects or otherwise becomes aware of information indicating that an illegal act (whether or not perceived to have an effect on the financial statements of the Federal reserve bank) has or may have occurred, the auditor—

''(A) shall determine whether it is likely that the illegal act has occurred; and

''(B) shall, if the auditor determines that the illegal act is likely to have occurred—

''(i) determine and consider the possible effect of the illegal act on the financial statements of the Federal reserve bank; and

''(ii) as soon as practicable, inform the Board that the illegal act is likely to have occurred.

''(3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The independent auditor under this section shall, as soon as practicable, directly report its conclusions to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives with regard to any possible illegal act that has been detected or has otherwise come to the attention of the auditor during the course of the audit required by this section, if, after determining that the Board is adequately informed with respect to such possible illegal act, the auditor concludes that—

''(A) the possible illegal act has a direct and material effect on the financial statements of the Federal reserve bank;

''(B) The Board has not taken timely and appropriate remedial actions with respect to the possible illegal act; and

''(C) the failure to take remedial action is reasonably expected to warrant departure from a standard report of the auditor when made, or warrant resignation from the audit engagement.

''(4) RESIGNATION OF AUDITOR.—If an independent auditor resigns from its engagement to audit a Federal reserve bank under paragraph (3), the auditor shall furnish to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, not later than 1 business day after such resignation, a copy of the report of the auditor (or documentation of any oral report given).

''(f) RECORDKEEPING.—To facilitate compliance with this section, each Federal reserve bank shall—

''(1) ensure that the books, records, and accounts of the Federal reserve bank are maintained and kept in sufficient detail to accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and dispositions of the assets of the bank;

''(2) devise and maintain a system of internal controls sufficient to provide reasonable assurance that transactions are recorded as necessary to permit preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and to maintain accountability for assets;

''(3) ensure that access to assets of the Federal reserve bank is permitted only in accordance with the general or specific authorization of the Board; and

''(4) ensure that—

''(A) the recorded accountability for assets is compared with the existing assets at reasonable intervals; and

''(B) appropriate action is taken with respect to any differences.

''(g) REPORTS TO BOARD, CONGRESS.—Not later than April 30 of each year, each Federal reserve bank shall submit a copy of each audit conducted under this section to the Board, and to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.

''SEC. 11C. INDEPENDENT AUDITS OF FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM AND FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD.

''(a) AUDIT OF RESERVE SYSTEM.—The Board shall annually obtain an audit of the consolidated financial statements of the Federal Reserve System (which shall have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) from an independent auditor, using generally accepted auditing standards, based on reports of audits of Federal reserve banks submitted to the Board under section 11B(g) and the audit of the Board under subsection (b) of this section.

''(b) AUDIT OF BOARD.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board shall annually obtain an audit of the financial statements of the Board (which shall have been prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles) from an independent auditor, using generally accepted auditing standards.

''(2) PRICED SERVICES AUDIT.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—As part of each audit of the Board required by this subsection, the auditor shall—

''(i) audit the calculation of the private sector adjustment factor established by the Board by regulation pursuant to section 11A(c)(3) for the year that is the subject of the audit; and

''(ii) audit the pro forma balance sheet and income statement for the services described in section 11A(b), including the determination of revenue, expenses, and income before income taxes for each service listed in that section (in accordance with the criteria specified in section 11A(c)(3)).

''(B) REPORT TO THE BOARD.—The auditor shall report the results of the audit under subparagraph (A)(ii) to the Board in written form.

''(3) LIMITATION.—The evaluations and audits required by this subsection shall not include deliberations, decisions, or actions on monetary policy matters, including discount authority under section 13, reserves of national banks, securities credit, interest on deposits, and open market operations.

''(c) AUDITOR'S QUALIFICATIONS.—An independent auditor referred to in this section shall—

''(1) be a certified public accountant and be independent of the Federal Reserve System; and

''(2) meet any other qualifications that the Board may establish.

''(d) CERTIFICAITON REQUIRED.—In each audit required under this section, the auditor shall certify to the Board that the auditor—

''(1) is a certified public accountant and is independent of the Federal Reserve System; and

''(2) conducted the audit using generally accepted auditing standards.

''(e) DETECTION OF ILLEGAL ACTS.—

''(1) AUDIT PROCEDURES.—Each audit required by this section shall include procedures designed to provide reasonable assurance of detecting illegal acts that would have a direct and material affect on the determination of financial statement amounts.

''(2) REPORTING POSSIBLE ILLEGALITIES.—If, in the course of conducting an audit of the Federal Reserve System or the Board as required by this section, the independent auditor detects or otherwise becomes aware of information indicating that an illegal act (whether or not perceived to have an effect on the financial statements of the Federal reserve bank) has or may have occurred, the auditor—

''(A) shall determine whether it is likely that the illegal act has occurred; and

''(B) shall, if the auditor determines that the illegal act is likely to have occurred—

''(i) determine and consider the possible effect of the illegal act on the financial statements of the Federal Reserve System or the Board, as applicable; and

''(ii) as soon as practicable, inform the Board that the illegal act is likely to have occurred.

''(3) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—An independent auditor under this section shall directly report, as soon as practicable, its conclusions to the Committee on Government Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, with regard to any possible illegal act that has been detected or has otherwise come to the attention of the auditor during the course of an audit of the Federal Reserve System or the Board required by this section, if, after determining that the Board is adequately informed with respect to such possible illegal act, the auditor concludes that—

''(A) the possible illegal act has a direct and material effect on the financial statements of the Federal Reserve System or the Board, as applicable;

''(B) the Board has not taken timely and appropriate remedial actions with respect to the possible illegal act; and

''(C) the failure to take remedial action is reasonably expected to warrant departure from a standard report of the auditor when made, or warrant resignation from the audits engagement.

''(4) RESIGNATION OF AUDITOR.—If an independent auditor resigns from its engagement to audit the Federal Reserve System or the Board under paragraph (3), the auditor shall furnish to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives, not later than 1 business day after such resignation, a copy of the report of the auditor (or documentation of any oral report given).

''(f) RECORDKEEPING.—To facilitate compliance with this section, the Board shall—

''(1) ensure that the books, records, and accounts of the Board are maintained and kept in sufficient detail to accurately and fairly reflect the transactions and dispositions of assets;

''(2) devise and maintain a system of internal controls sufficient to provide reasonable assurance that transactions are recorded as necessary to permit preparation of financial statements in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles and to maintain accountability for assets;

''(3) ensure that access to assets of the Board is permitted only in accordance with general or specific authorization of the Board; and

''(4) ensure that—

''(A) the recorded accountability for assets is compared with the existing assets at reasonable intervals; and

''(B) appropriate action is taken with respect of any differences.

''(g) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Not later than May 31 of each year, the Board shall make available all audits and reports required by this section to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives.''.

''(b) FEDERAL RESERVE REQUIREMENTS.—

''(1) CLARIFICATION OF FEE SCHEDULE REQUIREMENTS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 11A(b) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248a(b)) is amended—

''(i) by redesignating paragraphs (7) and (8) as paragraphs (8) and (9), respectively; and

''(ii) by inserting after paragraph (6) the following:

''(7) transportation of paper checks in the clearing process;''.

(B) PUBLICATION OF REVISED SCHEDULE.—Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System shall publish a revision of the schedule of fees required under section 11A of the Federal Reserve Act that reflects the changes made in the schedule in accordance with the amendments made by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph.

(2) CLARIFICATION OF APPLICABLE PRICING CRITERIA.—Section 11A(c) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 248a(c)) is amended by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

''(3)(A) In each fiscal year, fees shall be established for each service provided by the Federal reserve banks on the basis of all direct and indirect costs actually incurred (excluding the effect of any pension cost credit) in providing each of the services, including interest on items credited prior to actual collection, overhead, and an allocation of imputed costs, which takes into account the taxes that would have been paid and the return on capital that would have been provided had the services been provided by a private business firm.

''(B) The pricing principles referred to in subparagraph (A) shall be carried out with due regard to competitive factors and the provision of an adequate level of such services nationwide.

''(C)(i) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Financial Services Modernization Act of 1999, and not less frequently than once every 3 years thereafter, the Board shall conduct a comprehensive review of the methodology used to calculate the private sector adjustment factor pursuant to section 11A(c)(3), including a public notice and comment period.

''(ii) In conducting the review under clause (i), the Board shall publish in the Federal Register all elements of the methodology in use by the Board in the calculation of the private sector adjustment factor pursuant to section 11A(c)(3) provide notice and solicit public comment on the methodology, requesting commentators to identify areas of the methodology that are outdated, inappropriate, unnecessary, or that contribute to an inaccurate result in the calculation of the private sector adjustment factor.

''(iii) The Board shall—

''(I) publish in the Federal Register a summary of the comments received under this subparagraph, identifying significant issues raised; and

''(II) provide comment on such issues and make changes to the methodology to the extent that the Board considers to be appropriate.

''(iv) Not later than 30 days after the completion of each review under clause (i), the Board shall submit to Congress a report which shall include—

''(I) a summary of any significant issues raised by public comments relieved by the Board under this subparagraph and the relative merits of such issues; and

''(II) an analysis of whether the Board is able to address the concerns raised, or whether such concerns should be addressed by legislation.''.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE TREATMENT OF WOMEN AND GIRLS BY THE TALIBAN IN AFGHANISTAN

BOXER AMENDMENT NO. 305

Mr. GRAMM (for Mrs. BOXER) proposed an amendment to the resolution (S. Res. 68) expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the treatment of women and girls by the Taliban in Afghanistan; as follows:

On page 3, line 4, strike ''the'' and insert ''any''.

BOXER AMENDMENT NO. 306

Mr. GRAMM (for Mrs. BOXER) proposed an amendment to the preamble to the resolution, S. Res. 68, supra; as follows:

Amend the preamble to read as follows:

Whereas millions of women and girls living under Taliban rule Afghanistan are denied their basic human rights;

Whereas according to the Department of State and international human rights organizations, the Taliban continues to commit widespread and well-documented human rights abuses, in gross violation of internationally accepted norms;

Whereas, according to the United States Department of State Country Report on Human Rights Practices (hereafter ''1998 State Department Human Rights Report''), violence against women in Afghanistan occurs frequently, including beatings, rapes, forced marriages, disappearances, kidnapings, and killings;

Whereas women and girls under Taliban rule are generally barred from working, going to school, leaving their homes without an immediate male family member as chaperone, and visiting doctors, hospitals or clinics;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, gender restrictions by the Taliban continue to interfere with the delivery of humanitarian assistance to women and girls in Afghanistan;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women are forced to don a head-to-toe garment known as a burqa, which has only a mesh screen for vision, and many women found in public not wearing a burqa, or wearing a burqa that does not properly cover the ankles, are beaten by Taliban militiamen;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, some poor women under Taliban rule cannot afford the cost of a burqa and thus are forced to remain at home or risk beatings if they go outside the home without one;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, the lack of a burqa has resulted in the inability of some women under Taliban rule to get necessary medical care because they cannot leave home;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, women under Taliban rule reportedly have been beaten if their shoe heels click when they walk;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women in homes must not be visible from the street, and houses with female occupants must have their windows painted over;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women are not allowed to drive, and taxi drivers reportedly have been beaten if they take unescorted women as passengers;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, women under Taliban rule are forbidden to enter mosques or other places of worship; and

Whereas women and girls of all ages under Taliban rule have suffered needlessly and even died from curable illness because they have been turned away from health care facilities because of their gender: Now, therefore, be it

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, NUTRITION, AND FORESTRY

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, be allowed to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday May 5, 1999. The purpose of this meeting will be: (1) To consider the nomination of Thomas J. Erickson to be a Commissioner of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission; and (2) to discuss agricultural trade options.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet on Tuesday, May 4, 1999, at 10:00 a.m. in open session, to consider the nomination of Ms. Carolyn L. Huntoon to be Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE, SCIENCE, AND TRANSPORTATION

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation be allowed to meet on Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 9:30 a.m. on pending committee business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources be granted permission to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 5, for purposes of conducting a full committee hearing which is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. The purpose of this oversight hearing is to receive testimony on damage to the national security from Chinese espionage at DOE nuclear weapons laboratories.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON ENVIRONMENT AND PUBLIC WORKS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the full Committee on Environment and Public Works be granted permission to conduct a hearing to receive testimony from Timothy Fields, Jr., nominated by the President to be Assistant Administrator, Office of Solid Waste and Emergency Response of the Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday, May 5, 9:00 a.m., Hearing Room (SD–406).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, The finance Committee requests unanimous consent to conduct a hearing on Wednesday, May 5, 1999 beginning at 10: 00 a.m. in room 215 Dirksen.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Relations be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 5, 1999 at 10:00 a.m. to hold a hearing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS

Mr. LOTT., Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Governmental Affairs Committee be permitted to meet on Wednesday, May 5, 1999 at 9:00 a.m. for a hearing on the State of Federalism.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate Wednesday May 5, 1999 at 9:30 a.m. to conduct an Oversight Hearing on Tribal Priority Allocations. The Hearing will be held in room 485 of the Russell Senate Office Building.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 9:30 a.m. in room 226 of the Senate Dirksen Office Building to hold a hearing on: ''Department of Justice Oversight.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Intelligence be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 3:00 p.m. to hold a closed markup.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Financial Institutions of the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, May 5, 1999, to conduct a hearing on ''The Financial Institutions Insolvency Improvement Act of 1999.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON SEAPOWER

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Seapower be authorized to meet on Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 3:00 p.m., in closed session, to receive testimony on Submarine Warfare in the 21st century.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

MARITIME ADMINISTRATION AUTHORIZATION ACT

• Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it is with pleasure that I join Chairman MCCAIN and Senators HUTCHISON and INOUYE to introduce the Maritime Administration Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000. This legislation is critical for the continuation of a modern commercial fleet owned and operated by U.S. citizens and crewed by American seafarers. It also ensures America's economic competitiveness and national security.

The Maritime Administration (MARAD) reauthorization continues very important programs, and is a much broader piece of legislation than in past years. For example, it provides the funding for the Title XI Loan Guarantee Program, a truly national and international program. Title XI shipowners, their operation and their supplier base, cover almost every state in this country. Title XI has been vital in assisting our shipyards in competing internationally. U.S. shipyards are attracting foreign interests and winning orders for many vessel types. The bill also contains technical amendments to the Title XI program which will save time and money for both the Government and those applying for a loan guarantee. It also provides the funds for the operation of the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, New York and continuing assistance to six State maritime academies. These students are the future of country and our merchant marine.

This bill also recognizes the importance of the merchant marine to our national security by its support for the recently-enacted Maritime Security Program (MSP), a modern commercial fleet available to provide critical support to the Department of Defense during war or national emergency. This year's reauthorization also contains provisions which aim to strengthen our U.S.-flag fleet through a much needed infusion of new tonnage by eliminating the three-year wait that a newly-registered bulk or breakbulk vessel must currently wait to carry preference cargo. This opportunity, which would end in one year or upon enactment of the OECD Shipbuilding Agreement, would not just improve the vessel profile of this fleet, but also add U.S. jobs> Vessels allowed to enter the preference trade would be required to perform shipyard repairs and other work necessary to bring them up to U.S.-flag standards in our own U.S. shipyards.

Funding is also provided for two new programs, enacted by the last Congress. Under the American Fisheries Act, MARAD will determine compliance with citizenship standards for certain fishing vessels, assisting in proper management and conservation of an important natural resource of our country. The agency is also developing a uniform process for the administrative waiver of the U.S.-built requirement for participation in the Jones Act trade for certain small passenger vessels, so that specific legislation need not be sought each time such a waiver is needed.

Mr. President, MARAD's FY 2000 budget recognizes the importance of sealift readiness and a strong U.S.-flag fleet. It acknowledges the need for a healthy shipbuilding industry and also provides for the education of our youth. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.●

1999 NEW MEXICO HIGH SCHOOL SUPERCOMPUTING CHALLENGE

● Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, it is with great pride that I rise today to recognize the contestants of the 1999 New Mexico High School Supercomputing Challenge, an impressive group of young people from my home state of New Mexico. I want to extend a special congratulations to the five Albuquerque Academy students who won this intellectually demanding contest. In addition to their normal school work and other extra curricular activities, these students—Tom Widland, Kevin Oishi, Alex Feuchter, Ryan Davies and Ryan Duryea—diligently worked on their project for nearly a year to compete in this competition.

For the past 9 years, High school students from around the state have competed against each other in the Supercomputing Challenge. The student's projects are done on high-speed supercomputers at the Los Alamos National Laboratory with the winners of the competition receiving an award, a $1,000 savings bond, a plaque, several boxes of software, and a computer for their schools.

In light of recent events in the news, it has been easy for us to focus our attention on the problems seriously troubling our Nation's youth. That is why, now, more than ever, I believe it is essential that we encourage our kids by recognizing and praising their outstanding accomplishments. These young Americans exemplify, the character our Nation was founded on and set a positive example for their peers to follow.

The participants of the 1999 New Mexico High School Supercomputing Challenge, deserve to be recognized, and I am proud to salute them on this worthy accomplishment.●

STADIUM FINANCING AND FRANCHISE RELOCATION ACT

● Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator SPECTER today in introducing legislation that will create a fund to finance the building and renovation of stadiums and ballparks for major league baseball and professional football sports leagues across America. For too long, baseball and football teams have threatened to move if state and local governments do not ante up the money to renovate or build new, publicly financed stadiums for the home teams. The scene is, by now, a familiar one: multi-millionaire team owners demand new, taxpayer-funded state-of-the-art stadiums, so that they and their players can make even more money for themselves—at taxpayer expense, of course. The taxpayers are impaled on the horns of a dilemma: either pony up or risk losing the team.

This bill will strike an equitable arrangement between teams and local governments to share the costs of stadium renovation and construction—ensuring that professional sports teams put up their fair share. The way the bill would accomplish this is straightforward. Team owners owe much of their wealth to revenue from network telecasts of their games, a boon they receive courtesy of the antitrust exemption granted by us—the Congress. The antitrust exemption contained in the Sports Broadcasting Act permits teams to pool their television rights, yielding annual revenues of $2.2 billion to the National Football League and $425 million to Major League Baseball.

This legislation would require, as a condition for retaining this lucrative antitrust exemption, that Major League Baseball and the National Football League place into a trust fund 10 percent of the revenues the Leagues receive from network telecasts. Each sport's trust fund, in turn, would be used to finance up to one half the cost of constructing a new stadium or park, or renovating an older one, for any of the teams seeking such financing—so long as the local government has agreed to provide one dollar for every two furnished by the trust fund. In other words, if a pro team in Wilmington wanted to build a $200 million stadium, it could obtain $100 million from the trust fund, a government entity in Delaware would have to kick in $50 million, and the remaining money would have to come from the team owner or some other source. In addition to allowing the Leagues to retain their current antitrust exemption, the bill would expand the exemption to give the Leagues the authority to prevent member clubs from moving their franchises.

To my mind, this bill strikes just the right balance. Let us not saddle cities and taxpayers with the exorbitant—sometimes mind-boggling—costs of building new stadiums while the teams and their owners sit back and wait for the highest bidder. If the Leagues want to keep their antitrust exemption, the major source of their millions, they should be willing to do their fair share. This legislation's condition that in exchange for the exemption, the teams set aside 10 percent of their broadcast revenues, is a reasonable and much needed measure to restore some balance to a negotiating process that is out-of-whack.●

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF LETTER CARRIERS' ANNUAL FOOD DRIVE

● Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I would like to recognize the National Association of Letter Carriers for its efforts to combat hunger in America through its annual national food drive.

Each year, on the second Saturday in May, letter carriers in more than 10,000 cities collect canned food along their postal routes to supply local food banks. Last year, over 50 million pounds of food were donated to feed the hungry, and I am confident that 1999's drive will be an even greater success. In just seven years of operation, the National Association of Letter Carrier's national food drive has grown into America's largest one-day food collection effort.

To participate, residents in participating communities need only place a can of non-perishable food near their mailbox—their letter carrier does the rest. In addition to making regular pick-ups and deliveries, their letter carrier collects donations and transports them to a nearby postal station. Food is then sorted and distributed to local charities.

Mr. President, an estimated 30 million people go hungry every day in America. Food shortages hit children especially hard in the summer months, when school lunches are not available and many charity pantries run out of supplies donated during the Winter holiday season. The Letter Carriers' food drive makes a critical contribution at a time when help is urgently needed.

I commend the National Association of Letter Carriers for its leadership in organizing this annual event. The NALC's organizing partners—the United States Postal Service, the AFL-CIO, and the United Way—also deserve our thanks.

Finally, Mr. President, I urge each American to leave a can of food by the mailbox on Saturday. Together, we can fight hunger and make a difference in the lives of millions of Americans.●

ARSON AWARENESS WEEK

● Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I rise today to remind the Senate and the American Public that this is Arson Awareness Week. It is that time once a year that we stop to assess how arson affects our lives. Each year hundreds of Americans die because of the arsonist's match. Mr. President, I am outraged at this and the countless firefighters who are killed every year attempting to extinguish intentionally set fires. Arsonists should be swiftly brought to justice, especially when firefighters lives are put on the line.

When a fire is intentionally set in the center of a retail city district the damaged property becomes blight on the entire community. Like cancer, arson degrades the whole area. Jobs are lost, tax bases are depleted and, most importantly, people are often killed.

As a member of the Congressional Fire Services Caucus, I have long been associated with the war against arson.

I have consistently supported stricter penalties for convicted arsonists. I have supported the efforts of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms that assist our fine state and local fire investigators. I have also supported the United States Fire Administration which provides valuable research grants and public education efforts geared toward controlling arson.

Mr. President I remind all Americans that arson is still a serious problem, one we must continually work together to solve.●

TRIBUTE TO KEVIN L. REICHERT

●Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I come to the floor today with a heavy heart. If it hadn't happened already, the Yugoslav conflict just hit home.

Early yesterday morning, NATO experienced its first fatalities in its campaign against Yugoslavia. And Chetek, Wisconsin found its way into the news.

Army Chief Warrant Officer Kevin L. Reichert, of Chetek, Wisconsin, was killed aboard an Apache helicopter during a nighttime training mission in Albania. My thoughts, prayers, and sympathies go out to the friends and family of Kevin Reichert. We can all be proud of Kevin's service to his country.

The 28-year old from Wisconsin's Chippewa Valley leaves behind his wife of eight years, Ridgeley, and 3 kids. I thank the proud residents of Chetek and of Barron County, Wisconsin, for helping to raise such a brave and dedicated American. I hope the Reichert family and the 1,700 people of Chetek will take solace in the gratitude of our Nation.

The NATO effort in Yugoslavia has its costs. Kevin's death, and that of his co-pilot, David Gibbs, of Ohio, are sad reminders that conflicts like the one in Yugoslavia, while they seem far away, have a very real impact at home.

Mr. President, I am sure my colleagues join me in paying tribute to Kevin Reichert for his dedicated service to the United States.●

HONORING ELMA F. BRITTINGHAM

●Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, it is with utmost respect and admiration that I rise today to acknowledge the contributions of a woman who, at the age of 99, has never tired of giving her all to her country and to the men and women of the Mill Creek Fire Company—Elma F. Brittingham of Marshallton, Delaware, affectionately known to everyone as ''Mom.'' On May 8, 1999, Mill Creek will honor her at its 72nd Annual Dinner for 72 years of unmatched volunteer service to the Mill Creek Fire Company. Yes, Elma is a charter member of the Mill Creek Fire Company and she remains an institution in the Fire Hall.

This well-deserved recognition is much less than I or anyone in Delaware could ever do to capture just how significant Elma's life has been to everyone with whom she has come in contact. Her legacy is etched in the memory of every fire service professional and volunteer in our State and her life continues to be an inspiration to all of us.

While many remember Elma for her 50 years of preparing turkey dinners for the Annual Volunteer Fire Conference, or her playing Yen Man in the company minstrel show, she is most remembered for her work on the frontline, fighting fires under the most dangerous circumstances. The one she most vividly remembers was during World War II when she helped put out a fire at an old prison farm on Duncan Road in Wilmington during a thunder and lightning storm. With this same energy and vigor, Elma is as spirited today, five decades later, as she was more than a half-century ago.

I know that there may be someone like Elma Brittingham in other States, but none can be more important to a community than this totally committed, selfless woman that I honor today. She is what we, as Americans, should aspire to be—a loyal public servant, an example of excellence and achievement in everything she has committed to accomplishing, and a credit to her community and to her country. I am deeply privileged to know this woman and proud to call her a heroic Delawarean and an outstanding American.●

TRIBUTE TO BETTY FRANKLIN-HAMMONDS

●Mr. FEINGOLD. On April 28th, Madison lost a dedicated advocate and a dear friend: Betty Franklin-Hammonds.

Betty's life story is a catalogue of remarkable achievements. From her tenure as the executive director of the Madison Urban League, where she spearheaded a study on the gap in achievement between black and white students in the Madison school system, to her leadership at the Madison Times and the numerous awards she received for her work, there are countless examples of Betty's effectiveness as an advocate in the community.

But it was her character, more than any title or award, that defined Betty and made her such a powerful presence in our community. She was a truth teller who never backed down from a fight, a woman who led by example and wasn't shy about asking others to make the commitment to change she demanded from herself.

Betty was a unique combination of a quiet dignity and a fierce passion for justice that could only be quenched by constant motion. She worked tirelessly, as a social worker, at the Madison chapter of the NAACP, at the Urban League, and at the Madison Times, to make our city a better place.

Her own words tell us more about Betty than any tribute ever could. After receiving an award for her humanitarian work, she once told a crowd that ''everybody can be great because everybody can serve.'' By that measure, Betty Franklin-Hammonds was great indeed.●

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I have several unanimous consent requests. All of them are agreed to on both sides of the aisle. Let me just go through them.

DESIGNATING THE WEEK OF MAY 2 THROUGH 8, 1999, AS THE 14TH ANNUAL TEACHER APPRECIATION WEEK, AND DESIGNATING TUESDAY, MAY 4, 1999, AS NATIONAL TEACHER DAY

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed immediately to the consideration of S. Res. 97, submitted earlier today by Senator COVERDELL for himself and others.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 97) designating the week of May 2 through 8, 1999, as the 14th annual Teacher Appreciation Week, and designating Tuesday, May 4, 1999, as National Teacher Day.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 97) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 97

Whereas the foundation of American freedom and democracy is a strong, effective system of education where every child has the opportunity to learn in a safe and nurturing environment;

Whereas a first rate education system depends on a partnership between parents, principals, teachers, and children;

Whereas much of the success of our Nation during the 20th Century (the American Century) is the result of the hard work and dedication of teachers across the Nation;

Whereas in addition to a child's family, knowledgeable and skillful teachers can have a profound impact on the child's early development and future success;

Whereas many people spend their lives building careers, teachers spend their careers building lives;

Whereas our Nation's teachers serve our Nation's children beyond the call of duty as coaches, mentors, and advisers without regard to fame or fortune; and

Whereas across our Nation nearly 3,000,000 men and women experience the joys of teaching young minds the virtues of reading, writing, and arithmetic: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates the week of May 2 through 8, 1999, as the ''14th Annual Teacher Appreciation Week'';

(2) designates Tuesday, May 4, 1999, as ''National Teacher Day''; and

(3) calls upon the people of the United States to take a moment out of their busy lives to say thanks and pay tribute to our Nation's teachers.

THE CALENDAR

DANTE B. FASCELL NORTH-SOUTH CENTER ACT OF 1999

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 73, H.R. 432.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 432) to designate the North/South Center as the Dante B. Fascell North-South Center.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered read a third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that the statements relating to the bill appear in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 432) was considered read a third time and passed.

CONDEMNING THE ESCALATING VIOLENCE, THE GROSS VIOLATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS AND ATTACKS AGAINST CIVILIANS, AND THE ATTEMPT TO OVERTHROW A DEMOCRATICALLY ELECTED GOVERNMENT IN SIERRA LEONE

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed immediately to the consideration of Calendar No. 74, S. Res. 54.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 54) condemning the escalating violence, the gross violation of human rights and attacks against civilians, and the attempt to overthrow a democratically elected government in Sierra Leone.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution and preamble be agreed to en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating thereto be placed in the RECORD at the appropriate place as if read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 54) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The resolution (S. Res. 54), with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. RES. 54

Whereas the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) military junta and the rebel fighters of the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) in Sierra Leone mounted a campaign of ''Operation No Living Thing'' in 1997 and have recently renewed the terror;

Whereas the atrocities and violence against the citizens of Sierra Leone, which include forced amputations, raping of women and children, pillaging farms, and the killing of the civilian population, has continued for more than 8 years;

Whereas the AFRC and RUF continue to kidnap children, forcibly train them, and send them as combatants in the conflict in Sierra Leone;

Whereas the Nigerian-led intervention force, Economic Community Monitoring Group (ECOMOG), which has deployed nearly 15,000 troops to Sierra Leone, has made a considerable contribution towards ending the cycle of violence there, despite the fact that some of its members have engaged in violations of humanitarian law;

Whereas the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) estimates that in 1998 more than 210,000 refugees fled Sierra Leone to Guinea, bringing the total number of Sierra Leonean refugees in Guinea to 350,000, in addition to some 90,000 Sierra Leonean refugees who sought safe haven in Liberia;

Whereas the refugee camps in Guinea and Liberia are at risk of being used as safe havens for rebels and staging areas for attacks into Sierra Leone;

Whereas the humanitarian crisis in Sierra Leone has reached epic proportions with people dying from lack of food and medicine; and

Whereas the escalating violence in Sierra Leone threatens stability in West Africa and has the immediate potential of spreading to neighboring Guinea: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) urges the President and the Secretary of State to give high priority to aiding in the resolution of the conflict in Sierra Leone and to bringing stability to West Africa, including active participation and leadership in the Sierra Leone Contact Group;

(2) condemns—

(A) the violent atrocities committed by the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) and the Revolutionary United Front (RUF) throughout the conflict, and in particular its attacks against civilians and its use of children as combatants; and

(B) those external actors, including Liberia, Burkina Faso, and Libya, for contributing to the continuing cycle of violence in Sierra Leone by providing financial, political, and other types of assistance to the AFRC or the RUF, often in direct violation of the United Nations arms embargo;

(3) supports continued efforts by the regional peacekeeping force, ECOMOG, to restore peace and security and to defend the democratically elected government of Sierra Leone;

(4) recognizes that basic improvements in ECOMOG's performance with respect to human rights and the management of its own personnel would markedly improve its effectiveness in achieving its goals and improve the level of international support needed to meet those goals;

(5) supports appropriate United States logistical, medical and political support for ECOMOG and notes the contribution that such support has made thus far toward achieving the goals of peace and stability in Sierra Leone;

(6) calls for an immediate cessation of hostilities and respect for human rights, and urges all members of the armed conflict in Sierra Leone to engage in dialogue to bring about a long-term solution to such conflict; and

(7) expresses support for the people of Sierra Leone in their quest for a democratic, prosperous, and reconciled society.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE TREATMENT OF WOMEN AND GIRLS BY THE TALIBAN IN AFGHANISTAN

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 75, S. Res. 68.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (S. Res. 68) expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the treatment of women and girls by the Taliban in Afghanistan.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am so pleased that the Senate will stand up for the rights of women and pass S. Res. 68, a resolution condemning the Taliban's treatment of women and girls in Afghanistan. I especially thank Senator BROWNBACK in joining me as the main cosponsor of this resolution.

The Taliban is a militia group that now controls between 85–90 percent of Afghanistan. People living under its rule are subjected to an extreme interpretation of Islam practiced nowhere else in the world. It is especially repressive on women living in Afghanistan.

Under Taliban rule, women and girls in Afghanistan are denied even the most basic human rights. They cannot work outside the home, attend school, or even wear shoes that make noise when they walk. Women who are in their homes are not allowed to be seen from the street, and houses with female occupants must have their windows painted over. Parents cannot teach their daughters to read, or take their little girls to be treated by male doctors.

Women are also forced to wear a full head-to-toe garment called a burqa. This restrictive covering allows only a tiny opening to see and breathe through. I understand that some women may choose to wear a burqa for religious reasons—that should be their right. However, the requirement that women wear a burqa is a clear violation of human rights. And further, the rules surrounding this requirement are frightening.

Women found in public who are not wearing a burqa are beaten by Taliban militiamen. If they wear a burqa and their ankles are showing, they are beaten as well. Poor women who cannot afford a burqa are forced to stay at home, preventing them from receiving medical care.

The Physicians for Human Rights recently conducted a study of 160 women in Afghanistan and their findings are horrific.

The study found that 77 percent of women had poor access to health care in Kabul, while another 20 percent reported no access at all. Of the participants, 81 percent reported a decline in their mental condition; 97 percent met the diagnostic criteria for depression; 42 percent met the diagnostic criteria for post-traumatic stress disorder; and 21 percent reported having suicidal thoughts ''extremely often'' or ''quite often.'' In addition, 53 percent of women described occasions in which they were seriously ill and unable to seek medical care.

The resolution passed today calls on the President of the United States to prevent a Taliban-led government of Afghanistan from taking a seat in the United Nations General Assembly, as long as these gross violations of human rights persist.

My resolution also urges the Administration not to recognize any government in Afghanistan which does not take actions to achieve the following goals: effective participation of women in all civil, economic, and social life; the right of women to work; the right of women and girls to an education without discrimination and the reopening of schools to women and girls at all levels of education; the freedom of movement of women and girls; equal access of women and girls to health care; equal access of women and girls to humanitarian aid.

It is shocking that women and girls in Afghanistan are suffering under these conditions as we approach the 21st century. The United States has an obligation to take the lead in condemning these abuses.

I want to thank the majority and minority leaders for allowing this legislation to come to the floor, and I appreciate the support from the many cosponsors of this resolution who are working to end human rights abuses against women in Afghanistan.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I understand that Senator BOXER has amendments to the resolution and the preamble at the desk.

I ask unanimous consent that the amendments to the resolution be agreed to, that the resolution, as amended, be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, that the amendment to the preamble be agreed to, and the preamble, as amended, be agreed to with no intervening action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments (Nos. 305 and 306) were agreed to as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 305

(Purpose: To improve the resolution)

On page 3, line 4, strike ''the'' and insert ''any''.

AMENDMENT NO. 306

(Purpose: To improve the preamble)

Amend the preamble to read as follows:

Whereas millions of women and girls living under Taliban rule Afghanistan are denied their basic human rights;

Whereas according to the Department of State and international human rights organizations, the Taliban continues to commit widespread and well-documented human rights abuses, in gross violation of internationally accepted norms;

Whereas, according to the United States Department of State Country Report on Human Rights Practices (hereafter ''1998 State Department Human Rights Report''), violence against women in Afghanistan occurs frequently, including beatings, rapes, forced marriages, disappearances, kidnapings, and killings;

Whereas women and girls under Taliban rule are generally barred from working, going to school, leaving their homes without an immediate male family member as chaperone, and visiting doctors, hospitals or clinics;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, gender restrictions by the Taliban continue to interfere with the delivery of humanitarian assistance to women and girls in Afghanistan;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women are forced to don a head-to-toe garment known as a burqa, which has only a mesh screen for vision, and many women found in public not wearing a burqa, or wearing a burqa that does not properly cover the ankles, are beaten by Taliban militiamen;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, some poor women under Taliban rule cannot afford the cost of a burqa and thus are forced to remain at home or risk beatings if they go outside the home without one;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, the lack of a burqa has resulted in the inability of some women under Taliban rule to get necessary medical care because they cannot leave home;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, women under Taliban rule reportedly have been beaten if their shoe heels click when they walk;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women in homes must not be visible from the street, and houses with female occupants must have their windows painted over;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, under Taliban rule women are not allowed to drive, and taxi drivers reportedly have been beaten if they take unescorted women as passengers;

Whereas according to the 1998 State Department Human Rights Report, women under Taliban rule are forbidden to enter mosques or other places of worship; and

Whereas women and girls of all ages under Taliban rule have suffered needlessly and even died from curable illness because they have been turned away from health care facilities because of their gender: Now, therefore, be it

The resolution (S. Res. 68), as amended, was agreed to.

The preamble, as amended, was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, with its preamble, as amended, reads as follows:

[The resolution was not available for printing. It will appear in a future edition of the RECORD.]

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1999

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until the hour of 9:30 a.m. on Thursday, May 6. I further ask consent that on Thursday immediately following the prayer the routine requests through the morning hour be granted, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, that the Senate then resume consideration of S. 900, and Senator GRAMM be recognized in order to offer an amendment as under the original consent agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. GRAMM. For the information of all Senators, tomorrow the Senate will resume consideration of the Financial Services Modernization Act, with Senator GRAMM immediately recognized to offer his amendment.

It is hoped that the bill will be completed during Thursday's session of the Senate. Therefore, rollcall votes will occur throughout tomorrow's session of the Senate.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask unanimous consent the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:45 p.m., adjourned until Thursday, May 6, 1999, at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 5, 1999:

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

EDWARD B. MONTGOMERY, OF MARYLAND, TO BE AN ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF LABOR, VICE RICHARD M. MCGAHEY.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

DAVID B. DUNN, OF CALIFORNIA, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF COUNSELOR, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF ZAMBIA.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Wednesday, May 5, 1999

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, Reverend James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

We recognize, O God, that we are buffeted by the sound of so many words that come our way, words of advice and counsel, words that express joy or sadness and words that recommend actions or promote ideas. We pause this moment to hear Your still small voice that beckons us to do what is good, to be what is good, that encourages us in the way of truth and points us to a healthy and whole understanding of our lives. May we take Your words of justice and peace, of righteousness and integrity and transpose those good words into deeds of caring and concern for others. This is our earnest prayer. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Chair's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 8 rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SCHAFFER) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. SCHAFFER led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

NEVADANS STAND READY TO ASSIST THEIR NEIGHBORS VICTIMIZED BY POWERFUL TORNADOES IN OKLAHOMA, KANSAS, AND TEXAS

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to pay my condolences to the people and the families that suffered from the powerful tornadoes in Oklahoma, Kansas and Texas in the last few days. The thoughts and prayers of all Nevadans are with the victims of this tragedy. Fire, police and emergency services and the National Guard's personnel worked alongside of heroic neighbors in working through the night to help people affected by this tragic act of Mother Nature.

Mr. Speaker, it will take some time to rebuild the damage to the houses, and homes, and buildings and the families. The Federal Government will now do its part in assisting with this effort, helping to rebuild the communities and the lives of those who were affected by these devastating tornadoes.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud the President's announcement to declare these States national disaster areas, allowing the Federal Government to offer speedy financial aid and support.

Mr. Speaker, I and the State of Nevada also stand ready to assist our friends and families as a Nation, and we must join together and persevere in this tragedy.

THE NEED FOR BANKRUPTCY REFORM

(Mr. SMITH of Washington asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, today the House will vote on bankruptcy reform, and I rise today to urge all Members to support this bill. The bill ultimately is about personal responsibility. It is about holding people accountable for their own actions.

Worse, the current bankruptcy situation puts us in a position where others are held accountable for those actions. They are the ones that have to bear the price of other people's choices. Worst, it basically spreads out from the middle class to the poorest of the poor. Those are the ones that have to pay more for retail items and for a variety of items because some people run up obligations that they either have no intention of meeting or do not meet.

Also, small businesses are particularly devastated by bankruptcies. In many small businesses, one or two clients not paying can be the difference between being in business and out of business, and when they go bankrupt and do not pay, those small businesses suffer.

This bill does not eliminate bankruptcy, it is out there as an option, but it makes changes to hold people accountable and responsible for their own financial decisions to make sure that, if they can pay, they do pay. We should not have a situation where people can declare bankruptcy, run out on their obligations to others, drive up costs for everybody else and still live a life better than 95 percent of the rest of the world.

We need this bankruptcy reform bill.

SO LONG, JOHN

(Mr. HEFLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HEFLEY. First it was Jordan, then it was Gretzky, now it is Elway.

On Sunday afternoon, the whole State of Colorado turned on their television sets to watch a press conference. The man whose name has become synonymous with the Denver Broncos, John Elway, announced his retirement from football.

The statistics books will show that John Elway had 16 great seasons as a Denver Bronco. He had 148 victories and 47 come-from-behind wins, both National Football League records. He passed for over 50,000 yards, rushed for another 3,000 and played in 234 games, and through it all he only missed 15 career starts. Not the least of his achievements, he led the Broncos to five Superbowls and two Superbowl wins.

What the stat books will not show us is what John Elway has meant to the State of Colorado. He gave us joy and excitement every week. His career became a true profile in courage of perseverance and was a testimony to all that dreams can really come true.

Most importantly, in a time when Colorado and this Nation is in such desperate need of role models, John Elway was that, too.

John, from the State of Colorado and from a grateful Nation and from this Bronco fan:

''Thank you.''

REASONS TO CELEBRATE WIC'S 25TH ANNIVERSARY

(Mr. STUPAK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words today about the WIC program, a program dedicated to improving the nutrition and health care needs of low-income women, infants and children.

WIC is celebrating 25 years of service, Mr. Speaker. The value of these 25 years is illustrated by a few key facts expressed in terms of dollars.

Every dollar spent on pregnant women in WIC produces between $1.92 and $4.21 in Medicaid savings for newborns and their mothers. Medicaid costs were reduced on average by $12,000 to $15,000 per infant for every low-birth-weight birth prevented because the mother was involved in the WIC program during her pregnancy.

There is a lot more, Mr. Speaker, in terms of dollars saved and common sense, but there is a more important savings, a human savings. WIC children get a better start in life, they do better in school, and they lead healthier lives. All this translates into an overall better quality of life, and that is the real reason for celebrating WIC's 25th anniversary.

INFORMATION, PLEASE

(Mr. EWING asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EWING. Mr. Speaker, this week we will be voting on the supplemental appropriation to provide funds for the Kosovo operation. Unfortunately, the administration has done little to inform Members of Congress. It is strange that people like former Senator Bob Dole, former Ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick have been more vocal, more available to Members of Congress to explain their position on the need for U.S. involvement than we have received from this administration.

I am yet not convinced of the wisdom of this operation or what the national interest is for Americans. I question, too, whether we need to be paying 90 percent or 85 percent or even 70 percent of the cost. Remember, in other operations such as this our allies have indeed contributed.

Why have we not sought their contributions? Why have we not had more information? Why do we not know the true need for our involvement in Kosovo?

RUSSIA OPPOSES NATO, SUPPORTS MILOSEVIC, DUMPS STEEL ILLEGALLY INTO THE UNITED STATES AND STILL EXPECTS US TO LOAN THEM ANOTHER $23 BILLION

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, Uncle Sam and the International Monetary Fund have loaned Russia billions and billions of dollars, and with each loan Russia promised to repay. Guess what? Russia says, and I quote, they cannot repay their loans this year, next year, not even in 10 years.

How is that to fund the KGB, Congress?

Russia says though, and I quote, Russia still expects America to loan them another $23 billion to carry on with their reforms.

Beam me up here. I say, ''Expect this.''

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the facts that Russia opposes NATO, supports Milosevic and dumps steel illegally in the United States of America.

WE MUST NOT FUND THIS SENSELESS BOMBING

(Mr. PAUL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, how many innocent civilians must die before we stop bombing Serbia? We rightfully cherish the lives of our three servicemen and rejoice in their return, but how many Serbs will never rejoice because of all the death and destruction we have rained down upon them by casually dismissing as necessary mistakes of war a war that is not real to us yet only too real to those who are needlessly killed.

Serb victims are people, too, who love their families and hate the war, yet become the victims of this ill-conceived policy of NATO aggression. It is a strange argument, indeed, that the capture of our three soldiers was illegal and yet our bombing of civilians is not. Violence, when not in one's own self-defense, can never be justified, no matter how noble the explanation. It only makes things worse.

The goal of peace and harmony can never be achieved by bombs and intimidation. That goal can only be achieved by honest friendship and trade when permissible and neutrality when armed conflict prevents it. We must not fund this senseless bombing.

TEACHERS LIKE DAVE SANDERS, SHANNON WRIGHT AND CHRISTA MACAULIFFE ARE AMERICAN HEROES

(Ms. SANCHEZ asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to salute America's educators during Teacher Appreciation Week. It is essential in these trying times at our schools that we pay tribute to the professionals who give so much to their work with our communities' children.

Every day 3 million American teachers go to work. They arrive early in the morning and often stay late at night. Their dedication under supremely difficult circumstances cannot be adequately described, but through all this hard work they open a world of opportunity for our children and bring endless possibilities to our communities and to the future of our country. Every day they work their miracles in the classrooms. We entrust them with our most precious resource, our young people.

Tragically, Mr. Speaker, some pay the ultimate sacrifice. Teachers like Dave Sanders of Littleton, Colorado, or Shannon Wright of Jonesboro, Arkansas, and astronaut Christa MacAuliffe are American heroes. We salute their memory and their colleagues this week.

THIS IS TEACHER APPRECIATION WEEK

(Mr. SCHAFFER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, this is Teacher Appreciation Week. Almost every Member of this body can think of a special teacher who has touched his life in ways that have never been forgotten, can never be repaid and can only be appreciated by those who have benefited from such good fortune.

There are special teachers with extraordinary talents in every kind of school in America, in rich and poor, urban and rural, public and private. Great teachers give something of themselves that we take with us for the rest of our lives. It is one of the most rewarding aspects of being a teacher.

But great teachers do not get the recognition they deserve. Their contributions are so great, they ought to have an entire week devoted to their achievement, and so they have. This is their week, and I join with my colleagues in paying tribute to the wonderful gifts teachers have brought to all of us during their teaching careers.

Teaching is a noble profession, and it is an honor for me to salute all those great teachers who are proud to have made teaching their passion and their life's work.

WIC—MORE THAN JUST FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN, IT IS GOOD FOR AMERICA

(Mr. FILNER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate 25 years of the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children, what is widely known as WIC. WIC is not just a program that makes a lot of sense, it saves millions of dollars, too.

Every WIC dollar spent for pregnant women results in the savings to the Medicaid program of anywhere between $2 and $4. Well-fed mothers and children are healthier people. Children who eat a nutritious diet grow up to be stronger, better-adjusted adults. WIC allows high-risk young families to properly feed their children during their critical months of growth and development. WIC helps to assure normal childhood growth, reduces early childhood anemia, increases immunization rates, improves access to pediatric health care and prepares children for learning.

□ 1015

What more can we ask for? It truly proves the maxim that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. WIC, it is a good program for America.

HOLBROOKE'S HONORARIA

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to draw my colleagues' attention to what President Clinton promised would be the most ethical administration in the history of our Nation.

The Washington Times lead story today details how special envoy to the President, Richard Holbrooke, in the middle of critical negotiations with Yugoslav President Milosevic in 1998, broke off those talks to deliver two speeches in which he was paid $40,000.

Now, there is a pesky Federal ethics rule that says for government employees, including unpaid presidential appointees, they are barred from accepting side compensation that relates to the employee's official duties.

Quote, just as his talks reached what Mr. Holbrooke said was a dangerous moment, he flew to Athens to give a speech about Kosovo, picking up $16,000 in payment. A few months later, Mr. Holbrooke did the same thing, abandoning diplomatic efforts in the middle of an air-strike deadline to deliver a speech in New York for $24,000.

Mr. President, honestly, based upon past comments, he would be the perfect candidate to be Ambassador to the United Nations.

CONGRATULATIONS TO WIC ON 25 YEARS

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, children are 25 percent of this country's population but they are 10,000 percent of our future. There is no better way to invest in our future than to make sure that every child gets good nutrition and health care, right from the very start. That is what the WIC program does, and that is what they have been doing for 25 years.

At WIC clinics, low income, at-risk pregnant women get healthy foods, nutrition, education and access to health services. The outcome is strong, healthy babies. WIC stays with the new mother after her baby is born, helping to form good eating habits, health habits and a lifetime of good habits. For every $1.00 we spend on WIC, we save $3.50 in future costs for medical care, income support and special education.

Talk about a good investment in our future, talk about WIC. Congratulations, WIC, on this anniversary of 25 years, and thanks for strengthening America's future.

THE POLICY OF NOT USING FOOD AS A WEAPON IS GOOD POLICY

(Mr. NETHERCUTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Speaker, there is no more fundamental need of human beings than the need for food and medicine. For years, our country has had a policy of imposing unilateral economic sanctions on nations of the world with which we disagree, nations like Iran and Libya and North Korea and many others.

If one is a farmer in America, this policy has hurt American agricultural exports, especially if other nations of the world do not impose such sanctions and are free to trade with such enemy nations.

Earlier this year, I introduced H.R. 212, a bill which lifts sanctions on food and medicine so that we can sell our commodities to these nations, subject to the President reinstating those sanctions if doing so is in the national security interest.

Last week, the President, by administrative order, lifted sanctions on food and medicine to Iran, Libya and Sudan. This can result in the likely sale of $500 million in wheat sales to American agriculture. The policy of not using food as a weapon is good policy, and I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 212.

BRAIN TUMOR AWARENESS WEEK

(Mr. ROTHMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, this is Brain Tumor Awareness Week. Each year 100,000 people in the United States will be diagnosed with a primary or metastatic brain tumor. Brain tumors are the second leading cause of cancer death for children under 19, and the third leading cause of cancer death for young adults ages 20 to 39.

Brain tumors attack the essence of the individual. They attack the control center for thought, emotion and movement. There are over 100 different types of brain tumors, making effective treatment very complicated. Currently, there is no cure for most malignant brain tumors. Only 37 percent of men and 52 percent of women survive 5 years following the diagnosis of a primary benign or malignant brain tumor.

Congress needs to appropriate increased funding for the National Institutes of Health and advocate for a strong investment in brain tumor research. We also need Federal legislation that gives patients access to clinical trials and other therapies that are not approved yet by the Food and Drug Administration. I urge more research for brain tumors and more funding for the NIH.

SUPPORT BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT AND ITS EMPHASIS ON PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

(Mr. DOOLEY of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, today we are going to be considering bankruptcy reform legislation, and I rise in strong support of it. In 1998 we had studies that showed that at least $3 billion was written off in bankruptcy by wealthy debtors who could have afforded to pay it back.

More and more wealthy Americans are using the bankruptcy system to buy a throwaway lifestyle that they cannot afford, then expecting hard-working Americans who pay their bills each month to pick up the tab. That is not right, and Congress needs to do something about it.

I also want to address some information that I think is not true by some of the opponents of this legislation, dealing with child support payments. Under the current system, child support and alimony payments rank seventh on the list of priority payments in a bankruptcy proceeding, behind such things as attorney fees; seventh.

This legislation moves those critical family obligations up to the top of the list. Women and children come first under H.R. 833, the bankruptcy protection reform bill that we are going to be considering today. It is time to require personal responsibility. Support H.R. 833.

RIVERSIDE NATIONAL CEMETERY, THE IDEAL LOCATION FOR THE NATIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR MEMORIAL

(Mr. CALVERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to praise the 3,417 men and women who have placed their lives on the line for their country, have taken risks above and beyond the call of duty and, because of their extraordinary bravery and action during crisis, have been awarded the Medal of Honor.

Yesterday I introduced the National Medal of Honor Memorial Act. This bill designates the memorial being built at the Riverside National Cemetery as a national memorial. Since this will be the only publicly accessible memorial honoring all 3,417 recipients of the Medal of Honor at a single location, I think it is only fitting to identify it as a national memorial.

Riverside National Cemetery is the ideal location for this memorial. There are two Medal of Honor recipients buried there; 102 recipients are originally from the State of California. At its capacity, the cemetery will inter approximately 1,400,000 persons, making it the largest national cemetery in the United States.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud of the strong support from my colleagues. Seventy of my colleagues have decided to be original cosponsors of this; 100 percent of the California delegation, and the chairman and the ranking member of the Committee on Veterans' Affairs. I look forward to its passage.

PAYDAY BORROWER PROTECTION ACT OF 1999

(Mr. RUSH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RUSH. Mr. Speaker, today I am here to introduce the Payday Borrower Protection Act of 1999.

Payday loan companies are springing up all over the country. Payday loan companies are cannibalistic. They are akin to loansharking. These companies provide short-term loans with minimum credit checks to consumers who are in desperate need of cash.

The interest on these loans are unconscionably high, usually running from 261 percent to 913 percent annually. It is not uncommon for a consumer to have borrowed, say, $100 and within a year to be forced to repay $900 to a payday loan company.

My bill regulates and imposes some rational criteria on these loans. My bill caps annual interest fees at 36 percent and prohibits any payday lender from refinancing or rolling over any loans. My bill also sets a minimum national standard for State payday loan laws.

I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support the Payday Borrower Protection Act of 1999.

WITH THE PROSPECT OF MULTITRILLION DOLLAR BUDGET SURPLUSES, WE SHOULD PASS A TAX CUT AS SOON AS POSSIBLE

(Mr. CHABOT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, Congress faces the prospect of multitrillion dollar surpluses, budget surpluses, over the next 15 years. That is good news. As one might expect, the response to this good news has been sharply divided.

Liberals, and President Clinton, have come forward with new Washington spending programs. Republicans, on the other hand, have called for saving Social Security, cutting taxes and paying down the national debt.

It is almost the law of nature that money left in Washington will be spent. Therefore, I think we should pass a tax cut as soon as possible, before the big spenders here in Washington get their hands on it.

Let us hope that Congress and the President get it right. Work together and save Social Security, cut taxes and pay down the national debt. It is very, very important for America's future to do that.

SALUTE TO WIC ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

(Ms. BROWN of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of one of our Nation's most valuable programs, Women, Infants and Children, more popularly known as WIC.

The WIC program has been serving women and children across America for 25 years. The valuable service provided by WIC includes nutritional counseling, the supply of supplemental nutritional foods to children and an excellent health referral system.

WIC continues to be effective in improving the health of pregnant women, new mothers and infants. Studies show that WIC participants are more likely to have full term pregnancy, lower medical costs, higher birth weight babies and lower infant mortality rates.

On this anniversary of 25 years, I salute WIC for providing such outstanding service. We must all remember a healthy start is a great start.

ANTIPOVERTY PROGRAMS FOR SENIORS RESULT IN POVERTY FOR FUTURE AMERICAN WORKERS

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I see a lot of students in our gallery today. Mr. Speaker, I would like to report that our Social Security task force meeting yesterday that examined the consequences of doing nothing with Social Security resulted in the headline that antipoverty programs for seniors result in poverty for future American workers. We need to stop spending the Social Security Trust Fund for other government programs.

Our taxes today are higher than they have ever been in most of our history, even through World War II. We have heard a lot of good government spending programs from the speakers this morning that would mean raiding the Social Security Trust Fund or increasing taxes.

I just plead with my colleagues that if there are other good programs, they need to be justified on the basis of increasing taxes to pay for those programs or cutting other government spending to pay for those programs, but stop raiding the Social Security trust fund. We are already facing a $7½ trillion unfunded liability to maintain Social Security. We can't afford to continue to make the situation worse.

CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS

(Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NEAL of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to shut down a tax avoidance scheme available only to a few wealthy and sophisticated investors. Under current law, if one invests in a hedge fund they pay tax every year and those profits are taxed at a higher short-term capital gains rate, but if one places that same money in a derivative wrapped around a hedge fund, they pay tax only at the end of the contract and are taxed at a lower long-term capital gains rate.

My bill states that if an investor indirectly owns a financial asset like a hedge fund through a derivative, he cannot get more long-term capital gain than if he owned the investment directly. In addition, there is an interest charge to offset the additional benefit of deferral.

□ 1030

This tax shelter is not available to average workers or even to average investors. It is available only to the very wealthy, so that they can avoid paying taxes.

It is important to shut down these tax shelters as we uncover them. Otherwise, we undermine the faith people have in our voluntary tax system. The Committee on Ways and Means is looking at tax shelters this year. This should be the number one issue on our list.

A FOCUS ON CHILDREN

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is important that we focus on our children. I am delighted to congratulate the WIC program on its 25th anniversary, a program that has provided nourishment for women and children and infants, a program that has helped so many to be able to have the basic nourishment that allows them to go to schools and then be educated. Our children are our greatest asset.

Then I would like to note that this is Asthma Awareness Day and Month. I hope that we realize the importance of more research to help cure asthma. So many of our children and, yes, so many of our citizens are impacted by that.

Likewise, Mr. Speaker, I would like to invite and acknowledge that the Congressional Children's Caucus will be holding a hearing this afternoon at 2154 Rayburn on the crisis of school violence, how do we help our children. We want solutions and not accusations.

We hope to develop a mental health system for children, where children can be referred and helped and rehabilitated, because in fact they are our precious resource. We will be listening to children today, we will be listening to mental health experts on the crisis of school violence and how do we help our children. We hope the children will come and let us hear them today.

Mr. Speaker, today is a special day for several reasons. Today is the 25th Anniversary of the WIC Program and it is also Asthma Awareness Day. Also today, the Congressional Children's Caucus, which I am the chair, will have a hearing today on the psychology of school violence. I hope My Colleagues will join me for the hearing.

The WIC Program, or the Women, Infant and Children's Supplemental Nutrition Program, has been providing nutrition education and diet counseling since 1972. It is a federally funded program designed for low-income pregnant women, mothers and their children who face nutritional risk.

WIC helps mothers make infant feeding choices and provides breastfeeding support, children's growth checkups and referrals for other health services. WIC also gives mothers one-on-one instructions for making healthy meals for their families.

Families on WIC receive monthly supplies for food like milk, eggs, cereal and juice. This is an important program for mothers and children in need, and I am happy to salute them today on their 25th Anniversary.

Today is also Asthma Awareness Day. Asthma is a serious condition that causes difficulty in breathing and it affects children and adults. An estimated 4.8 million children under 18 have asthma and many more have undiagnosed asthma.

Asthma is the leading chronic illness in children and it is the leading cause of school absenteeism. Hospitalizations due to asthma are disproportionately high for inner-city children, particularly for children of color. Each year, 600 children die from asthma and 150,000 are hospitalized.

Today, there will be screenings for asthma and allergies and I urge everyone to get tested. As it is now allergy season, this is the time to find out how serious your allergies may be and also how to relieve your symptoms.

Finally, today there will be a hearing sponsored by the Congressional Children's Caucus on the issue of school violence. We have a panel of mental health experts who will discuss the need for mental health services in schools. We will also have a panel of students who will discuss their fears about violence in school. I look foward to seeing many of you there.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the pending business is the question of agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal of the last day's proceedings.

The question is on the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 359, nays 41, not voting 33, as follows:

[Roll No. 108]

YEAS—359

Abercrombie
Ackerman
Allen
Andrews
Archer
Armey
Bachus
Baird
Baker
Baldacci
Baldwin
Ballenger
Barcia
Barr
Barrett (NE)
Barrett (WI)
Bartlett
Bass
Bateman
Bentsen
Bereuter
Berkley
Berry
Biggert
Bilbray
Bilirakis
Blagojevich
Bliley
Blumenauer
Blunt
Boehlert
Boehner
Bonilla
Bonior
Bono
Boswell
Boucher
Boyd
Brady (PA)
Brady (TX)
Brown (FL)
Brown (OH)
Bryant
Burr
Burton
Buyer
Callahan
Calvert
Camp
Campbell
Canady
Cannon
Capps
Capuano
Cardin
Castle
Chabot
Chambliss
Chenoweth
Clayton
Clement
Coble
Coburn
Collins
Combest
Condit
Conyers
Cook
Cooksey
Cox
Coyne
Cramer
Crane
Crowley
Cummings
Cunningham
Danner
Davis (FL)
Davis (IL)
Davis (VA)
Deal
DeGette
Delahunt
DeLauro
DeLay
DeMint
Deutsch
Diaz-Balart
Dicks
Dingell
Dixon
Doggett
Dooley
Doolittle
Doyle
Dreier
Duncan
Dunn
Edwards
Ehlers
Ehrlich
Emerson
Eshoo
Etheridge
Evans
Everett
Ewing
Fletcher
Foley
Forbes
Fossella
Fowler
Frank (MA)
Franks (NJ)
Frelinghuysen
Frost
Gallegly
Ganske
Gejdenson
Gekas
Gilchrest
Gillmor
Gilman
Gonzalez
Goode
Goodlatte
Goodling
Gordon
Goss
Graham
Green (TX)
Hall (OH)
Hall (TX)
Hansen
Hastings (WA)
Hayes
Hayworth
Herger
Hill (IN)
Hill (MT)
Hilleary
Hinchey
Hinojosa
Hobson
Hoeffel
Hoekstra
Holden
Hooley
Horn
Hostettler
Houghton
Hoyer
Hulshof
Hunter
Inslee
Isakson
Jackson (IL)
Jackson-Lee (TX)
Jefferson
Jenkins
John
Johnson (CT)
Johnson, Sam
Jones (NC)
Jones (OH)
Kanjorski
Kaptur
Kasich
Kelly
Kennedy
Kildee
Kilpatrick
Kind (WI)
King (NY)
Kingston
Kleczka
Knollenberg
Kolbe
Kuykendall
LaFalce
LaHood
Lampson
Lantos
Largent
Larson
Latham
LaTourette
Lazio
Leach
Levin
Lewis (CA)
Linder
Lipinski
Lofgren
Lowey
Lucas (KY)
Lucas (OK)
Luther
Maloney (CT)
Maloney (NY)
Manzullo
Markey
Martinez
Mascara
Matsui
McCarthy (MO)
McCarthy (NY)
McCollum
McCrery
McHugh
McInnis
McIntosh
McIntyre
McKeon
McKinney
McNulty
Meehan
Meek (FL)
Meeks (NY)
Menendez
Metcalf
Mica
Millender-McDonald
Miller (FL)
Miller, Gary
Minge
Mink
Moakley
Mollohan
Moore
Moran (VA)
Morella
Murtha
Myrick
Nadler
Napolitano
Neal
Nethercutt
Ney
Northup
Norwood
Nussle
Obey
Olver
Ortiz
Ose
Owens
Oxley
Packard
Pallone
Pascrell
Pastor
Paul
Payne
Pease
Pelosi
Peterson (MN)
Peterson (PA)
Petri
Phelps
Pickering
Pitts
Pombo
Pomeroy
Porter
Portman
Price (NC)
Pryce (OH)
Quinn
Radanovich
Rahall
Regula
Reyes
Reynolds
Riley
Rivers
Rodriguez
Roemer
Rogan
Rogers
Rohrabacher
Ros-Lehtinen
Rothman
Roukema
Roybal-Allard
Royce
Ryan (WI)
Ryun (KS)
Salmon
Sanchez
Sandlin
Sanford
Sawyer
Saxton
Schakowsky
Sensenbrenner
Serrano
Sessions
Shadegg
Shaw
Shays
Sherman
Sherwood
Shimkus
Shows
Shuster
Sisisky
Skeen
Skelton
Smith (MI)
Smith (TX)
Smith (WA)
Snyder
Souder
Spence
Spratt
Stabenow
Stark
Stearns
Stenholm
Strickland
Stump
Sununu
Talent
Tancredo
Tanner
Tauscher
Tauzin
Taylor (NC)
Terry
Thomas
Thornberry
Thune
Thurman
Toomey
Towns
Traficant
Turner
Udall (CO)
Udall (NM)
Upton
Velázquez
Vento
Walden
Walsh
Wamp
Watt (NC)
Waxman
Weiner
Weldon (FL)
Weldon (PA)
Wexler
Weygand
Whitfield
Wicker
Wilson
Wise
Wolf
Woolsey

NAYS—41

Aderholt
Borski
Clay
Clyburn
Costello
DeFazio
English
Filner
Ford
Gephardt
Gibbons
Gutknecht

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Hastings (FL) | McDermott | Stupak |
| Hefley | McGovern | Sweeney |
| Hilliard | Miller, George | Taylor (MS) |
| Holt | Moran (KS) | Thompson (CA) |
| Johnson, E. B. | Oberstar | Thompson (MS) |
| Klink | Pickett | Visclosky |
| Kucinich | Ramstad | Waters |
| Lee | Rush | Weller |
| Lewis (GA) | Sabo | Wu |
| LoBiondo | Schaffer | |

NOT VOTING—33

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Barton | Granger | Scott |
| Becerra | Green (WI) | Simpson |
| Berman | Greenwood | Slaughter |
| Bishop | Gutierrez | Smith (NJ) |
| Brown (CA) | Hutchinson | Tiahrt |
| Carson | Hyde | Tierney |
| Cubin | Istook | Watkins |
| Dickey | Lewis (KY) | Watts (OK) |
| Engel | Rangel | Wynn |
| Farr | Sanders | Young (AK) |
| Fattah | Scarborough | Young (FL) |

□ 1052

So the Journal was approved.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 833, BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1999

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 158 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 158

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 833) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. Points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with section 302 or section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. All points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute are waived. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against the amendments printed in the report are waived. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

H. Res. 158 is a fair, structured rule providing 1 hour of general debate divided equally between the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The rule waives points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with section 302 of the Congressional Budget Act which prohibits consideration of legislation which exceeds a committee's allocation of new spending authority, or section 311 of the Congressional Budget Act which prohibits consideration of legislation that would cause the total level of new budget authority or outlays in the most recent budget resolution to be exceeded or cause revenues to be less.

□ 1100

The rule provides that it shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The rule waives all points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute and amendments thereto.

The rule makes in order only those amendments printed in the Committee on Rules report accompanying the resolution. The rule provides that amendments made in order may be offered only in the order printed in the report and may be offered only by a Member designated in the report. These amendments shall be considered as read and be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and opponent. They shall not be subject to amendment and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole.

The rule allows for the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone votes during consideration of the bill and to reduce voting time to 5 minutes on a proposed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, will fundamentally reform the existing bankruptcy system into a needs-based system. I am proud of the tireless efforts of the House Committee on the Judiciary to address this issue and ensure that our bankruptcy laws operate fairly, efficiently, and free of abuse.

This should not be a controversial issue because Congress has spoken on this issue before. Both the House and the Senate overwhelmingly approved bankruptcy reform legislation last year on a bipartisan basis. Although the measure fell short in the waning days of the 105th Congress because the Senate failed to act on the conference report, the House voted by a veto-proof majority of 300 to 125 to pass very similar legislation last year.

There is great need for this bill now. A record 1.42 million personal bankruptcy filings were recorded in 1998. This is a stunning increase of 500 percent since 1980. Despite an unprecedented time of economic prosperity, unemployment, and rising disposable income, personal bankruptcies are rising, costing over $40 billion in the past year.

Without serious reform of our bankruptcy laws, these trends promise to grow each year, costing businesses and consumers even more in the form of losses and higher costs of credit.

As we debate and vote today, we should keep in mind two important tenets of bankruptcy reform.

First, the bankruptcy system should provide the amount of debt relief needed that an individual needs, no more and no less. Second, bankruptcy should be a last resort and not a first response to a financial crisis.

As a businessman with over 16 years' experience in the private sector and because of many conversations that I have had with leaders, consumers and others who are associated with loan defaults, I am well aware of the problems that are associated with the abuse of our bankruptcy laws.

A record 1.4 million personal bankruptcies were filed last year. That is one out of every 75 households in America. The debts that remained unpaid as a result of those bankruptcies each year cost American families that do pay their bills on time $550 a year in the form of higher cost for credit, goods and services.

Unfortunately, much of the debt that was eventually passed on to the consumers last year was debt that bankruptcy filers could have avoided by simply repaying those bills because they had the ability. That is why it is so important to pass real bankruptcy reform.

Opponents of this bill have tried to divert the discussion away from the merits of the bill and claim that it would make it more difficult for divorced women to obtain child support and alimony payments. However, nothing could be further from the truth. This bankruptcy reform protects the financial security of women and children by giving them a higher priority than under current law.

The legislation closes loopholes that allow some debtors to use the current system to delay or even evade child support and alimony payments. The bill recognizes that no obligation is more important than that of a parent to his or her children.

Currently, child support payments are the seventh priority, behind such things as attorney's fees. Make no mistake about this, H.R. 833 puts women and children first, at the head of the list. We should provide greater protection to families who are owed child support, and this bill will do just that.

The bill also address other problems, including needs-based bankruptcy. The heart of this legislation is a needs-based formula that separates filers into Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 based upon their ability to pay. While many families may face job loss, divorce or medical bills, and therefore legitimately need the protection provided by the Bankruptcy Code, research has shown that some Chapter 7 filers actually have the capacity to repay some of what they owe.

The formula directs into Chapter 13 those filers who earn more than the national median income which is roughly $51,000 for a family of four, if they can pay all secured debt and at least 20 percent of unsecured non-priority debt.

This bill recognizes the need for consumer education and protection. It includes education provisions that will ensure that debtors are made aware of their options before they file for bankruptcy, including alternatives to bankruptcy such as credit counseling. And the bill cracks down on ''bankruptcy mills,'' law firms and other entities that push debtors into bankruptcy without fully explaining the consequences.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and the underlying legislation.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, as an original cosponsor of H.R. 833, I am pleased that this legislation has come to the floor in a timely manner. However, given the fact that this bill as well as the Defense Supplemental are the only major pieces of business this week, I do think that the Republican leadership should have afforded more Members the opportunity to offer amendments to this important and far-reaching legislation.

Madam Speaker, reform of the bankruptcy system in this country is indeed a major initiative. In this decade, the number of personal bankruptcy filings has skyrocketed, more than doubling in the past 8 years and increasing by an astonishing 400 percent since 1980.

Last year, more than 1.43 million Americans filed for personal bankruptcy. This is indeed an alarming trend, and it is especially alarming in light of the fact that the U.S. economy is booming and personal incomes are rising.

While there are certainly more individuals among these numbers who are seeking Chapter 7 bankruptcy relief as a last resort, there are also many in this number who are using the bankruptcy system to escape debts they are capable of paying.

As the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) said yesterday in the Committee on Rules, this bill is an attempt to achieve an appropriate balance between debtor and creditor rights. By establishing needs-based bankruptcy standards, this legislation seeks to ensure that those who need a fresh start will be given one but that those consumers who can afford to repay their debts from future income must do so.

While similar legislation was passed overwhelmingly by the House last year, there is still controversy surrounding this bill. The Committee on the Judiciary held 5 days of hearings and markup on this bill and took 28 recorded votes on amendments. In addition, 37 amendments were filed with the Committee on Rules.

Yet, this rule only makes in order 11 amendments, including a manager's amendment and an amendment in the nature of a substitute to be offered by the ranking member of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law, the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

The Nadler substitute retains much of the work of the committee but differs significantly from H.R. 833 by granting local judicial discretion in the determination about whether a debtor appropriately belongs in Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 bankruptcy. The Nadler substitute eliminates the provisions in the committee bill which establish new grounds for making credit card debt non-dischargeable and offers significantly different child support and alimony payment provisions.

Now, before my Republican colleagues jump in and say that this rule provide for 4½ hours of debate on amendments, including 1 hour on the Nadler substitute, as well as 1 hour of general debate in addition to this hour on the rule, let me note for the record two of the amendments which the Republican majority voted to exclude from consideration: first, an amendment offered by the subcommittee ranking member which would have significantly altered the bill's treatment of child support payments; and, second, an amendment by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, relating to claims on credit card debt in those cases where the debtor had not been informed of the terms of the account agreement.

These are not insignificant amendments, Madam Speaker, and I believe the House should have the opportunity to discuss these issues. As such, I would urge Members to vote no on the previous question so that these two amendments might be added to the list of amendments that the House will consider today. I cannot buy the argument that just because the House will have 6 hours and some odd minutes of debate on this bill, we do not have time to consider additional amendments.

Madam Speaker, my colleague from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) has noted that the bill does contain a provision which would allow States to opt out of the homestead exemption cap imposed by the bill. I realize this is a matter of some controversy; but, for the State of Texas, this is an issue of major and fundamental importance. This matter is far from resolved, but I am pleased that two amendments relating to the effective date of the cap, which were imposed by my colleague from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN), were included in the manager's amendment.

Madam Speaker, while it is important that the House proceed to the consideration of this important legislative proposal early in the session, it is still early enough for the House to have a complete debate on this matter. I am a strong supporter of this bill, as are many of my colleagues here in this body. Consideration of a few additional amendments would have only added time to this debate, time which would have given the House the opportunity to fully air the issues that affect consumers across the country.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE).

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Madam Speaker, I thank my friend from Texas for yielding me this time.

I rise in support of this fair and balanced rule, which governs consideration of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.

This rule is very generous to the minority. Madam Speaker, out of 11 amendments the House will have the opportunity to debate and vote upon today, seven are offered by Democrats, one is bipartisan, and only three are offered by Republicans. All told, the House will have 6½ hours to debate their bill, which is very similar to legislation that passed the House last year by an overwhelming margin of 300 to 125.

Madam Speaker, bankruptcy law is nothing if not complex, but the goals of bankruptcy reform are fairly simple and straightforward. Today, we are seeking to restore the values of personal responsibility and integrity to an abused bankruptcy system.

The unfortunate fact is that bankruptcy is no longer a rare occurrence among many American consumers who today are becoming dangerously comfortable with the concept of credit and debt.

Last year, more than 1.4 million bankruptcy cases were filed. That is a 500 percent increase since 1980. And the case load is growing, even as our country enjoys economic prosperity and low unemployment.

Madam Speaker, we all understand that sometimes unforeseen circumstances, often out of our control, can lead to the financial ruin of an individual, a family or a business. Our bankruptcy laws are designed to help the truly needy, honest citizen when he finds himself in an impossible situation. We all see a societal good in that. That is one of the things that makes this Nation great.

However, when intelligent citizens ignore basic common sense by spending outside of their means, we need to establish a reasonable level of accountability and demand some personal responsibility to protect those who have extended credit to them in good faith.

That is not to say that creditors do not have some lessons to make about poor decision-making and high-risk lending; and there are some steps we take to urge responsible behavior among creditors.

□ 1115

Madam Speaker, through this legislation we are asking individuals who apply for bankruptcy if at all possible to repay their debts to the extent that they are able. The bill sets up a needs-based mechanism to determine how much debtors can reasonably be expected to pay.

This needs-based approach, based on current IRS standards, strengthens existing law to weed out abusers of the system who want all their debts dismissed but actually have the means to pay some of them. These individuals will be directed to a repayment plan so their creditors can collect at least some of what they are owed.

This is a fair approach that will not excuse reckless spending but offers needed relief for those who are in a hopeless situation and need a fresh start to get back on their feet. And I am happy to say that the bill puts alimony and child support at the very top of the list. This bill recognizes that a parent's financial responsibility to his or her child takes priority above all other obligations, and I am pleased to report that Ohio's Attorney General supports the child support provisions of the bill, as do many other attorneys general throughout this Nation who are on the front lines, in the trenches, of child support enforcement and collection.

Decreasing the number of bankruptcies in America requires more than new standards to guide repayments. We also must address the factors that lead to bad spending decisions in the first place. This act helps to educate consumers by requiring credit card companies to disclose the long-term costs of paying only the minimum balance each month.

The bill also directs the Federal Reserve Board to study whether consumers indeed have adequate information about the consequences of borrowing beyond their means. Further, the bill will direct the General Accounting Office to examine whether extending credit to college students is contributing to a large extent to the bankruptcy rate.

By combining these consumer protections with requirements that demand personal responsibility, the Bankruptcy Reform Act strikes a balance between the rights of debtors and creditors. At the same time this bill keeps the safety net in place for honest individuals who are in a hole of debt that they cannot climb out of without a helping hand.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this fair rule and the underlying legislation which will restore some integrity to our bankruptcy laws.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. Those who support the so-called means test principle and other provisions of this bill say they wish to end the use of the Bankruptcy Code as a financial planning tool for those who would scam the system. Yet they have denied the House the opportunity to end once and for all the most flagrant and notorious abuse of the Bankruptcy Code.

The bill would subject middle-income debtors to elaborate new restrictions. Yet it leaves in place a loophole that allows wealthy debtors to buy expensive homes in one of the handful of States such as Texas or Florida with an unlimited homestead exemption, declare bankruptcy and continue to enjoy a life of luxury while their creditors get little or nothing. If we are truly serious about curtailing abuse of the bankruptcy system, this is the place to start:

With the owner of the failed Ohio S&L who paid off only a fraction of $300 million in bankruptcy claims while keeping his multimillion dollar ranch in Florida. Or with the convicted Wall Street financier who filed bankruptcy while owing billions of dollars in debts and fines but still kept his $3 million beach front mansion. Or the movie actor, Burt Reynolds, who was more than $10 million in debt but kept his $2.5 million home while his creditors received 20 cents on the dollar.

Now, I do not suggest that these abuses happen every day. But every time they occur, they bring the fairness and rationality of the bankruptcy system into disrepute. That is why the National Bankruptcy Review Commission urged Congress to place a uniform national cap on the amount of equity that could be claimed under the homestead exemption.

At subcommittee I offered an amendment to cap the exemption at $250,000. My amendment was adopted by an overwhelming vote but it was not allowed to stand. When the full committee took up the bill, the provision was amended to permit individual States to opt out, in effect returning us to the current law.

Supporters of the opt-out provision argued that a Federal cap on the homestead exemption would violate States rights. This is certainly ironic, Madam Speaker, because by setting the cap at $250,000, we had expressly left in place the lower thresholds in effect in every one of the 45 States that have established a cap of their own. In other words, those 45 States, in effect, will be subsidizing deadbeats in the remaining five States if this bill passes.

To say the Congress should set no cap at all is to say we must stand by while a handful of States undermine the uniform enforcement of a Federal statutory scheme. That is like legislating a Federal income tax and leaving it to the State legislatures to determine what will count as a business deduction.

By refusing to fix this problem, the authors of this bill have revealed the double standards by which they have gone about these so-called reforms. They ask us to perpetuate the current inequities in the treatment of debtors who live in different States, and they ask us to create new inequities in the treatment of debtors of different financial means.

This is unfair, Madam Speaker, and it is poor public policy. I urge my colleagues to oppose this rule.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CHABOT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Speaker, despite some of the rhetoric on the other side of the aisle, H.R. 833 is a pro-consumer piece of legislation. That is, pro-responsible consumer. H.R. 833 protects individuals and businesses from having to pick up the tab for irresponsible debtors, some of whom are capable of paying off a significant portion of their debts.

This legislation establishes a clear causal link between a debtor's ability to pay and the availability of Chapter 7 bankruptcy remedies. In other words, it makes those who can afford to pay their debts pay.

There are, of course, some people who truly have a legitimate need to declare bankruptcy. At times, hardworking people come up against extraordinary circumstances. Family illness, disability, or the loss of spouse may necessitate the need to seek relief. H.R. 833 protects these individuals.

Too frequently, however, people who have the financial ability or earnings potential to repay their debts are seeking an easy way out. While this may prove convenient for the debtor, it is not fair to their friends and neighbors who are stuck with their bills. The average American family pays $550 per year in a bad debt tax in the form of higher prices and increased interest rates to cover the economic cost associated with excessive bankruptcy filings.

I am so concerned about the shifting of financial obligations from neighbor to neighbor that I introduced language at the subcommittee level that will relieve at least some of the burden for the 42 million Americans who live in our Nation's cooperatives and condominiums and homeowner associations. With all too much regularity, bankrupt individuals have been abandoning their homes to avoid paying their share of community assessments. Vacant or occupied, the unit continues to receive a wide spectrum of benefits that enhance the inherent value of the property while neighbors are left to pick up the tab through an increase in association fees.

Nationally, consumer bankruptcies reached a record 1.4 million filings in 1997 and are projected to be even higher this year. What makes these numbers significant and particularly alarming is the fact that this trend began in 1994, during a time of solid economic growth, low inflation and low unemployment.

The primary culprit for this dramatic increase is a system that allows consumers to evade personal responsibility for their debts too easily. People who make above the national median income and can afford to pay off a significant portion of their debt should not be allowed to file under Chapter 7 bankruptcy. This bill puts those individuals where they belong, in Chapter 13, where they will be given a generous 5 years to establish a fair repayment plan and get their financial house in order.

Opponents of H.R. 833 are offering a substitute today that will do little or nothing to curb the abuses prevalent in our current system. For instance, the substitute would strike from the bill key provisions that prevent debtors from loading up on credit card debt just before declaring bankruptcy and obtaining a complete discharge of that debt upon filing. These opponents actually think that individuals should not be held responsible for taking huge cash advances and purchasing luxury goods just prior to filing bankruptcy. Unfortunately, this practice has become far too common as more and more individuals have begun using bankruptcy as a financial planning tool.

Madam Speaker, I fully support H.R. 833 and urge my colleagues to do the same and vote ''yes'' for fair and balanced bankruptcy reform.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

Mr. NADLER. Madam Speaker, I rise in opposition to this closed rule. Although for the second Congress in a row, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, has promised to seek the most open rule possible, this certainly is not it. Of the 37 amendments filed, only 11 were made in order. Of those only four, including the Hyde-Conyers bipartisan amendment, can be said to come from Members who have expressed problems with the bill. Four out of 37.

We will not have a real debate on consumer protection or on requiring creditor as well as debtor responsibility because the Delahunt-LaFalce amendment was not made in order. We will not have a real debate on child and family support—which this bill murders—because my amendment, which was written with the help of the National Women's Law Center and which would have placed debts to the family higher than debts to the government, and would have prevented the government from blocking a Chapter 13 reorganization plan if it provided for payments to family and other creditors but not payment in full in arrears to the government, was not made in order.

We cannot debate those issues. We will not be allowed to vote on whether people who terrorize and murder women and their doctors should be allowed to discharge their civil debts as a result of such terrorist actions. Their civil penalties, should they be able to discharge their penalties in bankruptcy? We had such an amendment, but evidently clinic bombers and people who harass women seeking health care services and who violate the law to push their political agenda have more influence at the Committee on Rules than the bipartisan supporters of this amendment. The gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) and I had asked that in a bill which makes drunk boating debts nondischargeable, we could at least have a vote on making debts of clinic bombers nondischargeable.

Madam Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) spoke of the fact that this bill allows the homestead exemption in essence to continue, in some States unlimited. I think it is unfair but that is what the bill does.

But we will not have a vote on my amendment that would have said, well, if you are going to allow States to have an unlimited homestead exemption for the rich, how about requiring that you have at least a limited homestead exemption for the poor? In my own State of New York, the homestead exemption is $9,500. Try to buy a house for $9,500.

□ 1130

The Federal homestead exemption is 16,150, not exactly princely, but we are not going to have a debate or a vote on the amendment that would have said, ''If you're going to allow millionaires to have unlimited homestead exemptions in some States, at least require that all States allow the use of the Federal minimum homestead exemption of $16,000.''

We have to be fair to the rich, but we cannot be fair to the middle income and the poor.

Madam Speaker, this bill hurts families, it hurts businesses, it will increase costs to the system, and it is opposed by most of the Nation's bankruptcy experts.

We will not have a vote on the amendment to stop the provisions of this bill from killing small businesses. That amendment was not made in order.

Many small businesses today, Madam Speaker, go bankrupt, they go into a Chapter 11 reorganization, they are entitled to try to be protected from their debts for a while while they work things out, and then they are saved, and they get on with it, they pay their debts, and a business and jobs are saved.

Some businesses do not make it. They are liquidated.

This bill puts so many new restrictions and burdens on small businesses, not big businesses, small businesses in bankruptcy proceedings, that we are told by the Small Business Administration and by others that it will result in a lot of small businesses that could have been saved going bankrupt.

We had an amendment in committee defeated on a party line vote, an amendment in the committee that said that if the judge makes a finding of fact that imposing those restrictions would cost five or more jobs, the judge would have the discretion not to have these new restrictions on the small business so that the jobs could be saved and the business could be saved. That was voted down. The Committee on Rules thinks we should not have a chance to debate and vote on that provision on the floor.

Should tractors and other farm implements in a family farm going bankrupt, should those tractors and farm implements be saved to help keep the farm in running order, or must they be surrendered to the government for payment of back taxes?

Madam Speaker, we are not going to have a vote or a discussion of that either because, apparently, the Committee on Rules does not think saving family farms is important, or allowing the farmer in bankruptcy to keep his tractor, or his hoe, or whatever else it may be.

The government's claim comes first, and to heck with the farmers.

This bill, as I said, hurts families, it hurts small businesses, it hurts farmers, it hurts child support collectors, it hurts children, it will increase costs to the system, and it is opposed by most of the Nation's bankruptcy experts. The administration will veto the bill unless it is moderated, and we should support the administration's efforts to negotiate a good bill. That can only happen if we deny the sponsors of this bill the supermajority they need to roll the special interest legislation through unmodified. They have crafted this rule to avoid the really tough issues, so we must insist that those issues be considered today by rejecting the previous question.

If the previous question is rejected, the minority will ask the two amendments be made in order, one which will protect child and spousal support, which the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) and I had hoped to offer, and one which would hold credit card lenders accountable and put an end to some of the most abusive practices which would have been offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAFALCE). We must defeat the previous question or we will not have an opportunity to consider placing some balance in this bill.

So, Madam Speaker, I urge a no vote on the previous question, on the rule and on the bill.

Madam Speaker, this rule is part of a pattern of silencing debate, of rushing through a bad bill with no serious consideration, a bill which will have implications for many, many years, and this rule deserves to be defeated.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER), who is subcommittee chairman of the Subcommittee on Rules and Organization of the House.

Mr. LINDER. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 158, a fair, structured rule for consideration of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.

The Committee on Rules has done its best to accommodate Members who filed amendments with the committee. As has been stated, we have been more than fair in permitting seven Democrat amendments, three Republican amendments and one bipartisan amendment. We faced numerous amendments in the Committee on Rules, and we did our best to allow an open debate on most key issues in dispute.

On the substance of the bill, the statistics on U.S. bankruptcy filings are frightening. Bankruptcies have increased more than 400 percent since 1980. In the past, it was possible to blame many bankruptcies on recessions or poor economic situation. Today, however, we face record numbers of bankruptcy filings at a time of economic growth and low unemployment.

If we take these factors into account, we can realistically come to only one conclusion: bankruptcies of convenience have provided a loophole for those who are financially able to pay their debts but simply have found a way to avoid personal responsibility and escape their financial responsibilities.

This bill is a continuation of our efforts to advance the values of personal responsibility. In the welfare bill, we thought that helping the poor escape the welfare trap, restoring the dignity of work and reviving individual responsibility would help people rise from generation after generation of despair. This bankruptcy bill is the Congress' next step in cultivating personal responsibility and accountability.

I expect that we will hear more hollow charges that we are being heartless and cruel. Nonetheless, the abusers of the bankruptcy laws need to receive a message that Federal bankruptcy laws are not a haven for personal fiscal irresponsibility. If a debtor has the ability to pay the debts that have been accumulated, then they must be held accountable.

Under this bill, effective and compassionate bankruptcy relief will continue to be available for Americans who need it. But we cannot condone, however, those who file for bankruptcy relief under Chapter 7 and have the capacity to pay at least some of their debts. In order to ensure that those who can pay actually do pay, this legislation set in motion a needs-based mechanism.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and the Committee on the Judiciary have done their legislative duty in crafting a bill that ensures the debtor's rights to a fresh start and protects the system from flagrant abuses from those who can pay their bills. This is a great opportunity to equalize the needs of the debtor and the rights of the creditor.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this rule so that we may pass this important legislation.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

I rise in opposition to the rule. I have concerns about the bill, but I will reserve a discussion of those concerns for the debate on the bill. But my concerns are about the rule itself and the terms under which we will conduct this debate.

Here is the copy of the bill that we are considering today. It is 314 pages long.

Here is a list of the amendments that have been offered to this bill that Members of this House would like to offer as amendments to this major important piece of legislation. There are 37 amendments, proposed amendments, on this list. The Committee on Rules decided that it would make in order only 11 of those amendments.

Now one of those 11 is an amendment by the manager who has had this bill under his control from the very day it was filed. So for all practical purposes the Committee on Rules has seen fit to allow only 10 other Members to offer amendments on this important bill, and so we cannot have a full and fair and democratic debate and allow our constituents to bring their concerns about the content of this bill to the floor of the House.

Madam Speaker, that is really what this rules debate is about. Some of the amendments that were not made in order by the Committee on Rules were amendments that were voted on in the Committee on the Judiciary, on which I sit, and the Committee on the Judiciary divided half and half. There are three of those amendments on the list, and we did not even have an affirmative opinion of the Committee on the Judiciary members about whether those were good or bad amendments, and now we cannot bring those amendments to the floor of the House and have a full and fair debate among our colleagues to allow all of the members to work their will on those amendments.

So in a sense this debate on the rule is about what rights we have as Members of this House to have our voices heard and have the voices of our constituents heard on important legislation.

Three hundred and some pages long; only 10 amendments.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), the subcommittee chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law.

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, we say that we are happy with the crafting by the Committee on Rules of the procedure by which this debate will go forward. We should all be happy with it because it reflects in a grand way the bipartisan manner in which this entire issue was promulgated from the start.

In the last term the cosponsorship alone of a vehicle in that stage of these proceedings was substantially bipartisan. The votes that were undertaken, both in the House and in the general debate and then later in the conference report, reflected a gigantic bipartisan vote, 300 votes plus. By any measure, that turns out to be bipartisan.

Now when we reintroduced the bill this year, it has, still does have, substantial numbers of the minority as part of the cosponsorship. It is, indeed, a bipartisan vehicle in this term that we are visiting.

On top of that, in the hearings that were held, some eight of them by the subcommittee and with over 70 witnesses to supplement the some 50 or 60 witnesses that we had last term, all of them gave testimony from which was drawn here and there special features which we put into the bill showing not just bipartisanship thus far but nonpartisanship; that is, drawing from the witnesses' actual phraseology and suggestions that became part of this bill. That makes it a balanced, well-apportioned bill from a policy standpoint and from a partisan standpoint, if we want to allow it to be described as that.

On top of that, in the subcommittee we adopted proposals made by the minority. We did so in the full committee on the basis of assertions and offerings made by the minority.

So some of the provisions that are in this bill already are born of the opposite view side that expressed itself during the subcommittee and the full committee markups.

This is a balanced bill in many, many respects, in most all respects. What the Committee on Rules did in crafting this particular rule was to patiently reflect that bipartisanship, that balanced approach. Our colleagues' voices have been heard already in subcommittee and full committee in many different ways. They have been heard through their cohorts who have cosponsored this bill, and the final outcome will be a bipartisan one.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

Mr. BENTSEN. Madam Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 158, the rule providing for consideration of H.R. 833, the bankruptcy reform legislation.

While I am supportive of the rule, I want to compliment my colleague from Texas (Mr. FROST) and my colleague from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) for their assistance in allowing the manager's amendment to include two amendments which I had brought before the Committee on Rules yesterday.

□ 1145

I am concerned that this bill in particular, the underlying bill that we are going to consider later today if the rule is adopted, the bill includes section 147, which would establish a new Federal standard for homestead exemptions, which I believe is both unnecessary and unfair.

It includes two provisions, one which would require a resident to reside in their homestead for 2 years before they can enjoy protections afforded by State law, and it would prohibit them from transferring assets into their homestead during that period.

Additionally, the bill, during consideration of the bill in the full committee two more amendments were added, one which would supersede State homestead laws and overturn more than 200 years of precedent of allowing States the right to make determinations about what property can be exempted under bankruptcy filings.

The first amendment added a new provision that would cap the amount of equity that a consumer can protect during a bankruptcy at $250,000. This would affect the States of Texas, Florida, Kansas, Minnesota, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

Now, the second amendment, which was a compromise, would allow States to opt out of this new Federal standard. While I appreciate that this provision will provide States with an opportunity to preserve their State homestead laws, I am concerned that the opt-out provision raises new problems.

In particular, those States where the legislatures meet only periodically, homeowners would be subject to this new cap until the next legislative session. For instance, in the State of Texas our session ends on May 30 this year and does not meet again until January of 2001.

The Committee on Rules yesterday agreed to accept the second Bentsen amendment which would make the date of enactment of the cap at the end of the next legislative session of the State, and for that I am appreciative.

The third amendment that I offered, which the committee accepted and put in the manager's amendment, would allow States to prospectively opt out of the homestead cap prior to the bill being enacted in law.

I want to commend the Members of the committee for accepting these amendments. I think it is appropriate. Again, there is no empirical evidence of abuse or any problem, substantial problems, with the homestead laws as the States have designed them. This is something that has been left up to the States. It is their prerogative and we ought to continue it that way.

I would just say in the State of Texas our homestead laws go back prior to Texas becoming part of the Union, when we were a Republic. It has been in the State constitution since we have been a State. It is something that ought to be left up to the State of Texas. This is supported by Governor Bush, our current Lieutenant Governor Perry and the Speaker of the House Pete Laney.

I encourage my colleagues to vote to adopt the rule and the manager's amendment.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. BRYANT), who is the vice chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law.

Mr. BRYANT. Madam Speaker, I want to just add an echo to what our chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), said about the rule. I think it is a very good rule in this case. This bill itself, H.R. 833, is a product of a number of years of work, including last session up to the point of actually getting a conference report, an agreement on a bankruptcy bill, together with the renewed debate this year in this Congress in the full committee, something like 5 or 6 days of debate, healthy debate on the merits and some would say lack of merits of this bankruptcy reform bill.

H.R. 833 is a necessary bill, and this is a good rule to support to move that bill forward. H.R. 833 restores fairness and common sense and personal responsibility to a bankruptcy code that, in many ways, is out of control. Current bankruptcy filings are about triple the level of the early 1980s, when the rates of interest and unemployment were significantly higher than today.

In other words, even in the robust economy that we are living in today, bankruptcies are more than triple what they were in past times. To make the situation worse, many of the petitioners who file under Chapter 7, which is the straight bankruptcy, doing away with all the debts provision, many of these are simply walking away without any responsibility for any of their debts. This, despite the fact that many have the ability to repay at least a portion of the debts they owe.

It is because of these figures and trends that this reform is needed to handle the increasing number of petitions.

This bill also creates a way to determine the amount of relief a debtor needs, and requires individuals to repay what they can. There is a formula it establishes there.

Under the compromise between the House and Senate versions of this bill last year, this legislation combines the best aspects of both the approaches of this means testing, a bright line standard for measuring the repayment capacity and preserving the right of a debtor in bankruptcy to have a judge review its case if there are unique circumstances that can be taken into account.

The bill also establishes child support and alimony priorities. The bill significantly improves current law by raising child support and alimony payments to the first priority in a bankruptcy proceeding, thus putting the needs of the family and children where they belong, ahead of others.

In addition, after bankruptcy, the bill requires all child support and alimony obligations to be paid before unsecured debt. There is also a debtor's bill of rights. This protects consumers from law firms and other entities that might inappropriately steer consumers into filing bankruptcy petitions without adequately informing them of the other options that may be available to them.

This is sound legislation. It offers protection to both the debtors and creditors. I very much appreciate the efforts of our chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), and other colleagues who are helping move this bill along. Again, I would urge my colleagues to vote for this rule and later on for the bill as it moves forward.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Speaker, this legislation and the underlying rule, the rule that we are addressing right now, have the capacity of being a bipartisan piece of legislation.

I remind my colleagues that when we reformed the Bankruptcy Code in the 1970s we took 5 years, and I think we had a legislative initiative that lasted until this time, 1999. I am concerned about this rule because I think we would have been better off if we had maintained or had an open rule to answer some of the concerns that many of us have expressed.

I am delighted to see the Hyde-Conyers amendment that alters the very mean-spirited means test, which the Bankruptcy Review Commission did not support itself, because the means test provides a difficult hurdle for debtors who are truly suffering from catastrophic illnesses and other unfortunate times that would result in them filing for bankruptcy. It is an enormous hurdle for them to overcome.

In addition, the Committee on Rules did not allow an amendment that I proposed that would take out Social Security income in the accounting for current monthly income. So that means, for example, Madam Speaker, that in fact one would have the Social Security as a part of determining whether or not they would move from Chapter 13 to Chapter 7. At the same time, they did not protect those individuals who would sue HMOs for fraudulent activities, to protect against the HMOs filing for bankruptcy.

The other portion, Madam Speaker, that I think is extremely important, I am grateful for the amendment we had in committee that dealt with the homestead issue in the State of Texas, where at least we have the ability to opt out. I certainly join in the fact that that has helped the State of Texas by the Bentsen amendments, in that now they can opt out as opposed to waiting until the bill's enactment.

But we would have done better if we had allowed this bill to be an open rule, because even with some of the amendments we have not yet answered the full question dealing with the child support, which really still raises its ugly head inasmuch as we still have the custodial parent, male or female, fighting the government in order to get child support payments.

I think this rule could have been improved. I think we should vote ''no'' on this rule, and I wish we had committed ourselves to an open discussion by having an open rule.

Madam Speaker, I rise today to speak against this rule, which frames the debate on H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999. In my estimation, the modified closed rule that has been recommended by the Committee merely gives us another instance in which House leadership has steam-rolled a bill, filled with perks for corporate America, through the House in the name of ''reform''. I would like to tell you, this bill in no way reforms bankruptcy, rather, it merely changes the rules of the game so that consumers will be even more helpless to defend themselves from multi-million dollar creditors practicing unhealthy and reckless lending practices.

As a Member of the Judiciary Committee, I have been privileged enough to watch the development of this bill from its inception. I have seen the bill undergo no substantial changes after a week and a half of markups. I have seen meaningful amendments promoted by the Chairman of the Committee rebuffed by the Members of his own party. I have seen the good work of many of my Democratic colleagues be summarily dismissed.

Having just come out of Committee just this Tuesday, I remember the votes well. I remember the Republicans saying no to an amendment I offered to protect the recipients of federal disaster assistance. A vote saying no to the recipients of Social Security. A vote saying no to children who receive child support. A vote saying no to veterans. And all the while, the Republicans were quick to cast their votes to protect tobacco companies that are poisoning our children. They voted to protect credit card companies from reasonable reporting requirements that would have been required under an amendment offered by Congressman DELAHUNT. They moved the bill along despite an amendment I would have offered that would have held HMOs and other managed care entities responsible in cases where they have committed fraud.

Even worse, this bill has been moved along without its inspection by the Banking and Financial Services Committee. This is true even though this bill touches and concerns issues that directly relate to the practices employed by lenders and creditors of all sorts.

And now here we are today debating the rule of debate for this bill. It is a bill that limits amendments, which is unacceptable for a bill this far-reaching. Furthermore, it is a rule that omitted a great number of important amendments that were presented to the Rules Committee yesterday. Those include amendments that would have allowed the exclusion of social security from ''current monthly income'', thereby making bankruptcy less onerous to our seniors, and one which would have kept tobacco companies from manipulating the bankruptcy system.

Other very good and important amendments were also left at the table, such as the Nadler-Morella Amendment that would have gone after those terrorists that intentionally utilize the bankruptcy system to protect them from liability when they bomb women's health clinics. We will also not get to discuss any of the amendments that would have removed the new protections available to credit card companies under this bill when they engaged in reckless lending. This is not the way that we should proceed on this bill, and therefore, I urge my colleagues to vote against this rule.

Debate on this bill should be focused squarely on the issues that hurt it the most, so that it can be improved to a level where we can all vote for it. As reported by the Congressional Research Service, this bill is opposed by Public Citizen, the Consumer's Union, the AFL–CIO, the Consumer Federation of America, UAW, UNITE, the National Partnership, the American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), and the National Women's Law Center. How can we move forward without addressing any of the issues that these groups are clamoring about? How can we ignore amendments aimed squarely at improving the way this bill handles domestic support, or social security, or credit counseling?

Thankfully, the rule does provide for a Democratic Substitute to this bill being offered by Congressmen CONYERS, NADLER, and MEEHAN. This will give many of us the opportunity to vote for a bill that truly reforms bankruptcy without destroying its very principles. That substitute provides a realistic means test that takes into account the debtor's actual income and expenses; modifies the child support provisions in this bill to take away the new special rights given to credit-card companies; requires credit card lenders to provide the necessary information to its customers that they need to make informed decisions about their finances; and eliminates the new grounds for making credit card debts nondischargeable. We ought to pass this substitute if we are going to have a real bankruptcy reform, and I ask each of you to support it when it comes to a vote later this afternoon.

Even then, I hope that every Member will vote against this rule, and send it back to the Rules Committee so that we can have a meaningful debate on the issues that will make this a bill worthy of being signed into law.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Orlando, Florida (Mr. MCCOLLUM), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Crime.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) for yielding me this time.

Madam Speaker, I rise today to support the rule and the underlying bill. I think what is important for us to understand as we consider this bankruptcy bill today is that the heart of this bill is needs-based reform. It needs to be kept as strong as possible.

What is needs-based reform? It is simple. If someone can reasonably repay some of their debts, they should. Does this mean the debtor cannot declare bankruptcy? Not at all. It only means that the debtor has to use Chapter 13 to repay some debt if he can afford to do it, rather than Chapter 7.

Let me make it clear. If someone is in Chapter 13, they are in bankruptcy. The needs-based test does not affect their ability to declare bankruptcy. The needs-based test asks can a person reasonably repay some of their debts while they are in bankruptcy.

How does the test determine what is reasonable? We do the obvious and compare the debtor's income with other debts and living expenses, and if the debtor has a little income and a lot of debt the needs-based test will not affect them.

For those who suffer catastrophic illness or lose their jobs or experience other catastrophic events, this reform will not affect them, but those who can afford to pay back their debt, it will affect them.

Many, unfortunately, are using the Bankruptcy Code for financial planning or mere convenience. It will affect upper-income individuals who declare bankruptcy not because they have to but because they want to. Even for these folks, they will still be able to declare bankruptcy but they will have to repay some of their debt, what they can.

This is such common sense that many Americans think this is already the way the bankruptcy system works, but it does not work that way and that is why we are here today, to restore integrity and responsibility and common sense to the system.

Why should Americans care? Because bankruptcy will cost our Nation more than $50 billion in 1998 alone. That translates into over $550 for every household in higher costs for goods and services and credit. It hurts responsible consumers who pay the price in the form of higher costs for goods, services and credit.

Bankruptcies have increased about 400 percent since 1980. Last year there were more than 1.4 million filings. That is more than one bankruptcy in every 100 American households. This rate of increase is occurring not in the midst of a recession but during what are by all accounts great economic times. From 1986 to the present time, real per capita annual disposable income grew by over 13 percent but personal bankruptcies more than doubled.

We need to have this bankruptcy reform. We need the needs-based reform. We need to adopt this rule and get on with the bill today.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Madam Speaker, I have supported this bankruptcy legislation in the past. I believe that it is important to exercise personal responsibility. There have been some abuses of the system. While the bill was not perfect and needed further perfection, I thought it was generally in the right direction.

I am troubled about the bill, however, in its form today, because while most of the focus has been on individuals who did not engage in personal responsibility, there have also been instances in this country of corporate citizens who did not demonstrate any sense of responsibility. Indeed, since the consideration of this bill in the last session, I was particularly troubled by the problem of Dorothy Doyle.

I do not know Dorothy but I have read some of her plight. I know that she is not the only one who suffered from this situation. Dorothy is an 87-year-old widow, a retired Pentagon secretary, who required about $240 a day in nursing care because of her physical condition. Fortunately for her, her younger sister decided that there was a solution to her problems and that together they would purchase a continuing care living arrangement, and they did that.

They moved into the Park Regency Retirement Center out in Scottsdale, Arizona, and they invested a substantial amount of their life savings and received, in turn, a lifetime guarantee. Within 9 months of paying their entrance fees, they were faced with a meeting in the dining room at the Park Regency where the owner declared that he had lost a lot of money in his offshore investments and that he was filing for bankruptcy.

Well, Dorothy and her sister Creta, like a number of other seniors who have invested their lifetime savings in these facilities, of which there are some 2,700 across the country, found themselves in a situation where they had no good remedy.

□ 1200

They had advanced this money as an interest-free loan to get into the facility, their life's savings, and they were unsecured creditors.

So to address the plight of Dorothy and Creta and other seniors across the country, I advanced an amendment that simply says, let us treat them as priority creditors. Let us recognize that if someone has invested their life's savings in an effort to try to get the health care and the nursing care that they need in our society, that they deserve some protection also.

Unfortunately, the Committee on Rules decided to not make that amendment in order. Apparently responsibility does not apply to everyone, does not apply to such irresponsible corporate citizens. I would urge a vote against the rule.

Mr. FROST. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I urge Members to vote no on the previous question. If the previous question is defeated, I will offer an amendment to the rule that will make in order two amendments.

The first amendment would be the Nadler/Jackson-Lee amendment, that addresses treatment of child support payments in bankruptcy.

The second amendment would be the Delahunt/LaFalce/Watt/Roybal-Allard amendment, which would disallow bankruptcy claims for consumer credit card debt if, at the time of solicitation to open an account, the debtor was not informed in writing of certain disclosure factors.

These amendments were offered in the Committee on Rules last night and, unfortunately, were defeated on a party-line vote. Madam Speaker, these are important amendments and deserve to be considered by the entire House.

Madam Speaker, this vote, the vote on whether to order the previous question on a special rule, is not merely a procedural vote. A vote against ordering the previous question is a vote against the Republican majority agenda and a vote to allow the opposition, at least for the moment, to offer an alternative plan. It is a vote about what the House should be debating.

Mr. Clarence Cannon's Precedents of the House of Representatives, (VI, 308–311) describes the vote on the previous question on the rule as "a motion to direct or control the consideration of the subject before the House being made by the Member in charge." To defeat the previous question is to give the opposition a chance to decide the subject before the House. Cannon cites the Speaker's ruling of January 13, 1920, to the effect that "the refusal of the House to sustain the demand for the previous question passes the control of the resolution to the opposition" in order to offer an amendment. On March 15, 1909, a member of the majority party offered a rule resolution. The House defeated the previous question and a member of the opposition rose to a parliamentary inquiry, asking who was entitled to recognition. Speaker Joseph G. Cannon (R-Illinois) said: "The previous question having been refused, the gentleman from New York, Mr. Fitzgerald, who had asked the gentleman to yield to him for an amendment, is entitled to the first recognition."

Because the vote today may look bad for the Republican majority they will say "the vote on the previous question is simply a vote on whether to proceed to an immediate vote on adopting the resolution . . . [and] has no substantive legislative or policy implications whatsoever." But that is not what they have always said. Listen to the Republican Leadership Manual on the Legislative Process in the United States House of Representatives, (6th edition, page 135). Here's how the Republicans describe the previous question vote in their own manual:

Although it is generally not possible to amend the rule because the majority Member controlling the time will not yield for the purpose of offering an amendment, the same result may be achieved by voting down the previous question on the rule . . . When the motion for the previous question is defeated, control of the time passes to the Member who led the opposition to ordering the previous question. That Member, because he then controls the time, may offer an amendment to the rule, or yield for the purpose of amendment.''

Deschler's Procedure in the U.S. House of Representatives, the subchapter titled ''Amending Special Rules'' states: ''a refusal to order the previous question on such a rule [a special rule reported from the Committee on Rules] opens the resolution to amendment and further debate.'' (Chapter 21, section 21.2) Section 21.3 continues:

Upon rejection of the motion for the previous question on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, control shifts to the Member leading the opposition to the previous question, who may offer a proper amendment or motion and who controls the time for debate thereon.''

The vote on the previous question on a rule does have substantive policy implications. It is one of the only available tools for those who oppose the Republican majority's agenda to offer an alternative plan.

Madam Speaker, I include for the RECORD the text of the amendment and extraneous materials.

The material referred to is as follows:

PREVIOUS QUESTION ON H. RES. 158—H.R. 833—BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT

At the end of the resolution add the following new sections:

''Sec. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of this resolution, it shall be in order to consider the amendments specified in section 3 of this resolution as though they were after the amendment numbered 11 in House Report 106–126. The amendment numbered 12 may be offered only by Representative Nadler or Representative Jackson-Lee or a designee and shall be debatable for 30 minutes. The amendment numbered 13 may be offered only be Representative Delahunt or Representative LaFalce or Representative Watt or Representative Roybal-Allard or a designee and shall be debatable for 40 minutes.

''Sec. 3. The amendments described in section 2 are as follows:

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 833, AS REPORTED; OFFERED BY MR. NADLER OF NEW YORK

Page 15, strike lines 18 and 19, and insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

not otherwise a dependent, but excludes—

''(A) payments to victims of war crimes or crimes against humanity; and

''(B) payments received in satisfaction of a domestic support obligation;'';

Beginning on page 81, strike line 15 and all that follows through line 10 on page 82 (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate).

Beginning on page 83, strike line 1 and all that follows through line 7 on page 84 (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate).

Beginning on page 86, strike line 1 and all that follows through line 7 on page 90, and insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

SEC. 140. DEFINITION OF DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION.

Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (12A); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

(14A) 'domestic support obligation' means a debt that accrues before or after the entry of an order for relief under this title that is—

''(A) owed to or recoverable by—

''(i) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or that child's legal guardian; or

''(ii) a governmental unit;

''(B) in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit) of such spouse, former spouse, or child, without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated;

''(C) established or subject to establishment before or after entry of an order for relief under this title, by reason of applicable provisions of—

''(i) a separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement;

''(ii) an order of a court of record; or

''(iii) a determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit; and

''(D) not assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless that obligation is assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent solely for the purpose of collecting the debt.''.

SEC. 141. REQUIREMENTS TO OBTAIN CONFIRMATION AND DISCHARGE IN CASES INVOLVING DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 1129(a), by adding at the end the following:

''(14) If the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order or statute for such obligation that first become payable after the date on which the petition is filed.'';

(2) in section 1325(a)—

(A) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(7) if the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order for such obligation that become payable after the date on which the petition is filed.''; and

(3) in section 1328(a) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting '', after a debtor who is required by a judicial or administrative order to pay a domestic support obligation certifies that all amounts payable under such order that are due on or after the date the petition was filed have been paid, and after a debtor who is required by a judicial or administrative order to pay a domestic support obligation, certifies that all amounts payable under such order that are due before the date on which the petition was filed if such amounts are due solely to a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or the parent of such child pursuant to a judicial or administrative order, unless the holder of such claim agrees to a different treatment of such claim'' after ''completion by the debtor of all payments under the plan''.

SEC. 142. EXCEPTIONS TO AUTOMATIC STAY IN DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION PROCEEDINGS.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 104 and 606, is amended—

(1) amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

''(2) under subsection (a)—

''(A) of the commencement or continuation of an action or proceeding for—

''(i) the establishment of paternity as a part of an effort to collect domestic support obligations; or

''(ii) the establishment or modification of an order for domestic support obligations; or

''(B) the collection of a domestic support obligation from property that is not property of the estate; or

''(C) under subsection (a) of—

''(i) the withholding of income for payment of a domestic support obligation pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute for such obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed; or

''(ii) the withholding of income for payment of a domestic support obligation owed directly to the spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or the parent of such child, pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute for such obligation that becomes payable before the date on which the petition is filed unless the court finds, after notice and hearing, that such withholding would render the plan infeasible;'';

(2) in paragraph (19), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(3) in paragraph (20), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (20) the following:

''(21) under subsection (a) with respect to—

''(A) the withholding, suspension, or restriction of drivers' licenses, professional and occupational licenses, and recreational licenses pursuant to State law, as specified in section 466(a)(16) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(16)) or with respect to the reporting of overdue support owed by an absent parent to any consumer reporting agency as specified in section 466(a)(7) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(7)) if such debt is payable solely to a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or the parent of such child pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute, unless the holder of such claim agrees to waive such withholding, suspension or restriction;

''(B) the interception of tax refunds, as specified in sections 464 and 466(a)(3) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 664 and 666(a)(3)) if such tax refund is payable solely to a spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or the parent of such child pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute; or

''(C) the enforcement of medical obligations as specified under title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.).''.

SEC. 143. EXEMPTION FOR RIGHT TO RECEIVE CERTAIN ALIMONY, MAINTENANCE, OR SUPPORT.

Section 522(b)(3) of title 11, United States Code, as so redesignated and amended by sections 115 and 203, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C) by striking ''and'' at the end,

(2) in subparagraph (D) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and'', and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (D) the following:

''(E) the right to receive—

''(i) alimony, maintenance , support, or property traceable to alimony, maintenance , support; or

''(ii) amounts payable as a result of a property settlement agreement with the debtor's spouse or former spouse; or of an interlocutory or final divorce decree; to the extent reasonably necessary for the support of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.''.

SEC. 144. AUTOMATIC STAY INAPPLICABLE TO CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE DEBTOR.

Section 362(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 144, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following:

''(C) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding concerning a child custody or visitation;

''(D) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding alleging domestic violence; or

''(E) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding seeking a dissolution of marriage, except to the extent the proceeding concerns property of the estate;''.

SEC. 145. CERTAIN POSTDISCHARGE PAYMENTS HELD IN TRUST.

Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(f) A creditor that receives a payment, or collects money or property, in satisfaction of all or part of any debt excepted from discharge under paragraphs (2) and (14A) of section 523(a) of this title shall hold such payment, such money, or such property in trust and, not later than 20 days after receiving such payment or collecting such money or property, shall distribute such payment, such money, or such property ratably to individuals who then hold debts in the nature of a domestic support obligation. Not later than 5 years after receiving such payment or collecting such money or property, such creditor shall make the distribution required by this section to all individuals whose identity is known to such creditor, or is reasonably ascertainable by such creditor, at the time of distribution.''.

---

AMENDMENT TO H.R. 833, AS REPORTED; OFFERED BY MR. DELAHUNT OF MASSACHUSETTS, MR. LAFALCE OF NEW YORK, MR. WATT OF NORTH CAROLINA, AND MS. ROYBAL-ALLARD OF CALIFORNIA

Page 101, after line 9, insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

SEC. 154. DISCOURAGING RECKLESS LENDING PRACTICES.

(a) LIMITING CLAIMS ARISING FROM IRRESPONSIBLE LENDING PRACTICES.—Section 502(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (8) by striking ''or'' at the end,

(2) in paragraph (9) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(10) the claim is for a consumer debt under an open end credit plan (as defined in section 103 of the Truth in Lending Act) and before incurring such debt under such plan the debtor was not informed in writing in a clear and conspicuous manner (or in the case of a worldwide web-based solicitation to open a credit card account under such plan, at the time of solicitation by the person making the solicitation to open such account)—

''(A) of the method of determining the required minimum payment amount, if a minimum payment is required that is different from the amount of any finance charge, and the charges or penalties, if any, which may be imposed for failure by the obligor to pay the required finance charge or minimum payment amount;

''(B) of repayment information that would apply to the outstanding balance of the consumer under the credit plan, including—

''(i) the required minimum monthly payment on that balance, represented as both a dollar figure and a percentage of that balance;

''(ii) the number of months (rounded to the nearest month) that it would take to pay the entire amount of that current balance if the consumer pays only the required minimum monthly payments and if no further advances are made;

''(iii) the total cost to the consumer, including interest and principal payments, of paying that balance in full if the consumer pays only the required minimum monthly payments and if no further advances are made; and

(iv) the following statement: 'If your current rate is a temporary introductory rate, your total costs may be higher.';

''(C) of the method for determining the required minimum payment amount to be paid for each billing cycle, and the charge or penalty, if any, to be imposed for any failure by the obligor to pay the required minimum payment amount;

''(D) of any charge that may be imposed due to the failure of the obligor to make payment on or before a required payment due date, the date that payment is due or, if different, the date on which a late payment fee will be charged, and that the terms and conditions of such charge will be stated prominently in a conspicuous location on each billing statement, together with the amount of the charge to be imposed if payment is made after such date;

''(E) in any application or solicitation for a credit card issued under such plan that offers, during an introductory period of less than 1 year, an annual percentage rate of interest that—

''(i) is less than the annual percentage rate of interest which will apply after the end of such introductory period, of such rate in a statement that includes the following: 'The annual percentage rate of interest applicable during the introductory period is not the annual percentage rate which will apply after the end of the introductory period. The permanent annual percentage rate will apply after [insert applicable date] and will be [insert applicable percentage rate].' ; or

''(ii) varies in accordance with an index, which is less than the current annual percentage rate under the index which will apply after the end of such period, of such rate in a statement that includes the following: 'The annual percentage rate of interest applicable during the introductory period is not the annual percentage rate which will apply after the end of the introductory period. The permanent annual percentage rate will be determined by an index and will apply after [insert date]. If the index which will apply after such date were applied to your account today, the annual percentage rate would be [insert applicable percentage rate].' ;

''(F) in the case of any credit card account issued under such plan, that a creditor may not impose a fee based on inactivity for the account during any period in which no advances are made if the obligor maintains any outstanding balance and is charged a finance charge applicable to such balance;

''(G) that a credit card may not be issued to or on behalf of, any individual who has not attained 21 years of age except in response to a written request or application to the card issuer to open a credit card account containing—

''(i) the signature of the parent or guardian of such individual indicating joint liability for debts incurred by such individual in connection with the account before such individual reaches the age of 21; or

''(ii) a submission by such individual of financial information indicating an independent means of repaying any obligation arising from the proposed extension of credit in connection with the account;

''(H) that no creditor may cancel an account, impose a minimum finance charge for any period (including any annual period), impose any fee in lieu of a minimum finance charge, or impose any other charge or penalty with regard to such account or credit extended under such account solely on the basis that any credit extended has been repaid in full before the end of any grace period applicable with respect to the extension of credit, but may impose a flat annual fee which may be imposed on the consumer in advance of any annual period to cover the cost of maintaining a credit card account during such annual period without regard to whether any credit is actually extended under such account during such period, or the actual finance charge applicable with respect to any credit extended under such account during such annual period at the annual percentage rate disclosed to the consumer in accordance with this title for the period of time any such credit is outstanding;

''(I) that no increase in any annual percentage rate of interest (other than an increase due to the expiration of any introductory percentage rate of interest or due solely to a change in another rate of interest to which such rate is indexed) applicable to any outstanding balance of credit under such plan may take effect before the beginning of the billing cycle which begins not less than 15 days after the obligor receives notice of such increase;

''(J) that if an obligor referred to in subparagraph (I) cancels the credit card account before the beginning of the billing cycle referred to in such paragraph—

''(i) an annual percentage rate of interest applicable after the cancellation with respect to such outstanding balance on such account as of the date of cancellation may not exceed any annual percentage rate of interest applicable with respect to such balance under the terms and conditions in effect before the increase referred to in subparagraph (I); and

''(ii) the repayment of such outstanding balance after the cancellation shall be subject to all other terms and conditions applicable with respect to such account before the increase referred to in such paragraph;

''(K) that obligor has the right—

''(i) to cancel the account before the effective date of the increase; and

''(ii) after such cancellation, to pay any balance outstanding on such account at the time of cancellation in accordance with the terms and conditions in effect before the cancellation;

''(L) that a creditor may not provide the obligor with any negotiable or transferable instrument for use in making an extension of credit to the obligor for the purpose of making a transfer to a third party, unless the creditor has with respect to such instrument provided to an obligor, at the same time any such instrument is provided, a notice which prominently and specifically describes—

''(i) the amount of any transaction fee which may be imposed for making an extension of credit through the use of such instrument, including the exact percentage rate to be used in determining such amount if the amount of the transaction fee is expressed as a percentage of the amount of the credit extended; and

''(ii) any annual percentage rate of interest applicable in determining the finance charge for any such extension of credit, if different from the finance charge applicable to other extensions of credit under such account; and

''(M) that a creditor may not impose any fees on the obligor for any extension of credit in excess of the amount of credit authorized to be extended with respect to such account if the extension of credit is made in connection with a credit transaction which the creditor approves in advance or at the time of the transaction.''.

(b) DEFINITION.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (9) the following:

''(9A) 'credit card' includes any dual purpose or multifunction card, including a stored-value card, debit card, check card, check guarantee card, or purchase-price discount card, that is connected with an open end credit plan (as defined in section 103 of the Truth in Lending Act) and can be used, either on issuance or upon later activation, to obtain credit directly or indirectly;''.

Madam Speaker, I urge Members to vote no on the previous question so we may add these amendments, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the chairman of the Committee on Rules, to close debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. DREIER. Madam Speaker, I thank my friend, the gentleman from Texas, for yielding time to me. I want to congratulate him on the fine job that he has done in working out this rule, which, as he said and as others have said, is a very fair and balanced rule dealing with the minority's concerns.

I look at my friend, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) here, and I was pleased we were able to make one of his amendments in order. It is among the seven Democratic amendments, including an amendment in the nature of a substitute to be offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), and it is basically a 7-to-3 ratio.

And then there is a bipartisan amendment that will be offered by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and two additional Democratic amendments submitted were accommodated in the manager's amendment. So that stresses the fairness of it.

What we tried to do, and I believe have done successfully in crafting this rule, is we have not made in order amendments that are singling out one or two industries or interest groups simply to score political points. Basically, the bill provides comprehensive bankruptcy reform, and allows individuals and businesses very broad protection to reorganize so that their creditors are protected.

Enactment of the bill will greatly reduce abuses of the bankruptcy system. By providing predictable standards to be used in bankruptcy proceedings, it will be reducing frivolous litigation in which debtors gamble on the uncertainty in the current system. This will dramatically reduce the cost of credit for all Americans.

It is a very good rule, fair to everyone concerned, and I believe the measure itself is worthy of a very strong bipartisan vote of support. I look forward to consideration of that.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to five minutes the time for electronic voting, if ordered, on the question of agreeing to the resolution.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 227, nays 190, not voting 16, as follows:

[Roll No. 109]

YEAS—227

Aderholt
Archer
Armey
Bachus
Baker
Ballenger
Barcia
Barr
Barrett (NE)
Bartlett
Barton
Bass
Bateman
Bereuter
Biggert
Bilbray
Bilirakis
Blunt
Boehlert
Boehner
Bonilla
Bono
Boucher
Boyd
Brady (TX)
Bryant
Burr
Burton
Buyer
Callahan
Calvert
Camp
Campbell
Canady
Cannon
Castle
Chabot
Chambliss
Chenoweth
Coble
Coburn
Collins
Combest
Cook
Cooksey
Cox
Cramer
Crane
Cubin
Cunningham
Davis (VA)
Deal
DeLay
DeMint
Diaz-Balart
Dickey
Doolittle
Dreier
Duncan
Dunn
Ehlers
Ehrlich
Emerson
English
Eshoo
Everett
Ewing
Fletcher
Foley
Forbes
Fossella
Fowler
Franks (NJ)
Frelinghuysen
Gallegly
Ganske
Gekas
Gibbons
Gilchrest
Gillmor
Gilman
Goode
Goodlatte
Goodling
Goss
Graham
Granger
Green (WI)
Greenwood
Gutknecht
Hansen
Hastings (WA)
Hayes
Hayworth
Hefley
Herger
Hill (MT)
Hilleary
Hobson
Hoekstra
Horn
Hostettler
Houghton
Hulshof
Hunter
Hutchinson
Hyde
Isakson
Jenkins
John
Johnson (CT)
Johnson, Sam
Jones (NC)
Kasich
Kelly
King (NY)
Kingston
Kleczka
Knollenberg
Kolbe
Kuykendall
LaHood
Largent
Latham
LaTourette
Lazio
Leach
Lewis (CA)
Lewis (KY)
Linder
LoBiondo
Lucas (OK)
Manzullo
McCollum
McCrery
McHugh
McInnis
McIntosh
McKeon
Metcalf
Mica
Miller (FL)
Miller, Gary
Moran (KS)
Moran (VA)
Morella
Myrick
Nethercutt
Ney
Northup
Norwood
Nussle
Ose
Oxley
Packard
Paul
Pease
Peterson (PA)
Petri
Pickering
Pitts
Pombo
Porter
Portman
Pryce (OH)
Quinn
Radanovich
Ramstad
Regula
Reynolds
Riley
Rogan
Rogers
Rohrabacher
Ros-Lehtinen
Rothman
Roukema
Royce
Ryan (WI)
Ryun (KS)
Salmon
Sanford
Saxton
Scarborough
Schaffer
Schakowsky
Sensenbrenner
Sessions
Shadegg
Shaw
Shays
Sherwood
Shimkus
Shuster
Skeen
Smith (MI)
Smith (NJ)
Smith (TX)
Souder
Spence
Stearns
Stump
Sununu
Sweeney
Talent
Tancredo
Tauzin
Taylor (NC)
Terry
Thomas
Thornberry
Thune
Toomey
Traficant
Upton
Velázquez
Walden
Walsh
Wamp
Weldon (FL)
Weldon (PA)
Weller
Whitfield
Wicker
Wilson
Wolf
Young (AK)

NAYS—190

Abercrombie
Ackerman
Allen
Andrews
Baird
Baldacci
Baldwin
Barrett (WI)
Bentsen
Berkley
Berry
Bishop
Blagojevich
Blumenauer
Bonior
Borski
Boswell
Brady (PA)
Brown (FL)
Brown (OH)
Capps
Capuano
Cardin
Clay
Clayton
Clement
Clyburn
Condit
Conyers
Costello
Coyne
Crowley
Cummings
Danner
Davis (IL)
DeFazio
DeGette
Delahunt
DeLauro
Deutsch
Dicks
Dingell
Dixon
Doggett
Dooley
Doyle
Edwards
Engel
Etheridge
Evans
Farr
Fattah
Filner
Ford
Frank (MA)
Frost
Gejdenson
Gephardt
Gonzalez
Gordon
Green (TX)
Gutierrez
Hall (OH)
Hall (TX)
Hastings (FL)
Hill (IN)
Hilliard
Hinchey
Hinojosa
Hoeffel
Holden
Holt
Hooley
Hoyer
Inslee
Jackson (IL)
Jackson-Lee (TX)
Jefferson
Johnson, E. B.
Jones (OH)
Kanjorski
Kaptur
Kennedy
Kildee
Kilpatrick
Kind (WI)
Klink
Kucinich
LaFalce
Lampson
Lantos
Larson
Lee
Levin
Lewis (GA)
Lipinski
Lofgren
Lowey
Lucas (KY)
Luther
Maloney (CT)
Maloney (NY)
Markey
Martinez
Mascara
Matsui
McCarthy (MO)
McCarthy (NY)
McDermott
McGovern
McIntyre
McKinney
McNulty
Meehan
Meek (FL)
Meeks (NY)
Menendez
Millender-McDonald
Miller, George
Minge
Mink
Moakley
Moore
Murtha
Nadler
Napolitano
Neal
Oberstar
Obey
Olver
Ortiz
Owens
Pallone
Pascrell
Pastor
Payne
Pelosi
Peterson (MN)
Phelps
Pickett
Pomeroy
Price (NC)
Rahall
Rangel
Reyes
Rivers
Rodriguez
Roemer
Roybal-Allard
Rush
Sabo
Sanchez
Sanders
Sandlin
Sawyer
Scott
Serrano
Sherman
Shows
Sisisky
Skelton
Smith (WA)
Snyder

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Spratt | Thompson (CA) | Visclosky |
| Stabenow | Thompson (MS) | Waters |
| Stark | Thurman | Watt (NC) |
| Stenholm | Tierney | Weiner |
| Strickland | Towns | Wexler |
| Stupak | Turner | Weygand |
| Tanner | Udall (CO) | Wise |
| Tauscher | Udall (NM) | Woolsey |
| Taylor (MS) | Vento | Wu |

NOT VOTING—16

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Becerra | Istook | Watts (OK) |
| Berman | Mollohan | Waxman |
| Bliley | Simpson | Wynn |
| Brown (CA) | Slaughter | Young (FL) |
| Carson | Tiahrt | |
| Davis (FL) | Watkins | |

□ 1222

Messrs. HALL of Ohio, HOLDEN and BALDACCI changed their vote from ''yea'' to ''nay.''

Mr. ROTHMAN changed his vote from ''nay'' to ''yea.''

So the previous question was ordered.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY TO HAVE UNTIL MIDNIGHT FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1999, TO FILE REPORT ON H.R. 775, YEAR 2000 READINESS AND RESPONSIBILITY ACT

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary have until midnight Friday, May 7, 1999, to file the report on the bill, H.R. 775, to establish certain procedures for civil actions brought for damages relating to the failure of any device or system to process or otherwise deal with the transition from the year 1999 to the year 2000, and for other purposes.

The minority has agreed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GEKAS. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks, and that I may be permitted to include extraneous material on the bill, H.R. 833.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

NORTHWEST OHIO WATERSHEDS GIVEN HELP THROUGH ASSISTANCE OF CONGRESSMAN ROBERT BORSKI

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Madam Speaker, I wish to state for the RECORD my sincere appreciation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BORSKI) for the enormous assistance he provided our community during the consideration of the water resources bill last week.

When we were on the floor, I did not have an opportunity to place it formally in the RECORD, but I would say that without his help, Northwestern Ohio would not have received the consideration that was placed in that bill, and I wish to acknowledge and deeply thank him for the help that he gave us. Without his assistance, our watersheds would have been given no attention, and I thank him very much.

□ 1230

BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. EMERSON). Pursuant to House Resolution 158 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 833.

□ 1230

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 833) to amend title 11 of the United States Code, and for further purposes, with Mr. NETHERCUTT in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the Constitution of the United States guarantees that bankruptcy shall be available to the citizens of our Nation. Accordingly, Congresses, ever since the first moment of our new land, have incorporated into their work special provisions to accommodate those individuals who find themselves totally engulfed by debt rather than to submit them to the prison dungeons that were the plight of people previously prior to the United States.

We, our enlightened forefathers, saw fit to allow the Congress to evolve in a situation in which a fresh start would be accorded to an ordinary citizen who cannot meet his obligations; and that is where we are here today.

We, in a long line of congressional action, re-guarantee the fresh start to individuals who become so engulfed in debt that there is no other way except for the Government to discharge their obligations and to allow them to start all over again. We guarantee that in this bill.

But to balance that situation, we also provide in this bill a mechanism whereby if those individuals who file for bankruptcy can, after a careful screening, be placed in a situation where they could repay some of the debt over a period of years, then this bill accommodates that and allows people to be moved from Chapter 7, where they would have gotten that fresh start automatically, to Chapter 13, where they must work through a plan for repayment of some of the debt over a period of time.

Now, here is the thing that we must make clear to the opponents of bankruptcy reform and to the people of our country. We are talking about a dividing line caused by the median income. We provide that the median income shall be the dividing line.

In other words, people under the median income in our country who apply for bankruptcy almost certainly will be accorded almost automatically the fresh start which their financial circumstances dictate. But we also said that if the income is over the median income, then that set of financial circumstances should be more closely scrutinized to determine if any money can be repaid to this debt that has been accumulated. That is a very balanced and a fair way to approach the economic system of our Nation.

And what is that median income? We are talking about a median income of $51,000 for a family of four is the starting point. So if an individual with four people in the family is earning $30,000 or $40,000 or $50,000, that fresh start is guaranteed. But if they are earning $55,000, $60,000, $80,000, $100,000 or beyond, then that set of finances has to be looked at more closely under the provisions of our bill to see if anything should be used for repayment of some of the debt. That is fair. That is proper.

The more we do that, the less burden the rest of the taxpayers have to bear. Because the taxpayers have to pick up the slack. Consumers at the retail outlets, at the supermarkets, have to pay more. Interest rates go up, etc. The more we are able to recoup some of the debt from the high-income people, the less the burden will be on the rest of the public.

That is what the clear message is of the bankruptcy reform legislation which we have before the House today. I ask for an overwhelming vote in support of the underlying bill.

Mr. Chairman, I include for the RECORD the following letters:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1999.

Hon. HENRY HYDE,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR HENRY: I am writing with regard to H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999. As you know, the regulation of securities and exchanges is a matter committed to the jurisdiction of the Committee on Commerce pursuant to Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

Section 1011 of H.R. 833, as ordered reported (''SIPC Stay''), amends the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 (P.L. 91–598), a statute within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Commerce. As you will recall, this provision was originally contained in the Financial Contract Netting Improvement Act of 1998, introduced in the 105th Congress as H.R. 4393 and on which the Committee on Commerce received an additional referral of the bill upon its introduction, as did the Committee on the Judiciary.

Because of the importance of this legislation, I recognize your desire to bring it before the House in an expeditious manner, and I will not exercise the Committee's right to a sequential referral. By agreeing to waive its consideration of the bill, however, the Commerce Committee does not waive its jurisdiction over H.R. 833. In addition, the Commerce Committee reserves its authority to seek conferees on any provisions of the bill that are within its jurisdiction during any House-Senate conference that may be convened on this legislation. I ask for your commitment to support any request by the Commerce Committee for conferees on H.R. 833 or similar legislation.

I request that you include this letter and your response as part of the RECORD during consideration of the legislation on the House floor.

Thank you for your attention to these matters. I remain,

Sincerely,

TOM BLILEY,
Chairman.

---

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, May 3, 1999.

Hon. TOM BLILEY,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, House of Representatives, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR TOM: Thank you for your letter regarding your Committee's jurisdictional interest in H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.

I acknowledge your committee's jurisdiction over section 1011 (''SIPC Stay'') of this legislation and appreciate your cooperation in moving the bill to the House floor expeditiously. I agree that your decision to forgo further action on the bill will not prejudice the Commerce Committee with respect to its jurisdictional prerogatives on this or similar provisions, and will support your request for conferees on those provisions within the Committee on the Commerce's jurisdiction should they be the subject of a House-Senate conference. I will also include a copy of your letter and this response in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD when the legislation is considered by the House.

Thank you again for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

HENRY J. HYDE,
Chairman.

---

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, DC, May 5, 1999.

Hon. HENRY J. HYDE,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contacts are Susanne S. Mehlman (for federal costs), who can be reached at 226–2860, Lisa Cash Driskill (for the state and local impact), who can be reached at 225–3220, and John Harris (for the private-sector impact), who can be reached at 226–6910.

Sincerely,

BARRY B. ANDERSON
(For Dan L. Crippen, Director).

Enclosure.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE, MAY 5, 1999

H.R. 833: BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1999

(As reported by the House Committee on the Judiciary on April 28, 1999)

SUMMARY

H.R. 833 would make many changes and additions to the laws relating to bankruptcy, including establishing a system of means-testing for determining eligibility for relief under chapter 7 of the U.S. bankruptcy code. CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 833 would cost $333 million over the 2000–2004 period—$322 million in discretionary spending, subject to appropriation of the necessary funds, and $11 million in mandatory spending. CBO also estimates that enacting this bill would decrease receipts by about $4 million over the next five years. Because the bill would affect direct spending and governmental receipts, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply. Provisions in title VIII also would affect receipts, but the Joint Committee on Taxation (JCT) has not completed an estimate of such changes at this time.

H.R. 833 contains an intergovernmental mandate as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA), but its costs would be insignificant and would not exceed the threshold established in that act ($50 million in 1996, adjusted annually for inflation). Overall, CBO expects that enacting this bill would benefit state and local governments by enhancing their ability to collect outstanding obligations in bankruptcy cases.

H.R. 833 would impose new private-sector mandates, as defined in UMRA, on bankruptcy attorneys, creditors, and credit and charge-card companies. CBO estimates that the costs of these mandates would exceed the $100 million (in 1996 dollars) threshold established in UMRA.

DESCRIPTION OF THE BILL'S MAJOR PROVISIONS

In addition to establishing means-testing for determining eligibility for chapter 7 bankruptcy relief, H.R. 833 would: Require the Executive Office for the United States Trustees (U.S. Trustees) to establish a test program to educate debtors on financial management; authorize 18 new temporary judgeships and extend five existing judgeships in 19 federal districts; permit courts to waive chapter 7 filing fees and other fees for debtors who could not pay such fees in installments; require that at least one out of every 250 bankruptcy cases under chapter 13 or chapter 7 be audited by an independent certified public accountant; exempt chapter 11 debtors from having to pay certain fees in connection with their bankruptcy cases; require the Administrative Office of the United States Courts (AOUSC) to receive and maintain tax returns for all chapter 7 and chapter 13 debtors; and require the AOUSC and the U.S. Trustees to collect and publish certain statistics on bankruptcy cases.

Other provisions would make various changes affecting the bankruptcy provisions for municipalities and the treatment of tax liabilities in bankruptcy cases.

ESTIMATED COST TO THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

As shown in the following table, CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 833 would cost the courts, the AOUSC, and the U.S. Trustees $24 million in fiscal year 2000 and $322 million over the 2000–2004 period, subject to appropriation of the necessary funds. In addition, we estimate that mandatory spending for the salaries and benefits of bankruptcy judges would increase by less than $500,000 in 2000 and $11 million over the 2000–2004 period. Enacting the means-testing and fee waiver provisions in title I would result in a net loss in revenues of about $4 million over the next five years. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 750 (administration of justice).

| | By fiscal year, in millions of dollars— | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 2000 | 2001 | 2002 | 2003 | 2004 |
| CHANGES IN SPENDING SUBJECT TO APPROPRIATION | | | | | |
| Means-Testing (Section 102): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 4 | 8 | 8 | 8 | 7 |
| Estimated Outlays | 4 | 8 | 8 | 8 | 7 |
| Debtor Financial Management Training (Section 104): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 4 | 0 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Estimated Outlays | 1 | 3 | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Additional Judgeships—Support Costs (Section 128): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | (1) | 6 | 11 | 11 | 12 |
| Estimated Outlays | (1) | 6 | 11 | 11 | 12 |
| Chapter 7 Filing Fee Waivers (Section 148): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 2 | 5 | 8 | 13 | 13 |
| Estimated Outlays | 2 | 5 | 8 | 13 | 13 |
| Credit Counseling Certification (Section 302): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 4 | 3 | 3 | 4 | 4 |
| Estimated Outlays | 2 | 4 | 3 | 4 | 4 |
| U.S. Trustee Site Visits (Section 410): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 3 | 2 | 2 | 2 | 3 |
| Estimated Outlays | 1 | 4 | 2 | 2 | 3 |

| | By fiscal year, in millions of dollars— | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 2000 | 2001 | 2002 | 2003 | 2004 |
| Audit Procedures (Section 602): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 0 | 6 | 15 | 18 | 19 |
| Estimated Outlays | 0 | 6 | 15 | 18 | 19 |
| Maintenance of Tax Returns (Section 603): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 3 | 6 | 7 | 9 | 9 |
| Estimated Outlays | 3 | 6 | 7 | 9 | 9 |
| Elimination of Quarterly Filing Fees (Section 608): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 10 | 10 | 10 | 10 | 10 |
| Estimated Outlays | 10 | 10 | 10 | 10 | 10 |
| GAO and SBA Studies (Sections 609, 613, 414): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 1 | (1) | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Estimated Outlays | 1 | (1) | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Compiling and Publishing Data (Sections 701–702): | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 0 | 5 | 9 | 8 | 8 |
| Estimated Outlays | 0 | 5 | 9 | 8 | 8 |
| Total Discretionary Changes: | | | | | |
| Estimated Authorization Level | 31 | 51 | 73 | 83 | 85 |
| Estimated Outlays | 24 | 57 | 73 | 83 | 85 |
| CHANGES IN DIRECT SPENDING | | | | | |
| Additional Judgeships (Section 128): | | | | | |
| Estimated Budget Authority | (1) | 2 | 3 | 3 | 3 |
| Estimated Outlays | (1) | 2 | 3 | 3 | 3 |
| CHANGES IN REVENUES[2] | | | | | |
| Changes in Filing Fees (Section 102): Estimated Revenues | 0 | 0 | (1) | 1 | 1 |
| Chapter 7 Filing Fee Waivers (Section 148): Estimated Revenues | (1) | −1 | −1 | −2 | −2 |
| Total Revenue Changes: Estimated Revenues | (1) | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 |

[1] Less than $500,000.
[2] The Joint Committee on Taxation has not yet completed its review of tax provisions in title VIII.

BASIS OF ESTIMATE

For purposes of this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 833 will be enacted by October 1, 1999, and that all estimated authorization amounts will be appropriated for each fiscal year.

Spending Subject to Appropriation. Most of the estimated increases in discretionary spending would be required to fund the additional workload that would be imposed on the U.S. Trustees. Currently, the U.S. Trustees are funded through the bankruptcy-related fees collected by the courts. Without additional statutory authority, these fees cannot be increased to cover any expenditures or loss of offsetting collections that would occur under the bill. Because the legislation does not provide for such increases in fees, any additional costs would be subject to the availability of appropriated funds.

Means-Testing (Section 102). This section would establish a system of means-testing for determining a debtor's eligibility for relief under chapter 7. Only those debtors whose income exceeds the regional median household income with certain adjustments would be subject to the means test. Under the means test, if the debtor is expected to have at least $6,000 over five years (after the deduction of certain allowable expenses) available to pay nonpriority unsecured claims, then the debtor would be presumed ineligible for chapter 7 relief. A debtor who could not demonstrate ''extraordinary circumstances,'' which would cause the expected disposable income to fall below the threshold, could file under other chapters of the bankruptcy code.

Although the private trustees would be responsible for conducting the initial review of a debtor's income and expenses and filing the majority of motions for dismissal or conversion, CBO expects that the workload of the U.S. Trustees would increase under the means-testing provisions. The U.S. Trustees would provide increased oversight of the work performed by the private trustees, file additional motions for dismissal or conversions, and take part in additional litigation that is expected to occur as the courts and debtors debate allowable expenses and other related issues. Although CBO cannot predict the amount of such litigation, we expect that, during the first few years following enactment of the bill, the amount of litigation could be significant, as parties test the new law's standards. In subsequent years, litigation could begin to subside as precedents are established. Based on information from the U.S. Trustees, CBO estimates that the U.S. Trustees would require about 60 additional attorneys and analysts to address the increased workload. As a result, CBO estimates that appropriations of $35 million would be required over the next five years.

Debtor Financial Management Test Training Program (Section 104). This section would require the U.S. Trustees to establish a test training program to educate debtors on financial management. Based on information from the U.S. Trustees, CBO estimates that about 90,000 debtors would participate if such a program were administered by the U.S. Trustees in fiscal year 2001. At a projected cost of about $40 per debtor, CBO estimates that the U.S. Trustees would require an appropriation of about $4 million in 2000 to administer the program.

Addtional Judgeships—Support Costs (Section 128). This provision would extend five temporary bankruptcy judgeships and authorize 18 new temporary bankruptcy judgeships for 19 federal judicial districts. Based on information from the AOUSC, CBO assumes that one-half of the 18 new positions would be filled by the beginning of fiscal year 2001 and the other half would be filled by the start of fiscal year 2002. Also, we anticipate that all five temporary judgeships would be filled by fiscal year 2002. We expect that discretionary expenditures associated with each judgeship would average about $450,000 (in 2000 dollars), after initial costs of about $50,000. Therefore, CBO estimates that the administrative support of additional bankruptcy judges would require an appropriation of less than $500,000 in fiscal year 2000 and about $40 million over the 2000-2004 period. (Salaries and benefits for the judges are classified as mandatory spending, and those costs are described below.)

Chapter 7 Filing Fee Waivers (Section 148). This section would permit a bankruptcy court or district court to waive the chapter 7 filing fee and other fees for a debtor who is unable to pay such fees in installments. Based on information from the AOUSC, CBO expects that in fiscal year 2000 chapter 7 filing fees would be waived for about 3.5 percent of all chapter 7 filers and that the percentage waived would gradually increase to about 10 percent by fiscal year 2003. The filing fee for a chapter 7 case is $130, and income from this fee appears in two different places in the budget. Of the $130, $70 is recorded as part of the offsetting collections to the U.S. Trustee System Fund and to the AOUSC, and $15 is recorded as governmental receipts (i.e., revenues). the remaining $45 is paid to the private trustee assigned to the case and does not affect the federal budget. The AOUSC also collects an additional $30 million in miscellaneous fees with each chapter 7 filing. Taking into account how means-testing would reduce filing rates under chapter 7, CBO estimates that implementing this section would result in a loss in offsetting collections totaling $41 million over the 2000-2004 period. The loss of offsetting collections would reduce the amount available for spending by the U.S. Trustees and the AOUSC. Because this loss of fees would not be matched by a reduction in workload, additional appropriations would be required to replaced this projected loss.

Credit Counseling Certification (Section 302). This section would require the U.S. Trustees to certify, on an annual basis, that certain credit counseling services could provide adequate services to potential debtors. Based on information from the U.S. Trustees, CBO estimates that the U.S. Trustees would require additional attorneys and analysts to handle the additional workload associated with certification. CBO estimates that enacting this provision would require appropriations of $18 million over the next five years.

U.S. Trustee Site Visits in Chapter 11 Cases (Section 410). This section would expand the responsibilities of the U.S. Trustees in small business bankruptcy cases to include site visits to inspect the debtor's premises, review records, and verify that the debtor has filed tax returns. Based on information from the U.S. Trustees, CBO estimates that implementing section 410 would require about 20 additional analysts to conduct over 2,300 site visits each year. CBO estimates that the U.S. Trustees would require appropriations of about $12 million over the next five years for the salaries, benefits, and travel expenses associated with these additional personnel.

Audit Procedures (Section 602). Beginning 18 months after enactment, H.R. 833 would require that at least one out of every 250 bankruptcy cases under chapter 7 and chapter 13, plus other selected cases under those chapters, be audited by an independent certified public accountant. Based on information from the U.S. Trustees, CBO estimates that about 1.3 million cases would be subject to audits in fiscal year 2001, increasing to about 1.8 million in fiscal year 2004. CBO assumes that about 0.8 percent of all cases would be audited and that each audit would cost about $1,000 (in 2000 dollars.) CBO also expects that the U.S. Trustees would need about 10 additional analysts and attorneys to support the follow-up work associated with the audits. Thus, we estimate that implementing this provision would require appropriations of $6 million in fiscal year 2001 and $58 million over the 2000–2004 period.

Maintenance of Tax Returns (Section 603). This section would require the AOUSC to receive and retain tax returns for the three most recent years preceding the commencement of the bankruptcy case for all chapter 7 and chapter 13 debtors (about 8 million debtors over the 2004–2004 period). CBO estimates that appropriations of $34 million over the next five years would be required to store and provide access to over 20 million tax returns.

Elimination of Quarterly Filing Fees (Section 608). This section would require chapter 11 debtors whose disbursements are less than $300,000 to pay quarterly fees only until their case is converted or their plan is confirmed (whichever occurs first), beginning on October 1, 1999. Currently, these debtors pay quarterly fees even after their plan has been confirmed. These fees are recorded as offsetting collections to the U.S. Trustee System Fund and are available for spending from that account. According to the U.S. Trustees, about 4,000 cases would be affected by this provision each year and, on average, the government collects about $650 per quarter per case each year. Thus, by shortening the period during which fees are paid, the bill would reduce annual fee collections by about $10 million annually. Because this loss of offsetting collections would reduce the amount available for spending by the U.S. Trustees (for overall supervision and administration of bankruptcy cases), CBO estimates that the U.S. Trustees would require an appropriation of $10 million in fiscal year 2000 and $50 million over the next five years to compensate for the loss of quarterly filing fees.

General Accounting Office (GAO) and Small Business Administration (SBA) Studies (Sections 609, 613, and 414). Section 609 would require GAO to conduct a study regarding the impact that the extension of credit to dependents who are enrolled in postsecondary educational institutions has on bankruptcy filing rates. Section 613 would require GAO to conduct a study regarding the feasibility of requiring trustees to provide the Office of Child Support Enforcement information about outstanding child support obligations of debtors. Section 414 would require the Administrator of SBA, in consultation with the Attorney General, the U.S. Trustees, and the AOUSC, to conduct a study on small business bankruptcy issues. Based on information from GAO and SBA, CBO estimates that completing the necessary studies would cost between $500,000 and $1 million in 2000, and less than $500,000 in 2001.

Compilation and Publication of Bankruptcy Data and Statistics (Sections 701–702). H.R. 833 would require the AOUSC to collect data on chapter 7, chapter 11, and chapter 13 cases and the U.S. Trustees to make such information available to the public. CBO estimates that appropriations of about $30 million would be required over the 2000–2004 period to meet these requirements. Of the total estimated cost, about $24 million would be required for additional legal clerks, analysts, and data base support. The remainder would be incurred by the U.S. Trustees for compiling data and providing Internet access to records pertaining to bankruptcy cases.

Direct Spending and Revenues

Additional Judgeships (Section 128). CBO estimates that enacting the means-testing provision (section 102) would impose some additional workload on the courts. Section 128 would authorize 18 new temporary bankruptcy judgeships and extend five existing temporary judgeships. Based on information from the AOUSC and other bankruptcy experts, CBO expects that the increase in the number of bankruptcy judges would be sufficient to meet the increased workload. Assuming that the salary and benefits of a bankruptcy judge would average about $150,000 a year, CBO estimates that the mandatory costs associated with the salaries and benefits of these additional judgeships would be less than $500,000 in fiscal year 2000 and about $11 million over the 2000–2004 period.

Changes in Filing Fees (Section 102). The means-testing provision also could affect the government's income from bankruptcy filing fees because it would cause changes in the number and type of bankruptcy filings. CBO projects that about 5 to 10 percent of all chapter 7 debtors (about 50,000 to 100,000 cases each year) could be subject to the means test proposed under this bill. CBO expects that those debtors who are not successful in proving ''extraordinary circumstance'' will either convert their cases to chapter 13 cases or withdraw their petitions for bankruptcy relief. Under either of these options, CBO estimates that there would be no significant effect on the federal budget because there is no fee for converting a case from chapter 7 to chapter 13, and filing fees are not refunded to debtors who withdraw their petitions for bankruptcy relief. Over the long term, CBO estimates that the federal government could collect additional revenues as more debtors file directly under chapter 13. (The government collects an additional $45 for each case filed under chapter 13 instead of chapter 7.) This increase could be partly offset by those debtors who might refrain from filing for any type of bankruptcy relief. On balance, CBO estimates that the means-testing provision would increase revenues by about $1 million beginning in 2003. This provision would have no effect on offsetting collections because there is no difference in the amount of offsetting collections collected under either chapter 7 or chapter 13, and any loss in collections would be matched by a reduction in workload.

Chapter 7 Filing Fee Waivers (Section 148). As mentioned above, this section would permit a bankruptcy court or the district court to waiver the chapter 7 filing fee and other fees for a debtor who is unable to pay such fees in installments. For each chapter 7 case filed, the federal government collects $15. Taking into account the means-testing provision and the amount of expected waivers, CBO estimates that implementing this section would result in a loss in revenues of $1 million to $2 million a year beginning in fiscal year 2001.

CBO estimates that the net effect on revenues of implementing the meanstesting and fee waiver provisions would be a loss of about $1 million annually beginning in fiscal year 2001.

Tax Provisions (Title VIII). The provisions in title VIII of the bill are currently under review by the Joint Committee on Taxation, and estimates of their effects on revenues will be provided when they are completed.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO CONSIDERATIONS

The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act sets up pay-as-you-go procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or receipts. Both the means-testing and waiver of fees would affect receipts; hence, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply. The net changes in outlays and governmental receipts are show in the following table. (JCT is reviewing title VIII and has not yet completed an estimate of its effects on receipts.) For the purposes of enforcing pay-as-you-go procedures, only the effects in the current year, the budget year, and the succeeding four years are counted.

| | By fiscal year, in million of dollars— | | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| | 1999 | 2000 | 2001 | 2002 | 2003 | 2004 | 2005 | 2006 | 2007 | 2008 | 2009 |
| Changes in outlays | 0 | 0 | 2 | 3 | 3 | 3 | 3 | 3 | 3 | 2 | 2 |
| Changes in receipts[1] | 0 | 0 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 | −1 |

[1] Estimated impact of means-testing and waiver of fees. JCT has not completed an estimate of changes in receipts for title VIII.

ESTIMATED IMPACT ON STATE, LOCAL, AND TRIBAL GOVERNMENTS

H.R. 833 contains an intergovernmental mandate as defined in UMRA. Overall, CBO expects that enacting this bill would benefit state and local governments by enhancing their ability to collect outstanding obligations in bankruptcy cases.

Mandates. Section 106 of the bill would preempt state laws governing contracts between a debt relief agency and a debtor, to the extent that they are inconsistent with the federal requirements set forth in this bill. Such preemptions are mandates as defined in UMRA. Because the preemption would not require states to change their laws, CBO estimates the costs to states of complying with that mandate would not be significant and would not exceed the threshold established in UMRA.

Other Impacts. The changes to bankruptcy law in the bill would affect state and local governments primarily as creditors and holders of claims for taxes or child support. In addition, it would change some of the state statutes that govern which of a debtor's assets are protected from creditors in a bankruptcy proceeding.

In 1996, a survey of the 50 states conducted by the Federation of Tax Administrators and the States' Association of Bankruptcy Attorneys indicated that more than 360,000 taxpayers in bankruptcy owed claims to states totaling about $4 billion. Of these claims, states reported collecting only about $234 million. While CBO cannot predict how much more money might be collected, it is likely that states and local governments would collect a greater share of future claims than they would have under current law.

Exemptions. Although bankruptcy is regulated according to federal statute, states are allowed to provide debtors with certain exemptions for property, insurance, and other items that are different from those allowed under the federal bankruptcy code. (Exempt property remains in possession of the debtor and is not available to pay off creditors.) In some states debtors can choose the federal or state exemption; other states require a debtor to use only the state exemptions. This bill would place a ceiling of $250,000 on the exemptions for homesteads and create a new exemption for certain retirement funds and education savings plans. These exemption standards would apply regardless of the state policy on exemptions. The new homestead exemption would make more money available to creditors in some cases, while the exemptions on retirement and education savings generally would make less money available. States would be allowed to set the homestead exemption above the federal ceiling if they specifically enacted legislation doing so.

Domestic Support Obligations. The bill would significantly enhance a state's ability to collect domestic support obligations, including child support. Domestic support obligations owed to state or local governments would be given priority over all other claims, except those same obligations owned to individuals. The bill also would require that filers under chapters 11 and 13 pay in full all domestic support obligations owed to government agencies or individuals in order to receive a discharge of outstanding debts. In addition, the automatic stay that is triggered by filing bankruptcy would not apply to domestic support obligations. Last, the bill would require bankruptcy trustees to notify individuals with domestic support claims of their right to use the services of a state child support enforcement agency and notify the agency that they have done so. The last known address of the debtors would be a part of the notification.

Tax Payment Plans. The bill would require that payment plans for tax liabilities be limited to six years and that payment amounts be regular and proportionate to payments for other obligations. Under current law, taxing authorities sometimes face payment plans that include a series of small payments followed by a large balloon payment near the end of the planned payment stream. At that point, the debtors often fail to complete their payments. This provision would require that taxes be paid at a rate proportionate to those of other debts. It also would establish interest rates to be applied to outstanding tax liabilities. Under current law, any interest charges on outstanding tax liabilities are determined at the discretion of the bankruptcy judge.

Time Limits on Tax Collection. Under some circumstances, a tax claim can qualify for priority status, and thus a state and local government would be more likely to collect the debt. However, this status is granted only if tax is assessed within a specific period of time from the date of the filing for bankruptcy. If that filing is subsequently dismissed and a new filing is made, the tax claim may lose its priority status. The bill would allow more time to pass in some circumstances, thus increasing the likelihood that state or local tax claims would maintain their priority status.

Taxes and Administrative Expenses. Under current law, certain expenses can be paid out of funds that would otherwise be available to pay tax liens on property. The bill would restrict the use of funds for administrative expenses to a limited number of circumstances, thereby making it more likely that funds would remain available to cover tax obligations.

Tax Return Filing and Government Notification. A number of provisions in the bill would require debtors to have filed tax returns, and in some cases to be current in their tax payments, before a bankruptcy case may continue. Also, debtors would be required to provide notice to state authorities in a specific manner when they pursue relief under bankruptcy law. These provisions would help states identify potential claims in bankruptcy cases where they may be owed delinquent taxes.

Priority of Payments. In some circumstances, debtors have borrowed money or incurred some new obligation that is dischargeable (able to be written-off at the end of bankruptcy) to pay for an obligation would not be dischargeable. This bill would give the new debt the same priority as the underlying debt. If the underlying debt had a priority higher than that of state or local tax liabilities, state and local governments could lose access to some funds. However, it is possible that the underlying debt could be for a tax claim, in which case the taxing authority would face no loss. Because it is unclear what types of nondischargeable are covered by new debt and the degree to which this new provision would discourage such activity, CBO can estimate neither the direction nor the magnitude of the provision's impact on states and localities.

Single Asset Cases. One provision of the bill would allow expedited bankruptcy proceeding in certain single asset cases (usually involving a large office building). State and local governments could benefit to the extent that real property is returned to the tax rolls earlier as a result of this provision.

Municipal Bankruptcy. The bill would clarify regulations governing municipal bankruptcy actions and allow municipalities that have filed for bankruptcy to liquidate certain financial contracts.

ESTIMATED IMPACT ON THE PRIVATE SECTOR

H.R. 833 would impose new private-sector mandates on bankruptcy attorneys, creditors, and credit and charge-card companies. Bankruptcy attorneys would be required to make reasonable inquiries to confirm that the information in documents they submit to the court or the bankruptcy trustee is wellgrounded in fact. Creditors would be required to make disclosures in their agreements with debtors and provide certain notices to courts and to debtors. Credit and charge-card companies would be required to disclose minimum-payment plans in new account materials and monthly statements. CBO estimates that the costs of these mandates would exceed the $100 million (in 1996 dollars) threshold established in the UMRA.

Sections 102 and 607 would make bankruptcy attorneys liable for misleading statements and inaccuracies in schedules and documents submitted to the court or to the trustee. To avoid sanctions and potential civil penalties, attorneys would need to verify the information given to them by their clients regarding the list of creditors, assets and liabilities, and income and expenditures. Based on 1,286,000 projected filings under chapter 7 and chapter 13 and an estimated increase in attorneys' costs of $150 to $500 per case, CBO estimates that the costs to attorneys of complying with this requirement would be between $190 million and $640 million in fiscal year 2000. With the rise in projected filings over the next five years, annual costs would be $280 million to $940 million for fiscal year 2004. CBO expects bankruptcy attorneys to pass increased costs on to debtors, reducing the pool of funds available to creditors.

H.R. 833 would require a creditor with an unsecured consumer debt seeking a reaffirmation agreement with a debtor to notify the debtor of his right to a hearing to determine whether the agreement is an undue hardship, is in the debtor's best interest, or is the result of an illegal threat by the creditor. The bill also would require creditors to specify to the court and to the debtor the person designated to receive notices. Because the required disclosure could be incorporated into existing standard reaffirmation agreements, and the notice to the court and the debtor would require only minimal effort, the costs of this requirement would be relatively small.

The costs of the mandate for credit and charge-card companies are also expected to be small. H.R. 833 would require credit and charge-card companies to add a brief statement regarding the function of the minimum payment option and disadvantages of making only the minimum payment each month to the materials provided to consumers opening new accounts and to all customers' monthly statements. Credit and charge-card companies also would have to provide customers with an illustration of the length of time required to pay off a $500 balance if they make only the minimum required payment. Firms would be able to add this information to the materials they currently give to customers.

Estimate prepared by: Federal Costs: Susanne S. Mehlman (226–2860); Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Lisa Cash Driskill (225–3220); Impact on the Private Sector: John Harris (226–6910).

Estimate approved by: Paul N. Van de Water, Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to begin immediately by talking about the means test and other consumer provisions that will harm middle-income and low-income people.

Because contrary to the assertion of my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), that this is going to make it better, the means test is going to make it worse. It is incorrect to assume that the effect of this bill's harmful provisions would be limited to individuals seeking bankruptcy relief who earned more than the regional median income.

First, there are numerous significant flaws in the manner in which the median income is calculated. For example, the median income figure required under this bill will be outdated and understated. This is because the bill states that the household income is to be based on the most recent census figures available as of January 1. But as of January 1, the census has information available for only the second year prior to the date.

Accordingly, during this year, 1999, census figures will be available only for 1997. At times of inflation, this 2-year lag could result, obviously, in a significant increase in the number of individuals who are subject to the motions to dismiss or convert and who may earn more than the outdated median-income figure.

Another flaw in the median-income formula is that the test measures a debtor's income based on how much the debtor earned 6 months prior to bankruptcy. If the debtor lost a good job in month three and has been working at a low-wage job ever since, the income from that good job and the help from family members would be counted as if that is what his future income would be.

In addition, this bill, unlike current law, will permit creditors and other parties and interests to bring motions to dismiss more aggressively; and well-funded creditors will have extremely wide latitude to use such motions as a tool for making bankruptcy an expensive, protracted, contentious process for honest debtors, their families and other creditors.

Now, the bill is opposed by a growing number of Members of the House of Representatives for the simple reason this bill is worse than the bill we voted on in the last Congress; and it is bad for women, children, working Americans. But the good news, if this is good news for them in the credit card industry, it is good for the credit card industry.

This means test is fatally flawed. The legislation attempts to impose a one-size-fits-all income and expense test based on IRS standards to determine who is eligible for bankruptcy relief and how much they may be required to pay their creditors.

The problem is that the formula fails to take into account such important items as child care payments, health care costs, and the costs of taking care of ill parents, to name but a few of the glaring loopholes. The IRS standards are so extreme that they have been rejected by the Congress and abandoned by the IRS; and, yet, the credit card companies would have them apply them in bankruptcy.

Now, the denials have been pouring in pretty fast here so far; and there is going to be a lot of discussion about how the bill is devastating to children and women reliant on child care and alimony payments. Repeat: The bill is devastating to children and women reliant on child care and alimony payments.

On the debtor's side, the legislation makes it far more difficult for single mothers to access the bankruptcy similar. On the creditor's side, the bill pits sophisticated credit card creditors in direct competition with alimony and child support. The attempts to fix this incorporated into the legislation are not effective and are largely redundant.

And, third, but not finally, but I am going to stop here, the bill will also lead to a loss of jobs and collective bargaining rights. The business provisions of the bill will impose harsh new time deadlines and massive new legal and paperwork requirements on small businesses and real estate concerns and, by design, will lead to premature liquidation of job loss.

This is why the largest collective bargaining organization in America has asserted that the legislation will restrict the workings of bankruptcy cases for small businesses and place numerous jobs at risk.

Now, the bill conveniently ignores the real problem of what has caused more bankruptcies, namely, the problem of credit card abuse. And is there any colleague here that does not get credit card applications monthly, weekly, occasionally daily? And, at the same time, the legislation responds to every conceivable debtor excess, real or imagined. It gives a complete pass to the transgressions of the credit card industry.

My colleagues should be on the alert. This Bankruptcy Reform Act legislation of the 106th Congress will worsen the conditions of those few people in their district, working people, honest people, who may need to access this important court. Please remember, this bill is worse than the bill we had last year.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER).

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Chairman, I want to express thanks to the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding me this time.

I am pleased to rise in strong support of the adoption of this much-needed reform to our Nation's bankruptcy laws.

In an era in which disposable incomes are growing, unemployment rates are low, and the economy is strong, consumer bankruptcy filings should be rare. Contrary, however, to this expectation, in 1998, there were 1.4 million personal bankruptcy files, a 40 percent increase from the 1996 figure. In 1996, that figure reached one million for the first time. And, in 1998, there was a full 95 percent increase in the number of personal bankruptcy files from 1990.

Bankruptcies of mere convenience are often driving this increase. Bankruptcy was never meant to be used as a financial planning tool, but it is increasingly becoming a first stop rather than a last resort, as many filers who could repay a substantial part of what they owe elect to use the complete liquidation provisions of Chapter 7 of the bankruptcy law, wipe out all of their debt, even that portion they could repay, and seek an entire fresh start.

□ 1245

Our legislation will direct more filers into Chapter 13 plans and make sure that those who can afford to repay a substantial part of their debt are required to do so.

Mr. Chairman, this is a consumer protection measure. The typical American family pays a hidden tax of $550 every year arising from the increased costs of credit and the increases in prices for goods and services occasioned by the discharge in bankruptcy of $50 billion in consumer debt on an annual basis. By requiring that people who can repay a substantial part of the debt they owe do so in Chapter 13 plans, we can greatly lessen that hidden tax, and this bill will accomplish that result.

Another key point needs to be made about the legislation. The alimony or child support recipient is clearly better off under the terms of this bill than she is under present law. At the present time she stands seventh in the rank of priority for the payment of claims in bankruptcy. She is behind farmers making claims against warehouses and grain elevators. She is behind fishermen who make claims against their warehouses.

Under this bill, the child support or alimony recipient will be elevated to the first priority. She will now stand number one in line for the payment of bankruptcy claims. And other provisions of the bill also make it easier for the bankrupt's assets to be paid to her.

The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) will be offering amendments today that I will support and I encourage other Members to support, that will require greater disclosures on credit card statements of the costs of making the minimum monthly payment. Credit card statements would have to indicate that the ordinary finance charge on the outstanding balance would continue to accrue.

The Moran amendment supplements other new consumer protection measures that are already a part of this bill. For example, credit card companies will be prohibited from terminating a customer's account simply because that customer pays his bills on time and therefore does not accrue finance charges. That is a very appropriate change to make and is one of many consumer protection measures contained in the bill.

This is a balanced, bipartisan measure which contains new consumer protections and requires greater debt repayment by those who can afford to make that repayment. This measure, when considered on the floor of the House as a conference report last year, obtained the votes of 300 of the Members, clearly demonstrating the broad bipartisan base for enacting this reform.

I am pleased to be coauthoring this measure with the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I want to commend him for his leadership in bringing this balanced and bipartisan bill to the floor. I am pleased to join with him in urging its passage by the House.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1¼ minutes.

I think it is very important that we begin to deal with the alimony and child support measure head-on. It has been suggested that this is not a problem or that it has been improved upon. But actually for women whose average income was at the median during the last 100 days before the support checks stopped or women whose child care expenses exceeded IRS standards, they may be denied access to Chapter 7 and forced into a restrictive Chapter 13 repayment plan.

Secondly, the bill does not exempt child support or foster care payments from the means test definition of disposable income, and does not exclude alimony and child support payments received within 6 months after filing for bankruptcy from the property of the estate.

How can we talk about women and children are okay? This bill is presently a disaster for single mothers and their children, which number in the alimony and child support area an estimated 243,000 to 325,000 bankruptcy cases each year. The National Partnership for Women and Families have told us that the child support enforcement provision in the bill would not adequately protect parents and children.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) a distinguished member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SCOTT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, this bill overturns centuries of well-established laws involving bankruptcy and the principle that those who are in financial ruin can get a fresh start if they pay all they have, with certain exceptions, to their creditors. Instead, they will be required for those affected to essentially be in debtor's prison for 5 years. Those who find themselves financially overwhelmed because of a loss of a job, illness, business failure, will not get a fresh start. They will have to pay every dime they have, after food and rent and a few other expenses, to their creditors.

Now, that is not a fresh start. That is a guarantee that at the end of 5 years they will be worse off than they started. So if someone is stuck with bills, maybe a spouse had a business reversal, got sick, a spouse had joint debts and their other spouse leaves or dies, they will not get a fresh start. They will get no relief for 5 years.

Now, let us not get misled by this means test where only certain people are affected by this legislation. All that means is that it is not a bad bill for everybody, it is just a bad bill for some people. That does not make it a good bill.

Now, there are some technical problems with the legislation. First of all, the salary calculation in what you have to pay is based on the last 6 months. Part of the bankruptcy problem may be caused by the fact that you lost your job, and that calculation is obviously not effective. You may be forced to pay more than in fact you have as income. It includes as income disability benefits or veterans benefits which if you have another job you will essentially lose in the future, and it forces spouses to compete with sophisticated creditors for their child support.

But fundamentally it violates centuries of laws that provide for a fresh start. I ask that this not happen in a haphazardly drawn bill that has technical problems and which is opposed by virtually every group of experts in bankruptcy law. Mr. Chairman, I would ask that we defeat this bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2½ minutes to the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA).

Mrs. ROUKEMA. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I want to offer my strong support for this legislation. It goes a long way to correct the problems of bankruptcy. But right now I want to focus on the issue of child support. I have been a pioneer in the efforts at reforming child support, and I served on the U.S. Commission for Interstate Child Support Enforcement.

Over the last 10 years we have done a great deal to enforce child support and require the legal obligations, to close that enforcement gap. But in recent years we have learned that bankruptcy is one of the loopholes that has been used. Contrary to what we have heard before, as I view this legislation, it is strong and goes a long way toward closing the enforcement gap as it relates to the child support component.

This bill really deals with the issue in a substantive way. It includes child support payments that are moved up to number one when determining which debts are paid first in a bankruptcy case. It gives confirmation and discharge of Chapter 13 plans and makes them conditional upon the debtor's complete payment of child support. And there are other issues in here that deal directly with child support.

But I want to particularly distinguish the reform measure that was led by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SHAW) and also joined by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), so that there was bipartisan support for this reform that will require the trustee to notify a claimant parent of the bankruptcy proceedings.

I will not go into a lot more detail, but it is a strong bill as far as closing those enforcement gaps. But I do want to commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and thank him for including my amendment on child support during the markup. That amendment requires the GAO to study the feasibility of having bankruptcy court trustees report the names of individuals filing bankruptcy to the Office of Child Support Enforcement.

This study by the GAO that we are requiring in this legislation, we in the Congress will use this study to close any remaining loopholes that may remain that are permitting people to avoid their legal child support. It will make it criminal, but at the same time we must remember that it is the children who are being abused and deprived. I lend my strong support to this and look forward to continuing to work on the basis of the GAO study.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 833—the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.

INTRODUCTION

Consumer bankruptcy reform is an important issue that needs to be addressed now. In 1997 Americans filed a record of 1.33 million consumer bankruptcy petitions representing an over 650 percent increase since 1978. Those who entered into bankruptcy erased an estimated $40 billion in consumer debt. This resulted in a hidden tax of almost $400 per household for families who have to pay monthly bills including mortgages, student loans, and insurance. It is important to note that this surge in bankruptcies in the last few years occurred at a time when the national economy has grown at a strong rate. In fact, between 1986 and 1996, real per capita annual disposable income grew by over 13 percent while personal bankruptcies more than doubled.

Bankruptcy is fast becoming the first stop financial planning tool rather than a last resort. The purpose of reform is to improve bankruptcy law and practice by restoring personal responsibility and integrity in the bankruptcy system but also ensuring that the safety net of the bankruptcy code is intact for those who need it most. I am a strong supporter of the consumer bankruptcy reforms contained in the bill.

CHILD SUPPORT

What I really want to focus on in today's debate is child support. I have a long history of standing up for child support enforcement, having been a pioneer on child support reforms and having served on the U.S. Commission for Inter-State Child Support Enforcement. It's a national disgrace that our child support enforcement system continues to allow so many parents who can afford to pay for their children's support to shirk these obligations. And despite the reforms the so-called 'enforcement gap'—the difference between how much child support could be collected and how much child support is collected—has been estimated at $34 billion!

This legal abuse is a criminal violation as well as neglect of our children's most basic needs. In addition, the taxpayers are abused because billions of tax dollars are paid out because these families are falling onto the welfare roles at alarming rates.

I want to commend the Committee for their attention to child support components of this problem. I am very pleased that H.R. 833—the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999 strengthens child support enforcement. I thank Chairman GEKAS and the Committee for all their hard work and their reaching out to diverse groups to form a consensus that the payment of child support should be protected.

H.R. 833 stregthens Child Support Enforcement by:

Child support payments are moved to NUMBER ONE when determining which debts are paid first in a bankruptcy case. Currently, child support payments rank seventh behind such ''priorities'' as attorney's fees.

Confirmation and discharge of Chapter 13 plans are made conditional upon the debtor's complete payment of child support. This will help further ensure that child support receives the priority it deserves.

Providing that the automatic stay DOES NOT apply to a state child support collection agency that is trying to recover child support payments. I know from speaking with child support advocates in New Jersey, that this change is a top priority for them to ensure continued payment of important child support.

I also want to associate myself with an additional provision, that was added in full Committee, that will require the trustee to notify a claimant parent of the bankruptcy proceeding. This reform measure was led by Rep. Clay Shaw and me. This will ensure that claimant parents are not left out when a debtor parent enters into bankruptcy. It is important to note that this was dropped from the Conference report last year. Fortunately with Representative SHAW's leadership and with Representative JACKSON-LEE—Republicans and Democrats providing bi partisan support.

There are important reforms for any state of New Jersey and for states across the nation. In fact these provisions are welcomed improvements that will help make real and positive change.

The current child support obligation for this year in New Jersey is $767 million. The total child support payments in arrears is $1.3 Billion. Yes, I said $1.3 Billion, of which about $800 million is still collectible. Bergen county in my district, along with six other New Jersey counties, make up 53 percent of the total collections.

MY AMENDMENT

In addition, I am grateful to Chairman GEKAS and the Committee for including my amendment on child support during mark-up. My amendment requires the GAO to study the feasibility of having Bankruptcy Court trustees report the names of individuals filing bankruptcy to the Office of Child Support Enforcement. The names could then be checked against a national list of court orders for child support. Those found to have support obligations would have the support obligation listed among the debts before the Bankruptcy Court and be used to better facilitate communication between claimant parents, state agencies and the trustee.

The GAO would have 10 months from the enactment of the legislation to conduct the study and report to Congress. The study is intended to lead to effective legislation ensuring that debtor parents cannot use bankruptcy to escape their child support obligations. In other words, we want to use this study to close any remaining loopholes that avoid child support legal obligations.

CONCLUSION

These are important and significant improvements that ensure that child support enforcement is strengthened. I supported these provisions last year and plan to support them this year.

It is important to remember that failure to pay child support is not a victimless crime. The children are the first and most important victims. We must ensure that these children are taken care of and I applaud the work of the Committee to this end and will continue my work on this issue. I urge support for this important legislation.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 45 seconds.

I want to address the gentlewoman from New Jersey, whose concern about bankruptcy is well-known and remembered from the last Congress. I read to her the first paragraph of the National Women's Law Center letter sent to me only 2 weeks ago which says that ''The bankruptcy bill, H.R. 833, puts economically vulnerable women and children at greater risk. By increasing the rights of certain debtors, including credit card companies and secured creditors, the bill would set up a competition for scarce resources between parents and children owed child support and commercial creditors both during and after bankruptcy. And single parents facing financial crises—often caused by divorce, nonpayment of support, loss of job, uninsured medical expenses or domestic violence—would find it harder to access the bankruptcy process and harder, if they got there, to save their homes, cars and essential household items.''

This is a nonpartisan organization. I urge the Members to carefully consider what we are doing to our women and children.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard much about personal responsibility during the course of this debate. We have heard over and over again from members of the credit card industry that individuals must be held accountable for their behavior and that no longer is there any stigma attached to bankruptcy.

No one disagrees with the principles of personal accountability and personal responsibility. The problem is that the rhetoric does not withstand scrutiny in terms of the evidence supporting a linkage, to establish a link between the increase in personal bankruptcy filings and the change we are told has taken place in people's attitudes about bankruptcy simply does not exist.

□ 1300

On the eve of the committee markup I finally received from the Congressional Budget Office a draft of a report which I and other minority members of the committee requested more than a year ago. It concludes, and I quote:

At this point, we do not have a clear idea of the benefit of a needs-based bankruptcy requirement.

It further concludes, and again I am quoting:

Available research on the behavior of personal filings over time does not paint a clear picture of whether filings respond to incentives in the bankruptcy law.

In other words, we know very little about the likely consequences of what we are doing here today. Yet we are proceeding as if the evidence was clear and compelling.

But do not be misled. This bill will not reduce the number of bankruptcy filings. Colleagues will not see a substantial difference in terms of the 1.4 million annual filings.

But there is an issue of responsibility, corporate responsibility, and I submit that if we insist on responsible lending by the credit card industry, we will reduce the number of bankruptcy filings. Because while we do not know the cause of the increase in bankruptcy filings, no one, no one can legitimately dispute that irresponsible lending practices are at the very least a contributing factor.

Instead of encouraging responsible use of credit cards and reduction of credit card debt, many credit card lenders have encouraged card holders to take on an increasing amount of debts when they can ill afford it. They have increased interest rates, they have increased fees on current accounts, they have imposed penalties on consumers who pay off credit card balances without incurring any interest charges, and we have all experienced, everyone has experienced, the aggressive marketing tactics of the credit card industry. Last year alone they sent out more than 4 billion, that is 4 billion, solicitations, many of them to students with no credit history whatsoever and consumers already in debt.

The first exhibit to my right shows one of those solicitations which went to my own college-aged daughter. It is what is known as a live loan. I do not know why it is a live loan, but it is called a live loan, which invited her to cash a negotiable check for $2,875 at 18.9 percent interest. The offer said:

Use the money for whatever you like. No limits, no restrictions, no questions asked—and I am quoting from the solicitation.

If my colleagues question the link between these kinds of aggressive marketing practices and the rising bankruptcy rate, I invite them to examine the second exhibit to my right. The first panel displays a credit card offer by First Consumers National Bank, a nationally chartered credit card bank owned by Spiegel and Eddie Bauer. It says, and I am quoting:

If you filed a bankruptcy, you can get a fresh start with this First Consumers National Bank Visa Card today. Your filed bankruptcy, your filed bankruptcy, qualifies you. No need to wait for bankruptcy discharge.

That is a quotation.

The second panel also shows a letter sent to bankruptcy attorneys, and I think it is the third panel, it is the third panel. The third panel shows a letter to bankruptcy attorneys by a Minnesota company that calls itself American Bankruptcy Service. The letter seeks to enlist these attorneys as distributors. Must be like an Amway, an Amway of bankruptcy services who will market the fresh start card to their clients. It actually goes so far as to offer them a commission. For each credit card issued, it promises they will receive $10, 10 bucks if they can get out there and peddle that card.

Now a balanced bankruptcy bill would address this kind of egregious conduct. It would demand responsible behavior not only of debtors but of credit card lenders themselves and particularly those creditors whose own reckless lending practices have done so much to drive people into bankruptcy.

But this is not a balanced bill. H.R. 833 does nothing, nothing to encourage corporate responsibility. In fact, it would reward irresponsible lending by enhancing the position of credit card companies relative to other creditors. It would create a vast new system of means testing that would be implemented at taxpayer expense. In effect, the bill would turn the bankruptcy system into a public funded with our tax dollars collection agency to increase the profitability of the credit card industry.

And what would this all cost the taxpayer? According to the CBO, last year's bill would have cost $214 million over a 5-year period, but that does not include some $225 million in administrative costs required to cover the additional duties assigned to the U.S. trustees under H.R. 833. In other words, almost a half a billion dollars so that the credit card industry can enhance their bottom line.

This bill is nothing more than a public subsidy for the credit card industry, Mr. Chairman, and it deserves to be defeated.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me, and thank him for his leadership and those on his committee for bringing a bill before Congress that is going to have the effect of lowering interest rates and making credit more available. This bill encourages competition by reducing uncertainty.

Right now, all those credit card companies jack up their interest rates because their competition is forced to impose high interest rates to cover the ease of declaring bankruptcy.

Also let me just say that the farm provisions in this bill that extend indefinitely the provisions of chapter 12 in title 11 for farmers is very good for the agricultural community.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY).

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for yielding me the time to clarify some very important provisions in this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support for H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act, because it boils down to two words: personal responsibility. If one assumes a debt, they should do everything in their power to pay it off. However, a safety net has to remain for those who legitimately cannot pay their debts. Creditors should be made whole, if possible.

Some of my colleagues here today are trying to paint the word creditors to mean faceless financial institutions who are tricking consumers into assuming debt. They specifically speak of credit card debt. They unfortunately failed to note that credit card debt in the United States amounts to only 3.7 percent of all consumer debt. Furthermore, only 1 percent of credit card accounts end up in bankruptcy. Of that 1 percent it is estimated that 15 percent of those accounts can afford to repay some or all of their debt.

The people who are truly being hurt by our current bankruptcy system are Americans who play by the rules and pay their debts. Bankruptcy costs the average American family an average per year of $400.

Needs-based bankruptcy reform is well overdue, and that is what H.R. 833 delivers. It is the people who game the system that we have to stop.

I have heard from my colleague from Virginia (Mr. MORAN). He stated last year more people filed for bankruptcy than graduated from college. That is a staggering fact.

I am pleased to support H.R. 833's provisions which strengthen the Bankruptcy Code protections for ex-spouses and children. They have to be supported.

In the current bankruptcy law, child support and alimony are placed seventh behind attorney fees as debt obligations. If enacted, this bill would move child support and alimony payments to first on the list of debt obligations.

Also under current law, some debtors use the automatic stay to avoid paying child support payments after they file for bankruptcy. H.R. 833 exempts State child support authorities from the automatic stay, thus insuring less delay in the proper payment of child support.

I vehemently oppose any legislation that would reduce the ability of women and children to receive support payments.

H.R. 833 is a good bill that moves us in the right direction, and I ask my colleagues from both sides of the aisle to join me in support of this reasonable reform.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend and colleague for yielding me 30 seconds.

Let us be very, very clear, and I know that most members of the committee were aware of this, but for the rest of our colleagues:

During one of our hearings there was a panel of nine witnesses, including representatives of the credit card industry and minority witnesses. I asked a question and polled each of them, and all nine unanimously stated that this bill would not lower interest rates.

So that is a red herring, I suggest. The bill should be defeated.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I wanted to discuss a few things about this bill: first, the alleged need for it. And I want to stress that even though I am going to say there is no necessity for this bill, the Democratic substitute answers the nonexisting problem which they posit.

We are told the need for this bill is that the American people, especially the American middle class, are a bunch of deadbeats, that there is a huge increase in bankruptcy filings, which there is, and that the reason for this huge increase in bankruptcy filings is that we have changed social mores. There is no more stigma associated with bankruptcy. People used to be very reluctant to declare bankruptcy. Now they do it as a financial planning instrument, and they are deadbeats, and, therefore, we have got to crack down on it because the credit card companies are not making enough money.

What is the truth of the matter? The truth is that is nonsense. Sure there are a lot more bankruptcy filings, but why? The figures tell a very different story.

First of all, if it were true that the reason for the increase in bankruptcy filings were a change in social mores where people are more easily going to bankruptcies, then people would be going bankrupt when they are less in debt, when they are less in trouble. The figures say differently.

In 1983, before the surge in bankruptcy filings started, the average person who filed for bankruptcy had debts equal to 74 percent of his income. If one has that much debt compared to income, they file for bankruptcy.

Today, the average bankruptcy filer has debts equal to 125 percent of his income; so people are 50 percent more desperate before they go into bankruptcy. They are less eager to file, they are more reluctant to file, they are further in the hole before they file.

So why then do we have such an increase in bankruptcy filings? Here is the answer:

If we look at society at large, not at just bankruptcy filings but at society at large, we can find two things. We find the bankruptcy filings rising, but we also find the household debt burden as a percentage of income rising right along with it. Look how those two lines match.

Mr. Chairman, credit card companies, used to be when I was in college it was hard to get credit. Today they shove it at high school kids. Today they shove credit cards at people who are already 80 percent of their income in debt, of their annual income.

□ 1315

That is the real problem, irresponsible lending by the credit card companies. More and more credit is being given to people. People are getting more and more in debt. Just as the debt-to-income ratio rises, the bankruptcy filing rate rises right in tandem.

By the way, we are told that in 1978 Congress made the bankruptcy laws easier, and in the early eighties we started seeing an increase in bankruptcy because the laws are too easy; now we have to crack down.

Look at Canada. Canada has very harsh bankruptcy laws, harsher even than they want to make our laws in this bill. It has always been very harsh, and yet they have had the same increase in bankruptcies. We can date it.

When did it start in Canada, the increase in bankruptcies? In 1968. Why 1968? That is the year when the Visa card went into Canada, and they have had the same problems we have had with very harsh bankruptcy laws.

So this is a myth. The myth that the American middle class are deadbeats and that we have to crack down and squeeze a little bit more money out of them when they go bankrupt, it is a myth.

The Democratic substitute does squeeze it, but it squeezes it in a more rational way.

Let us talk about four things that this bill does. We are told that we ought to have a means test, needs-based bankruptcy. People should not simply get a discharge of their debts; they should have to repay if they can.

I will agree to that. We all agree to that. If people can repay, they should do so, and there should be a means test to see if they can repay, but a means test should mean a means test. What is your income? What are your unavoidable expenses? The difference is how much can afford to be repaid.

What does this bill do? Does it look at current income, at anticipated income? No. It looks back at income for 6 months before one files bankruptcy and assumes that is going to be the income.

It is pretty common in this country today for someone to be making $50,000, $75,000, $80,000 a year as middle management at IBM or some other big company, laid off. Now he is making $25,000 at McDonald's or as a consultant. That is the new underemployment for the middle class, a consultant.

Well, he is making $25,000. He contracted debts based on an income of $75,000. Now he goes bankrupt. This bill does not look at his new income, which is $25,000, or his prospective income which is $25,000. They look at what his income used to be, $75,000.

Is that fair or rational? Does it make sense? No.

The other half of the means test, what are your expenses? Well, what is your rent? What is your mortgage payment? Does this means test look at this? No. It looks at what the IRS thinks in its guidelines the average mortgage or rent ought to be in the Northeast or the southwestern United States, in guidelines so harsh the Congress told IRS to junk them last year, but for bankrupts we are going to do the same.

So we have to really crack down on the debtors. What about the dishonest creditor? Sears Roebuck was adjudged to have defrauded bankrupt people, debtors, $168 million in a class action suit last year. We cannot let that happen again. Big business crooks have to be protected, so this bill says no more class action suits. Someone wants to sue the big malefactor, the big guy who is cheating people of millions of dollars, they better have a few hundred thousand dollars in legal fees. One person cannot bring that lawsuit and it cannot be done for a class. No class action lawsuits; only in bankruptcy and only against creditors.

Small businesses, this bill murders small businesses. Many small businesses reorganize in bankruptcy. They get protections from their creditors. They manage to reorganize, get out of debt, and go on. This bill imposes such rigid requirements and such time lines on them that they will liquidate and kill jobs in businesses that could have survived.

Finally, child support, they claim that this bill saves child support. No, it does not. It kills child support enforcement. How? Two ways. Chapter 7, it says that not only are child support payments nondischargeable, so is credit card debt nondischargeable, so there is more to compete with mom.

Who is going to collect the debt, mom or the credit card attorney? They say we will give priority to mom; we will give priority to child support. Priorities are irrelevant after the discharge.

When someone is not in bankruptcy court anymore, priorities do not apply, and in Chapter 13 they say a person cannot have a Chapter 13 repayment plan accepted by the court unless all the child support is paid, there is a plan to pay all the child support. They count as child support debts owed the government, so if the means test in Chapter 13 says he can pay enough money to pay the child support to the custodial parent but not enough to pay the debt he owes to the government, not enough, cannot do it, cannot confirm a plan, too rich to go bankrupt in Chapter 7, too poor to go bankrupt in Chapter 13, cannot go bankrupt at all, and she is out there competing with every other debt collector in the world. What chance does she have?

This bill also hurts farmers. There is no reason for such a harsh, one-sided bill. The Democratic substitute is a very harsh bill. I personally would not vote for it if it were a freestanding bill. I think it is too harsh, but it does everything reasonably that should be done and does not do some of these terrible things of prohibiting class actions, murdering child support, having an unfair means test, hurting small businesses.

That is why the administration will veto the bill. That is why every union is opposed to it, every consumer group, every professional bankruptcy group. Anybody who knows anything about bankruptcy in the profession is opposed to this bill, except for the credit card issuers and the banks.

So I urge a ''yes'' vote on the Democratic substitute and a ''no'' vote on the bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER).

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Bankruptcy Reform Act because it is based upon a simple principle of personal responsibility. Those who buy on credit should be required to pay their bills.

Our current bankruptcy system does not hold people to that standard. In 1998, a record 1.4 million Americans went to court to have their debts erased. Some were hard-working Americans who could not afford to pay their bills and needed bankruptcy protection, but many others took advantage of a failed bankruptcy system that encourages people to avoid paying their debts.

When people who cannot pay their debts do not, middle class Americans pick up the tab because companies charge higher prices to make up for the losses. Working families in America have a hard enough time paying their own bills. They should not have to needlessly pay someone else's.

The Bankruptcy Reform Act makes the right changes to the law by requiring those who can reasonably pay at least 25 percent of their debt to do so. Lower income Americans who truly cannot get out from mountains of debt will continue to have an escape hatch.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to again stand for the reasonable principle of personal responsibility and pass this important legislation.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ).

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for yielding me this time and for his work on this bill, along with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER) and others.

Mr. Chairman, our bankruptcy system should be a safety net for those in need, not a financial planning tool for the well-to-do. It is not fair for the large majority of working men and women who pay their bills and play by the rules to continue footing the bill and paying the price for those who abuse the bankruptcy system. It is just not right.

This bill makes sure that those who truly need the safety net of bankruptcy get it, like those who lose their job or have a medical emergency or a sick child. This bill protects those people, but it also makes sure that those higher income people, who can still repay some of their bills, do so. In my view, that is just basic personal responsibility.

Under the bill, if the debtor earns less than the median household monthly income, they can file Chapter 7, have almost all of their debts erased and be totally unaffected by the needs-based formula. If they make above the median and their monthly income is great enough to pay at least $6,000 of the unsecured debt after subtracting actual priority debts, after subtracting secured debts like their mortgage, after subtracting actual school tuition for their kids, after subtracting allowable living expenses based on IRS guidelines, then, yes, they have a Chapter 13 repayment plan.

Now, that is allowing for a lot of leeway and a lot of protection before we ask someone to pay back the people they owe.

Our colleagues, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), who I have a great deal of respect for, have an amendment to take the IRS living standards out of the bill and give more discretion to the judges. In my mind, that is a mistake because it is the unfettered discretion that has made the bankruptcy laws so unfair.

Under our current rules, a wealthy person can be subject to one standard for living expenses while the working man or woman is subjected to another one. I believe our Bankruptcy Code should treat everyone equally. That is what the formula does.

Worst of all, under our current system children are often the ones who get shortchanged because their support payments can be stayed during bankruptcy proceedings, all while their noncustodial parents continue to enjoy their current standard of living. So this bill ends that practice and puts child support at the very top priority during bankruptcy, where it should have been all along.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this bill. Let us bring some fairness, some justice, some standards, some protection for our children and some sense to our Bankruptcy Code.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. HOOLEY).

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for his work and for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I am an original cosponsor of H.R. 833, a bill that provides common sense bankruptcy reform. It has been said that over the last 7 years we have had unparalleled economic prosperity and yet the bankruptcy filings have hit an all-time high. The thing that has happened is we have had a lot of studies that have also said some of those people that are filing bankruptcies can afford to pay back some of that debt.

I am supporting this bill because it ensures those with the ability to pay that they pay, and those who legitimately need protection from creditors get it.

I hope Members will keep in mind, and we have heard this number of $51,000 for a family of four, which is the median income, they are not even affected by this legislation. If they are making $51,000, they are not affected by this legislation. For those above that threshold, there is a sensible means testing that determines whether a debtor should be able to walk away and not pay anything or at least pay part of their debt.

Mr. Chairman, this bill encourages personal responsibility, meets its obligation for children and families and saves American consumers money. I urge support for this bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ROTHMAN), a member of the committee.

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in favor of H.R. 833. I believe that this legislation is important in order to restore integrity to our Nation's bankruptcy system.

While I believe in the fresh start that bankruptcy provides, and agree that there are people who legitimately need and deserve its protections, I am concerned that this last resort is currently being abused by many people. That is unfair to consumers, to creditors and to the people who truly need the system.

Also, while I support the bill, I believe that it could have been made better had we been allowed a floor vote to eliminate the provision which allows States to opt out of the homestead exemption contained in the bill, and I hope that the various State legislatures who have been given this discretion will do so wisely.

Nevertheless, I support H.R. 833 and wish to make four points today. First, I believe that there is an urgent need for meaningful reform. It is just common sense, if someone borrows money from somebody else or they encourage them to perform some services and they consume the money or get the benefit of the services, they should pay it back if they can, because if they do not, everyone else in America pays for being a deadbeat.

Now, this bill says we do not want the rest of American families to pick up the tab for those who have avoided paying their just obligations, even though they could afford to repay all or a portion of it.

Next, there is a need to create Federal standards. More than 70 percent of the all-time 1.4 million bankruptcies were filed in Chapter 7, which means all their debts are forgiven, even without regards to income. This says, let us take a look at the regional median income. So in New Jersey, the State that I come from and represent, if someone makes $67,000, less than $67,000 for a family of four, they can discharge all their debts.

□ 1330

It is only if you make more than $67,000 that the questions start to be asked: Can you afford to repay a portion of your debt?

There is discretion involved. There are presumptions that you can afford to repay, but after child support and other legitimate, important deductions are made, the bankruptcy trustee can still use his or her judgment to take into account extraordinary circumstances, such as a decline in income or unexpected medical expenses.

The bill still truly allows those who need a fresh start to get one, but says in New Jersey if you make over $67,000 a year and can afford to repay a portion of your debt, you should.

This bill improves the current law also in several ways. It strengthens protections for vital family support obligations. It completely protects retirement plan assets from the claims of creditors, and completely protects savings accounts for post-secondary college savings accounts, up to $50,000 per child. It adds a whole host of other new consumer protections.

Therefore, as an original cosponsor of this bill, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important bankruptcy reform legislation.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), a Member who has been a bulwark in this effort and a cosponsor right from the beginning.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Bankruptcy Reform Act. I am a lead sponsor of the measure because the current system is broken. What was once the option of last resort has too often become the preferred option of choice. A legislative fix is necessary to distinguish between those who truly need a fresh start and those capable of assuming greater responsibility and making good on at least some of what they owe. It's the fair thing to do.

Mr. Chairman, unless we take the steps now to reform the bankruptcy system while the economic times are good, we will not have the political resolve to fix it when the economy is not so strong.

Despite this country's remarkably strong economy, wages are up, unemployment is down, interest rates and inflation are low—despite the unparalleled times that we are currently experiencing, the rate of personal bankruptcy filings has increased dramatically. That does not make sense, unless the explanation is that the system is broken.

Mr. Chairman, last year bankruptcy filings reached a record high of more than 1.4 million. That is more than the number of people who graduated from college last year.

Now we can vilify creditors and lenders, banks and mortgage companies and credit card companies, particularly credit card companies, and some of that vilification is deserved. All that unsolicited marketing, particularly of college students, is too aggressive, it is inappropriately deceptive, and it is imprudent, and we should not be condoning it.

But while many would like to blame the credit card industry for the sharp increase in bankruptcy filings, it is very important to understand that the statistics indicate that the credit card industry is not the impetus for the current bankruptcy crisis.

The vast majority of Americans recognize the personal responsibility they take in using a credit card. More than 96 percent of credit card holders pay their bills as agreed to, and only 1 percent ever end up in bankruptcy. Bank credit cards represent less than 16 percent of total debt on average bankruptcy petitions.

Mr. Chairman, according to a recent Federal Reserve Board survey, credit cards account for a mere 3.7 percent of consumer debt, hardly large enough to cause a bankruptcy crisis.

Regardless of how one feels about creditors, the key issue before us now is that many borrowers capable of repaying some or all of their obligations are not acting responsibly. Somewhere over the past decade, since 1990, the integrity of the bankruptcy process has been corrupted and an important moral principle has been eviscerated. The time-honored principle of moral responsibility and personal obligation to pay one's debts has been eroded by the convenience and ease with which one can discharge his or her obligations. It is unacceptable and unfair to those who do pay their bills to have to foot the bill for those who do not.

Mr. Chairman, it is estimated that the majority who do make good on their debts are having to pay about an average of $400 a year to make up for the bad debt of those who do not make good on their debts. That is why this legislation addresses the process. It enables those who truly need relief to get the relief. It is fair, it is a bipartisan bill, and it should be passed.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. ADAM SMITH), because if there is anyone who knows about the economic impact of the bill before us, it is he.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Chairman, this issue is all about personal responsibility, taking responsibility for one's own actions. In this case, when people do not take responsibility for their own actions, others have to pay.

We all pay more for everything that we buy because of the costs companies have to incur to cover those who do not pay their bills, and in particular, small businesses can be killed by this. If just a couple of critical creditors do not meet their obligations, small businesses can go out of business.

We have a responsibility to honor our commitments. I think the worst message that I have heard in this whole debate is that what is really to blame is the marketing, that we should blame people for advertising credit, and it is their fault, it is not the fault of the person who fell for the marketing campaign, who accepted the obligation, accepted the money. It is somebody else's fault.

When someone gets a credit card and charges it, they are responsible for paying it. Who does not know that? Everybody knows that. To say that it is not the individual's fault who has incurred the debt, but the person who gave them the credit, sends a terrible message to our country, that you do not have to be responsible for your own actions.

Second, it hurts those who can responsibly use credit. I got one of those credit card applications, 10 or 15 of them, when I was in college. I used one of them and got a credit card and I paid it off every month. Because of that, it helped me with some financial spending ability, and helped me establish credit. I would hate to think that people who can use credit responsibly would be denied it because of those who cannot.

One final point on the means testing issue. It is criticized that the means testing is based on your income from the past. First of all, what else can you base it on, really, except the existing record? But secondly, that is exactly the way we calculate child support payments, by your past income.

Just like with child support, in this bill if there is an extenuating circumstance, if you go from being a $100,000 a year marketer to somebody working for $5 an hour at McDonald's, you can go to the judge and have that taken into consideration.

It is just a misstatement of the facts to say that somehow those special circumstances are not considered in this bill. They are, just like they are in calculating child support. I do not think anybody on the other side of this debate would say that we should only base child support payments on projected future incomes, as offered by the person who has to meet the obligation.

The means testing system works, and so does the bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to congratulate him and all those who have worked on this legislation. This is one of the most needed pieces of legislation in the economics of this country.

At a time when we are at an all-time high economically, when our economy is growing faster than it has ever grown, we end up with the highest number of bankruptcies, 1.42 million, costing consumers over $40 billion in the past year. In 1998, more people declared bankruptcy than graduated from college. That is inconceivable in a country like this.

Why is that the case? It is because it is so easy. It is because we have current laws that allow people to choose, well, I guess it would be easier to go bankrupt, so I will do that. That is not what made this country strong. When we owe money, when we have debts, it is the responsibility of each and every one of us to pay those debts, however long we have to work, how many hours per day, how many days per week, how much effort is needed to pay our debts.

I was a businessman, a supermarket operator for 26 years. When I am out in my district, I always say to businessmen, and business is what makes this country go, that is what makes our employment base; to independent businessmen I will say, how is business? And they will say, it is good. But I so often hear the complaint, if it was not for bankruptcies, I would have had a good year. I had seven bankruptcies this year and wiped out my total profit picture.

That is happening to small businesses all over the country because people choose to go bankrupt rather than stay and fight and pay their bills, as they should have. The American economy is built on financial responsibility. That is what is different about this country. When we owe something, we pay it.

Currently, child support and alimony are only accorded seventh priority. They are going to go to the top of the list in this bill. That is why H.R. 833 is so well-designed. It put responsibility back, that when you owe money, you have to pay it. You have to make your very best effort. Bankruptcy should only be the very last extreme, where you just cannot physically do it. It is not something that you choose, it is not a choice you make. Bankruptcy should not be easy, and this bill changes that.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. RICHARD GEPHARDT) has said that, ''While I support a balanced approach to bankruptcy reform that places equal responsibility on both debtors and creditors, I must oppose H.R. 833 because it fails to strike such a balance.''

In addition, the administration has said repeatedly that they will veto this bill in its current form. The legislation is opposed by the National Bankruptcy Conference, the Commercial Law League, the National Association of Consumer Bankruptcy Attorneys, the National Association of Bankruptcy Trustees, and the National Association of Chapter 13 Trustees, the AFL, the UAW, AFCSME, UNITE, the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the National Partnership for Women and Families.

Please, let us make certain that we do not move bankruptcy into the dark ages. Let us reject this bill, send it back to the committee, and I hope that Members will consider favorably some amendments that could hopefully improve the bill.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, the lines of debate are fairly clear now. We have insisted all along that our bill is a balanced approach, contrary to what the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) has implied, or is the implication or the inference gained by the minority leader.

When we consider the fact that we have a safe harbor for low-income and moderate-income and no-income individuals seeking the benefits of bankruptcy, on the one side, and on the other side we have the approach that those individuals in the higher-income brackets, from $50,000 and up who might have an ability to repay are accorded a mechanism for recoupment of some of that debt, then we can see that the balance is what we begin the debate with here in this Chamber.

So when it comes down to the final vote, what the individuals who are supporting this bill will be finding is a bill that fixes the loose machinery that now exists in bankruptcy.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased that the Committee on the Judiciary, after thorough hearings and markups, completed its consideration last week of H.R. 833 (the ''Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999''), and reported the legislation favorably.

We are on the Floor today—relatively early in the 106th Congress—debating this omnibus bill, because bankruptcy is an important issue on the national agenda. With this auspicious beginning, I am hopeful the effort to enact major improvements in our bankruptcy law will reach fruition this session. Consumer bankruptcy reform is the centerpiece of H.R. 833, but the bill also addresses business bankruptcy, tax-related issues in bankruptcy, transnational bankruptcy, and the treatment of financial contracts.

Bankruptcy reform was a major activity of the Committee on the Judiciary in the last Congress. In September 1997, our colleague, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], introduced H.R. 2500, the ''Responsible Borrower Protection Bankruptcy Act,'' a bill designed in part to implement the concept of needs based bankruptcy. In February 1998, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law—the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS]—built on this approach by introducing H.R. 3150, the ''Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1998.'' H.R. 3150 incorporated—with modifications and additions—most of H.R. 2500's consumer bankruptcy provisions while also addressing other bankruptcy related subjects. Although the House passed an amended version of H.R. 3150 and later acted favorably on the work product of a Committee of Conference, the other body did not have time before adjournment to take action on the Conference Report.

This year my Committee again devoted much attention to bankruptcy reform. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS], who conducted important hearings on bankruptcy reform in his Subcommittee last year, deserves commendation for the scope of the testimony his Subcommittee elicited during four days of hearings this March. Witnesses represented a wide range of viewpoints.

These hearings were followed by two days of markup in the Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law and five days of markup in the Full Committee on the Judiciary. The positive aspect of returning to a familiar subject was the opportunity to fashion some improvements as a result of benefitting from the thoughtful insights of knowledgeable individuals who analyzed earlier versions of the legislation.

The major objective consumer bankruptcy reform is to achieve an appropriate balance between debtor and creditor rights that will increase creditor recoveries while offering relief to deserving debtors. Those who need an immediate fresh start should get it—but those who can afford to make significant payments out of future income should be required to do so.

Under H.R. 833 as reported, individuals or couples with income levels exceeding adjusted regional median figures that take into account household size generally will not be able to remain in Chapter 7 if they can make payments of at least $100.00 per month out of future income to general unsecured creditors. Chapter 7 offers a financial fresh start—without encumbering future income—to debtors who are prepared to give up all of their nonexempt assets. Those who penses of debtors who will be channeled into five-year repayment plans.

I am optimistics that the results of my Committee's work and our actions on the Floor today will be to provide for bankruptcy processes that increase creditor recoveries and operate fairly. If so, we will be able to point to an important legislative achievement on a subject of great economic significance to the American people.

I urge my colleagues, after giving careful consideration to the amendments we will be debating today, to support passage of H.R. 833.

SHIPPING ANTITRUST HEARING WEDNESDAY; JUDICIARY TO STUDY COMPETITION IN DEREGULATED INDUSTRY

What: Oversight Hearing on ''Antitrust Aspects of the Ocean Shipping Reform Act of 1998.'' Committee on the Judiciary.

When: Wednesday, May 5, 1999, at 10:00 a.m.

Where: 2141 Rayburn House Office Building.

On May 1, legislation deregulating the ocean shipping industry went into effect, even as new issues regarding competitive practices in the industry have arisen. The justification for the industry's antitrust exemption has been called into question as it primarily benefits foreign carriers at the expense of American shippers, while a new investigation has unearthed alleged anti-competitive activity of some carriers.

Shipping's continued antitrust exemption poses the questions . . .

Did the 1998 Ocean Shipping Reform Act strike the right balance between carriers and non-vessel owning common carriers (NVOs) in allowing ocean carriers to use confidential service contracts, but not the NVOs?

Is antitrust immunity still justified in light of the new environment and the startling findings of anti-competitive activity made in a recent investigative report on the industry?

Does it make sense to continue antitrust immunity when it largely benefits foreign carriers at the expense of American shippers?

Does the Federal Maritime Commission have adequate authority to deal with the kinds of practices detailed in the new report, and what, if any, role can the Justice Department play?

These hearings will . . .

Allow a complete airing of the issues raised in the investigation by its author, FMC Commissioner Delmond Won.

Further discuss the competitive issues surrounding the newly deregulated shipping industry.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 833, the ''Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999.''

Mr. Chairman, a record 1.42 million personal bankruptcy filings were recorded in 1998, rising a staggering 500 percent since 1980. Despite strong economic growth, low unemployment and rising disposable income, personal bankruptcies are soaring, costing over $40 billion in the past year alone. Without serious reform, these trends promise to continue growing every year, costing consumers and businesses even more money.

The Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999 is an important piece of legislation that will start to end the abuse and restore responsibility to the bankruptcy system. H.R. 833 closes loopholes in current law that encourages debtors to take advantage of the system and avoid paying their debts. Too many times debts are wiped out, instead of worked out.

This legislation provides a fair needs based system that takes debtors' special circumstances into account while assuring that those who can afford to pay are required to do so.

Additionally, this bill puts the needs of women and children first. Under current law, child support and alimony payments rank seventh on the priority lists of payments. Under H.R. 833, child support payments are raised from seventh to first giving them the long overdue priority that they need and deserve. In addition, this bill closes various loopholes in bankruptcy so that filers seeking to delay or evade their important family obligations, will not be able to do so.

Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge my colleagues support for this legislation which strikes the appropriate balance between the interests of consumers, debtors and creditors and will help restore personal responsibility and fairness to our bankruptcy system.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support in H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999. It is time we revitalize our weak bankruptcy system, which is supposed to benefit those who need it most. As the sponsor of bankruptcy reform legislation during the 105th Congress which protected churches and charities, I strongly endorse the efforts of my colleagues in crafting the bill we are debating today.

The truth is, our bankruptcy system is seriously flawed. This system allows individuals who have the ability to pay back a portion of their debts to declare bankruptcy so American taxpayers can foot the bill for them. This costs Americans an average of $550 a year in the form of higher interest rates and increased product prices.

The original reason for people to file bankruptcy was as a last resort, for those in a dire situation. Unfortunately, bankruptcy has become a way for some reckless spenders to escape their debts. There are more people declaring bankruptcy in America each year than what are graduating from college. This is absurd! H.R. 833 will give this country a need-based bankruptcy system, not an easy way out for those who choose to not repay their debts. I firmly believe this legislation will restore a sense of fairness and personal obligation to our bankruptcy system.

Finally, I would like to thank Chairman GEKAS for his hard work on this legislation and for working with me to ensure the enforcement of my legislation, H.R. 2604 from the 105th Congress. The Religious Liberty and Charitable Donation Protection Act restored the right of debtors to tithe and give charitably after declaring bankruptcy.

Mr. Chairman, what kind of system are we encouraging if we do not require people who can pay back even a portion of their debts to do so? I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 833, and restore a sense of responsibility to our bankruptcy laws.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the passage of H.R. 833, which restructures, I believe in a negative way, the way bankruptcy is handled in the United States today.

At the outset let me say, bankruptcy is an important mechanism for many families and business-owners around the country. For many people who have filed for Chapter 7 Bankruptcy successfully, Chapter 7 has provided a ''fresh start'' and eventually helped them get them and their families on the road to recovery. But it is not a free ride. Chapter 7 involves liquidation of assets—surely a traumatizing and unpleasant situation in any person's life.

Chapter 13 is a less dramatic form of bankruptcy that allows structured repayment. It is an important option for those who have an income sufficient to eventually pay back debt over an extended period of time and maintain their current assets.

Chapter 11 bankruptcy is also important. It is the form of bankruptcy that allows commercial entities to reorganize so that they can satisfy their creditors.

The increase in the number of bankruptcies over the past few years tells Congress that we are in desperate need of bankruptcy reform. Or does it? Perhaps—as many of us Democrats have argued, we ought to be taking a closer look at banking and lending practices. Perhaps the problems, on the consumer side, is not that people have found bankruptcy laws, but rather that credit card companies and other creditors have flooded our constituency with undeserved credit lines. Will we ever find out if this is the case? No, because the Committee on Banking and Financial Services did not look at this bill.

So already, we are working under the assumption that bankruptcy reform is needed because consumers are abusing the system. This premise is a dangerous one, and it shows, because this bill is pockmarked with provisions that give power to credit card companies and collection agencies—and it does nothing to make creditors responsible for their own actions. It gives them carte blanche to lend without fear of reprisal, and creates an atmosphere strikingly similar to the one surrounding the savings and loan industry in the mid-1980s (following deregulation).

The Chairman said it himself during our markup of this bill in the Judiciary Committee when defending an amendment that he had passed. He said

> I have been told with great sincerity that [my amendment] is a deal breaker. That it is a killer. That some of the credit card folks will walk away from the bill if it is passed. I found that a bit much. I asked my staff to give me a list of what the creditors are getting out of this bill. I have pages and pages and pages of advantages the creditor community is getting out of this bill. . . . I was going to read a list of what the creditors are getting out of this bill. I won't do it. I assume you know. But there are, I don't know, 12 or 13 pages of single-spaced print of changes that benefit the creditors. . . . There ought to be a little give on the part of the creditor community[,] there doesn't seem to be.

Even the Chair's cry for a ''little flexibility'' could not be heeded by the Members of his own party on the Committee. Does that tell us anything about what is pushing this bill through Congress? Are these reforms guided by reason, or by solidarity with big lenders?

Who does this bill hurt? Small business-owners, bankruptcy trustees, women and children. Why women and children? Because it contains provisions which allow credit card companies to transform their ''investments'' into non-dischargeable debt. This puts women and children expecting domestic support on the same footing as credit card companies—and when both must fight to get the monies that they deserve, who do you think can afford to pay the better lawyers? Who do you think will get to those funds first? The credit card companies, of course. That is why this bill is strongly opposed by the National Women's Law Center.

But families and children are not the only ones hurt by this bill. It muddies the structure of the bankruptcy system. It replaces our current mechanism used to determine whether a debtor may file for Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 with an IRS ''means test'' that was developed for an entirely different purpose—collecting taxes. It is this section that has drawn the ire of consumer groups, women's and children's organizations, and the Democratic Members of our Committee—and rightfully so. It is a provision that was never recommended by the National Bankruptcy Commission, who has been the primary group studying the bankruptcy system and the need for bankruptcy reform.

Sure, the IRS-developed ''means test'' is easy to use, but does that make it right? Is it a bright line or a rubber stamp? Is it not our responsibility to look at where the bright line lies, rather than on the fact that it is a bright line? Are we allowing form to rule over substance?

At committee and at rules I offered several amendments that would have made this a better bill, a bill that would be more responsive to the needs of all Americans, and not just those that work in glass towers. I offered amendments that would have protected victims of managed care disasters and tobacco companies. I offered amendments that would have protected our seniors that rely on social security as their primary source of income. I offered amendments that would have allowed recipients of federal disaster assistance to not be penalized by the bankruptcy system. How these reasonable amendments were not accepted I cannot say—but I can say that this bill does not do right by the American people.

The bill raises more questions than it answers, especially for America's families. I urge each of you to vote against it, and work with us to provide meaningful bankruptcy reform that eschews personal and financial responsibility from both debtors and creditors.

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act.

H.R. 833, is a common sense piece of legislation that reforms our deeply flawed bankruptcy system. Under our current bankruptcy system, we have seen an increase in bankruptcy filings by more than 400 percent since 1980. Last year alone, during booming economic times with historic lows in unemployment, more than 1.4 million Americans filed for bankruptcy. This is a 3.6 percent increase over the number of individuals filing for personal bankruptcy in 1997 and an increase of 94.7 percent over 1990 levels. Moreover, 70 percent of these 1.4 million bankruptcies were filed under Chapter 7, the most permissive and lenient form of bankruptcy. Under Chapter 7, individuals can simply erase most of their accumulated debt. In effect, the permissiveness of the current system, while allowing some consumers to escape their debts, ultimately harms all consumers by forcing industry to charge higher prices and impose tighter credit.

Clearly, Mr. Chairman, something is wrong with our current bankruptcy system. Our current system makes it too easy for individuals to compile huge amounts of debt and then escape responsibility for repaying those debts. For far too many individuals, bankruptcy has become an easy and convenient way to skirt their financial obligations rather than an instrument of last resort.

H.R. 833 reforms this flawed system. H.R. 833 simply says that those consumers who can afford to pay back their debt should be required to do so. This bill does this by instituting a means test that requires those individuals making more than the regional median income, and who can pay more than $6,000 in debts over five years to file for Chapter 13 bankruptcy, as opposed to Chapter 7. By doing this, the bill prevents individuals with high incomes from walking away from their debts. At the same time, the bill continues to provide those individuals in need of bankruptcy protection with the opportunity to file for the more lenient Chapter 7 bankruptcy. The bill also attempts to discourage individuals from repeatedly filing for bankruptcy protection by terminating the automatic stay against collection of debts for an individual who files for bankruptcy within one year of clearing up an earlier bankruptcy.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 833 is a good bill that cuts down on the blatant abuse of the current system by instituting several much needed reforms. This bill restores balance, accountability, and common sense to our deeply flawed system. Some, I know will argue that the bill is extreme and will end up harming families who are in desperate need of bankruptcy relief. But, Mr. Chairman, I believe this bill strikes the right balance between seeking to protect those in most dire need, while restoring personal responsibility to our bankruptcy system.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 833.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises today to express his support for H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act, of which he is an original cosponsor.

First, this Member would thank the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS], Chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Commercial and Administrative Law, for introducing this bill. This Member would also like to express his appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, for his efforts in getting this measure to the House Floor for consideration.

This Member supports the Bankruptcy Reform Act for numerous reasons; however, the most important reasons include the following:

First, and of preeminent importance to the nation's agriculture sector, this Member supports the provision in H.R. 833 which permanently extends Chapter 12 of the Bankruptcy Code for family farmers. Chapter 12 bankruptcy allows family farmers to reorganize their debts as compared to liquidating their assets. Chapter 12 bankruptcy has been a viable option for family farmers nationwide. It has allowed family farmers to reorganize their assets in a manner which balances the interests of creditors and the future success of the involved farmer.

If Chapter 12 bankruptcy provisions are not permanently extended for family farmers, this will have a drastic impact on an agricultural sector already reeling from low commodity prices. Not only will many family farmers have to end their operations, but also land values will likely plunge downward. Such a decrease in land values will affect both the ability of family farmers to earn a living and the manner in which banks, making agricultural loans, conduct their lending activities. This Member has received many contacts from his constituents regarding the extension of Chapter 12 bankruptcy because of the situation now being faced by our nation's farm families—although the U.S. economy is generally healthy, it is clear that agricultural sector is hurting.

Second, this Member supports the provision in H.R. 833 which provides for a means testing (needs-based) formula when determining whether an individual should file for Chapter 7 or Chapter 13 bankruptcy. The vast majority of bankruptcy filers—approximately 70%—choose Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code, which erases all debts. Some Chapter 7 filers actually have the capacity to repay some of what they owe, but they choose Chapter 7 bankruptcy and are able to walk away from these debts. For example, the stories in which an individual filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy and then goes out takes a nice vacation and/or buys a new car are too common. Moreover, the status quo is costing the average American individual and family in increased costs for consumer goods and credit because of the amount of debt which is never repaid to creditors.

As a response to these concerns, the means test of H.R. 833 will help ensure that high income filers, who could repay some of what they owe, are required to file Chapter 13 bankruptcy as compared to Chapter 7. This needs-based system takes a debtor's income, expenses, obligations and any special circumstances into account when determining whether he or she has the capacity to repay a portion of their debts. However, this bill still preserves the right to file bankruptcy, for an individual or family who legitimately need a ''fresh start'', which was the original intent behind bankruptcy legislation.

Third, this Member also supports the positive steps that H.R. 833 takes in ensuring that those who owe child support and alimony payments are not allowed to evade this vital, familial responsibility by filing bankruptcy. The bill moves child support payments and alimony into the highest payment priority.

In closing, this Member would encourage his colleagues to support H.R. 833, the Bankruptcy Reform Act.

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill.

I would gladly vote for H.R. 833 if it were a ''balanced and sensible'' bankruptcy reform bill. Unfortunately, H.R. 833 fails to include reasonable consumer protections.

Because the closed rule prevented Mr. DELAHUNT, Mr. WATT, Mr. LAFALCE and I from offering an amendment to ensure that the credit industry assumes its responsibility for the dramatic rise in consumer debt this bill allows misleading and coercive practices to continue.

My staff collected credit card solicitations they receive in the mail. In a matter of weeks, we amassed dozens of solicitations, offering free cookbooks, calling cards, sweatshirts, and frequent flyer miles. All promoted low teaser rates in giant print. But you need a magnifying glass to see the permanent rate, which can jump to 25%.

With these aggressive marketing techniques, fundamental bankruptcy reform must include reasonable consumer protections. Without them, H.R. 833 is a lost opportunity for this House.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill is considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and is considered as read.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 833

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999''.

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

TITLE I—CONSUMER BANKRUPTCY PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Needs based bankruptcy

SEC. 101. CONVERSION.

Section 706(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''or consents to'' after ''requests''.

SEC. 102. DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 707 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking the section heading and inserting the following:

''§ 707. Dismissal of a case or conversion to a case under chapter 13'';

and

(2) in subsection (b)—

(A) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(b)''; and

(B) in paragraph (1), as redesignated by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph—

(i) in the first sentence—

(I) by striking ''but not at the request or suggestion of'' and inserting ''the trustee, or'';

(II) by inserting '', or, with the debtor's consent, convert such a case to a case under chapter 13 of this title,'' after ''consumer debts''; and

(III) by striking ''substantial abuse'' and inserting ''abuse''; and

(ii) by striking the second and third sentences and inserting the following:

''(2)(A)(i) In considering under paragraph (1) whether the granting of relief would be an abuse of the provisions of this chapter, the court shall presume abuse exists if the debtor's current monthly income less estimated administrative expenses and reasonable attorneys' fees, and amounts set forth in clauses (ii) for monthly expenses (which shall include, if applicable, the continuation of actual expenses of a dependent child under the age of 18 for tuition, books, and required fees at a private elementary or secondary school, not exceeding $10,000 per year, which amount shall be adjusted pursuant to section 104(b)), (iii) for monthly payments on account of secured debts, and (iv) for monthly unsecured priority debt payments, and multiplied by 60 months is not less than $6,000.

''(ii) The debtor's monthly expenses shall be the debtor's applicable monthly expense amounts specified under the National Standards and Local Standards, and the debtor's applicable monthly expenses for the categories specifically listed as Other Necessary Expenses issued by the Internal Revenue Service for the area in which the debtor resides, as in effect on the date of the entry of the order for relief, for the debtor, the dependents of the debtor, and the spouse of the debtor in a joint case, if the spouse is not otherwise a dependent. In addition, if it is demonstrated that it is reasonable and necessary, the debtor may also subtract an allowance of up to 5% of the food and clothing categories as specified by the National Standards issued by the Internal Revenue Service. Notwithstanding any other provision of this clause, the debtor's monthly expenses shall not include any payments for debts.

''(iii) The debtor's average monthly payments on account of secured debts shall be calculated as the total of all amounts scheduled as contractually due to secured creditors in each month of the 60 months following the date of the petition, and dividing that total by 60 months.

''(iv) The debtor's monthly unsecured priority debt payments (including payments for priority child support and alimony claims) shall be calculated as the total amount of unsecured debts entitled to priority, and dividing the total by 60 months.

''(v) For the purposes of this subsection, a family or household shall consist of the debtor, the debtor's spouse, and the debtor's dependents, but not a legally separated spouse unless the spouse files a joint case with the debtor.

''(B) In any proceeding brought under this subsection, the presumption of abuse may be rebutted only by demonstrating extraordinary circumstances that require additional expenses or adjustment of current monthly income. In order to establish extraordinary circumstances, the debtor must itemize each additional expense or adjustment of income and provide documentation for such expenses or adjustment of income and a detailed explanation of the extraordinary circumstances which make such expenses or adjustment of income necessary and reasonable. The debtor shall attest under oath to the accuracy of any information provided to demonstrate that additional expenses or adjustment to income are required. The presumption of abuse may be rebutted only if such additional expenses or adjustments to income cause the debtor's current monthly income less estimated administrative expenses and reasonable attorneys' fees, and the amounts set forth in clauses (ii), (iii), and (iv) of subparagraph (A) when multiplied by 60 to be less than $6,000.

''(C) As part of the schedule of current income and expenditures required under section 521 of this title, the debtor shall include a statement of the debtor's current monthly income, and the calculations which determine whether a presumption arises under subparagraph (A)(i), showing how each amount is calculated. The bankruptcy rules promulgated under section 2075 of title 28, United States Code, shall prescribe a form for such statement and may provide general rules on its content.

''(D) No judge, United States trustee, panel trustee, bankruptcy administrator or other party in interest shall bring a motion under this paragraph if the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, as of the date of the order for relief, have current monthly total income equal to or less than the regional median household monthly income calculated on a semiannual basis for a household of equal size. However, for a household of more than 4 individuals, the median income shall be that of a household of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of that household.

''(3) In considering under paragraph (1) whether the granting of relief would be an abuse of the provisions of this chapter in a case in which the presumption in paragraph (2)(A)(i) does not apply or has been rebutted, the court shall consider—

''(A) whether the debtor filed the petition in bad faith; or

''(B) the totality of the circumstances (including whether the debtor seeks to reject a personal services contract and the financial need for such rejection as sought by the debtor) of the debtor's financial situation demonstrates abuse.

''(4)(A) If a panel trustee appointed under section 586(a)(1) of title 28 or bankruptcy administrator brings a motion for dismissal or conversion under this subsection and the court grants that motion and finds that the action of the counsel for the debtor in filing under this chapter violated Rule 9011, the court shall assess damages which may include ordering:

''(i) the counsel for the debtor to reimburse the trustee for all reasonable costs in prosecuting the motion, including reasonable attorneys' fees.

''(ii) the assessment of an appropriate civil penalty against the counsel for the debtor; and

''(iii) the payment of the civil penalty to the panel trustee, bankruptcy administrator or the United States trustee.

''(B) In the case of a petition filed under sections 301, 302, or 303 of this title and supporting lists, schedules and documents filed under section 521(a)(1) of this title, the signature of an attorney on the petition shall constitute a certificate that the attorney has—

''(i) performed a reasonable investigation into the circumstances that gave rise to the petition; and

''(ii) determined that the petition, lists, schedules, and documents—

''(I) are well grounded in fact; and

''(II) are warranted by existing law or a good faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law and do not constitute an abuse under paragraph (1) of this subsection.

''(5) The court may award a debtor all reasonable costs in contesting a motion filed by a party in interest (not including a trustee or the United States trustee) under this subsection (including reasonable attorneys' fees) if—

''(A) the court does not grant the motion; and

''(B) the court finds that—

''(i) the position of the party that brought the motion was not substantially justified; or

''(ii) the party brought the motion solely for the purpose of coercing a debtor into waiving a right guaranteed to the debtor under this title.

''(6) However, only the court, the United States trustee, or the trustee may file a motion to dismiss or convert a case under this subsection if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, as of the date of the order for relief, when multiplied by 12, is less than the highest national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of equal or lesser size, or in the case of a household of 1 person, the national median household income for 1 earner. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the national median family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of the family.

''(7) In making a determination whether to dismiss a case under this section, the court may not take into consideration whether a debtor has made, or continues to make, charitable contributions (that meet the definition of 'charitable contribution' under section 548(d)(3)) to any qualified religious or charitable entity or organization (as that term is defined in section 548(d)(4)).

''(8) Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees shall submit a report, to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate, containing its findings regarding the utilization of the Internal Revenue Service standards for determining the current monthly expenses under section 707(b)(1)(A)(ii) of title 11, United States Code, of debtors and the impact that the application of such standards has had on debtors and on the bankruptcy courts. Such report may include recommendations for amendments to such title, consistent with the Director's findings.''.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting after paragraph (10) the following:

''(10A) 'current monthly income' means the average monthly income from all sources derived which the debtor, or in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, receive without regard to whether it is taxable income, in the 180 days preceding the date of determination, and includes any amount paid by anyone other than the debtor or, in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, on a regular basis to the household expenses of the debtor or the debtor's dependents and, in a joint case, the debtor's spouse if not otherwise a dependent, but excludes payments to victims of war crimes or crimes against humanity;''; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (17) the following:

''(17A) 'estimated administrative expenses and reasonable attorneys' fees' means 10 percent of projected payments under a chapter 13 plan;''.

(c) ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS.—Section 704 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (8) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (9) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(10)(A) With respect to an individual debtor, the trustee shall review all materials filed by the debtor, consider all information presented at the first meeting of creditors, and within 10 days after the first meeting of creditors file with the court a statement as to whether the debtor's case should be presumed to be an abuse under section 707(b) of this title. The court shall provide a copy of such statement to all creditors within 5 days after such statement is filed. If, based on the filing of such statement with the court, the trustee determines that the debtor's case should be presumed to be an abuse under section 707(b) of this title and if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, as of the date of the order for relief, when multiplied by 12, is not less than the highest national median family income reported for a family of equal or lesser size, or in the case of a household of 1 person, the national median household income for 1 earner, then the trustee shall within 30 days of the filing of such statement, either—

''(i) file a motion to dismiss or convert under section 707(b) of this title; or

''(ii) file a statement setting forth the reasons the trustee or bankruptcy administrator does not believe that such a motion would be appropriate.

''(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), for purposes of this paragraph the national family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of the family.''.

(d) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 7 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 707 and inserting the following:

''707. Dismissal of a case or conversion to a case under chapter 13.''.

SEC. 103. NOTICE OF ALTERNATIVES.

Section 342(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(b) Before the commencement of a case under this title by an individual whose debts are primarily consumer debts, the clerk shall give to such individual written notice containing—

''(1) a brief description of—

''(A) chapters 7, 11, 12, and 13 and the general purpose, benefits, and costs of proceeding under each of those chapters; and

''(B) the types of services available from credit counseling agencies; and

''(2) statements specifying that—

''(A) a person who knowingly and fraudulently conceals assets or makes a false oath or statement under penalty of perjury in connection with a bankruptcy case shall be subject to fine, imprisonment, or both; and

''(B) all information supplied by a debtor in connection with a bankruptcy case is subject to examination by the Attorney General.''.

SEC. 104. DEBTOR FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT TRAINING TEST PROGRAM.

(a) DEVELOPMENT OF FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT AND TRAINING CURRICULUM AND MATERIALS.—The Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees (in this section referred to as the ''Director'') shall consult with a wide range of individuals who are experts in the field of debtor education, including trustees who are appointed under chapter 13 of title 11 of the United States Code and who operate financial management education programs for debtors, and shall develop a financial management training curriculum and materials that can be used to educate individual debtors on how to better manage their finances.

(b) TEST—(1) The Director shall select 6 judicial districts of the United States in which to test the effectiveness of the financial management training curriculum and materials developed under subsection (a).

(2) For a 18-month period beginning not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, such curriculum and materials shall be, for the 6 judicial districts selected under paragraph (1), used as the instructional course concerning personal financial management for purposes of section 111 of this title.

(c) EVALUATION.—(1) During the 1-year period referred to in subsection (b), the Director shall evaluate the effectiveness of—

(A) the financial management training curriculum and materials developed under subsection (a); and

(B) a sample of existing consumer education programs such as those described in the Report of the National Bankruptcy Review Commission (October 20, 1997) that are representative of consumer education programs carried out by the credit industry, by trustees serving under chapter 13 of title 11 of the United States Code, and by consumer counselling groups.

(2) Not later than 3 months after concluding such evaluation, the Director shall submit a report to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate, for referral to the appropriate committees of the Congress, containing the findings of the Director regarding the effectiveness of such curriculum, such materials, and such programs and their costs.

Subtitle B—Consumer Bankruptcy Protections

SEC. 105. DEFINITIONS.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following:

''(3) 'assisted person' means any person whose debts consist primarily of consumer debts and whose non-exempt assets are less than $150,000;'';

(2) by inserting after paragraph (4) the following:

''(4A) 'bankruptcy assistance' means any goods or services sold or otherwise provided to an assisted person with the express or implied purpose of providing information, advice, counsel, document preparation or filing, or attendance at a creditors' meeting or appearing in a proceeding on behalf of another or providing legal representation with respect to a proceeding under this title;''; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (12A) the following:

''(12B) 'debt relief agency' means any person who provides any bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in return for the payment of money or other valuable consideration, or who is a bankruptcy petition preparer pursuant to section 110 of this title, but does not include any person that is any of the following or an officer, director, employee or agent thereof—

''(A) any nonprofit organization which is exempt from taxation under section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;

''(B) any creditor of the person to the extent the creditor is assisting the person to restructure any debt owed by the person to the creditor; or

''(C) any depository institution (as defined in section 3 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act) or any Federal credit union or State credit union (as those terms are defined in section 101 of the Federal Credit Union Act), or any affiliate or subsidiary of such a depository institution or credit union;''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—In section 104(b)(1) by inserting ''101(3),'' after ''sections''.

SEC. 106. ENFORCEMENT.

(a) ENFORCEMENT.—Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 526. Debt relief agency enforcement

''(a) A debt relief agency shall not—

''(1) fail to perform any service which the debt relief agency has told the assisted person or prospective assisted person the agency would provide that person in connection with the preparation for or activities during a proceeding under this title;

''(2) make any statement, or counsel or advise any assisted person to make any statement in any document filed in a proceeding under this title, which is untrue and misleading or which upon the exercise of reasonable care, should be known by the debt relief agency to be untrue or misleading;

''(3) misrepresent to any assisted person or prospective assisted person, directly or indirectly, affirmatively or by material omission, what services the debt relief agency can reasonably expect to provide that person, or the benefits an assisted person may obtain or the difficulties the person may experience if the person seeks relief in a proceeding pursuant to this title; or

''(4) advise an assisted person or prospective assisted person to incur more debt in contemplation of that person filing a proceeding under this title or in order to pay an attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer fee or charge for services performed as part of preparing for or representing a debtor in a proceeding under this title.''.

''(b) ASSISTED PERSON WAIVERS INVALID.—Any waiver by any assisted person of any protection or right provided by or under this section shall not be enforceable against the debtor by any Federal or State court or any other person, but may be enforced against a debt relief agency.

''(c) NONCOMPLIANCE.—

''(1) Any contract between a debt relief agency and an assisted person for bankruptcy assistance which does not comply with the material requirements of this section shall be treated as void and may not be enforced by any Federal or State court or by any other person.

''(2) Any debt relief agency shall be liable to an assisted person in the amount of any fees or charges in connection with providing bankruptcy assistance to such person which the debt relief agency has received, for actual damages, and for reasonable attorneys' fees and costs if the debt relief agency is found, after notice and hearing, to have—

''(A) intentionally or negligently failed to comply with any provision of this section with respect to a bankruptcy case or related proceeding of the assisted person;

''(B) provided bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person in a case or related proceeding which is dismissed or converted because of the debt relief agency's intentional or negligent failure to file bankruptcy papers, including papers specified in section 521 of this title; or

''(C) intentionally or negligently disregarded the material requirements of this title or the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure applicable to such debt relief agency.

''(3) In addition to such other remedies as are provided under State law, whenever the chief law enforcement officer of a State, or an official or agency designated by a State, has reason to believe that any person has violated or is violating this section, the State—

''(A) may bring an action to enjoin such violation;

''(B) may bring an action on behalf of its residents to recover the actual damages of assisted persons arising from such violation, including any liability under paragraph (2); and

''(C) in the case of any successful action under subparagraph (A) or (B), shall be awarded the costs of the action and reasonable attorney fees as determined by the court.

''(4) The United States District Court for any district located in the State shall have concurrent jurisdiction of any action under subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (3).

''(5) Notwithstanding any other provision of Federal law and in addition to any other remedy provided under Federal or State law, if the court, on its own motion or on the motion of the United States trustee or the debtor, finds that a person intentionally violated this section, or engaged in a clear and consistent pattern or practice of violating this section, the court may—

''(A) enjoin the violation of such section; or

''(B) impose an appropriate civil penalty against such person.

''(c) RELATION TO STATE LAW.—This section shall not annul, alter, affect or exempt any person subject to those sections from complying with any law of any State except to the extent that such law is inconsistent with those sections, and then only to the extent of the inconsistency.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 527, the following:

''526. Debt relief agency enforcement.''.

SEC. 107. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that States should develop curricula relating to the subject of personal finance, designed for use in elementary and secondary schools.

SEC. 108. DISCOURAGING ABUSIVE REAFFIRMATION PRACTICES.

Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)—

(A) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (A) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(ii) in subparagraph (B) by adding ''and'' at the end; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) if the consideration for such agreement is based on a wholly unsecured consumer debt (except for debts owed to creditors defined in section 461(b)(1)(A)(iv) of title 12, United States Code), such agreement contains a clear and conspicuous statement which advises the debtor—

''(i) that the debtor is entitled to a hearing before the court at which the debtor shall appear in person and at which the court will decide whether the agreement is an undue hardship, not in the debtor's best interest, and not the result of a threat by the creditor to take any action that cannot be legally taken or that is not intended to be taken; and

''(ii) that if the debtor is represented by counsel, the debtor may waive the debtor's right to such a hearing by signing a statement waiving the hearing, stating that the debtor is represented by counsel, and identifying such counsel;''; and

(B) in paragraph (6)(A)—

(i) by striking ''and'' at the end of clause (i);

(ii) by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting ''; and''; and

(iii) by adding at the end thereof the following:

''(iii) not entered into by the debtor as the result of a threat by the creditor to take any action that cannot be legally taken or that is not intended to be taken.''; and

(2) in the 3d sentence of subsection (d)—

(A) by striking ''of this section'' and inserting a comma; and

(B) by inserting after ''such agreement'' the following:

''or if the consideration for such agreement is based on a wholly unsecured consumer debt (except for debts owed to creditors defined in section 461(b)(1)(A)(iv) of title 12, United States Code) and the debtor has not waived the debtor's right to a hearing on the agreement in accordance with subsection (c)(2)(C) of this section''.

SEC. 109. PROMOTION OF ALTERNATIVE DISPUTE RESOLUTION.

(a) REDUCTION OF CLAIM.—Section 502 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(k)(1) The court, on the motion of the debtor and after a hearing, may reduce a claim filed under this section based wholly on unsecured consumer debts by not more than 20 percent, if the debtor can prove by clear and convincing evidence that the claim was filed by a creditor who unreasonably refused to negotiate a reasonable alternative repayment schedule proposed by an approved credit counseling agency acting on behalf of the debtor, and if—

''(A) such offer was made within the period beginning 60 days before the filing of the petition;

''(B) such offer provided for payment of at least 60 percent of the amount of the debt over a period not to exceed the repayment period of the loan, or a reasonable extension thereof; and

''(C) no part of the debt under the alternative repayment schedule is nondischargeable, is entitled to priority under section 507 of this title, or would be paid a greater percentage in a chapter 13 proceeding than offered by the debtor.

''(2) The debtor shall have the burden of proving that the proposed alternative repayment schedule was made in the 60-day period specified in subparagraph (A) and that the creditor unreasonably refused to consider the debtor's proposal.''.

(b) LIMITATION ON AVOIDABILITY.—Section 547 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) The trustee may not avoid a transfer if such transfer was made as a part of an alternative repayment plan between the debtor and any creditor of the debtor created by an approved credit counseling agency.''.

SEC. 110. ENHANCED DISCLOSURE FOR CREDIT EXTENSIONS SECURED BY A DWELLING.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—During the period beginning 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act and ending 18 months after the date of the enactment, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (in this section referred to as the ''Board'') shall conduct a study and submit to Congress a report (including recommendations for any appropriate legislation) regarding—

(1) whether a consumer engaging in an open-end credit transaction (as defined pursuant to section 103 of the Truth in lending Act) secured by the consumer's principal dwelling is provided adequate information under Federal law, including under section 127A of the Truth in Lending Act, regarding the tax deductibility of interest paid on such transaction; and

(2) whether a consumer engaging in a closed-end credit transaction (as defined pursuant to section 103 of the Truth in Lending Act) secured by the consumer's principal dwelling is provided adequate information regarding the tax deductibility of interest paid on such transaction.

In conducting such study, the Board shall specifically consider whether additional disclosures are necessary with respect to such open-end or closed-end credit transactions in which the amount of the credit extended exceeds the fair market value of the dwelling.

(b) REGULATIONS.—If the Board determines that additional disclosures are necessary in connection with transactions described in subsection (a), the Board, pursuant to its authority under the Truth in Lending Act, may promulgate regulations that would require such additional disclosures. Any such regulations promulgated by the Board under this section shall not take effect before the end of the 36-month period after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 111. DUAL USE DEBIT CARD.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (in this section referred to as the ''Board'') shall conduct a study of existing protections provided to consumers to limit their liability for unauthorized use of a debit card or similar access device.

(b) SPECIFIC CONSIDERATIONS.—In conducting the study required by subsection (a), the Board shall specifically consider the following—

(1) the extent to which existing provisions of section 909 of the Electronic Fund Transfer Act and the Board's implementing regulations provide adequate unauthorized use liability protection for consumers;

(2) the extent to which any voluntary industry rules have enhanced the level of protection afforded consumers in connection with such unauthorized use liability; and

(3) whether amendments to the Electronic Funds Transfer Act or the Board's implementing regulations thereto are necessary to provide adequate protection for consumers in this area.

(c) REPORT AND REGULATIONS.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Board shall make public a report on its findings with respect to the adequacy of existing protections afforded consumers with respect to unauthorized-use liability for debit cards and similar access devices. If the Board determines that such protections are inadequate, the Board, pursuant to its authority under the Electronic Funds Transfer Act, may issue regulations to address such inadequacy. Any regulations issued by the Board shall not be effective before 36 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 112. ENHANCED DISCLOSURES UNDER AN OPEN-END CREDIT PLAN.

(a) INITIAL AND ANNUAL MINIMUM PAYMENT DISCLOSURE.—Section 127(a) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(9) In the case of any credit or charge card account under an open-end consumer credit plan on which a minimum monthly or periodic payment will be required, other than an account described in paragraph (8)—

''(A) the following statement: 'The minimum payment amount shown on your billing statement is the smallest payment which you can make in order to keep the account in good standing. This payment option is offered as a convenience and you may make larger payments at any time. Making only the minimum payment each month will increase the amount of interest you pay and the length of time it takes to repay your outstanding balance.';

''(B) if the plan provides that the consumer will be permitted to forgo making a minimum payment during a specified billing cycle, a statement, if applicable, that if the consumer chooses to forgo making the minimum payment, finance charges will continue to accrue; and

''(C) an example, based on an annual percentage rate and method for determining minimum periodic payments recently in effect for that creditor, and a $500 outstanding balance, showing the estimated minimum periodic payment, and the estimated period of time it would take to repay the $500 outstanding balance if the consumer paid only the minimum periodic payment on each monthly or periodic statement and obtained no additional extensions of credit.

''(10) With respect to one billing cycle per calendar year, the creditor shall transmit the information required under paragraph (9) to each consumer to whom the creditor is required to transit a statement pursuant to subsection (b) for such billing cycle. The creditor shall also transmit to such consumer for such cycle a worksheet prescribed by the Board to assist the consumer in determining the consumer's household income and debt obligations.''.

(b) PERIODIC MINIMUM PAYMENT DISCLOSURES.—Section 127(b) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(11) The following statement: 'The minimum payment amount shown on your billing statement is the smallest payment which you can make in order to keep the account in good standing. This payment option is offered as a convenience and you may make larger payments at any time. Making only the minimum payment each month will increase the amount of interest you pay and the length of time it takes to repay your outstanding balance.' ''.

(c) ENFORCEMENT.—Section 127 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) In promulgating regulations to implement the disclosure of an example required under subsection (a)(9)(C) and (a)(10), the Board shall set forth a model disclosure to accompany the example stating that the credit features shown are only an example which does not obligate the creditor, but is intended to illustrate the approximate length of time it could take to repay using the assumptions set forth in subsection (a)(9)(C) without regard to any other factors that could impact an approximate repayment period, including other credit features or the consumer's payment or other behavior with respect to the account. Compliance with the disclosures required under subsection (a)(9)(C) and (a)(10) shall be enforced exclusively by the Federal agencies set forth in section 108.''.

(d) REGULATORY IMPLEMENTATION.—The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (in this section referred to as the ''Board'') shall promulgate regulations implementing the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b). Such regulations shall take effect no earlier than the end of the 36-month period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(e) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Board shall conduct a study to determine whether consumers have adequate information about borrowing activities which may result in financial problems. In studying this issue, the Board shall consider the extent to which—

(1) consumers, in establishing new credit arrangements, are aware of their existing payment obligations, the need to consider those obligations in deciding to take on new credit, and how taking on excessive credit can result in financial difficulty;

(2) minimum periodic payment features offered in connection with open-end credit plans impact consumer default rates;

(3) consumers always make only the minimum payment throughout the life of the plan;

(4) consumers are aware that making only minimum payments will increase the cost and repayment period of an open-end loan; and

(5) the availability of low minimum payment options is a cause of consumers experiencing financial difficulty.

(f) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Before the end of the 2-year period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act, the Board shall submit to Congress a report containing the findings of the Board in connection with the study required under subsection (e).

(g) REGULATIONS.—The Board shall, by regulation promulgated pursuant to its authority under the Truth in Lending Act, require additional disclosures to consumers regarding minimum payment features, including periodic statement disclosures, if the Board determines that such disclosures are necessary based on its findings. Any such regulations promulgated by the Board shall not take effect earlier than January 1, 2002.

SEC. 113. PROTECTION OF SAVINGS EARMARKED FOR THE POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.

Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2)—

(A) in subparagraph (A) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in subparagraph (B) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) except as provided in paragraph (n), funds placed in an education individual retirement account (as defined in section 530(b)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986) not less than 365 days before the date of entry of the order of relief but only to the extent such funds—

''(i) are not pledged or promised to any entity in connection with any extension of credit; and

''(ii) are not excess contributions (as described in section 4973(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986).''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(n) For purposes of subsection (b)(3)(C), funds placed in an education individual retirement account shall not be exempt under this subsection—

''(1) unless the designated beneficiary of such account was a dependent child of the debtor for the taxable year for which the funds were placed in such account; and

''(2) to the extent such funds exceed—

''(A) $50,000 in the aggregate in all such accounts having the same designated beneficiary; or

''(B) $100,000 in the aggregate in all such accounts attributable to all such dependent children of the debtor.''.

SEC. 114. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.

Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) The willful failure of a creditor to credit payments received under a plan confirmed under this title (including a plan of reorganization confirmed under chapter 11 of this title) in the manner required by the plan (including crediting the amounts required under the plan) shall constitute a violation of any injunction under subsection (a)(2) which has arisen at the time of the failure.

''(j)(1) An individual who is injured by the willful failure of a creditor to comply with the requirements for a reaffirmation agreement under subsections (c) and (d), or by any willful violation of the injunction under subsection (a)(2), shall be entitled to recover—

''(A) the greater of—

''(i) the amount of actual damages; or

''(ii) $1,000; and

''(B) costs and attorneys' fees.

''(2) An action to recover for a violation specified in paragraph (1) may not be brought as a class action.''.

SEC. 115. LIMITING TRUSTEE LIABILITY.

(a) QUALIFICATION OF TRUSTEE.—Section 322 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by adding at the end the following:

''The trustee in a case under this title is not liable personally or on such trustee's bond for acts taken within the scope of the trustee's duties or authority as delineated by other sections of this title or by order of the court, except to the extent that the trustee acted with gross negligence. Gross negligence shall be defined as reckless indifference or deliberate disregard of the trustee's fiduciary duty.''; and

(2) in subsection (c) by inserting ''for any acts within the scope of the trustee's authority defined in subsection (a)'' before the period at the end.

(b) ROLE AND CAPACITY OF TRUSTEE.—Section 323 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b) by inserting at the end the following: ''in the trustee's official capacity as representative of the estate'' before the period at the end; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(c) The trustee in a case under this title may not be sued, either personally, in a representative capacity, or against the trustee's bond in favor of the United States—

''(1) for acts taken in furtherance of the trustee's duties or authority in a case in which the debtor is subsequently determined to be ineligible for relief under the chapter in which the trustee was appointed; or

''(2) for the dissemination of statistics and other information regarding a case or cases, unless the trustee has actual knowledge that the information is false.

''(d) The trustee in a case under this title may not be sued in a personal capacity without leave of the bankruptcy court in which the case is pending.''.

SEC. 116. REINFORCE THE FRESH START.

(a) RESTORATION OF AN EFFECTIVE DISCHARGE.—Section 523(a)(17) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''by a court'' and inserting ''by any court'',

(2) by striking ''section 1915(b) or (f)'' and inserting ''subsection (b) or (f)(2) of section 1915'', and

(3) by inserting ''(or a similar non-Federal law)'' after ''title 28'' each place it appears.

SEC. 117. DISCOURAGING BAD FAITH REPEAT FILINGS.

Section 362(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (2) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

''(3) If a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under chapter 7, 11, or 13 (other than a case refiled under a chapter other than chapter 7 after dismisssal under section 707(b) of this title), and if a single or joint case of the debtor was pending within the previous 1-year period but was dismissed, the stay under subsection (a) with respect to any action taken with respect to a debt or property securing such debt or with respect to any lease will terminate with respect to the debtor on the 30th day after the filing of the later case. Upon motion by a party in interest for continuation of the automatic stay and upon notice and a hearing, the court may extend the stay in particular cases as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may then impose) after notice and a hearing completed before the expiration of the 30-day period only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed. A case is presumptively filed not in good faith (but such presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary)—

''(A) as to all creditors if—

''(i) more than 1 previous case under any of chapter 7, 11, or 13 in which the individual was a debtor was pending within such 1-year period;

''(ii) a previous case under any of chapters 7, 11, or 13 in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within such 1-year period, after the debtor failed to file or amend the petition or other documents as required by this title or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence shall not be substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney), failed to provide adequate protection as ordered by the court, or failed to perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court; or

''(iii) there has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous case under any of chapters 7, 11, or 13 of this title, or there is not any other reason to conclude that the later case will be concluded, if a case under chapter 7 of this title, with a discharge, and if a chapter 11 or 13 case, a confirmed plan which will be fully performed;

''(B) as to any creditor that commenced an action under subsection (d) in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of such case, that action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to actions of such creditor.

''(4) If a single or joint case is filed by or against an individual debtor under this title (other than a case refiled under a chapter other than chapter 7 after a dismissal under section 707(b) of this title), and if 2 or more single or joint cases of the debtor were pending within the previous year but were dismissed, the stay under subsection (a) will not go into effect upon the filing of the later case. On request of a party in interest, the court shall promptly enter an order confirming that no stay is in effect. If a party in interest requests within 30 days of the filing of the later case, the court may order the stay to take effect in the case as to any or all creditors (subject to such conditions or limitations as the court may impose), after notice and hearing, only if the party in interest demonstrates that the filing of the later case is in good faith as to the creditors to be stayed. A stay imposed pursuant to the preceding sentence will be effective on the date of entry of the order allowing the stay to go into effect. A case is presumptively not filed in good faith (but such presumption may be rebutted by clear and convincing evidence to the contrary)—

''(A) as to all creditors if—

''(i) 2 or more previous cases under this title in which the individual was a debtor were pending within the 1-year period;

''(ii) a previous case under this title in which the individual was a debtor was dismissed within the time period stated in this paragraph after the debtor failed to file or amend the petition or other documents as required by this title or the court without substantial excuse (but mere inadvertence or negligence shall not be substantial excuse unless the dismissal was caused by the negligence of the debtor's attorney), failed to provide adequate protection as ordered by the court, or failed to perform the terms of a plan confirmed by the court; or

''(iii) there has not been a substantial change in the financial or personal affairs of the debtor since the dismissal of the next most previous case under this title, or there is not any other reason to conclude that the later case will be concluded, if a case under chapter 7, with a discharge, and if a case under chapter 11 or 13, with a confirmed plan that will be fully performed; or

''(B) as to any creditor that commenced an action under subsection (d) in a previous case in which the individual was a debtor if, as of the date of dismissal of such case, such action was still pending or had been resolved by terminating, conditioning, or limiting the stay as to action of such creditor.''.

SEC. 118. CURBING ABUSIVE FILINGS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 362(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (3), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) with respect to a stay of an act against real property under subsection (a), by a creditor whose claim is secured by an interest in such real estate, if the court finds that the filing of the bankruptcy petition was part of a scheme to delay, hinder, and defraud creditors that involved either—

''(A) transfer of all or part ownership of, or other interest in, the real property without the consent of the secured creditor or court approval; or

''(B) multiple bankruptcy filings affecting the real property.

If recorded in compliance with applicable State laws governing notices of interests or liens in real property, an order entered pursuant to this subsection shall be binding in any other case under this title purporting to affect the real property filed not later than 2 years after that recording, except that a debtor in a subsequent case may move for relief from such order based upon changed circumstances or for good cause shown, after notice and a hearing. Any Federal, State, or local governmental unit which accepts notices of interests or liens in real property shall accept any certified copy of an order described in this subsection for indexing and recording.''.

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (17), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (18) by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (18) the following:

''(19) under subsection (a), of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property following the entry of an order under section 362(d)(4) of this title as to that property in any prior bankruptcy case for a period of 2 years after entry of such an order. The debtor in a subsequent case, however, may move the court for relief from such order based upon changed circumstances or for other good cause shown (consistent with the standards for good faith in subsection (c)), after notice and a hearing; or

''(20) under subsection (a), of any act to enforce any lien against or security interest in real property—

''(A) if the debtor is ineligible under section 109(g) of this title to be a debtor in a bankruptcy case; or

''(B) if the bankruptcy case was filed in violation of a bankruptcy court order in a prior bankruptcy case prohibiting the debtor from being a debtor in another bankruptcy case.''.

SEC. 119. DEBTOR RETENTION OF PERSONAL PROPERTY SECURITY.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 521—

(A) in paragraph (4) by striking '', and'' at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (5) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(6) in an individual case under chapter 7 of this title, not retain possession of personal property as to which a creditor has an allowed claim for the purchase price secured in whole or in part by an interest in that personal property unless, in the case of an individual debtor, the debtor takes 1 of the following actions within 45 days after the first meeting of creditors under section 341(a)—

''(A) enters into an agreement with the creditor pursuant to section 524(c) of this title with respect to the claim secured by such property; or

''(B) redeems such property from the security interest pursuant to section 722 of this title.

''If the debtor fails to so act within the 45-day period, the stay under section 362(a) of this title is terminated with respect to the personal property of the estate or of the debtor which is affected, such property shall no longer be property of the estate, and the creditor may take whatever action as to such property as is permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law, unless the court determines on the motion of the trustee brought before the expiration of such 45-day period, and after notice and a hearing, that such property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest, and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee.''; and

(2) in section 722 by inserting ''in full at the time of redemption'' before the period at the end.

SEC. 120. RELIEF FROM THE AUTOMATIC STAY WHEN THE DEBTOR DOES NOT COMPLETE INTENDED SURRENDER OF CONSUMER DEBT COLLATERAL.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended as follows—

(1) in section 362—

(A) by striking ''(e), and (f)'' in subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof ''(e), (f), and (h)''; and

(B) by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (i) and by inserting after subsection (g) the following:

''(h) In an individual case pursuant to chapter 7, 11, or 13 the stay provided by subsection (a) is terminated with respect to personal property of the estate or of the debtor securing in whole or in part a claim, or subject to an unexpired lease, and such personal property shall no longer be property of the estate if the debtor fails within the applicable time set by section 521(a)(2) of this title—

''(1) to file timely any statement of intention required under section 521(a)(2) of this title with respect to that property or to indicate therein that the debtor will either surrender the property or retain it and, if retaining it, either redeem the property pursuant to section 722 of this title, reaffirm the debt it secures pursuant to section 524(c) of this title, or assume the unexpired lease pursuant to section 365(p) of this title if the trustee does not do so, as applicable; or

''(2) to take timely the action specified in that statement of intention, as it may be amended before expiration of the period for taking action, unless the statement of intention specifies reaffirmation and the creditor refuses to reaffirm on the original contract terms;

unless the court determines on the motion of the trustee filed before the expiration of the applicable time set by section 521(a)(2), and after notice and a hearing, that such property is of consequential value or benefit to the estate, orders appropriate adequate protection of the creditor's interest, and orders the debtor to deliver any collateral in the debtor's possession to the trustee. If the court does not so determine an order, the stay shall terminate upon the conclusion of the proceeding on the motion.''; and

(2) in section 521, as amended by sections 603 and 604—

(A) in paragraph (2) by striking ''consumer'';

(B) in paragraph (2)(B)—

(i) by striking ''forty-five days after the filing of a notice of intent under this section'' and inserting ''30 days after the first date set for the meeting of creditors under section 341(a) of this title''; and

(ii) by striking ''forty-five day'' the second place it appears and inserting ''30-day'';

(C) in paragraph (2)(C) by inserting ''except as provided in section 362(h) of this title'' before the semicolon; and

(D) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

''(c) If the debtor fails timely to take the action specified in subsection (a)(6) of this section, or in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 362(h) of this title, with respect to property which a lessor or bailor owns and has leased, rented, or bailed to the debtor or as to which a creditor holds a security interest not otherwise voidable under section 522(f), 544, 545, 547, 548, or 549 of this title, nothing in this title shall prevent or limit the operation of a provision in the underlying lease or agreement which has the effect of placing the debtor in default under such lease or agreement by reason of the occurrence, pendency, or existence of a proceeding under this title or the insolvency of the debtor. Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to justify limiting such a provision in any other circumstance.''.

SEC. 121. GIVING SECURED CREDITORS FAIR TREATMENT IN CHAPTER 13.

Section 1325(a)(5)(B)(i) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(i) the plan provides that the holder of such claim retain the lien securing such claim until the earlier of payment of the underlying debt determined under nonbankruptcy law or discharge under section 1328 of this title, and that if the case under this chapter is dismissed or converted without completion of the plan, such lien shall also be retained by such holder to the extent recognized by applicable nonbankruptcy law; and''.

SEC. 122. RESTRAINING ABUSIVE PURCHASES ON SECURED CREDIT.

Section 506 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) In an individual case under chapter 7, 11, 12, or 13—

''(1) subsection (a) shall not apply to an allowed claim to the extent attributable in whole or in part to the purchase price of personal property acquired by the debtor within 5 years of the filing of the petition, except for the purpose of applying paragraph (3) of this subsection;

''(2) if such allowed claim attributable to the purchase price is secured only by the personal property so acquired, the value of the personal property and the amount of the allowed secured claim shall be the sum of the unpaid principal balance of the purchase price and accrued and unpaid interest and charges at the contract rate;

''(3) if such allowed claim attributable to the purchase price is secured by the personal property so acquired and other property, the value of the security may be determined under subsection (a), but the value of the security and the amount of the allowed secured claim shall be not less than the unpaid principal balance of the purchase price of the personal property acquired and unpaid interest and charges at the contract rate; and

''(4) in any subsequent case under this title that is filed by or against the debtor in the 2-year period beginning on the date the petition is filed in the original case, the value of the personal property and the amount of the allowed secured claim shall be deemed to be not less than the amount provided under paragraphs (2) and (3) less any payments actually received.''.

SEC. 123. FAIR VALUATION OF COLLATERAL.

Section 506(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: ''In the case of an individual debtor under chapters 7 and 13, such value with respect to personal property securing an allowed claim shall be determined based on the replacement value of such property as of the date of filing the petition without deduction for costs of sale or marketing. With respect to property acquired for personal, family, or household purpose, replacement value shall mean the price a retail merchant would charge for property of that kind considering the age and condition of the property at the time value is determined.''.

SEC. 124. DOMICILIARY REQUIREMENTS FOR EXEMPTIONS.

Section 522(b)(2)(A) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''180'' and inserting ''730''; and

(2) by striking '', or for a longer portion of such 180-day period than in any other place'' and inserting ''or if the debtor's domicile has not been located at a single State for such 730-day period, the place in which the debtor's domicile was located for 180 days immediately preceding the 730-day period or for a longer portion of such 180-day period than in any other place''.

SEC. 125. RESTRICTIONS ON CERTAIN EXEMPT PROPERTY OBTAINED THROUGH FRAUD.

Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 113, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2)(A) by inserting ''subject to subsection (o),'' before ''any property''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(o) For purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A) and notwithstanding subsection (a), the value of an interest in—

''(1) real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;

''(2) a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence; or

''(3) a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor;

shall be reduced to the extent such value is attributable to any portion of any property that the debtor disposed of in the 730-day period ending of the date of the filing of the petition, with the intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor and that the debtor could not exempt, or that portion that the debtor could not exempt, under subsection (b) if on such date the debtor had held the property so disposed of.''.

SEC. 126. ROLLING STOCK EQUIPMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1168 of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§ 1168. Rolling stock equipment

''(a)(1) The right of a secured party with a security interest in or of a lessor or conditional vendor of equipment described in paragraph (2) to take possession of such equipment in compliance with an equipment security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, and to enforce any of its other rights or remedies under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, to sell, lease, or otherwise retain or dispose of such equipment, is not limited or otherwise affected by any other provision of this title or by any power of the court, except that the right to take possession and enforce those other rights and remedies shall be subject to section 362 of this title, if—

''(A) before the date that is 60 days after the date of commencement of a case under this chapter, the trustee, subject to the court's approval, agrees to perform all obligations of the debtor under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract; and

''(B) any default, other than a default of a kind described in section 365(b)(2) of this title, under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract—

''(i) that occurs before the date of commencement of the case and is an event of default therewith is cured before the expiration of such 60-day period;

''(ii) that occurs or becomes an event of default after the date of commencement of the case and before the expiration of such 60-day period is cured before the later of—

''(I) the date that is 30 days after the date of the default or event of the default; or

''(II) the expiration of such 60-day period; and

''(iii) that occurs on or after the expiration of such 60-day period is cured in accordance with the terms of such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, if cure is permitted under that agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract.

''(2) The equipment described in this paragraph—

''(A) is rolling stock equipment or accessories used on rolling stock equipment, including superstructures or racks, that is subject to a security interest granted by, leased to, or conditionally sold to a debtor; and

''(B) includes all records and documents relating to such equipment that are required, under the terms of the security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, that is to be surrendered or returned by the debtor in connection with the surrender or return of such equipment.

''(3) Paragraph (1) applies to a secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor acting in its own behalf or acting as trustee or otherwise in behalf of another party.

''(b) The trustee and the secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor whose right to take possession is protected under subsection (a) may agree, subject to the court's approval, to extend the 60-day period specified in subsection (a)(1).

''(c)(1) In any case under this chapter, the trustee shall immediately surrender and return to a secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor, described in subsection (a)(1), equipment described in subsection (a)(2), if at any time after the date of commencement of the case under this chapter such secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor is entitled pursuant to subsection (a)(1) to take possession of such equipment and makes a written demand for such possession of the trustee.

''(2) At such time as the trustee is required under paragraph (1) to surrender and return equipment described in subsection (a)(2), any lease of such equipment, and any security agreement or conditional sale contract relating to such equipment, if such security agreement or conditional sale contract is an executory contract, shall be deemed rejected.

''(d) With respect to equipment first placed in service on or prior to October 22, 1994, for purposes of this section—

''(1) the term 'lease' includes any written agreement with respect to which the lessor and the debtor, as lessee, have expressed in the agreement or in a substantially contemporaneous writing that the agreement is to be treated as a lease for Federal income tax purposes; and

''(2) the term 'security interest' means a purchase-money equipment security interest.

''(e) With respect to equipment first placed in service after October 22, 1994, for purposes of this section, the term 'rolling stock equipment' includes rolling stock equipment that is substantially rebuilt and accessories used on such equipment.''.

(b) AIRCRAFT EQUIPMENT AND VESSELS.—Section 1110 of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§ 1110. Aircraft equipment and vessels

''(a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) and subject to subsection (b), the right of a secured party with a security interest in equipment described in paragraph (3), or of a lessor or conditional vendor of such equipment, to take possession of such equipment in compliance with a security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, and to enforce any of its other rights or remedies, under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, to sell, lease, or otherwise retain or dispose of such equipment, is not limited or otherwise affected by any other provision of this title or by any power of the court.

''(2) The right to take possession and to enforce the other rights and remedies described in paragraph (1) shall be subject to section 362 of this title if—

''(A) before the date that is 60 days after the date of the order for relief under this chapter, the trustee, subject to the approval of the court, agrees to perform all obligations of the debtor under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract; and

''(B) any default, other than a default of a kind specified in section 365(b)(2) of this title, under such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract—

''(i) that occurs before the date of the order is cured before the expiration of such 60-day period;

''(ii) that occurs after the date of the order and before the expiration of such 60-day period is cured before the later of—

''(I) the date that is 30 days after the date of the default; or

''(II) the expiration of such 60-day period; and

''(iii) that occurs on or after the expiration of such 60-day period is cured in compliance with the terms of such security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, if a cure is permitted under that agreement, lease, or contract.

''(3) The equipment described in this paragraph—

''(A) is—

''(i) an aircraft, aircraft engine, propeller, appliance, or spare part (as defined in section 40102 of title 49) that is subject to a security interest granted by, leased to, or conditionally sold to a debtor that, at the time such transaction is entered into, holds an air carrier operating certificate issued pursuant to chapter 447 of title 49 for aircraft capable of carrying 10 or more individuals or 6,000 pounds or more of cargo; or

''(ii) a documented vessel (as defined in section 30101(1) of title 46) that is subject to a security interest granted by, leased to, or conditionally sold to a debtor that is a water carrier that, at the time such transaction is entered into, holds a certificate of public convenience and necessity or permit issued by the Department of Transportation; and

''(B) includes all records and documents relating to such equipment that are required, under the terms of the security agreement, lease, or conditional sale contract, to be surrendered or returned by the debtor in connection with the surrender or return of such equipment.

''(4) Paragraph (1) applies to a secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor acting in its own behalf or acting as trustee or otherwise in behalf of another party.

''(b) The trustee and the secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor whose right to take possession is protected under subsection (a) may agree, subject to the approval of the court, to extend the 60-day period specified in subsection (a)(1).

''(c)(1) In any case under this chapter, the trustee shall immediately surrender and return to a secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor, described in subsection (a)(1), equipment described in subsection (a)(3), if at any time after the date of the order for relief under this chapter such secured party, lessor, or conditional vendor is entitled pursuant to subsection (a)(1) to take possession of such equipment and makes a written demand for such possession to the trustee.

''(2) At such time as the trustee is required under paragraph (1) to surrender and return equipment described in subsection (a)(3), any lease of such equipment, and any security agreement or conditional sale contract relating to such equipment, if such security agreement or conditional sale contract is an executory contract, shall be deemed rejected.

''(d) With respect to equipment first placed in service on or before October 22, 1994, for purposes of this section—

''(1) the term 'lease' includes any written agreement with respect to which the lessor and the debtor, as lessee, have expressed in the agreement or in a substantially contemporaneous writing that the agreement is to be treated as a lease for Federal income tax purposes; and

''(2) the term 'security interest' means a purchase-money equipment security interest.''.

SEC. 127. DISCHARGE UNDER CHAPTER 13.

Section 1328(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraphs (1) through (3) and inserting the following:

''(1) provided for under section 1322(b)(5) of this title;

''(2) of the kind specified in paragraph (2), (4), (3)(B), (5), (8), or (9) of section 523(a) of this title;

''(3) for restitution, or a criminal fine, included in a sentence on the debtor's conviction of a crime; or

''(4) for restitution, or damages, awarded in a civil action against the debtor as a result of willful or malicious injury by the debtor that caused personal injury to an individual or the death of an individual.''.

SEC. 128. BANKRUPTCY JUDGESHIPS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the ''Bankruptcy Judgeship Act of 1999''.

(b) TEMPORARY JUDGESHIPS.—

(1) APPOINTMENTS.—The following judgeship positions shall be filled in the manner prescribed in section 152(a)(1) of title 28, United States Code, for the appointment of bankruptcy judges provided for in section 152(a)(2) of such title:

(A) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the eastern district of California.

(B) Four additional bankruptcy judgeships for the central district of California.

(C) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the southern district of Florida.

(D) Two additional bankruptcy judgeships for the district of Maryland.

(E) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the eastern district of Michigan.

(F) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the southern district of Mississippi.

(G) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the district of New Jersey.

(H) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the eastern district of New York.

(I) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the northern district of New York.

(J) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the southern district of New York.

(K) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the eastern district of Pennsylvania.

(L) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the middle district of Pennsylvania.

(M) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the western district of Tennessee.

(N) One additional bankruptcy judgeship for the eastern district of Virginia.

(2) VACANCIES.—The first vacancy occurring in the office of a bankruptcy judge in each of the judicial districts set forth in paragraph (1) that—

(A) results from the death, retirement, resignation, or removal of a bankruptcy judge; and

(B) occurs 5 years or more after the appointment date of a bankruptcy judge appointed under paragraph (1);

shall not be filled.

(c) EXTENSIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The temporary bankruptcy judgeship positions authorized for the northern district of Alabama, the district of Delaware, the district of Puerto Rico, the district of South Carolina, and the eastern district of Tennessee under section 3(a) (1), (3), (7), (8), and (9) of the Bankruptcy Judgeship Act of 1992 (28 U.S.C. 152 note) are extended until the first vacancy occurring in the office of a bankruptcy judge in the applicable district resulting from the death, retirement, resignation, or removal of a bankruptcy judge and occurring—

(A) 8 years or more after November 8, 1993, with respect to the northern district of Alabama;

(B) 10 years or more after October 28, 1993, with respect to the district of Delaware;

(C) 8 years or more after August 29, 1994, with respect to the district of Puerto Rico;

(D) 8 years or more after June 27, 1994, with respect to the district of South Carolina; and

(E) 8 years or more after November 23, 1993, with respect to the eastern district of Tennessee.

(2) APPLICABILITY OF OTHER PROVISIONS.—All other provisions of section 3 of the Bankruptcy Judgeship Act of 1992 remain applicable to such temporary judgeship position.

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The first sentence of section 152(a)(1) of title 28, United States Code, is amended to read as follows: ''Each bankruptcy judge to be appointed for a judicial district as provided in paragraph (2) shall be appointed by the United States court of appeals for the circuit in which such district is located.''.

(e) TRAVEL EXPENSES OF BANKRUPTCY JUDGES.—Section 156 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(g)(1) In this subsection, the term 'travel expenses'—

''(A) means the expenses incurred by a bankruptcy judge for travel that is not directly related to any case assigned to such bankruptcy judge; and

''(B) shall not include the travel expenses of a bankruptcy judge if—

''(i) the payment for the travel expenses is paid by such bankruptcy judge from the personal funds of such bankruptcy judge; and

''(ii) such bankruptcy judge does not receive funds (including reimbursement) from the United States or any other person or entity for the payment of such travel expenses.

''(2) Each bankruptcy judge shall annually submit the information required under paragraph (3) to the chief bankruptcy judge for the district in which the bankruptcy judge is assigned.

''(3)(A) Each chief bankruptcy judge shall submit an annual report to the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts on the travel expenses of each bankruptcy judge assigned to the applicable district (including the travel expenses of the chief bankruptcy judge of such district).

''(B) The annual report under this paragraph shall include—

''(i) the travel expenses of each bankruptcy judge, with the name of the bankruptcy judge to whom the travel expenses apply;

''(ii) a description of the subject matter and purpose of the travel relating to each travel expense identified under clause (i), with the name of the bankruptcy judge to whom the travel applies; and

''(iii) the number of days of each travel described under clause (ii), with the name of the bankruptcy judge to whom the travel applies.

''(4)(A) The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall—

''(i) consolidate the reports submitted under paragraph (3) into a single report; and

''(ii) annually submit such consolidated report to Congress.

''(B) The consolidated report submitted under this paragraph shall include the specific information required under paragraph (3)(B), including the name of each bankruptcy judge with respect to clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of paragraph (3)(B).''.

SEC. 129. ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 507(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (9) the following:

''(10) Tenth, allowed claims for death or personal injuries resulting from the operation of a motor vehicle or vessel if such operation was unlawful because the debtor was intoxicated from using alcohol, a drug or another substance.''.

SEC. 130. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 1325 OF TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 1325(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by inserting ''to unsecured creditors'' after ''to make payments'';

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting ''current monthly'' before ''income'';

(B) by striking ''and which is not'' and inserting ''less amounts'';

(C) by inserting after ''received by the debtor'', ''(other than child support payments, foster care payments, or disability payments for a dependent child made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law and which is reasonably necessary to be expended)''; and

(D) in subparagraph (A) by inserting after ''dependent of the debtor'' the following: '', as determined in accordance with section 707(b)(2)(A) and if applicable 707(b)(2)(B)''.

SEC. 131. APPLICATION OF THE CODEBTOR STAY ONLY WHEN THE STAY PROTECTS THE DEBTOR.

Section 1301(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(b)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2)(A) Notwithstanding subsection (c) and except as provided in subparagraph (B), in any case in which the debtor did not receive the consideration for the claim held by a creditor, the stay provided by subsection (a) shall apply to that creditor for a period not to exceed 30 days beginning on the date of the order for relief, to the extent the creditor proceeds against—

''(i) the individual that received that consideration; or

''(ii) property not in the possession of the debtor that secures that claim.

''(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the stay provided by subsection (a) shall apply in any case in which the debtor is primarily obligated to pay the creditor in whole or in part with respect to a claim described in subparagraph (A) under a legally binding separation or property settlement agreement or divorce or dissolution decree with respect to—

''(i) an individual described in subparagraph (A)(i); or

''(ii) property described in subparagraph (A)(ii).

''(3) Notwithstanding subsection (c), the stay provided by subsection (a) shall terminate as of the date of confirmation of the plan, in any case in which the plan of the debtor provides that the debtor's interest in personal property subject to a lease with respect to which the debtor is the lessee will be surrendered or abandoned or no payments will be made under the plan on account of the debtor's obligations under the lease.''.

SEC. 132. ADEQUATE PROTECTION FOR INVESTORS.

(a) DEFINITION.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (48) the following:

''(48A) 'securities self regulatory organization' means either a securities association registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant to section 15A of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 or a national securities exchange registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission pursuant to section 6 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;''.

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 118, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (19) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (20) by striking the period at the end and a inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (20) the following:

''(21) under subsection (a), of the commencement or continuation of an investigation or action by a securities self regulatory organization to enforce such organization's regulatory power; of the enforcement of an order or decision, other than for monetary sanctions, obtained in an action by the securities self regulatory organization to enforce such organization's regulatory power; or of any act taken by the securities self regulatory organization to delist, delete, or refuse to permit quotation of any stock that does not meet applicable regulatory requirements.''.

SEC. 133. LIMITATION ON LUXURY GOODS.

Section 523(a)(2)(C) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(C)(i) for purposes of subparagraph (A), consumer debts owed to a single creditor and aggregating more than $250 for 'luxury goods or services' incurred by an individual debtor on or within 90 days before the order for relief under this title, or cash advances aggregating more than $250 that are extensions of consumer credit under an open end credit plan obtained by an individual debtor on or within 90 days before the order for relief under this title, are presumed to be nondischargeable; and

''(ii) for purposes of this subparagraph—

''(I) the term 'luxury goods or services' does not include goods or services reasonably necessary for the support or maintenance of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor; and

''(II) the term 'an extension of consumer credit under an open end credit plan' has the same meaning such term has for purposes of the Consumer Credit Protection Act;''.

SEC. 134. GIVING DEBTORS THE ABILITY TO KEEP LEASED PERSONAL PROPERTY BY ASSUMPTION.

Section 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(p)(1) If a lease of personal property is rejected or not timely assumed by the trustee under subsection (d), the leased property is no longer property of the estate and the stay under section 362(a) of this title is automatically terminated.

''(2) In the case of an individual under chapter 7, the debtor may notify the creditor in writing that the debtor desires to assume the lease. Upon being so notified, the creditor may, at its option, notify the debtor that it is willing to have the lease assumed by the debtor and may, at its option, condition such assumption on cure of any outstanding default on terms set by the contract. If within 30 days of the notice from the creditor the debtor notifies the lessor in writing that the lease is assumed, the liability under the lease will be assumed by the debtor and not by the estate. The stay under section 362 of this title and the injunction under section 524(a) of this title shall not be violated by notification of the debtor and negotiation of cure under this subsection. Nothing in this paragraph shall require a debtor to assume a lease, or a creditor to permit assumption.

''(3) In a case under chapter 11 of this title in which the debtor is an individual and in a case under chapter 13 of this title, if the debtor is the lessee with respect to personal property and the lease is not assumed in the plan confirmed by the court, the lease is deemed rejected as of the conclusion of the hearing on confirmation. If the lease is rejected, the stay under section 362 of this title and any stay under section 1301 is automatically terminated with respect to the property subject to the lease.''.

SEC. 135. ADEQUATE PROTECTION OF LESSORS AND PURCHASE MONEY SECURED CREDITORS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding after section 1307 the following:

''§ 1307A. Adequate protection in chapter 13 cases

''(a)(1)(A) On or before the date that is 30 days after the filing of a case under this chapter, the debtor shall make cash payments in an amount determined under paragraph (2), to—

''(i) any lessor of personal property; and

''(ii) any creditor holding a claim secured by personal property to the extent that the claim is attributable to the purchase of that property by the debtor.

''(B) The debtor or the plan shall continue making the adequate protection payments required under subparagraph (A) until the earlier of the date on which—

''(i) the creditor begins to receive actual payments under the plan; or

''(ii) the debtor relinquishes possession of the property referred to in subparagraph (A) to—

''(I) the lessor or creditor; or

''(II) any third party acting under claim of right, as applicable.

''(2) The payments referred to in paragraph (1)(A) shall be the contract amount and shall reduce any amount payable under section 1326(a) of the title.

''(b)(1) Subject to the limitations under paragraph (2), the court may, after notice and hearing, change the amount and timing of the dates of payment of payments made under subsection (a).

''(2)(A) The payments referred to in paragraph (1) shall be payable not less frequently than monthly.

''(B) The amount of payments referred to in paragraph (1) shall not be less than the amount of any weekly, biweekly, monthly, or other periodic payment scheduled as payable under the contract between the debtor and creditor.

''(c) Notwithstanding section 1326(b), the payments referred to in subsection (a)(1)(A) shall be continued in addition to plan payments under a confirmed plan until actual payments to the creditor begin under that plan, if the confirmed plan provides—

''(1) for payments to a creditor or lessor described in subsection (a)(1); and

''(2) for the deferral of payments to such creditor or lessor under the plan until the payment of amounts described in section 1326(b).

''(d) Notwithstanding sections 362, 542, and 543, a lessor or creditor described in subsection (a) may retain possession of property described in that subsection that was obtained in accordance with applicable law before the date of filing of the petition until the first payment under subsection (a)(1)(A) is received by the lessor or creditor.

''(e) On or before 60 days after the filing of a case under this chapter, a debtor retaining possession of personal property subject to a lease or securing a claim attributable in whole or in part to the purchase price of such property shall provide each creditor or lessor reasonable evidence of the maintenance of any required insurance coverage with respect to the use or ownership of such property and continue to do so for so long as the debtor retains possession of such property.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 13 of title 11,

United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1307 the following:

''1307A. Adequate protection in chapter 13 cases.''.

SEC. 136. AUTOMATIC STAY.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 118 and 132, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (20), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (21), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (21) the following:

''(22) under subsection (a) of any transfer that is not avoidable under section 544 of this title and that is not avoidable under section 549 of this title;

''(23) under subsection (a)(3), of the continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a rental agreement and the debtor has not paid rent to the lessor pursuant to the terms of the lease agreement or applicable State law after the commencement and during the course of the case;

''(24) under subsection (a)(3), of the commencement or continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property in which the debtor resides as a tenant under a rental agreement that has terminated pursuant to the lease agreement or applicable State law;

''(25) under subsection (a)(3), of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding, if the debtor has previously filed within the last year and failed to pay post-petition rent during the course of that case; or

''(26) under subsection (a)(3), of eviction actions based on endangerment to property or person or the use of illegal drugs.''.

SEC. 137. EXTEND PERIOD BETWEEN BANKRUPTCY DISCHARGES.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 727(a)(8) by striking ''six'' and inserting ''8''; and

(2) in section 1328 by adding at the end the following:

''(f) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), the court shall not grant a discharge of all debts provided for by the plan or disallowed under section 502 of this title if the debtor has received a discharge in any case filed under this title within 5 years of the order for relief under this chapter.''.

SEC. 138. DEFINITION OF DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION.

Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (12A); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

''(14A) 'domestic support obligation' means a debt that accrues before or after the entry of an order for relief under this title that is—

''(A) owed to or recoverable by—

''(i) a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor or that child's legal guardian; or

''(ii) a governmental unit;

''(B) in the nature of alimony, maintenance, or support (including assistance provided by a governmental unit) of such spouse, former spouse, or child, without regard to whether such debt is expressly so designated;

''(C) established or subject to establishment before or after entry of an order for relief under this title, by reason of applicable provisions of—

''(i) a separation agreement, divorce decree, or property settlement agreement;

''(ii) an order of a court of record; or

''(iii) a determination made in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law by a governmental unit; and

''(D) not assigned to a nongovernmental entity, unless that obligation is assigned voluntarily by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent solely for the purpose of collecting the debt.''.

SEC. 139. PRIORITIES FOR CLAIMS FOR DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS.

Section 507(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (7);

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) through (6) as paragraphs (2) through (7), respectively;

(3) in paragraph (2), as redesignated, by striking ''First'' and inserting ''Second'';

(4) in paragraph (3), as redesignated, by striking ''Second'' and inserting ''Third'';

(5) in paragraph (4), as redesignated, by striking ''Third'' and inserting ''Fourth'';

(6) in paragraph (5), as redesignated, by striking ''Fourth'' and inserting ''Fifth'';

(7) in paragraph (6), as redesignated, by striking ''Fifth'' and inserting ''Sixth'';

(8) in paragraph (7), as redesignated, by striking ''Sixth'' and inserting ''Seventh''; and

(9) by inserting before paragraph (2), as redesignated, the following:

''(1) First, allowed claims for domestic support obligations to be paid in the following order on the condition that funds received under this paragraph by a governmental unit in a case under this title be applied:

''(A) Claims that, as of the date of entry of the order for relief, are owed directly to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor, or the parent of such child, without regard to whether the claim is filed by the spouse, former spouse, child, or parent, or is filed by a governmental unit on behalf of that person.

''(B) Claims that, as of the date of entry of the order for relief, are assigned by a spouse, former spouse, child of the debtor, or the parent of that child to a governmental unit or are owed directly to a governmental unit under applicable nonbankruptcy law.''.

SEC. 140. REQUIREMENTS TO OBTAIN CONFIRMATION AND DISCHARGE IN CASES INVOLVING DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATIONS.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 1129(a), by adding at the end the following:

''(14) If the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order or statute for such obligation that become payable after the date on which the petition is filed.'';

(2) in section 1325(a)—

(A) in paragraph (5), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (6), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(7) if the debtor is required by a judicial or administrative order or statute to pay a domestic support obligation, the debtor has paid all amounts payable under such order for such obligation that become payable after the date on which the petition is filed.''; and

(3) in section 1328(a), as amended by section 127, in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting '', and with respect to a debtor who is required by a judicial or administrative order to pay a domestic support obligation, certifies that all amounts payable under such order or statute that are due on or before the date of the certification (including amounts due before or after the petition was filed) have been paid'' after ''completion by the debtor of all payments under the plan''.

SEC. 141. EXCEPTIONS TO AUTOMATIC STAY IN DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION PROCEEDINGS.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 118, 132, and 136, is amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

''(2) under subsection (a)—

''(A) of the commencement or continuation of an action or proceeding for—

''(i) the establishment of paternity; or

''(ii) the establishment or modification of an order for domestic support obligations; or

''(B) the collection of a domestic support obligation from property that is not property of the estate;'';

(2) in paragraph (25), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(3) in paragraph (26), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon; and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (26) the following:

''(27) under subsection (a) with respect to the withholding of income pursuant to an order as specified in section 466(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(b)); or

''(28) under subsection (a) with respect to—

''(A) the withholding, suspension, or restriction of drivers' licenses, professional and occupational licenses, and recreational licenses pursuant to State law, as specified in section 466(a)(16) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(16)) or with respect to the reporting of overdue support owed by an absent parent to any consumer reporting agency as specified in section 466(a)(7) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 666(a)(7));

''(B) the interception of tax refunds, as specified in sections 464 and 466(a)(3) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 664 and 666(a)(3)); or

''(C) the enforcement of medical obligations as specified under title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.).''.

SEC. 142. NONDISCHARGEABILITY OF CERTAIN DEBTS FOR ALIMONY, MAINTENANCE, AND SUPPORT.

Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking paragraph (5) and inserting the following:

''(5) for a domestic support obligation;'';

(2) in subsection (a)(15)—

(A) by inserting ''or'' after ''court of record,'';

(B) by striking ''unless—'' and all that follows through ''debtor'' the last place it appears; and

(3) in subsection (c), by striking ''(6), or (15)'' each place it appears and inserting ''or (6)''.

SEC. 143. CONTINUED LIABILITY OF PROPERTY.

Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (c), by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(1) a debt of a kind specified in paragraph (1) or (5) of section 523(a) (in which case, notwithstanding any provision of applicable nonbankruptcy law to the contrary, such property shall be liable for a debt of a kind specified in section 523(a)(5);''; and

(2) in subsection (f)(1)(A), by striking the dash and all that follows through the end of the subparagraph and inserting ''of a kind that is specified in section 523(a)(5); or''.

SEC. 144. PROTECTION OF DOMESTIC SUPPORT CLAIMS AGAINST PREFERENTIAL TRANSFER MOTIONS.

Section 547(c)(7) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(7) to the extent such transfer was a bona fide payment of a debt for a domestic support obligation; or''.

SEC. 145. CLARIFICATION OF MEANING OF HOUSEHOLD GOODS.

Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (27) the following:

''(27A) 'household goods' includes tangible personal property normally found in or around a residence, but does not include motorized vehicles used for transportation purposes;''.

SEC. 146. NONDISCHARGEABLE DEBTS.

Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

''(14A) incurred to pay a debt that is nondischargeable by reason of section 727, 1141, 1228(a), 1228(b), or 1328(c), or any other provision of this subsection, if the debtor incurred the debt to pay such a nondischargeable debt with the intent to discharge in bankruptcy the newly-created debt, except that all debts incurred to pay nondischargeable debts, without regard to intent, are nondischargeable if incurred within 90 days of the filing of the petition;''.

SEC. 147. MONETARY LIMITATION ON CERTAIN EXEMPT PROPERTY.

Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 125, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2)(A) by striking ''subsection (o)'' and inserting ''subsections (o) and (p)'' before ''any property''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(p)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), as a result of electing under subsection (b)(3)(A) to exempt property under State or local law, a debtor may not exempt any interest that exceeds $250,000 in value, in the aggregate, in—

''(A) real or personal property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence;

''(B) a cooperative that owns property that the debtor or a dependent of the debtor uses as a residence; or

''(C) a burial plot for the debtor or a dependent of the debtor.

''(2) The limitation under paragraph (1) shall not apply to an exemption claimed under subsection (b)(3)(A) by a family farmer for the principal residence of that farmer.

''(3) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to debtors if applicable State law expressly provides by a statute enacted after the effective date of this paragraph that such paragraph shall not apply to debtors.''.

SEC. 148. BANKRUPTCY FEES.

Section 1930 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by striking ''Notwithstanding section 1915 of this title, the'' and inserting ''The''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(f)(1) Pursuant to procedures prescribed by the Judicial Conference of the United States, the district court or the bankruptcy court may waive the filing fee in a case under chapter 7 of title 11 for an individual debtor who is unable to pay such fee in installments. For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'filing fee' means the filing fee required by subsection (a), or any other fee prescribed by the Judicial Conference under subsections (b) and (c) that is payable to the clerk upon the commencement of a case under chapter 7 of title 11.

''(2) The district court or the bankruptcy court may also waive for such debtors other fees prescribed pursuant to subsections (b) and (c).

''(3) This subsection does not restrict the district court or the bankruptcy court from waiving, in accordance with Judicial Conference policy, fees prescribed pursuant to such subsections for other debtors and creditors.''.

SEC. 149. COLLECTION OF CHILD SUPPORT.

(a) DUTIES OF TRUSTEE UNDER CHAPTER 7.—Section 704 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 102, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''The trustee'',

(2) in paragraph (9) by striking ''and'' at the end,

(3) in paragraph (10) by striking the period and inserting ''; and'', and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(11) if, with respect to an individual debtor, there is a claim for support of a child of the debtor or a custodial parent of such child entitled to receive priority under section 507(a)(1) of this title, provide the applicable notification specified in subsection (b).

''(b)(1) In any case described in subsection (a)(11), the trustee shall—

''(A)(i) notify in writing the holder of the claim of the right of such holder to use the services of a State child support enforcement agency established under sections 464 and 466 of the Social Security Act for the State in which the holder resides; and

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the address and telephone number of the child support enforcement agency; and

''(B)(i) notify in writing the State child support agency of the State in which the holder of the claim resides of the claim;

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the name, address, and telephone number of the holder of the claim; and

''(iii) at such time as the debtor is granted a discharge under section 727 of this title, notify the holder of such claim and the State child support agency of the State in which such holder resides of—

''(I) the granting of the discharge;

''(II) the last recent known address of the debtor; and

''(III) with respect to the debtor's case, the name of each creditor that holds a claim that is not discharged under paragraph (2), (4), or (14A) of section 523(a) of this title or that was reaffirmed by the debtor under section 524(c) of this title.

''(2)(A) If, after receiving a notice under paragraph (1)(B)(iii), a holder of a claim or a State child support agency is unable to locate the debtor that is the subject of the notice, such holder or such agency may request from a creditor described in paragraph (1)(B)(iii)(III) the last known address of the debtor.

''(B) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a creditor that makes a disclosure of a last known address of a debtor in connection with a request made under subparagraph (A) shall not be liable to the debtor or any other person by reason of making such disclosure.''.

(b) DUTIES OF TRUSTEE UNDER CHAPTER 13.—Section 1302 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (4) by striking ''and'' at the end,

(B) in paragraph (5) by striking the period and inserting ''; and'', and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(6) if, with respect to an individual debtor, there is a claim for support of a child of the debtor or a custodial parent of such child entitled to receive priority under section 507(a)(1) of this title, provide the applicable notification specified in subsection (d).'', and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(d)(1) In any case described in subsection (b)(6), the trustee shall—

''(A)(i) notify in writing the holder of the claim of the right of such holder to use the services of a State child support enforcement agency established under sections 464 and 466 of the Social Security Act for the State in which the holder resides; and

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the address and telephone number of the child support enforcement agency; and

''(B)(i) notify in writing the State child support agency of the State in which the holder of the claim resides of the claim; and

''(ii) include in the notice under this paragraph the name, address, and telephone number of the holder of the claim;

''(iii) at such time as the debtor is granted a discharge under section 1328 of this title, notify the holder of the claim and the State child support agency of the State in which such holder resides of—

''(I) the granting of the discharge;

''(II) the last recent known address of the debtor; and

''(III) with respect to the debtor's case, the name of each creditor that holds a claim that is not discharged under paragraph (2), (4), or (14A) of section 523(a) of this title or that was reaffirmed by the debtor under section 524(c) of this title.

''(2)(A) If, after receiving a notice under paragraph (1)(B)(iii), a holder of a claim or a State child support agency is unable to locate the debtor that is the subject of the notice, such holder or such agency may request from a creditor described in paragraph (1)(B)(iii) the last known address of the debtor.

''(B) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a creditor that makes a disclosure of a last known address of a debtor in connection with a request made under subparagraph (A) shall not be liable to the debtor or any other person by reason of making such disclosure.''.

SEC. 150. EXCLUDING EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN PARTICIPANT CONTRIBUTIONS AND OTHER PROPERTY FROM THE ESTATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 541(b) of title 11 of the United States Code is amended—

(1) by striking ''or'' at the end of paragraph (4)(B)(ii);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (5) the following:

''(7) any amount or interest in property to the extent that an employer has withheld amounts from the wages of employees for contribution to an employee benefit plan subject to title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, or to the extent that the employer has received amounts as a result of payments by participants or beneficiaries to an employer for contribution to an employee benefit plan subject to title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.''.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT.—The amendment made by this section shall not apply to cases commenced under title 11 of the United States Code before the expiration of the 180-day period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 151. CLARIFICATION OF POSTPETITION WAGES AND BENEFITS.

Section 503(b)(1)(A) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(A) the actual, necessary costs and expenses of preserving the estate, including wages, salaries, or commissions for services rendered after the commencement of the case, and wages and benefits attributable to any period of time after commencement of the case as a result of the debtor's violation of Federal law, without regard to when the original unlawful act occurred or to whether any services were rendered;''.

SEC. 152. EXCEPTIONS TO AUTOMATIC STAY IN DOMESTIC SUPPORT OBLIGATION PROCEEDINGS.

Section 362(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B) by adding ''or'' at the end; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) under subsection (a) of—

''(i) the withholding of income for payment of a domestic support obligation pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute for such obligation that first becomes payable after the date on which the petition is filed; or

''(ii) the withholding of income for payment of a domestic support obligation owed directly to the spouse, former spouse or child of the debtor or the parent of such child, pursuant to a judicial or administrative order or statute for such obligation that becomes payable before the date on which the petition is filed unless the court finds, after notice and hearing, that such withholding would render the plan infeasible;''.

SEC. 153. AUTOMATIC STAY INAPPLICABLE TO CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE DEBTOR.

Section 362(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 153, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

''(D) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding concerning a child custody or visitation;

''(E) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding alleging domestic violence; or

''(F) the commencement or continuation of a proceeding seeking a dissolution of marriage, except to the extent the proceeding concerns property of the estate;''.

TITLE II—DISCOURAGING BANKRUPTCY ABUSE

SEC. 201. REENACTMENT OF CHAPTER 12.

(a) REENACTMENT.—Chapter 12 of title 11 of the United States Code, as in effect on March 31, 1999, is hereby reenacted.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect on March 31, 1999.

SEC. 202. MEETINGS OF CREDITORS AND EQUITY SECURITY HOLDERS.

Section 341 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b), the court, on the request of a party in interest and after notice and a hearing, for cause may order that the United States trustee not convene a meeting of creditors or equity security holders if the debtor has filed a plan as to which the debtor solicited acceptances prior to the commencement of the case.''.

SEC. 203. PROTECTION OF RETIREMENT SAVINGS IN BANKRUPTCY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 522 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 113, 125, and 147 is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (2)—

(i) by striking ''(2)(A)'' and inserting:

''(3) Property listed in this paragraph is—

''(A) subject to subsections (o) and (p),'';

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(iii) in subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(iv) by adding at the end the following:

''(D) retirement funds to the extent that those funds are in a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.'';

(B) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting:

''(2) Property listed in this paragraph is property that is specified under subsection (d), unless the State law that is applicable to the debtor under paragraph (3)(A) specifically does not so authorize.'';

(C) in the matter preceding paragraph (2)—

(i) by striking ''(b)'' and inserting ''(b)(1)'';

(ii) by striking ''paragraph (2)'' both places it appears and inserting ''paragraph (3)'';

(iii) by striking ''paragraph (1)'' each place it appears and inserting ''paragraph (2)''; and

(iv) by striking ''Such property is—''; and

(D) by adding at the end of the subsection the following:

''(4) For purposes of paragraph (3)(D) and subsection (d)(12), the following shall apply:

''(A) If the retirement funds are in a retirement fund that has received a favorable determination pursuant to section 7805 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and that determination is in effect as of the date of the commencement of the case under section 301, 302, or 303 of this title, those funds shall be presumed to be exempt from the estate.

''(B) If the retirement funds are in a retirement fund that has not received a favorable determination pursuant to such section 7805, those funds are exempt from the estate if the debtor demonstrates that—

''(i) no prior determination to the contrary has been made by a court or the Internal Revenue Service; and

''(ii) the retirement fund is in substantial compliance with the applicable requirements of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(C) A direct transfer of retirement funds from 1 fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, pursuant to section 401(a)(31) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or otherwise, shall not cease to qualify for exemption under paragraph (3)(D) or subsection (d)(12) by reason of that direct transfer.

''(D)(i) Any distribution that qualifies as an eligible rollover distribution within the meaning of section 402(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or that is described in clause (ii) shall not cease to qualify for exemption under paragraph (3)(D) or subsection (d)(12) by reason of that distribution.

''(ii) A distribution described in this clause is an amount that—

''(I) has been distributed from a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

''(II) to the extent allowed by law, is deposited in such a fund or account not later than 60 days after the distribution of that amount.''; and

(2) in subsection (d)—

(A) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking ''subsection (b)(1)'' and inserting ''subsection (b)(2)''; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(12) Retirement funds to the extent that those funds are in a fund or account that is exempt from taxation under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.''.

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 118, 132, 136, and 141 is amended—

(1) in paragraph (27), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (28), by striking the period and inserting ''; or'';

(3) by inserting after paragraph (28) the following:

''(29) under subsection (a), of withholding of income from a debtor's wages and collection of amounts withheld, pursuant to the debtor's agreement authorizing that withholding and collection for the benefit of a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other plan established under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 that is sponsored by the employer of the debtor, or an affiliate, successor, or predecessor of such employer—

''(A) to the extent that the amounts withheld and collected are used solely for payments relating to a loan from a plan that satisfies the requirements of section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 or is subject to section 72(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

''(B) in the case of a loan from a thrift savings plan described in subchapter III of title 5, that satisfies the requirements of section 8433(g) of such title.''; and

(4) by adding at the end of the flush material following paragraph (29) the following: ''Paragraph (29) does not apply to any amount owed to a plan referred to in that paragraph that is incurred under a loan made during the 1-year period preceding the filing of a petition. Nothing in paragraph (29) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under section 414(d), or a contract or account under section 403(b), of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 constitutes a claim or a debt under this title.''.

(c) EXCEPTIONS TO DISCHARGE.—Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''or'' at the end of paragraph (17);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (18) and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(19) owed to a pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, or other plan established under section 401, 403, 408, 408A, 414, 457, or 501(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, pursuant to—

''(A) a loan permitted under section 408(b)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) or subject to section 72(p) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; or

''(B) a loan from the thrift savings plan described in subchapter III of title 5, that satisfies the requirements of section 8433(g) of such title.

Paragraph (19) does not apply to any amount owed to a plan referred to in that paragraph that is incurred under a loan made during the 1-year period preceding the filing of a petition. Nothing in paragraph (19) may be construed to provide that any loan made under a governmental plan under section 414(d), or a contract or account under section 403(b), of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 constitutes a claim or a debt under this title.''.

(d) PLAN CONTENTS.—Section 1322 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(f) A plan may not materially alter the terms of a loan described in section 362(b)(29) of this title.''.

SEC. 204. PROTECTION OF REFINANCE OF SECURITY INTEREST.

Subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of section 547(e)(2) of title 11, United States Code, are amended by striking ''10'' each place it appears and inserting ''30''.

SEC. 205. EXECUTORY CONTRACTS AND UNEXPIRED LEASES.

Section 365(d)(4) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(4)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), in any case under any chapter in this title, an unexpired lease of nonresidential real property under which the debtor is the lessee shall be deemed rejected, and the trustee shall immediately surrender such property to the lessor, if the trustee does not assume or reject the unexpired lease by the earlier of—

''(i) the date that is 120 days after the date of the order for relief; or

''(ii) the date of the entry of an order confirming a plan.

''(B)(i) The court may extend the period determined under subparagraph (A) for 120 days upon motion of the trustee or the lessor for cause.

''(ii) If the court grants an extension under clause (i), the court may grant a subsequent extension only upon prior written consent of the lessor.''.

SEC. 206. CREDITORS AND EQUITY SECURITY HOLDERS COMMITTEES.

Section 1102(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the first sentence the following: ''On its own motion or on request of a party in interest, and after notice and hearing, the court may order a change in the membership of a committee appointed under this subsection, if the court determines that the change is necessary to ensure adequate representation of creditors or equity security holders.''.

SEC. 207. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 546 OF TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 546 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end thereof:

''(i) Notwithstanding section 545 (2) and (3) of this title, the trustee may not avoid a warehouseman's lien for storage, transportation or other costs incidental to the storage and handling of goods, as provided by section 7–209 of the Uniform Commercial Code.''.

SEC. 208. LIMITATION.

Section 546(c)(1)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''20'' and inserting ''45''.

SEC. 209. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 330(a) OF TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

Section 330(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)—

(A) in subparagraph (A) after ''awarded'', by inserting ''to an examiner, chapter 11 trustee, or professional person''; and

(B) by redesignating subdivisions (A) through (E) as clauses (i) through (iv), respectively; and

(2) by adding at the the following:

''(B) In determining the amount of reasonable compensation to be awarded a trustee, the court shall treat such compensation as a commission based on the results achieved.''.

SEC. 210. POSTPETITION DISCLOSURE AND SOLICITATION.

Section 1125 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(g) Notwithstanding subsection (b), an acceptance or rejection of the plan may be solicited from a holder of a claim or interest if such solicitation complies with applicable nonbankruptcy law and if such holder was solicited before the commencement of the case in a manner complying with applicable nonbankruptcy law.''.

SEC. 211. PREFERENCES.

Section 547(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

''(2) to the extent that such transfer was in payment of a debt incurred by the debtor in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee, and such transfer was—

''(A) made in the ordinary course of business or financial affairs of the debtor and the transferee; or

''(B) made according to ordinary business terms;'';

(2) in paragraph (7) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(3) in paragraph (8) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(9) if, in a case filed by a debtor whose debts are not primarily consumer debts, the aggregate value of all property that constitutes or is affected by such transfer is less than $5,000.''.

SEC. 212. VENUE OF CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS.

Section 1409(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by inserting '', or a nonconsumer debt against a noninsider of less than $10,000,'' after ''$5,000''.

SEC. 213. PERIOD FOR FILING PLAN UNDER CHAPTER 11.

Section 1121(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''On'' and inserting ''(1) Subject to paragraph (1), on''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2)(A) Such 120-day period may not be extended beyond a date that is 18 months after the date of the order for relief under this chapter.

''(B) Such 180-day period may not be extended beyond a date that is 20 months after the date of the order for relief under this chapter.''.

SEC. 214. FEES ARISING FROM CERTAIN OWNERSHIP INTERESTS.

Section 523(a)(16) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''dwelling'' the first place it appears;

(2) by striking ''ownership or'' and inserting ''ownership,'';

(3) by striking ''housing'' the first place it appears; and

(4) by striking ''but only'' and all that follows through ''such period,'', and inserting ''or a lot in a homeowners association, for as long as the debtor or the trustee has a legal, equitable, or possessory ownership interest in such unit, such corporation, or such lot,''.

SEC. 215. CLAIMS RELATING TO INSURANCE DEPOSITS IN CASES ANCILLARY TO FOREIGN PROCEEDINGS.

Section 304 of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''§ 304. Cases ancillary to foreign proceedings

''(a) For purposes of this section—

''(1) the term 'domestic insurance company' means a domestic insurance company, as such term is used in section 109(b)(2);

''(2) the term 'foreign insurance company' means a foreign insurance company, as such term is used in section 109(b)(3);

''(3) the term 'United States claimant' means a beneficiary of any deposit referred to in subsection (b) or any multibeneficiary trust referred to in subsection (b);

''(4) the term 'United States creditor' means, with respect to a foreign insurance company—

''(A) a United States claimant; or

''(B) any business entity that operates in the United States and that is a creditor; and

''(5) the term 'United States policyholder' means a holder of an insurance policy issued in the United States.

''(b) The court may not grant relief under chapter 15 of this title with respect to any deposit, escrow, trust fund, or other security required or permitted under any applicable State insurance law or regulation for the benefit of claim holders in the United States.''.

SEC. 216. DEFAULTS BASED ON NONMONETARY OBLIGATIONS.

(a) EXECUTORY CONTRACTS AND UNEXPIRED LEASES.—Section 365 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)—

(A) in paragraph (1)(A) by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting the following: ''other than a default that is a breach of a provision relating to—

''(i) the satisfaction of any provision (other than a penalty rate or penalty provision) relating to a default arising from any failure to perform nonmonetary obligations under an unexpired lease of real property (excluding executory contracts that transfer a right or interest under a filed or issued patent, copyright, trademark, trade dress, or trade secret), if it is impossible for the trustee to cure such default by performing nonmonetary acts at and after the time of assumption; or

''(ii) the satisfaction of any provision (other than a penalty rate or penalty provision) relating to a default arising from any failure to perform nonmonetary obligations under an executory contract, if it is impossible for the trustee to cure such default by performing nonmonetary acts at and after the time of assumption and if the court determines, based on the equities of the case, that this subparagraph should not apply with respect to such default;''; and

(B) by amending paragraph (2)(D) to read as follows:

''(D) the satisfaction of any penalty rate or penalty provision relating to a default arising from a failure to perform nonmonetary obligations under an executory contract (excluding executory contracts that transfer a right or interest under a filed or issued patent, copyright, trademark, trade dress, or trade secret) or under an unexpired lease of real or personal property.'';

(2) in subsection (c)—

(A) in paragraph (2) by adding ''or'' at the end;

(B) in paragraph (3) by striking ''; or'' at the end and inserting a period; and

(C) by striking paragraph (4);

(3) in subsection (d)—

(A) by striking paragraphs (5) through (9); and

(B) by redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (5); and

(4) in subsection (f)(1) by striking ''; except that'' and all that follows through the end of the paragraph and inserting a period.

(b) IMPAIRMENT OF CLAIMS OR INTERESTS.—Section 1124(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by inserting ''or of a kind that section 365(b)(1)(A) of this title expressly does not require to be cured'' before the semicolon at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (C) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(3) by redesignating subparagraph (D) as subparagraph (E); and

(4) by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

''(D) if such claim or such interest arises from any failure to perform a nonmonetary obligation, compensates the holder of such claim or such interest (other than the debtor or an insider) for any actual pecuniary loss incurred by such holder as a result of such failure; and''.

SEC. 217. SHARING OF COMPENSATION.

Section 504 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(c) This section shall not apply with respect to sharing, or agreeing to share, compensation with a bona fide public service attorney referral program that operates in accordance with non-Federal law regulating attorney referral services and with rules of professional responsibility applicable to attorney acceptance of referrals.''.

SEC. 218. PRIORITY FOR ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 503(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by deleting ''and'' at the end of paragraph (5);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (6) and inserting ''; and'';

(3) by inserting the following after paragraph (6):

''(7) with respect to a nonresidential real property lease previously assumed under section 365, and subsequently rejected, a sum equal to all monetary obligations due, excluding those arising from or relating to a failure to operate or penalty provisions, for the period of one year following the later of the rejection date or date of actual turnover of the premises, without reduction or setoff for any reason whatsoever except for sums actually received or to be received from a nondebtor; and the claim for remaining sums due for the balance of the term of the lease shall be a claim under section 502(b)(6).''.

TITLE III—GENERAL BUSINESS BANKRUPTCY PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. DEFINITION OF DISINTERESTED PERSON.

Section 101(14) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(14) 'disinterested person' means a person that—

''(A) is not a creditor, an equity security holder, or an insider;

''(B) is not and was not, within 2 years before the date of the filing of the petition, a director, officer, or employee of the debtor; and

''(C) does not have an interest materially adverse to the interest of the estate or of any class of creditors or equity security holders, by reason of any direct or indirect relationship to, connection with, or interest in, the debtor, or for any other reason;''.

SEC. 302. MISCELLANEOUS IMPROVEMENTS.

(a) WHO MAY BE A DEBTOR.—Section 109 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h)(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3) and notwithstanding any other provision of this section, an individual may not be a debtor under this title unless that individual has, during the 90-day period preceding the date of filing of the petition of that individual, received credit counseling, including, at a minimum, participation in an individual or group briefing that outlined the opportunities for available credit counseling and assisted that individual in performing an initial budget analysis, through a credit counseling program (offered through an approved credit counseling service described in section 111(a)).

''(2)(A) Paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of the bankruptcy court of that district determines that the approved credit counseling services for that district are not reasonably able to provide adequate services to the additional individuals who would otherwise seek credit counseling from those programs by reason of the requirements of paragraph (1).

''(B) Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes a determination described in subparagraph (A) shall review that determination not later than one year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter.

''(3)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), the requirements of paragraph (1) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who submits to the court a certification that—

''(i) describes exigent circumstances that merit a waiver of the requirements of paragraph (1);

''(ii) states that the debtor requested credit counseling services from an approved credit counseling service, but was unable to obtain the services referred to in paragraph (1) during the 5-day period beginning on the date on which the debtor made that request or that the exigent circumstances require filing before such 5-day period expires; and

''(iii) is satisfactory to the court.

''(B) With respect to a debtor, an exemption under subparagraph (A) shall cease to apply to that debtor on the date on which the debtor meets the requirements of paragraph (1), but in no case may the exemption apply to that debtor after the date that is 30 days after the debtor files a petition.''.

(b) CHAPTER 7 DISCHARGE.—Section 727(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (9), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (10), by striking the period and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(11) after the filing of the petition, the debtor failed to complete an instructional course concerning personal financial management described in section 111 unless the debtor resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of the bankruptcy court of that district determines that the approved instructional courses are not adequate to provide service to the additional individuals who would be required to compete the instructional course by reason of the requirements of this section. Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes such a determination shall review that determination not later than 1 year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter.''.

(c) CHAPTER 13 DISCHARGE.—Section 1328 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 137, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(g) The court shall not grant a discharge under this section to a debtor, unless after filing a petition the debtor has completed an instructional course concerning personal financial management described in section 111.

''(h) Subsection (g) shall not apply with respect to a debtor who resides in a district for which the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator of the bankruptcy court of that district determines that the approved instructional courses are not adequate to provide service to the additional individuals who would be required to complete the instructional course by reason of the requirements of this section.

''(i) Each United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator that makes a determination described in subsection (h) shall review that determination not later than 1 year after the date of that determination, and not less frequently than every year thereafter.''.

(d) DEBTOR'S DUTIES.—Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 604 and 120, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(d) In addition to the requirements under subsection (a), an individual debtor shall file with the court—

''(1) a certificate from the credit counseling service that provided the debtor services under section 109(h); and

''(2) a copy of the debt repayment plan, if any, developed under section 109(h) through the credit counseling service referred to in paragraph (1).''.

(e) GENERAL PROVISIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 1 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 111. Credit counseling services; financial management instructional courses

''The clerk of each district shall maintain a list of credit counseling services that provide 1 or more programs described in section 109(h) and a list of instructional courses concerning personal financial management that have been approved by—

''(1) the United States trustee; or

''(2) the bankruptcy administrator for the district.''.

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 1 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''111. Credit counseling services; financial management instructional courses.''.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting after paragraph (13) the following:

''(13A) 'debtor's principal residence' means a residential structure including incidental property when the structure contains 1 to 4 units, whether or not that structure is attached to real property, and includes, without limitation, an individual condominium or cooperative unit or mobile or manufactured home or trailer;'';

(2) by inserting after paragraph (27A), as added by section 318 of this Act, the following:

''(27B) 'incidental property' means property incidental to such residence including, without limitation, property commonly conveyed with a principal residence where the real estate is located, window treatments, carpets, appliances and equipment located in the residence, and easements, appurtenances, fixtures, rents, royalties, mineral rights, oil and gas rights, escrow funds and insurance proceeds;'';

(3) in section 362(b), as amended by sections 117, 118, 132, 136, 141 203, 818, and 1007,—

(A) in paragraph (28) by striking ''or'' at the end thereof;

(B) in paragraph (29) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(C) by inserting after paragraph (29) the following:

''(30) under subsection (a), until a prepetition default is cured fully in a case under chapter 13 of this title by actual payment of all arrears as required by the plan, of the postponement, continuation or other similar delay of a prepetition foreclosure proceeding or sale in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law, but nothing herein shall imply that such postponement, continuation or other similar delay is a violation of the stay under subsection (a).''; and

(4) by amending section 1322(b)(2) to read as follows:

''(2) modify the rights of holders of secured claims, other than a claim secured primarily by a security interest in property used as the debtor's principal residence at any time during 180 days prior to the filing of the petition, or of holders of unsecured claims, or leave unaffected the rights of holders of any class of claims;''.

(f) LIMITATION.—Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(j) If one case commenced under chapter 7, 11, or 13 of this title is dismissed due to the creation of a debt repayment plan administered by a credit counseling agency approved pursuant to section 111 of this title, then for purposes of section 362(c)(3) of this title the subsequent case commenced under any such chapter shall not be presumed to be filed not in good faith.''.

(g) RETURN OF GOODS SHIPPED.—Section 546(g) of title 11, United States Code, as added by section 222(a) of Public Law 103–394, is amended to read as follows:

''(h) Notwithstanding the rights and powers of a trustee under sections 544(a), 545, 547, 549, and 553 of this title, if the court determines on a motion by the trustee made not later than 120 days after the date of the order for relief in a case under chapter 11 of this title and after notice and hearing, that a return is in the best interests of the estate, the debtor, with the consent of the creditor, and subject to the prior rights, if any, of third parties in such goods, may return goods shipped to the debtor by the creditor before the commencement of the case, and the creditor may offset the purchase price of such goods against any claim of the creditor against the debtor that arose before the commencement of the case.''.

SEC. 303. EXTENSIONS.

Section 302(d)(3) of the Bankruptcy, Judges, United States Trustees, and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 (28 U.S.C. 581 note) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), in the matter following clause (ii), by striking ''or October 1, 2002, whichever occurs first''; and

(2) in subparagraph (F)—

(A) in clause (i)—

(i) in subclause (II), by striking ''or October 1, 2002, whichever occurs first''; and

(ii) in the matter following subclause (II), by striking ''October 1, 2003, or''; and

(B) in clause (ii), in the matter following subclause (II)—

(i) by striking ''before October 1, 2003, or''; and

(ii) by striking '', whichever occurs first''.

SEC. 304. LOCAL FILING OF BANKRUPTCY CASES.

Section 1408 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''Except'' and inserting ''(a) Except''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) For the purposes of subsection (a), if the debtor is a corporation, the domicile and residence of the debtor are conclusively presumed to be where the debtor's principal place of business in the United States is located.''.

SEC. 305. PERMITTING ASSUMPTION OF CONTRACTS.

(a) Section 365(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(c)(1) The trustee may not assume or assign an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, whether or not the contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties, if—

''(A)(i) applicable law excuses a party to the contract or lease from accepting performance from or rendering performance to an assignee of the contract or lease, whether or not the contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties; and

''(ii) the party does not consent to the assumption or assignment; or

''(B) the contract is a contract to make a loan, or extend other debt financing or financial accommodations, to or for the benefit of the debtor, or to issue a security of the debtor.

''(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1)(A) and applicable nonbankruptcy law, in a case under chapter 11 of this title, a trustee in a case in which a debtor is a corporation, or a debtor in possession, may assume an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor, whether or not the contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties.

''(3) The trustee may not assume or assign an unexpired lease of the debtor of nonresidential real property, whether or not the contract or lease prohibits or restricts assignment of rights or delegation of duties, if the lease has been terminated under applicable nonbankruptcy law before the order for relief.''.

(b) Section 365(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraphs (5), (6), (7), (8), and (9), and redesignating paragraph (10) as paragraph (5).

(c) Section 365(e) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(e)(1) Notwithstanding a provision in an executory contract or unexpired lease, or in applicable law, an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor may not be terminated or modified, and any right or obligation under such contract or lease may not be terminated or modified, at any time after the commencement of the case solely because of a provision in such contract or lease that is conditioned on—

''(A) the insolvency or financial condition of the debtor at any time before the closing of the case;

''(B) the commencement of a case under this title; or

''(C) the appointment of or taking possession by a trustee in a case under this title or a custodian before such commencement.

''(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply to an executory contract or unexpired lease of the debtor if the trustee may not assume or assign, and the debtor in possession may not assume, the contract or lease by reason of the provisions of subsection (c) of this section.''.

(d) Section 365(f)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the semicolon and all that follows through ''event''.

TITLE IV SMALL BUSINESS BANKRUPTCY PROVISIONS

SEC. 401. FLEXIBLE RULES FOR DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND PLAN.

(a) Section 1125(a)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the semicolon following:

''and in determining whether a disclosure statement provides adequate information, the court shall consider the complexity of the case, the benefit of additional information to creditors and other parties in interest, and the cost of providing additional information''.

(b) Section 1125(f) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(f) Notwithstanding subsection (b)—

''(1) the court may determine that the plan itself provides adequate information and that a separate disclosure statement is not necessary;

''(2) the court may approve a disclosure statement submitted on standard forms approved by the court or adopted pursuant to section 2075 of title 28; and

''(3)(A) the court may conditionally approve a disclosure statement subject to final approval after notice and a hearing;

''(B) acceptances and rejections of a plan may be solicited based on a conditionally approved disclosure statement if the debtor provides adequate information to each holder of a claim or interest that is solicited, but a conditionally approved disclosure statement shall be mailed not less than 20 days before the date of the hearing on confirmation of the plan; and

''(C) the hearing on the disclosure statement may be combined with the hearing on confirmation of a plan.''.

SEC. 402. DEFINITIONS.

(a) DEFINITIONS. Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (51C) and inserting the following:

''(51C) 'small business case' means a case filed under chapter 11 of this title in which the debtor is a small business debtor; and

''(51D) 'small business debtor' means (A) a person (including affiliates of such person that are also debtors under this title) that has aggregate noncontingent, liquidated secured and unsecured debts as of the date of the petition or the order for relief in an amount not more than $4,000,000 (excluding debts owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders), except that if a group of affiliated debtors has aggregate noncontingent liquidated secured and unsecured debts greater than $4,000,000 (excluding debt owed to 1 or more affiliates or insiders), then no member of such group is a small business debtor;''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1102(a)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''debtor'' after ''small business'' .

SEC. 403. STANDARD FORM DISCLOSURE STATEMENT AND PLAN.

The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States shall, within a reasonable period of time after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose for adoption standard form disclosure statements and plans of reorganization for small business debtors (as defined in section 101 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by this Act), designed to achieve a practical balance between—

(1) the reasonable needs of the courts, the United States trustee, creditors, and other parties in interest for reasonably complete information; and

(2) economy and simplicity for debtors.

SEC. 404. UNIFORM NATIONAL REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

(a) REPORTING REQUIRED.—

(1) Title 11 of the United States Code is amended by inserting after section 307 the following:

''§ 308. Debtor reporting requirements

''A small business debtor shall file periodic financial and other reports containing information including—

''(1) the debtor's profitability, that is, approximately how much money the debtor has been earning or losing during current and recent fiscal periods;

''(2) reasonable approximations of the debtor's projected cash receipts and cash disbursements over a reasonable period;

''(3) comparisons of actual cash receipts and disbursements with projections in prior reports; and

''(4) whether the debtor is—

''(A) in compliance in all material respects with postpetition requirements imposed by this title and the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure; and

''(B) timely filing tax returns and paying taxes and other administrative claims when due, and, if not, what the failures are and how, at what cost, and when the debtor intends to remedy such failures; and

''(5) such other matters as are in the best interests of the debtor and creditors, and in the public interest in fair and efficient procedures under chapter 11 of this title.''.

(2) The table of sections of chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 307 the following:

''308. Debtor reporting requirements.''.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect 60 days after the date on which rules are prescribed pursuant to section 2075, title 28, United States Code to establish forms to be used to comply with section 308 of title 11, United States Code, as added by subsection (a).

SEC. 405. UNIFORM REPORTING RULES AND FORMS FOR SMALL BUSINESS CASES.

(a) PROPOSAL OF RULES AND FORMS.—The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference of the United States shall propose for adoption amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and Official Bankruptcy Forms to be used by small business debtors to file periodic financial and other reports containing information, including information relating to—

(1) the debtor's profitability;

(2) the debtor's cash receipts and disbursements; and

(3) whether the debtor is timely filing tax returns and paying taxes and other administrative claims when due.

(b) PURPOSE.—The rules and forms proposed under subsection (a) shall be designed to achieve a practical balance between—

(1) the reasonable needs of the bankruptcy court, the United States trustee, creditors, and other parties in interest for reasonably complete information;

(2) the small business debtor's interest that required reports be easy and inexpensive to complete; and

(3) the interest of all parties that the required reports help the small business debtor to understand its financial condition and plan its future.

SEC. 406. DUTIES IN SMALL BUSINESS CASES.

(a) DUTIES IN CHAPTER 11 CASES.—Title 11 of the United States Code is amended by inserting after section 1114 the following:

''§ 1115. Duties of trustee or debtor in possession in small business cases

''(a) In a small business case, a trustee or the debtor in possession, in addition to the duties provided in this title and as otherwise required by law, shall—

''(1) append to the voluntary petition or, in an involuntary case, file within 3 days after the date of the order for relief—

''(A) its most recent balance sheet, statement of operations, cash-flow statement, Federal income tax return; or

''(B) a statement made under penalty of perjury that no balance sheet, statement of operations, or cash-flow statement has been prepared and no Federal tax return has been filed;

''(2) attend, through its responsible individual, meetings scheduled by the court or the United States trustee, including initial debtor interviews and meetings of creditors convened under section 341 of this title;

''(3) timely file all schedules and statements of financial affairs, unless the court, after notice and a hearing, grants an extension, which shall not extend such time period to a date later than 30 days after the date of the order for relief, absent extraordinary and compelling circumstances;

''(4) file all postpetition financial and other reports required by the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure or by local rule of the district court;

''(5) subject to section 363(c)(2) of this title, maintain insurance customary and appropriate to the industry;

''(6)(A) timely file tax returns;

''(B) subject to section 363(c)(2) of this title, timely pay all administrative expense tax claims, except those being contested by appropriate proceedings being diligently prosecuted; and

''(C) subject to section 363(c)(2) of this title, establish 1 or more separate deposit accounts not later than 10 business days after the date of order for relief (or as soon thereafter as possible if all banks contacted decline the business) and deposit therein, not later than 1 business day after receipt thereof or a responsible time set by the court, all taxes payable for periods beginning after the date the case is commenced that are collected or withheld by the debtor for governmental units unless the court waives this requirement after notice and hearing; and

''(7) allow the United States trustee, or its designated representative, to inspect the debtor's business premises, books, and records at reasonable times, after reasonable prior written notice, unless notice is waived by the debtor.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections of chapter 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1114 the following:

''1115. Duties of trustee or debtor in possession in small business cases.''.

SEC. 407. PLAN FILING AND CONFIRMATION DEADLINES.

Section 1121(e) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(e) In a small business case—

''(1) only the debtor may file a plan until after 90 days after the date of the order for relief, unless a trustee has been appointed under this chapter, or unless the court, on request of a party in interest and after notice and hearing, shortens such time;

''(2) the debtor shall file a plan, and any necessary disclosure statement, not later than 90 days after the date of the order for relief, unless the United States Trustee has appointed under section 1102(a)(1) of this title a committee of unsecured creditors that the court has determined, before the 90 days has expired, is sufficiently active and representative to provide effective oversight of the debtor; and

''(3) the time periods specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection and the time fixed in section 1129(e) of this title for confirmation of a plan, may be extended only as follows:

''(A) On request of a party in interest made within the respective periods, and after notice and hearing, the court may for cause grant one or more extensions, cumulatively not to exceed 60 days, if the movant establishes—

''(i) that no cause exists to dismiss or convert the case or appoint a trustee or examiner under subparagraphs (A) (I) of section 1112(b) of this title; and

''(ii) that there is a reasonable possibility the court will confirm a plan within a reasonable time;

''(B) On request of a party in interest made within the respective periods, and after notice and hearing, the court may for cause grant one or more extensions in excess of those authorized under subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, if the movant establishes:

''(i) that no cause exists to dismiss or convert the case or appoint a trustee or examiner under subparagraphs (A) (I) of section 1112(b)(3) of this title; and

''(ii) that it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a plan within a reasonable time; and

''(C) a new deadline shall be imposed whenever an extension is granted.''.

SEC. 408. PLAN CONFIRMATION DEADLINE.

Section 1129 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) In a small business case, the debtor shall confirm a plan not later than 150 days after the date of the order for relief unless—

''(1) the United States Trustee has appointed, under section 1102(a)(1) of this title, a committee of unsecured creditors that the court has determined, before the 150 days has expired, is sufficiently active and representative to provide effective oversight of the debtor; or

''(2) such 150-day period is extended as provided in section 1121(e)(3) of this title.''.

SEC. 409. PROHIBITION AGAINST EXTENSION OF TIME.

Section 105(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)(B)(vi) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(3) in a small business case, not extend the time periods specified in sections 1121(e) and 1129(e) of this title except as provided in section 1121(e)(3) of this title.''.

SEC. 410. DUTIES OF THE UNITED STATES TRUSTEE.

(a) DUTIES OF THE UNITED STATES TRUSTEE.—Section 586(a) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3)—

(A) in subparagraph (G) by striking ''and at the end'';

(B) by redesignating subparagraph (H) as subparagraph (I); and

(C) by inserting after subparagraph (G) the following:

''(H) in small business cases (as defined in section 101 of title 11), performing the additional duties specified in title 11 pertaining to such cases'';

(2) in paragraph (5) by striking ''and at the end'';

(3) in paragraph (6) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(4) by inserting after paragraph (7) the following:

''(7) in each of such small business cases—

''(A) conduct an initial debtor interview as soon as practicable after the entry of order for relief but before the first meeting scheduled under section 341(a) of title 11 at which time the United States trustee shall begin to investigate the debtor's viability, inquire about the debtor's business plan, explain the debtor's obligations to file monthly operating reports and other required reports, attempt to develop an agreed scheduling order, and inform the debtor of other obligations;

''(B) when determined to be appropriate and advisable, visit the appropriate business premises of the debtor and ascertain the state of the debtor's books and records and verify that the debtor has filed its tax returns; and

''(C) review and monitor diligently the debtor's activities, to identify as promptly as possible whether the debtor will be unable to confirm a plan; and

''(8) in cases in which the United States trustee finds material grounds for any relief under section 1112 of title 11, the United States trustee shall apply promptly to the court for relief.''.

SEC. 411. SCHEDULING CONFERENCES.

Section 105(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1) by striking '', may'';

(2) by amending paragraph (1) to read as follows:

''(1) shall hold such status conferences as are necessary to further the expeditious and economical resolution of the case; and''; and

(3) in paragraph (2) by striking ''unless inconsistent with another provision of this title or with applicable Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure'', and inserting ''may''.

SEC. 412. SERIAL FILER PROVISIONS.

Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 302, is amended—

(1) in subsection (i) as so redesignated by section 122—

(A) by striking ''An'' and inserting ''(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), an''; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) If such violation is based on an action taken by an entity in the good-faith belief that subsection (h) applies to the debtor, then recovery under paragraph (1) against such entity shall be limited to actual damages.''; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (j), as added by section 302, the following:

''(k)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the provisions of subsection (a) of thissection shall not apply in a case in which the debtor—

''(A) is a debtor in a case under this title pending at the time the petition is filed;

''(B) was a debtor in a case under this title which was dismissed for any reason by an order that became final in the 2-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition;

''(C) was a debtor in a case under this title in which a chapter 11, 12, or 13 plan was confirmed in the 2-year period ending on the date of the order for relief entered with respect to the petition; or

''(D) is an entity that has succeeded to substantially all of the assets or business of a debtor described in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C).

''(2) This subsection shall not apply—

''(A) to a case initiated by an involuntary petition filed by a creditor that is not an insider or affiliate of the debtor; or

''(B) after such time as the debtor, after notice and a hearing, demonstrates by a preponderance of the evidence, that the filing of such petition resulted from circumstances beyond the control of the debtor and not foreseeable at the time the earlier case was filed; and that it is more likely than not that the court will confirm a plan, other than a liquidating plan, within a reasonable time.''.

SEC. 413. EXPANDED GROUNDS FOR DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION AND APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE OR EXAMINER.

(a) EXPANDED GROUNDS FOR DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION.—Section 1112(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (4) of this subsection, and in subsection (c) of this section, on request of a party in interest, and after notice and a hearing, the court shall convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 of this title or dismiss a case under this chapter, or appoint a trustee or examiner under section 1104(e) of this title, whichever is in the best interest of creditors and the estate, if the movant establishes cause.

''(2) The court may decline to grant the relief specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection if the debtor or another party in interest objects and establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that—

''(A) it is more likely than not that a plan will be confirmed within a time as fixed by this title or by order of the court entered pursuant to section 1121(e)(3), or within a reasonable time if no time has been fixed; and

''(B) if the cause is an act or omission of the debtor that—

''(i) there exists a reasonable justification for the act or omission; and

''(ii) the act or omission will be cured within a reasonable time fixed by the court not to exceed 30 days after the court decides the motion, unless the movant expressly consents to a continuance for a specific period of time, or compelling circumstances beyond the control of the debtor justify an extension.

''(3) For purposes of this subsection, cause includes—

''(A) substantial or continuing loss to or diminution of the estate;

''(B) gross mismanagement of the estate;

''(C) failure to maintain insurance that poses a material risk to the estate or the public;

''(D) unauthorized use of cash collateral harmful to 1 or more creditors;

''(E) failure to comply with an order of the court;

''(F) failure timely to satisfy any filing or reporting requirement established by this title or by any rule applicable to a case under this chapter;

''(G) failure to attend the meeting of creditors convened under section 341(a) of this title;

''(H) failure timely to provide information or attend meetings reasonably requested by the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator;

''(I) failure timely to pay taxes due after the date of the order for relief or to file tax returns due after the order for relief;

''(J) failure to file a disclosure statement, or to file or confirm a plan, within the time fixed by this title or by order of the court;

''(K) failure to pay any fees or charges required under chapter 123 of title 28;

''(L) revocation of an order of confirmation under section 1144 of this title;

''(M) inability to effectuate substantial consummation of a confirmed plan;

''(N) material default by the debtor with respect to a confirmed plan; and

''(O) termination of a plan by reason of the occurrence of a condition specified in the plan.

''(4) The court may grant relief under this subsection for cause as defined in subparagraphs C, F, G, H, or K of paragraph 3 of this subsection only upon motion of the United States trustee or bankruptcy administrator or upon the court s own motion.

''(5) The court shall commence the hearing on any motion under this subsection not later than 30 days after filing of the motion, and shall decide the motion within 15 days after commencement of the hearing, unless the movant expressly consents to a continuance for a specific period of time or compelling circumstances prevent the court from meeting the time limits established by this paragraph.''.

(b) ADDITIONAL GROUNDS FOR APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEE OR EXAMINER.—Section 1104 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(e) If grounds exist to convert or dismiss the case under section 1112 of this title, the court may instead appoint a trustee or examiner, if it determines that such appointment is in the best interests of creditors and the estate.''.

SEC. 414. STUDY OF OPERATION OF TITLE 11 OF THE UNITED STATES CODE WITH RESPECT TO SMALL BUSINESSES.

Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, in consultation with the Attorney General, the Director of the Administrative Office of United States Trustees, and the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, shall—

(1) conduct a study to determine—

(A) the internal and external factors that cause small businesses, especially sole proprietorships, to become debtors in cases under title 11 of the United States Code and that cause certain small businesses to successfully complete cases under chapter 11 of such title; and

(B) how Federal laws relating to bankruptcy may be made more effective and efficient in assisting small businesses to remain viable; and

(2) submit to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives a report summarizing that study.

SEC. 415. PAYMENT OF INTEREST.

Section 362(d)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''or 30 days after the court determines that the debtor is subject to this paragraph, whichever is later'' after ''90-day period)''; and

(2) by amending subparagraph (B) to read as follows:

''(B) the debtor has commenced monthly payments (which payments may, in the debtor's sole discretion, notwithstanding section 363(c)(2) of this title, be made from rents or other income generated before or after the commencement of the case by or from the property) to each creditor whose claim is secured by such real estate (other than a claim secured by a judgment lien or by an unmatured statutory lien), which payments are in an amount equal to interest at the then-applicable nondefault contract rate of interest on the value of the creditor's interest in the real estate; or''.

TITLE V—MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY PROVISIONS

SEC. 501. PETITION AND PROCEEDINGS RELATED TO PETITION.

(a) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT RELATING TO MUNICIPALITIES.—Section 921(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''notwithstanding section 301(b)'' before the period at the end.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 301 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''A voluntary''; and

(2) by amending the last sentence to read as follows:

''(b) The commencement of a voluntary case under a chapter of this title constitutes an order for relief under such chapter.''.

SEC. 502. APPLICABILITY OF OTHER SECTIONS TO CHAPTER 9.

Section 901(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''555, 556,'' after ''553,''; and

(2) by inserting ''559, 560, 561, 562'' after ''557,''.

TITLE VI—STREAMLINING THE BANKRUPTCY SYSTEM

SEC. 601. CREDITOR REPRESENTATION AT FIRST MEETING OF CREDITORS.

Section 341(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the first sentence the following: ''Notwithstanding any local court rule, provision of a State constitution, any other Federal or State law that is not a bankruptcy law, or other requirement that representation at the meeting of creditors under subsection (a) be by an attorney, a creditor holding a consumer debt or any representative of the creditor (which may include an entity or an employee of an entity and may be a representative for more than one creditor) shall be permitted to appear at and participate in the meeting of creditors and activities related thereto in a case under chapter 7 or 13, either alone or in conjunction with an attorney for the creditor. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require any creditor to be represented by an attorney at any meeting of creditors.''.

SEC. 602. AUDIT PROCEDURES.

(a) AMENDMENTS.—Section 586 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by amending striking paragraph (6) to read as follows:

''(6) make such reports as the Attorney General directs, including the results of audits performed under subsection (f); and''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(f)(1)(A) The Attorney General shall establish procedures to determine the accuracy, veracity, and completeness of petitions, schedules, and other information which the debtor is required to provide under sections 521 and 1322 of title 11, and, if applicable, section 111 of title 11, in individual cases filed under chapter 7 or 13 of such title. Such audits shall be in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and performed by independent certified public accountants or independent licensed public accountants.

''(B) Those procedures shall—

''(i) establish a method of selecting appropriate qualified persons to contract to perform those audits;

''(ii) establish a method of randomly selecting cases to be audited, except that not less than 1 out of every 250 cases in each Federal judicial district shall be selected for audit;

''(iii) require audits for schedules of income and expenses which reflect greater than average variances from the statistical norm of the district in which the schedules were filed; and

''(iv) establish procedures for providing, not less frequently than annually, public information concerning the aggregate results of such audits including the percentage of cases, by district, in which a material misstatement of income or expenditures is reported.

''(2) The United States trustee for each district is authorized to contract with auditors to perform audits in cases designated by the United States trustee according to the procedures established under paragraph (1).

''(3)(A) The report of each audit conducted under this subsection shall be filed with the court and transmitted to the United States trustee. Each report shall clearly and conspicuously specify any material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets identified by the person performing the audit. In any case where a material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets has been reported, the clerk of the bankruptcy court shall give notice of the misstatement to the creditors in the case.

''(B) If a material misstatement of income or expenditures or of assets is reported, the United States trustee shall—

''(i) report the material misstatement, if appropriate, to the United States Attorney pursuant to section 3057 of title 18, United States Code; and

''(ii) if advisable, take appropriate action, including but not limited to commencing an adversary proceeding to revoke the debtor's discharge pursuant to section 727(d) of title 11, United States Code.''.

(b) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 521 OF TITLE 11, U.S.C.—Section 521(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 603, is amended in paragraphs (3) and (4) by adding ''or an auditor appointed pursuant to section 586 of title 28, United States Code'' after ''serving in the case''.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO SECTION 727 OF TITLE 11, U.S.C.—Section 727(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by deleting ''or'' at the end of paragraph (2);

(2) by substituting ''; or'' for the period at the end of paragraph (3); and

(3) by adding the following at the end the following:

''(4) the debtor has failed to explain satisfactorily—

''(A) a material misstatement in an audit performed pursuant to section 586(f) of title 28, United States Code; or

''(B) a failure to make available for inspection all necessary accounts, papers, documents, financial records, files, and all other papers, things, or property belonging to the debtor that are requested for an audit conducted pursuant to section 586(f) of title 28, United States Code.''.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 603. GIVING CREDITORS FAIR NOTICE IN CHAPTER 7 AND 13 CASES.

(a) NOTICE.—Section 342 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)—

(A) by striking '', but the failure of such notice to contain such information shall not invalidate the legal effect of such notice''; and

(B) by adding the following at the end:

''If the credit agreement between the debtor and the creditor or the last communication before the filing of the petition in a voluntary case from the creditor to a debtor who is an individual states an account number of the debtor which is the current account number of the debtor with respect to any debt held by the creditor against the debtor, the debtor shall include such account number in any notice to the creditor required to be given under this title. If the creditor has specified to the debtor an address at which the creditor wishes to receive correspondence regarding the debtor's account, any notice to the creditor required to be given by the debtor under this title shall be given at such address. For the purposes of this section, 'notice' shall include, but shall not be limited to, any correspondence from the debtor to the creditor after the commencement of the case, any statement of the debtor's intention under section 521(a)(2) of this title, notice of the commencement of any proceeding in the case to which the creditor is a party, and any notice of the hearing under section 1324 of this title.'';

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(d) At any time, a creditor in a case of an individual debtor under chapter 7 or 13 may file with the court and serve on the debtor a notice of the address to be used to notify the creditor in that case. After 5 days following receipt of such notice, any notice the court or the debtor is required to give the creditor shall be given at that address.

''(e) An entity may file with the court a notice stating its address for notice in cases under chapters 7 and 13. After 30 days following the filing of such notice, any notice in any case filed under chapter 7 or 13 given by the court shall be to that address unless specific notice is given under subsection (d) with respect to a particular case.

''(f) Notice given to a creditor other than as provided in this section shall not be effective notice until it has been brought to the attention of the creditor. If the creditor has designated a person or department to be responsible for receiving notices concerning bankruptcy cases and has established reasonable procedures so that bankruptcy notices received by the creditor will be delivered to such department or person, notice will not be brought to the attention of the creditor until received by such person or department. No sanction under section 362(h) of this title or any other sanction which a court may impose on account of violations of the stay under section 362(a) of this title or failure to comply with section 542 or 543 of this title may be imposed on any action of the creditor unless the action takes place after the creditor has received notice of the commencement of the case effective under this section.''.

(b) DEBTOR'S DUTIES.—Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 604, 120, and 302, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''The debtor shall—'';

(2) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(1) file—

''(A) a list of creditors; and

''(B) unless the court orders otherwise—

''(i) a schedule of assets and liabilities;

''(ii) a schedule of current monthly income and current expenditures prepared in accordance with section 707(b)(2);

''(iii) a statement of the debtor's financial affairs and, if applicable, a certificate—

''(I) of an attorney whose name is on the petition as the attorney for the debtor or any bankruptcy petition preparer signing the petition pursuant to section 110(b)(1) of this title indicating that such attorney or bankruptcy petition preparer delivered to the debtor any notice required by section 342(b) of this title; or

''(II) if no attorney for the debtor is indicated and no bankruptcy petition preparer signed the petition, of the debtor that such notice was obtained and read by the debtor;

''(iv) copies of any Federal tax returns, including any schedules or attachments, filed by the debtor for the 3-year period preceding the order for relief;

''(v) copies of all payment advices or other evidence of payment, if any, received by the debtor from any employer of the debtor in the period 60 days prior to the filing of the petition; and

''(vi) a statement disclosing any reasonably anticipated increase in income or expenditures over the 12-month period following the date of filing;'';

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(e)(1) At any time, a creditor, in the case of an individual under chapter 7 or 13, may file with the court notice that the creditor requests the petition, schedules, and a statement of affairs filed by the debtor in the case and the court shall make those documents available to the creditor who requests those documents at a reasonable cost within 5 business days after such request.

''(2) At any time, a creditor in a case under chapter 13 may file with the court notice that the creditor requests the plan filed by the debtor in the case, and the court shall make such plan available to the creditor who requests such plan at a reasonable cost and not later than 5 days after such request.

''(f) An individual debtor in a case under chapter 7 or 13 shall file with the court—

''(1) at the time filed with the taxing authority, all tax returns, including any schedules or attachments, with respect to the period from the commencement of the case until such time as the case is closed;

''(2) at the time filed with the taxing authority, all tax returns, including any schedules or attachments, that were not filed with the taxing authority when the schedules under subsection (a)(1) were filed with respect to the period that is 3 years before the order for relief;

''(3) any amendments to any of the tax returns, including schedules or attachments, described in paragraph (1) or (2); and

''(4) in a case under chapter 13, a statement subject to the penalties of perjury by the debtor of the debtor's current monthly income and expenditures in the preceding tax year and current monthly income less expenditures for the month preceding the statement prepared in accordance with section 707(b)(2) that shows how the amounts are calculated—

''(A) beginning on the date that is the later of 90 days after the close of the debtor's tax year or 1 year after the order for relief, unless a plan has been confirmed; and

''(B) thereafter, on or before the date that is 45 days before each anniversary of the confirmation of the plan until the case is closed.

''(g)(1) A statement referred to in subsection (f)(4) shall disclose—

''(A) the amount and sources of income of the debtor;

''(B) the identity of any persons responsible with the debtor for the support of any dependents of the debtor; and

''(C) the identity of any persons who contributed, and the amount contributed, to the household in which the debtor resides.

''(2) The tax returns, amendments, and statement of income and expenditures described in paragraph (1) shall be available to the United States trustee, any bankruptcy administrator, any trustee, and any party in interest for inspection and copying, subject to the requirements of subsection (h).

''(h)(1) Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of the Consumer Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall establish procedures for safeguarding the confidentiality of any tax information required to be provided under this section.

''(2) The procedures under paragraph (1) shall include reasonable restrictions on creditor access to tax information that is required to be provided under this section to verify creditor identity and to restrict use of the information except with respect to the case.

''(3) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Consumer Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall prepare, and submit to Congress a report that—

''(A) assesses the effectiveness of the procedures under paragraph (1) to provide timely and sufficient information to creditors concerning the case; and

''(B) if appropriate, includes proposed legislation—

''(i) to further protect the confidentiality of tax information or to make it better available to creditors; and

''(ii) to provide penalties for the improper use by any person of the tax information required to be provided under this section.

''(i) If requested by the United States trustee or a trustee serving in the case, the debtor provide a document that establishes the identity of the debtor, including a driver's license, passport, or other document that contains a photograph of the debtor and such other personal identifying information relating to the debtor that establishes the identity of the debtor.''.

(c) Section 1324 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''After''; and

(2) by inserting at the end thereof—

''(c) Whenever a party in interest is given notice of a hearing on the confirmation or modification of a plan under this chapter, such notice shall include the information provided by the debtor on the most recent statement filed with the court pursuant to section 521(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (f)(4) of this title.''.

SEC. 604. DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE SCHEDULES OR PROVIDE REQUIRED INFORMATION.

Section 521 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 603 is amended by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

''(b)(1) Notwithstanding section 707(a) of this title, and subject to paragraph (2), if an individual debtor in a voluntary case under chapter 7 or 13 fails to file all of the information required under subsection (a)(1) within 45 days after the filing of the petition commencing the case, the case shall be automatically dismissed effective on the 46th day after the filing of the petition.

''(2) With respect to a case described in paragraph (1), any party in interest may request the court to enter an order dismissing the case. The court shall, if so requested, enter an order of dismissal not later than 5 days after such request.

''(3) Upon request of the debtor made within 45 days after the filing of the petition commencing a case described in paragraph (1), the court may allow the debtor an additional period not to exceed 45 days to file the information required under subsection (a)(1) if the court finds justification for extending the period for the filing.''.

SEC. 605. ADEQUATE TIME TO PREPARE FOR HEARING ON CONFIRMATION OF THE PLAN.

(a) HEARING.—Section 1324 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''After'' and inserting the following:

''(a) Except as provided in subsection (b) and after''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) The hearing on confirmation of the plan may be held not earlier than 20 days, and not later than 45 days, after the meeting of creditors under section 341(a) of this title.''.

SEC. 606. CHAPTER 13 PLANS TO HAVE A 5-YEAR DURATION IN CERTAIN CASES.

Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending section 1322(d) to read as follows:

''(d) If the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is not less than the highest national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of equal or lesser size or, in the case of a household of 1 person, not less than the national median household income for 1 earner, the plan may not provide for payments over a period that is longer than 5 years. If the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is less than the highest national median family income for a family of equal or lesser size, or in the case of a household of 1 person, the national median household income for 1 earner, the plan may not provide for payments over a period that is longer than 3 years, unless the court, for cause, approves a longer period, but the court may not approve a period that is longer than 5 years. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the national median family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of the family.'';

(2) in section 1325(b)(1)(B) as amended by section 130—

(A) by striking ''three year period'' and inserting ''applicable commitment period''; and

(B) by inserting at the end of subparagraph (B) the following: ''The 'applicable commitment period' shall be not less than 5 years if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is not less than the highest national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of equal or lesser size, or in the case of a household of 1 person, the national median household income for 1 earner. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the national median family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of the family.''; and

(3) in section 1329—

(A) by striking in subsection (c) ''three years'' and inserting ''the applicable commitment period under section 1325(b)(1)(B)''; and

(B) by inserting at the end of subsection (c) the following:

''The duration period shall be 5 years if the current monthly income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is not less than the highest national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of equal or lesser size or, in the case of a household of 1 person, the national median household income for 1 earner, as of the date of the modification and shall be 3 years if the current monthly total income of the debtor and the debtor's spouse combined, when multiplied by 12, is less than the highest national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of equal or lesser size or, in the case of a household of 1 person, less than the national median household income for 1 earner as of the date of the modification. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the national median family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals plus $583 for each additional member of the family.''.

SEC. 607. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING EXPANSION OF RULE 9011 OF THE FEDERAL RULES OF BANKRUPTCY PROCEDURE.

It is the sense of the Congress that rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure (11 U.S.C. App) should be modified to include a requirement that all documents (including schedules), signed and unsigned, submitted to the court or to a trustee by debtors who represent themselves and debtors who are represented by an attorney be submitted only after the debtor or the debtor's attorney has made reasonable inquiry to verify that the information contained in such documents is well grounded in fact, and is warranted by existing law or a good-faith argument for the extension, modification, or reversal of existing law.

SEC. 608. ELIMINATION OF CERTAIN FEES PAYABLE IN CHAPTER 11 BANKRUPTCY CASES.

(a) AMENDMENTS.—Section 1930(a)(6) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the 1st sentence by striking ''until the case is converted or dismissed, whichever occurs first''; and

(2) in the 2d sentence—

(A) by striking ''The'' and inserting ''Until the plan is confirmed or the case is converted (whichever occurs first) the''; and

(B) by striking ''less than $300,000;'' and inserting ''less than $300,000. Until the case is converted, dismissed, or closed (whichever occurs first and without regard to confirmation of the plan) the fee shall be''.

(b) DELAYED EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall take effect on October 1, 1999.

SEC. 609. STUDY OF BANKRUPTCY IMPACT OF CREDIT EXTENDED TO DEPENDENT STUDENTS.

Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall—

(1) conduct a study regarding the impact that the extension of credit to individuals who are—

(A) claimed as dependents for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

(B) enrolled in post-secondary educational institutions, has on the rate of cases filed under title 11 of the United States Code; and

(2) submit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate a report summarizing such study.

SEC. 610. PROMPT RELIEF FROM STAY IN INDIVIDUAL CASES.

Section 362(e) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(e)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), in the case of an individual filing under chapter 7, 11, or 13, the stay under subsection (a) shall terminate on the date that is 60 days after a request is made by a party in interest under subsection (d), unless—

''(A) a final decision is rendered by the court during the 60-day period beginning on the date of the request; or

''(B) that 60-day period is extended—

''(i) by agreement of all parties in interest; or

''(ii) by the court for such specific period of time as the court finds is required by for good cause as described in findings made by the court.''.

SEC. 611. STOPPING ABUSIVE CONVERSIONS FROM CHAPTER 13.

Section 348(f)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B)—

(A) by striking ''in the converted case, with allowed secured claims'' and inserting ''only in a case converted to chapter 11 or 12 but not in a case converted to chapter 7, with allowed secured claims in cases under chapters 11 and 12''; and

(B) by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) with respect to cases converted from chapter 13—

''(i) the claim of any creditor holding security as of the date of the petition shall continue to be secured by that security unless the full amount of such claim determined under applicable nonbankruptcy law has been paid in full as of the date of conversion, notwithstanding any valuation or determination of the amount of an allowed secured claim made for the purposes of the chapter 13 proceeding; and

''(ii) unless a prebankruptcy default has been fully cured pursuant to the plan at the time of conversion, in any proceeding under this title or otherwise, the default shall have the effect given under applicable nonbankruptcy law.''.

SEC. 612. BANKRUPTCY APPEALS.

Title 28 of the United States Code is amended by inserting after section 1292 the following:

''§ 1293. Bankruptcy appeals

''(a) The courts of appeals (other than the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit) shall have jurisdiction of appeals from the following:

''(1) Final orders and judgments entered by bankruptcy courts and district courts in cases under title 11, in proceedings arising under title 11, and in proceedings arising in or related to a case under title 11, including final orders in proceedings regarding the automatic stay of section 362 of title 11.

''(2) Interlocutory orders entered by bankruptcy courts and district courts granting, continuing, modifying, refusing or dissolving injunctions, or refusing to dissolve or modify injunctions in cases under title 11, in proceedings arising under title 11, and in proceedings arising in or related to a case under title 11, other than interlocutory orders in proceedings regarding the automatic stay of section 362 of title 11.

''(3) Interlocutory orders of bankruptcy courts and district courts entered under section 1104(a) or 1121(d) of title 11, or the refusal to enter an order under such section.

''(4) An interlocutory order of a bankruptcy court or district court entered in a case under title 11, in a proceeding arising under title 11, or in a proceeding arising in or related to a case under title 11, if the court of appeals that would have jurisdiction of an appeal of a final order entered in such case or such proceeding permits, in its discretion, appeal to be taken from such interlocutory order.

''(b) Final decisions, judgments, orders, and decrees entered by a bankruptcy appellate panel under subsection (b) of this section.

''(c)(1) The judicial council of a circuit may establish a bankruptcy appellate panel composed of bankruptcy judges in the circuit who are appointed by the judicial council, which panel shall exercise the jurisdiction to review orders and judgments of bankruptcy courts described in paragraphs (1)–(4) of subsection (a) of this section unless—

''(A) the appellant elects at the time of filing the appeal; or

''(B) any other party elects, not later than 10 days after service of the notice of the appeal; to have such jurisdiction exercised by the court of appeals.

''(2) An appeal to be heard by a bankruptcy appellate panel under this subsection (b) shall be heard by 3 members of the bankruptcy appellate panel, provided that a member of such panel may not hear an appeal originating in the district for which such member is appointed or designated under section 152 of this title.

''(3) If authorized by the Judicial Conference of the United States, the judicial councils of 2 or more circuits may establish a joint bankruptcy appellate panel.''.

SEC. 613. GAO STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—Not later than 270 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of the feasibility, effectiveness, and cost of requiring trustees appointed under title 11 of the United States Code, or the bankruptcy courts, to provide to the Office of Child Support Enforcement promptly after the commencement of cases by individual debtors under such title, the names and social security numbers of such debtors for the purposes of allowing such Office to determine whether such debtors have outstanding obligations for child support (as determined on the basis of information in the Federal Case Registry or other national database).

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 300 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the President pro tempore of the Senate, a report containing the results of the study required by subsection (a).

TITLE VII—BANKRUPTCY DATA

SEC. 701. IMPROVED BANKRUPTCY STATISTICS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Chapter 6 of part I of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 159. Bankruptcy statistics

''(a) The clerk of each district shall compile statistics regarding individual debtors with primarily consumer debts seeking relief under chapters 7, 11, and 13 of title 11. Those statistics shall be in a form prescribed by the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts (referred to in this section as the 'Office').

''(b) The Director shall—

''(1) compile the statistics referred to in subsection (a);

''(2) make the statistics available to the public; and

''(3) not later than October 31, 2000, and annually thereafter, prepare, and submit to Congress a report concerning the information collected under subsection (a) that contains an analysis of the information.

''(c) The compilation required under subsection (b) shall—

''(1) be itemized, by chapter, with respect to title 11;

''(2) be presented in the aggregate and for each district; and

''(3) include information concerning—

''(A) the total assets and total liabilities of the debtors described in subsection (a), and in each category of assets and liabilities, as reported in the schedules prescribed pursuant to section 2075 of this title and filed by those debtors;

''(B) the current monthly income, and average income and average expenses of those debtors as reported on the schedules and statements that each such debtor files under sections 521 and 1322 of title 11;

''(C) the aggregate amount of debt discharged in the reporting period, determined as the difference between the total amount of debt and obligations of a debtor reported on the schedules and the amount of such debt reported in categories which are predominantly nondischargeable;

''(D) the average period of time between the filing of the petition and the closing of the case;

''(E) for the reporting period—

''(i) the number of cases in which a reaffirmation was filed; and

''(ii)(I) the total number of reaffirmations filed;

''(II) of those cases in which a reaffirmation was filed, the number in which the debtor was not represented by an attorney; and

''(III) of those cases, the number of cases in which the reaffirmation was approved by the court;

''(F) with respect to cases filed under chapter 13 of title 11, for the reporting period—

''(i)(I) the number of cases in which a final order was entered determining the value of property securing a claim in an amount less than the amount of the claim; and

''(II) the number of final orders determining the value of property securing a claim issued;

''(ii) the number of cases dismissed, the number of cases dismissed for failure to make payments under the plan, the number of cases refiled after dismissal, and the number of cases in which the plan was completed, separately itemized with respect to the number of modifications made before completion of the plan, if any; and

''(iii) the number of cases in which the debtor filed another case within the 6 years previous to the filing;

''(G) the number of cases in which creditors were fined for misconduct and any amount of punitive damages awarded by the court for creditor misconduct; and

''(H) the number of cases in which sanctions under rule 9011 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure were imposed against debtor's counsel and damages awarded under such Rule.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 6 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''159. Bankruptcy statistics.''.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 702. UNIFORM RULES FOR THE COLLECTION OF BANKRUPTCY DATA.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Title 28 of the United States Code is amended by inserting after section 589a the following:

''§ 589b. Bankruptcy data

''(a) RULES.—The Attorney General shall, within a reasonable time after the effective date of this section, issue rules requiring uniform forms for (and from time to time thereafter to appropriately modify and approve)—

''(1) final reports by trustees in cases under chapters 7, 12, and 13 of title 11; and

''(2) periodic reports by debtors in possession or trustees, as the case may be, in cases under chapter 11 of title 11.

''(b) REPORTS.—All reports referred to in subsection (a) shall be designed (and the requirements as to place and manner of filing shall be established) so as to facilitate compilation of data and maximum possible access of the public, both by physical inspection at 1 or more central filing locations, and by electronic access through the Internet or other appropriate media.

''(c) REQUIRED INFORMATION.—The information required to be filed in the reports referred to in subsection (b) shall be that which is in the best interests of debtors and creditors, and in the public interest in reasonable and adequate information to evaluate the efficiency and practicality of the Federal bankruptcy system. In issuing rules proposing the forms referred to in subsection (a), the Attorney General shall strike the best achievable practical balance between—

''(1) the reasonable needs of the public for information about the operational results of the Federal bankruptcy system; and

''(2) economy, simplicity, and lack of undue burden on persons with a duty to file reports.

''(d) FINAL REPORTS.—Final reports proposed for adoption by trustees under chapters 7, 12, and 13 of title 11 shall, in addition to such other matters as are required by law or as the Attorney General in the discretion of the Attorney General, shall propose, include with respect to a case under such title—

''(1) information about the length of time the case was pending;

''(2) assets abandoned;

''(3) assets exempted;

''(4) receipts and disbursements of the estate;

''(5) expenses of administration;

''(6) claims asserted;

''(7) claims allowed; and

''(8) distributions to claimants and claims discharged without payment, in each case by appropriate category and, in cases under chapters 12 and 13 of title 11, date of confirmation of the plan, each modification thereto, and defaults by the debtor in performance under the plan.

''(e) PERIODIC REPORTS.—Periodic reports proposed for adoption by trustees or debtors in possession under chapter 11 of title 11 shall, in addition to such other matters as are required by law or as the Attorney General, in the discretion of the Attorney General, shall propose, include—

''(1) information about the standard industry classification, published by the Department of Commerce, for the businesses conducted by the debtor;

''(2) length of time the case has been pending;

''(3) number of full-time employees as at the date of the order for relief and at end of each reporting period since the case was filed;

''(4) cash receipts, cash disbursements and profitability of the debtor for the most recent period and cumulatively since the date of the order for relief;

''(5) compliance with title 11, whether or not tax returns and tax payments since the date of the order for relief have been timely filed and made;

''(6) all professional fees approved by the court in the case for the most recent period and cumulatively since the date of the order for relief (separately reported, in for the professional fees incurred by or on behalf of the debtor, between those that would have been incurred absent a bankruptcy case and those not); and

''(7) plans of reorganization filed and confirmed and, with respect thereto, by class, the recoveries of the holders, expressed in aggregate dollar values and, in the case of claims, as a percentage of total claims of the class allowed.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections of chapter 39 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''589b. Bankruptcy data.''.

SEC. 703. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS REGARDING AVAILABILITY OF BANKRUPTCY DATA.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the national policy of the United States should be that all data held by bankruptcy clerks in electronic form, to the extent such data reflects only public records (as defined in section 107 of title 11 of the United States Code), should be released in a usable electronic form in bulk to the public subject to such appropriate privacy concerns and safeguards as the Judicial

Conference of the United States may determine; and

(2) there should be established a bankruptcy data system in which—

(A) a single set of data definitions and forms are used to collect data nationwide; and

(B) data for any particular bankruptcy case are aggregated in the same electronic record.

TITLE VIII—BANKRUPTCY TAX PROVISIONS

SEC. 801. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LIENS.

(a) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LIENS.—Section 724 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting ''(other than to the extent that there is a properly perfected unavoidable tax lien arising in connection with an ad valorem tax on real or personal property of the estate)'' after ''under this title'';

(2) in subsection (b)(2), after ''507(a)(1)'', insert ''(except that such expenses, other than claims for wages, salaries, or commissions which arise after the filing of a petition, shall be limited to expenses incurred under chapter 7 of this title and shall not include expenses incurred under chapter 11 of this title)''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(e) Before subordinating a tax lien on real or personal property of the estate, the trustee shall—

''(1) exhaust the unencumbered assets of the estate; and

''(2) in a manner consistent with section 506(c) of this title, recover from property securing an allowed secured claim the reasonable, necessary costs and expenses of preserving or disposing of that property.

''(f) Notwithstanding the exclusion of ad valorem tax liens set forth in this section and subject to the requirements of subsection (e)—

''(1) claims for wages, salaries, and commissions that are entitled to priority under section 507(a)(3) of this title; or

''(2) claims for contributions to an employee benefit plan entitled to priority under section 507(a)(4) of this title, may be paid from property of the estate which secures a tax lien, or the proceeds of such property.''.

(b) DETERMINATION OF TAX LIABILITY.—Section 505(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(C) the amount or legality of any amount arising in connection with an ad valorem tax on real or personal property of the estate, if the applicable period for contesting or redetermining that amount under any law (other than a bankruptcy law) has expired.''.

SEC. 802. EFFECTIVE NOTICE TO GOVERNMENT.

(a) EFFECTIVE NOTICE TO GOVERNMENTAL UNITS.—Section 342 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 603, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(g) If a debtor lists a governmental unit as a creditor in a list or schedule, any notice required to be given by the debtor under this title, any rule, any applicable law, or any order of the court, shall identify the department, agency, or instrumentality through which the debtor is indebted. The debtor shall identify (with information such as a taxpayer identification number, loan, account or contract number, or real estate parcel number, where applicable), and describe the underlying basis for the governmental unit's claim. If the debtor's liability to a governmental unit arises from a debt or obligation owed or incurred by another individual, entity, or organization, or under a different name, the debtor shall identify such individual, entity, organization, or name.

''(h) The clerk shall keep and update quarterly, in the form and manner as the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts prescribes, and make available to debtors, a register in which a governmental unit may designate a safe harbor mailing address for service of notice in cases pending in the district. A governmental unit may file a statement with the clerk designating a safe harbor address to which notices are to be sent, unless such governmental unit files a notice of change of address.''.

(b) ADOPTION OF RULES PROVIDING NOTICE.—The Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference shall, within a reasonable period of time after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose for adoption enhanced rules for providing notice to State, Federal, and local government units that have regulatory authority over the debtor or which may be creditors in the debtor's case. Such rules shall be reasonably calculated to ensure that notice will reach the representatives of the governmental unit, or subdivision thereof, who will be the proper persons authorized to act upon the notice. At a minimum, the rules should require that the debtor—

(1) identify in the schedules and the notice, the subdivision, agency, or entity in respect of which such notice should be received;

(2) provide sufficient information (such as case captions, permit numbers, taxpayer identification numbers, or similar identifying information) to permit the governmental unit or subdivision thereof, entitled to receive such notice, to identify the debtor or the person or entity on behalf of which the debtor is providing notice where the debtor may be a successor in interest or may not be the same as the person or entity which incurred the debt or obligation; and

(3) identify, in appropriate schedules, served together with the notice, the property in respect of which the claim or regulatory obligation may have arisen, if any, the nature of such claim or regulatory obligation and the purpose for which notice is being given.

(c) EFFECT OF FAILURE OF NOTICE.—Section 342 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 603 and subsection (a), is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) A notice that does not comply with subsections (d) and (e) shall not be effective unless the debtor demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that timely notice was given in a manner reasonably calculated to satisfy the requirements of this section was given, and that—

''(1) either the notice was timely sent to the safe harbor address provided in the register maintained by the clerk of the district in which the case was pending for such purposes; or

''(2) no safe harbor address was provided in such list for the governmental unit and that an officer of the governmental unit who is responsible for the matter or claim had actual knowledge of the case in sufficient time to act.''.

SEC. 803. NOTICE OF REQUEST FOR A DETERMINATION OF TAXES.

Section 505(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''Unless'' at the beginning of the second sentence thereof and inserting ''If the request is made substantially in the manner designated by the governmental unit and unless''.

SEC. 804. RATE OF INTEREST ON TAX CLAIMS.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 511. Rate of interest on tax claims

''If any provision of this title requires the payment of interest on a tax claim or requires the payment of interest to enable a creditor to receive the present value of the allowed amount of a tax claim, the rate of interest shall be as follows:

''(1) In the case of ad valorem tax claims, whether secured or unsecured, other unsecured tax claims where interest is required to be paid under section 726(a)(5) of this title, secured tax claims, and administrative tax claims paid under section 503(b)(1) of this title, the rate shall be determined under applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(2) In the case of all other tax claims, the minimum rate of interest shall be the Federal short-term rate rounded to the nearest full percent, determined under section 1274(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, plus 3 percentage points.

''(A) In the case of claims for Federal income taxes, such rate shall be subject to any adjustment that may be required under section 6621(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

''(B) In the case of taxes paid under a confirmed plan or reorganization, such rate shall be determined as of the calendar month in which the plan is confirmed.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 510 the following:

''511. Rate of interest on tax claims.''.

SEC. 805. TOLLING OF PRIORITY OF TAX CLAIM TIME PERIODS.

Section 507(a)(8)(A) of title 11, United States Code, as so redesignated, is amended—

(1) in clause (i) by inserting after ''petition'' and before the semicolon '', plus any time, plus 6 months, during which the stay of proceedings was in effect in a prior case under this title''; and

(2) amend clause (ii) to read as follows:

''(ii) assessed within 240 days before the date of the filing of the petition, exclusive of—

''(I) any time plus 30 days during which an offer in compromise with respect of such tax, was pending or in effect during such 240-day period;

''(II) any time plus 30 days during which an installment agreement with respect of such tax was pending or in effect during such 240-day period, up to 1 year; and

''(III) any time plus 6 months during which a stay of proceedings against collections was in effect in a prior case under this title during such 240-day period.''.

SEC. 806. PRIORITY PROPERTY TAXES INCURRED.

Section 507(a)(8)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''assessed'' and inserting ''incurred''.

SEC. 807. CHAPTER 13 DISCHARGE OF FRAUDULENT AND OTHER TAXES.

Section 1328(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''(1),'' after ''paragraph''.

SEC. 808. CHAPTER 11 DISCHARGE OF FRAUDULENT TAXES.

Section 1141(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(6) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (1), the confirmation of a plan does not discharge a debtor which is a corporation from any debt for a tax or customs duty with respect to which the debtor made a fraudulent return or willfully attempted in any manner to evade or defeat such tax.''.

SEC. 809. STAY OF TAX PROCEEDINGS.

(a) SECTION 362 STAY LIMITED TO PREPETITION TAXES.—Section 362(a)(8) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting '', in respect of a tax liability for a taxable period ending before the order for relief.''.

(b) APPEAL OF TAX COURT DECISIONS PERMITTED.—Section 362(b)(9) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(2) in subparagraph (D) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(E) the appeal of a decision by a court or administrative tribunal which determines a tax liability of the debtor without regard to whether such determination was made prepetition or postpetition.''.

SEC. 810. PERIODIC PAYMENT OF TAXES IN CHAPTER 11 CASES.

Section 1129(a)(9) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B) by striking ''and'' at the end; and

(2) in subparagraph (C)—

(A) by striking ''deferred cash payments, over a period not exceeding six years after the date of assessment of such claim,'' and inserting ''regular installment payments in cash, but in no case with a balloon provision, and no more than three months apart, beginning no later than the effective date of the plan and ending on the earlier of five years after the petition date or the last date payments are to be made under the plan to unsecured creditors,'';

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(D) with respect to a secured claim which would be described in section 507(a)(8) of this title but for its secured status, the holder of such claim will receive on account of such claim cash payments of not less than is required in subparagraph (C) and over a period no greater than is required in such subparagraph.''.

SEC. 811. AVOIDANCE OF STATUTORY TAX LIENS PROHIBITED.

Section 545(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting '', except where such purchaser is a purchaser described in section 6323 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or similar provision of State or local law;''.

SEC. 812. PAYMENT OF TAXES IN THE CONDUCT OF BUSINESS.

(a) PAYMENT OF TAXES REQUIRED.—Section 960 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(a)'' before ''Any''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(b) Such taxes shall be paid when due in the conduct of such business unless—

''(1) the tax is a property tax secured by a lien against property that is abandoned within a reasonable time after the lien attaches, by the trustee of a bankruptcy estate, pursuant to section 554 of title 11; or

''(2) payment of the tax is excused under a specific provision of title 11.

''(c) In a case pending under chapter 7 of title 11, payment of a tax may be deferred until final distribution is made under section 726 of title 11 if—

''(1) the tax was not incurred by a trustee duly appointed under chapter 7 of title 11; or

''(2) before the due date of the tax, the court has made a finding of probable insufficiency of funds of the estate to pay in full the administrative expenses allowed under section 503(b) of title 11 that have the same priority in distribution under section 726(b) of title 11 as such tax.''.

(b) PAYMENT OF AD VALOREM TAXES REQUIRED.—Section 503(b)(1)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended in clause (i) by inserting after ''estate,'' and before ''except'' the following: ''whether secured or unsecured, including property taxes for which liability is in rem only, in personam or both,''.

(c) REQUEST FOR PAYMENT OF ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSE TAXES ELIMINATED.—Section 503(b)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(D) notwithstanding the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, a governmental unit shall not be required to file a request for the payment of a claim described in subparagraph (B) or (C);''.

(d) PAYMENT OF TAXES AND FEES AS SECURED CLAIMS.—Section 506 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b) by inserting ''or State statute'' after ''agreement''; and

(2) in subsection (c) by inserting '', including the payment of all ad valorem property taxes in respect of the property'' before the period at the end.

SEC. 813. TARDILY FILED PRIORITY TAX CLAIMS.

Section 726(a)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''before the date on which the trustee commences distribution under this section'' and inserting ''on or before the earlier of 10 days after the mailing to creditors of the summary of the trustee's final report or the date on which the trustee commences final distribution under this section''.

SEC. 814. INCOME TAX RETURNS PREPARED BY TAX AUTHORITIES.

Section 523(a)(1)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''or equivalent report or notice,'' after ''a return,'';

(2) in clause (i)—

(A) by inserting ''or given'' after ''filed''; and

(B) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(3) in clause (ii)—

(A) by inserting ''or given'' after ''filed''; and

(B) by inserting '', report, or notice'' after ''return''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(iii) for purposes of this subsection, a return—

''(I) must satisfy the requirements of applicable nonbankruptcy law, and includes a return prepared pursuant to section 6020(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or similar State or local law, or a written stipulation to a judgment entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal, but does not include a return made pursuant to section 6020(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or similar State or local law; and

''(II) must have been filed in a manner permitted by applicable nonbankruptcy law; or''.

SEC. 815. DISCHARGE OF THE ESTATE'S LIABILITY FOR UNPAID TAXES.

Section 505(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended in the second sentence by inserting ''the estate,'' after ''misrepresentation,''.

SEC. 816. REQUIREMENT TO FILE TAX RETURNS TO CONFIRM CHAPTER 13 PLANS.

(a) FILING OF PREPETITION TAX RETURNS REQUIRED FOR PLAN CONFIRMATION.—Section 1325(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 140, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (6) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (7) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(8) if the debtor has filed all Federal, State, and local tax returns as required by section 1308 of this title.''.

(b) ADDITIONAL TIME PERMITTED FOR FILING TAX RETURNS.—(1) Chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 135, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 1308. Filing of prepetition tax returns

''(a) On or before the day prior to the day on which the first meeting of the creditors is convened under section 341(a) of this title, the debtor shall have filed with appropriate tax authorities all tax returns for all taxable periods ending in the 3-year period ending on the date of filing of the petition.

''(b) If the tax returns required by subsection (a) have not been filed by the date on which the first meeting of creditors is convened under section 341(a) of this title, the trustee may continue such meeting for a reasonable period of time, to allow the debtor additional time to file any unfiled returns, but such additional time shall be no more than—

''(1) for returns that are past due as of the date of the filing of the petition, 120 days from such date;

''(2) for returns which are not past due as of the date of the filing of the petition, the later of 120 days from such date or the due date for such returns under the last automatic extension of time for filing such returns to which the debtor is entitled, and for which request has been timely made, according to applicable nonbankruptcy law; and

''(3) upon notice and hearing, and order entered before the lapse of any deadline fixed according to this subsection, where the debtor demonstrates, by clear and convincing evidence, that the failure to file the returns as required is because of circumstances beyond the control of the debtor, the court may extend the deadlines set by the trustee as provided in this subsection for—

''(A) a period of no more than 30 days for returns described in paragraph (1) of this subsection; and

''(B) for no more than the period of time ending on the applicable extended due date for the returns described in paragraph (2).

''(c) For purposes of this section only, a return includes a return prepared pursuant to section 6020 (a) or (b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or similar State or local law, or a written stipulation to a judgment entered by a nonbankruptcy tribunal.''.

(2) The table of sections of chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1307 the following:

''1308. Filing of prepetition tax returns.''.

(c) DISMISSAL OR CONVERSION ON FAILURE TO COMPLY.—Section 1307 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e) and (f) as subsections (f) and (g), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

''(e) Upon the failure of the debtor to file tax returns under section 1308 of this title, on request of a party in interest or the United States trustee and after notice and a hearing, the court shall dismiss a case or convert a case under this chapter to a case under chapter 7 of this title, whichever is in the best interests of creditors and the estate.''.

(d) TIMELY FILED CLAIMS.—Section 502(b)(9) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting '', and except that in a case under chapter 13 of this title, a claim of a governmental unit for a tax in respect of a return filed under section 1308 of this title shall be timely if it is filed on or before 60 days after such return or returns were filed as required.''.

(e) RULES FOR OBJECTIONS TO CLAIMS AND TO CONFIRMATION.—It is the sense of the Congress that the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules of the Judicial Conference should, within a reasonable period of time after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose for adoption amended Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure which provide that—

(1) notwithstanding the provisions of Rule 3015(f), in cases under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, a governmental unit may object to the confirmation of a plan on or before 60 days after the debtor files all tax returns required under sections 1308 and 1325(a)(7) of title 11, United States Code; and

(2) in addition to the provisions of Rule 3007, in a case under chapter 13 of title 11, United States Code, no objection to a tax in respect of a return required to be filed under such section 1308 shall be filed until such return has been filed as required.

SEC. 817. STANDARDS FOR TAX DISCLOSURE.

Section 1125(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended in paragraph (1)—

(1) by inserting after ''records,'' the following: ''including a full discussion of the potential material Federal, State, and local tax consequences of the plan to the debtor, any successor to the debtor, and a hypothetical investor domiciled in the State in which the debtor resides or has its principal place of business typical of the holders of claims or interests in the case,'';

(2) by inserting ''such'' after ''enable''; and

(3) by striking ''reasonable'' where it appears after ''hypothetical'' and by striking ''typical of holders of claims or interests'' after ''investor''.

SEC. 818. SETOFF OF TAX REFUNDS.

Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 118, 132, 136, and 203, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (29) by striking ''or'';

(2) in paragraph (30) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (30) the following:

''(31) under subsection (a) of the setoff of an income tax refund, by a governmental unit, in respect of a taxable period which ended before the order for relief against an income tax liability for a taxable period which also ended before the order for relief, unless—

''(A) prior to such setoff, an action to determine the amount or legality of such tax liability under section 505(a) was commenced; or

''(B) where the setoff of an income tax refund is not permitted because of a pending action to determine the amount or legality of a tax liability, the governmental unit may hold the refund pending the resolution of the action.''.

TITLE IX—ANCILLARY AND OTHER CROSS-BORDER CASES

SEC. 901. AMENDMENT TO ADD CHAPTER 15 TO TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 13 the following:

''CHAPTER 15—ANCILLARY AND OTHER CROSS-BORDER CASES

''§ 1501. Purpose and scope of application

''(a) The purpose of this chapter is to incorporate the Model Law on Cross-Border Insolvency so as to provide effective mechanisms for dealing with cases of cross-border insolvency with the objectives of—

''(1) cooperation between—

''(A) United States courts, United States trustees, trustees, examiners, debtors, and debtors in possession; and

''(B) the courts and other competent authorities of foreign countries involved in cross-border insolvency cases;

''(2) greater legal certainty for trade and investment;

''(3) fair and efficient administration of cross-border insolvencies that protects the interests of all creditors, and other interested entities, including the debtor;

''(4) protection and maximization of the value of the debtor's assets; and

''(5) facilitation of the rescue of financially troubled businesses, thereby protecting investment and preserving employment.

''(b) This chapter applies where—

''(1) assistance is sought in the United States by a foreign court or a foreign representative in connection with a foreign proceeding;

''(2) assistance is sought in a foreign country in connection with a case under this title;

''(3) a foreign proceeding and a case under this title with respect to the same debtor are taking place concurrently; or

''(4) creditors or other interested persons in a foreign country have an interest in requesting the commencement of, or participating in, a case or proceeding under this title.

''(c) This chapter does not apply to—

''(1) a proceeding concerning an entity identified by exclusion in subsection 109(b);

''(2) an individual, or to an individual and such individual's spouse, who have debts within the limits specified in section 109(e) and who are citizens of the United States or aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States; or

''(3) an entity subject to a proceeding under the Securities Investor Protection Act, a stockbroker subject to subchapter III of chapter 7 of this title, or a commodity broker subject to subchapter IV of chapter 7 of this title.

''SUBCHAPTER I—GENERAL PROVISIONS

''§ 1502. Definitions

''For the purposes of this chapter, the term—

''(1) 'debtor' means an entity that is the subject of a foreign proceeding;

''(2) 'establishment' means any place of operations where the debtor carries out a nontransitory economic activity;

''(3) 'foreign court' means a judicial or other authority competent to control or supervise a foreign proceeding;

''(4) 'foreign main proceeding' means a foreign proceeding taking place in the country where the debtor has the center of its main interests;

''(5) 'foreign nonmain proceeding' means a foreign proceeding, other than a foreign main proceeding, taking place in a country where the debtor has an establishment;

''(6) 'trustee' includes a trustee, a debtor in possession in a case under any chapter of this title, or a debtor under chapter 9 of this title; and

''(7) 'within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States' when used with reference to property of a debtor refers to tangible property located within the territory of the United States and intangible property deemed under applicable nonbankruptcy law to be located within that territory, including any property subject to attachment or garnishment that may properly be seized or garnished by an action in a Federal or State court in the United States.

''§ 1503. International obligations of the United States

''To the extent that this chapter conflicts with an obligation of the United States arising out of any treaty or other form of agreement to which it is a party with 1 or more other countries, the requirements of the treaty or agreement prevail.

''§ 1504. Commencement of ancillary case

''A case under this chapter is commenced by the filing of a petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding under section 1515.

''§ 1505. Authorization to act in a foreign country

''A trustee or another entity (including an examiner) may be authorized by the court to act in a foreign country on behalf of an estate created under section 541. An entity authorized to act under this section may act in any way permitted by the applicable foreign law.

''§ 1506. Public policy exception

''Nothing in this chapter prevents the court from refusing to take an action governed by this chapter if the action would be manifestly contrary to the public policy of the United States.

''§ 1507. Additional assistance

''(a) Subject to the specific limitations stated elsewhere in this chapter the court, upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the court may provide additional assistance to a foreign representative under this title or under other laws of the United States.

''(b) In determining whether to provide additional assistance under this title or under other laws of the United States, the court shall consider whether such additional assistance, consistent with the principles of comity, will reasonably assure—

''(1) just treatment of all holders of claims against or interests in the debtor's property;

''(2) protection of claim holders in the United States against prejudice and inconvenience in the processing of claims in such foreign proceeding;

''(3) prevention of preferential or fraudulent dispositions of property of the debtor;

''(4) distribution of proceeds of the debtor's property substantially in accordance with the order prescribed by this title; and

''(5) if appropriate, the provision of an opportunity for a fresh start for the individual that such foreign proceeding concerns.

''§ 1508. Interpretation

''In interpreting this chapter, the court shall consider its international origin, and the need to promote an application of this chapter that is consistent with the application of similar statutes adopted by foreign jurisdictions.

''SUBCHAPTER II—ACCESS OF FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES AND CREDITORS TO THE COURT

''§ 1509. Right of direct access

''(a) A foreign representative may commence a case under section 1504 of this title by filing with the court a petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding under section 1515 of this title.

''(b) If the court grants recognition under section 1515 of this title, and subject to any limitations that the court may impose consistent with the policy of this chapter—

''(1) the foreign representative has the capacity to sue and be sued in a court in the United States;

''(2) the foreign representative may apply directly to a court in the United States for appropriate relief in that court; and

''(3) a court in the United States shall grant comity or cooperation to the foreign representative.

''(c) A request for comity or cooperation by a foreign representative in a court in the United States shall be accompanied by a certified copy of an order granting recognition under section 1517 of this title.

''(d) If the court denies recognition under this chapter, the court may issue any appropriate order necessary to prevent the foreign representative from obtaining comity or cooperation from courts in the United States.

''(e) Whether or not the court grants recognition, and subject to sections 306 and 1510 of this title, a foreign representative is subject to applicable nonbankruptcy law.

''(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the failure of a foreign representative to commence a case or to obtain recognition under this chapter does not affect any right the foreign representative may have to sue in a court in the United State to collect or recover a claim which is the property of the debtor.''.

''§ 1510. Limited jurisdiction

''The sole fact that a foreign representative files a petition under section 1515 does not subject the foreign representative to the jurisdiction of any court in the United States for any other purpose.

''§ 1511. Commencement of case under section 301 or 303

''(a) Upon recognition, a foreign representative may commence—

''(1) an involuntary case under section 303; or

''(2) a voluntary case under section 301 or 302, if the foreign proceeding is a foreign main proceeding.

''(b) The petition commencing a case under subsection (a) must be accompanied by certified copy of an order granting recognition. The court where the petition for recognition has been filed must be advised of the foreign representative's intent to commence a case under subsection (a) prior to such commencement.

''§ 1512. Participation of a foreign representative in a case under this title

''Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative in that proceeding is entitled to participate as a party in interest in a case regarding the debtor under this title.

''§ 1513. Access of foreign creditors to a case under this title

''(a) Foreign creditors have the same rights regarding the commencement of, and participation in, a case under this title as domestic creditors.

''(b)(1) Subsection (a) does not change or codify present law as to the priority of claims under section 507 or 726 of this title, except that the claim of a foreign creditor under those sections shall not be given a lower priority than that of general unsecured claims without priority solely because the holder of such claim is a foreign creditor.

''(2)(A) Subsection (a) and paragraph (1) do not change or codify present law as to the allowability of foreign revenue claims or other foreign public law claims in a proceeding under this title.

''(B) Allowance and priority as to a foreign tax claim or other foreign public law claim shall be governed by any applicable tax treaty of the United States, under the conditions and circumstances specified therein.

''§ 1514. Notification to foreign creditors concerning a case under this title

''(a) Whenever in a case under this title notice is to be given to creditors generally or to any class or category of creditors, such notice shall also be given to the known creditors generally, or to creditors in the notified class or category, that do not have addresses in the United States. The court may order that appropriate steps be taken with a view to notifying any creditor whose address is not yet known.

''(b) Such notification to creditors with foreign addresses described in subsection (a) shall be given individually, unless the court considers that, under the circumstances, some other form of notification would be more appropriate. No letters rogatory or other similar formality is required.

''(c) When a notification of commencement of a case is to be given to foreign creditors, the notification shall—

''(1) indicate the time period for filing proofs of claim and specify the place for their filing;

''(2) indicate whether secured creditors need to file their proofs of claim; and

''(3) contain any other information required to be included in such a notification to creditors under this title and the orders of the court.

''(d) Any rule of procedure or order of the court as to notice or the filing of a claim shall provide such additional time to creditors with foreign addresses as is reasonable under the circumstances.

''SUBCHAPTER III—RECOGNITION OF A FOREIGN PROCEEDING AND RELIEF

''§ 1515. Application for recognition of a foreign proceeding

''(a) A foreign representative applies to the court for recognition of the foreign proceeding in which the foreign representative has been appointed by filing a petition for recognition.

''(b) A petition for recognition shall be accompanied by—

''(1) a certified copy of the decision commencing the foreign proceeding and appointing the foreign representative;

''(2) a certificate from the foreign court affirming the existence of the foreign proceeding and of the appointment of the foreign representative; or

''(3) in the absence of evidence referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2), any other evidence acceptable to the court of the existence of the foreign proceeding and of the appointment of the foreign representative.

''(c) A petition for recognition shall also be accompanied by a statement identifying all foreign proceedings with respect to the debtor that are known to the foreign representative.

''(d) The documents referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) must be translated into English. The court may require a translation into English of additional documents.

''§ 1516. Presumptions concerning recognition

''(a) If the decision or certificate referred to in section 1515(b) indicates that the foreign proceeding is a foreign proceeding as defined in section 101 and that the person or body is a foreign representative as defined in section 101, the court is entitled to so presume.

''(b) The court is entitled to presume that documents submitted in support of the petition for recognition are authentic, whether or not they have been legalized.

''(c) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, the debtor's registered office, or habitual residence in the case of an individual, is presumed to be the center of the debtor's main interests.

''§ 1517. Order recognizing a foreign proceeding

''(a) Subject to section 1506, after notice and a hearing an order recognizing a foreign proceeding shall be entered if—

''(1) the foreign proceeding is a foreign main proceeding or foreign nonmain proceeding within the meaning of section 1502;

''(2) the foreign representative applying for recognition is a person or body as defined in section 101; and

''(3) the petition meets the requirements of section 1515.

''(b) The foreign proceeding shall be recognized—

''(1) as a foreign main proceeding if it is taking place in the country where the debtor has the center of its main interests; or

''(2) as a foreign nonmain proceeding if the debtor has an establishment within the meaning of section 1502 in the foreign country where the proceeding is pending.

''(c) A petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding shall be decided upon at the earliest possible time. Entry of an order recognizing a foreign proceeding constitutes recognition under this chapter.

''(d) The provisions of this subchapter do not prevent modification or termination of recognition if it is shown that the grounds for granting it were fully or partially lacking or have ceased to exist, but in considering such action the court shall give due weight to possible prejudice to parties that have relied upon the granting of recognition. The case under this chapter may be closed in the manner prescribed under section 350.

''§ 1518. Subsequent information

''From the time of filing the petition for recognition of the foreign proceeding, the foreign representative shall file with the court promptly a notice of change of status concerning—

''(1) any substantial change in the status of the foreign proceeding or the status of the foreign representative's appointment; and

''(2) any other foreign proceeding regarding the debtor that becomes known to the foreign representative.

''§ 1519. Relief that may be granted upon petition for recognition of a foreign proceeding

''(a) From the time of filing a petition for recognition until the court rules on the petition, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, where relief is urgently needed to protect the assets of the debtor or the interests of the creditors, grant relief of a provisional nature, including—

''(1) staying execution against the debtor's assets;

''(2) entrusting the administration or realization of all or part of the debtor's assets located in the United States to the foreign representative or another person authorized by the court, including an examiner, in order to protect and preserve the value of assets that, by their nature or because of other circumstances, are perishable, susceptible to devaluation or otherwise in jeopardy; and

''(3) any relief referred to in paragraph (3), (4), or (7) of section 1521(a).

''(b) Unless extended under section 1521(a)(6), the relief granted under this section terminates when the petition for recognition is decided upon.

''(c) It is a ground for denial of relief under this section that such relief would interfere with the administration of a foreign main proceeding.

''(d) The court may not enjoin a police or regulatory act of a governmental unit, including a criminal action or proceeding, under this section.

''(e) The standards, procedures, and limitations applicable to an injunction shall apply to relief under this section.

''§ 1520. Effects of recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding that is a foreign main proceeding—

''(1) sections 361 and 362 with respect to the debtor and that property of the debtor that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States;

''(2) sections 363, 549, and 552 of this title apply to a transfer of an interest of the debtor in property that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States to the same extent that the sections would apply to property of an estate;

''(3) unless the court orders otherwise, the foreign representative may operate the debtor's business and may exercise the rights and powers of a trustee under and to the extent provided by sections 363 and 552; and

''(4) section 552 applies to property of the debtor that is within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.''.

''(b) Subsection (a) does not affect the right to commence an individual action or proceeding in a foreign country to the extent necessary to preserve a claim against the debtor.

''(c) Subsection (a) does not affect the right of a foreign representative or an entity to file a petition commencing a case under this title or the right of any party to file claims or take other proper actions in such a case.

''§ 1521. Relief that may be granted upon recognition of a foreign proceeding

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, whether main or nonmain, where necessary to effectuate the purpose of this chapter and to protect the assets of the debtor or the interests of the creditors, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, grant any appropriate relief, including—

''(1) staying the commencement or continuation of an individual action or proceeding concerning the debtor's assets, rights, obligations or liabilities to the extent they have not been stayed under section 1520(a);

''(2) staying execution against the debtor's assets to the extent it has not been stayed under section 1520(a);

''(3) suspending the right to transfer, encumber or otherwise dispose of any assets of the debtor to the extent this right has not been suspended under section 1520(a);

''(4) providing for the examination of witnesses, the taking of evidence or the delivery of information concerning the debtor's assets, affairs, rights, obligations or liabilities;

''(5) entrusting the administration or realization of all or part of the debtor's assets within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States to the foreign representative or another person, including an examiner, authorized by the court;

''(6) extending relief granted under section 1519(a); and

''(7) granting any additional relief that may be available to a trustee, except for relief available under sections 522, 544, 545, 547, 548, 550, and 724(a).

''(b) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, whether main or nonmain, the court may, at the request of the foreign representative, entrust the distribution of all or part of the debtor's assets located in the United States to the foreign representative or another person, including an examiner, authorized by the court, provided that the court is satisfied that the interests of creditors in the United States are sufficiently protected.

''(c) In granting relief under this section to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that the relief relates to assets that, under the law of the United States, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding or concerns information required in that proceeding.

''(d) The court may not enjoin a police or regulatory act of a governmental unit, including a criminal action or proceeding, under this section.

''(e) The standards, procedures, and limitations applicable to an injunction shall apply to relief under paragraphs (1), (2), (3), and (6) of subsection (a).

''§ 1522. Protection of creditors and other interested persons

''(a) The court may grant relief under section 1519 or 1521, or may modify or terminate relief under subsection (c), only if the interests of the creditors and other interested entities, including the debtor, are sufficiently protected.

''(b) The court may subject relief granted under section 1519 or 1521, or the operation of the debtor's business under section 1520(a)(3) of this title, to conditions it considers appropriate, including the giving of security or the filing of a bond.

''(c) The court may, at the request of the foreign representative or an entity affected by relief granted under section 1519 or 1521, or at its own motion, modify or terminate such relief.

''(d) Section 1104(d) shall apply to the appointment of an examiner under this chapter. Any examiner shall comply with the qualification requirements imposed on a trustee by section 322.

''§ 1523. Actions to avoid acts detrimental to creditors

''(a) Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative has standing in a case concerning the debtor pending under another chapter of this title to initiate actions under sections 522, 544, 545, 547, 548, 550, and 724(a).

''(b) When the foreign proceeding is a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that an action under subsection (a) relates to assets that, under United States law, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding.

''§ 1524. Intervention by a foreign representative

''Upon recognition of a foreign proceeding, the foreign representative may intervene in any proceedings in a State or Federal court in the United States in which the debtor is a party.

''SUBCHAPTER IV—COOPERATION WITH FOREIGN COURTS AND FOREIGN REPRESENTATIVES

''§ 1525. Cooperation and direct communication between the court and foreign courts or foreign representatives

''(a) Consistent with section 1501, the court shall cooperate to the maximum extent possible with foreign courts or foreign representatives, either directly or through the trustee.

''(b) The court is entitled to communicate directly with, or to request information or assistance directly from, foreign courts or foreign representatives, subject to the rights of parties in interest to notice and participation.

''§ 1526. Cooperation and direct communication between the trustee and foreign courts or foreign representatives

''(a) Consistent with section 1501, the trustee or other person, including an examiner, authorized by the court, shall, subject to the supervision of the court, cooperate to the maximum extent possible with foreign courts or foreign representatives.

''(b) The trustee or other person, including an examiner, authorized by the court is entitled, subject to the supervision of the court, to communicate directly with foreign courts or foreign representatives.

''§ 1527. Forms of cooperation

''Cooperation referred to in sections 1525 and 1526 may be implemented by any appropriate means, including—

''(1) appointment of a person or body, including an examiner, to act at the direction of the court;

''(2) communication of information by any means considered appropriate by the court;

''(3) coordination of the administration and supervision of the debtor's assets and affairs;

''(4) approval or implementation of agreements concerning the coordination of proceedings; and

''(5) coordination of concurrent proceedings regarding the same debtor.

''SUBCHAPTER V—CONCURRENT PROCEEDINGS

''§ 1528. Commencement of a case under this title after recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''After recognition of a foreign main proceeding, a case under another chapter of this title may be commenced only if the debtor has assets in the United States. The effects of such case shall be restricted to the assets of the debtor that are within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States and, to the extent necessary to implement cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, to other assets of the debtor that are within the jurisdiction of the court under sections 541(a) of this title, and 1334(e) of title 28, to the extent that such other assets are not subject to the jurisdiction and control of a foreign proceeding that has been recognized under this chapter.

''§ 1529. Coordination of a case under this title and a foreign proceeding

''Where a foreign proceeding and a case under another chapter of this title are taking place concurrently regarding the same debtor, the court shall seek cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, and the following shall apply:

''(1) When the case in the United States is taking place at the time the petition for recognition of the foreign proceeding is filed—

''(A) any relief granted under sections 1519 or 1521 must be consistent with the relief granted in the case in the United States; and

''(B) even if the foreign proceeding is recognized as a foreign main proceeding, section 1520 does not apply.

''(2) When a case in the United States under this title commences after recognition, or after the filing of the petition for recognition, of the foreign proceeding—

''(A) any relief in effect under sections 1519 or 1521 shall be reviewed by the court and shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the case in the United States; and

''(B) if the foreign proceeding is a foreign main proceeding, the stay and suspension referred to in section 1520(a) shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the relief granted in the case in the United States.

''(3) In granting, extending, or modifying relief granted to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding, the court must be satisfied that the relief relates to assets that, under the law of the United States, should be administered in the foreign nonmain proceeding or concerns information required in that proceeding.

''(4) In achieving cooperation and coordination under sections 1528 and 1529, the court may grant any of the relief authorized under section 305.

''§ 1530. Coordination of more than 1 foreign proceeding

''In matters referred to in section 1501, with respect to more than 1 foreign proceeding regarding the debtor, the court shall seek cooperation and coordination under sections 1525, 1526, and 1527, and the following shall apply:

''(1) Any relief granted under section 1519 or 1521 to a representative of a foreign nonmain proceeding after recognition of a foreign main proceeding must be consistent with the foreign main proceeding.

''(2) If a foreign main proceeding is recognized after recognition, or after the filing of a petition for recognition, of a foreign nonmain proceeding, any relief in effect under section 1519 or 1521 shall be reviewed by the court and shall be modified or terminated if inconsistent with the foreign main proceeding.

''(3) If, after recognition of a foreign nonmain proceeding, another foreign nonmain proceeding is recognized, the court shall grant, modify, or terminate relief for the purpose of facilitating coordination of the proceedings.

''§ 1531. Presumption of insolvency based on recognition of a foreign main proceeding

''In the absence of evidence to the contrary, recognition of a foreign main proceeding is for the purpose of commencing a proceeding under section 303, proof that the debtor is generally not paying its debts as such debts become due.

''§ 1532. Rule of payment in concurrent proceedings

''Without prejudice to secured claims or rights in rem, a creditor who has received payment with respect to its claim in a foreign proceeding pursuant to a law relating to insolvency may not receive a payment for the same claim in a case under any other chapter of this title regarding the debtor, so long as the payment to other creditors of the same class is proportionately less than the payment the creditor has already received.''.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 13 the following:

''15. Ancillary and Other Cross-Border Cases ..... 1501''.

SEC. 902. AMENDMENTS TO OTHER CHAPTERS IN TITLE 11, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) APPLICABILITY OF CHAPTERS.—Section 103 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting before the period the following: '', and this chapter, sections 307, 304, 555 through 557, 559, and 560 apply in a case under chapter 15''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(j) Chapter 15 applies only in a case under such chapter, except that—

''(1) sections 1505, 1513, and 1514 apply in all cases under this title; and

''(2) section 1509 applies whether or not a case under this title is pending.''.

(b) DEFINITIONS.—Paragraphs (23) and (24) of title 11, United States Code, are amended to read as follows:

''(23) 'foreign proceeding' means a collective judicial or administrative proceeding in a foreign country, including an interim proceeding, under a law relating to insolvency or adjustment of debt in which proceeding the assets and affairs of the debtor are subject to control or supervision by a foreign court, for the purpose of reorganization or liquidation;

''(24) 'foreign representative' means a person or body, including a person or body appointed on an interim basis, authorized in a foreign proceeding to administer the reorganization or the liquidation of the debtor's assets or affairs or to act as a representative of the foreign proceeding;''.

(c) AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 28, UNITED STATES CODE.—

(1) PROCEDURES.—Section 157(b)(2) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (N), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in subparagraph (O), by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(P) recognition of foreign proceedings and other matters under chapter 15 of title 11.''.

(2) BANKRUPTCY CASES AND PROCEEDINGS.—Section 1334(c) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''Nothing in'' and inserting ''Except with respect to a case under chapter 15 of title 11, nothing in''.

(3) DUTIES OF TRUSTEES.—Section 586(a)(3) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking ''or 13'' and inserting ''13, or 15,'' after ''chapter''.

(4) Section 305(a)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read:

''(2)(A) a petition under section 1515 of this title for recognition of a foreign proceeding has been granted; and

''(B) the purposes of chapter 15 of this title would be best served by such dismissal or suspension.''.

(5) Section 508 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (a) and by striking out the letter ''(b)'' at the beginning of the second paragraph.

TITLE X—FINANCIAL CONTRACT PROVISIONS

SEC. 1001. TREATMENT OF CERTAIN AGREEMENTS BY CONSERVATORS OR —RECEIVERS OF INSURED DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS.

(a) DEFINITION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(i)) is amended by inserting '', resolution or order'' after ''any similar agreement that the Corporation determines by regulation''.

(b) DEFINITION OF SECURITIES CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(ii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(ii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(ii) SECURITIES CONTRACT.—The term 'securities contract'—

''(I) means a contract for the purchase, sale, or loan of a security, a certificate of deposit, a mortgage loan, or any interest in a mortgage loan, a group or index of securities, certificates of deposit, or mortgage loans or interests therein (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof) or any option on any of the foregoing, including any option to purchase or sell any such security, certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index, or option;

''(II) does not include any purchase, sale, or repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan unless the Corporation determines by regulation, resolution, or order to include any such agreement within the meaning of such term;

''(III) means any option entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currencies;

''(IV) means the guarantee by or to any securities clearing agency of any settlement of cash, securities, certificates of deposit, mortgage loans or interests therein, group or index of securities, certificates of deposit, or mortgage loans or interests therein (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof) or option on any of the foregoing, including any option to purchase or sell any such security, certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index or option;

''(V) means any margin loan;

''(VI) means any other agreement or transaction that is similar to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(VII) means any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(VIII) means any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(IX) means a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a securities contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a securities contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII); and

''(X) means any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause.''.

(c) DEFINITION OF COMMODITY CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(iii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(iii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(iii) COMMODITY CONTRACT.—The term 'commodity contract' means—

''(I) with respect to a futures commission merchant, a contract for the purchase or sale of a commodity for future delivery on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade;

''(II) with respect to a foreign futures commission merchant, a foreign future;

''(III) with respect to a leverage transaction merchant, a leverage transaction;

''(IV) with respect to a clearing organization, a contract for the purchase or sale of a commodity for future delivery on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade that is cleared by such clearing organization, or commodity option traded on, or subject to the rules of, a contract market or board of trade that is cleared by such clearing organization;

''(V) with respect to a commodity options dealer, a commodity option;

''(VI) any other agreement or transaction that is similar to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(VII) any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(VIII) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(IX) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a commodity contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a commodity contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), (IV), (V), (VI), (VII), or (VIII); or

''(X) a security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause.''.

(d) DEFINITION OF FORWARD CONTRACT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(iv) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(iv)) is amended to read as follows:

''(iv) FORWARD CONTRACT.—The term 'forward contract' means—

''(I) a contract (other than a commodity contract) for the purchase, sale, or transfer of a commodity or any similar good, article, service, right, or interest which is presently or in the future becomes the subject of dealing in the forward contract trade, or product or byproduct thereof, with a maturity date more than 2 days after the date the contract is entered into, including, but not limited to, a repurchase agreement, reverse repurchase agreement, consignment, lease, swap, hedge transaction, deposit, loan, option, allocated transaction, unallocated transaction, or any other similar agreement;

''(II) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in subclauses (I) and (III);

''(III) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I) or (II);

''(IV) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclauses (I), (II), or (III), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a forward contract under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a forward contract under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), or (III); or

''(V) a security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV).''.

(e) DEFINITION OF REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(v) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(v)) is amended to read as follows:

''(v) REPURCHASE AGREEMENT.—The term 'repurchase agreement' (which definition also applies to a reverse repurchase agreement)—

''(I) mean an agreement, including related terms, which provides for the transfer of 1 or more certificates of deposit, mortgage-related securities (as such term is defined in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934), mortgage loans, interests in mortgage-related securities or mortgage loans, eligible bankers' acceptances, qualified foreign government securities or securities that are direct obligations of, or that are fully guaranteed by, the United States or any agency of the United States against the transfer of funds by the transferee of such certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptances, securities, loans, or interests with a simultaneous agreement by such transferee to transfer to the transferor thereof certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptances, securities, loans, or interests as described above, at a date certain not later than 1 year after such transfers or on demand, against the transfer of funds, or any other similar agreement;

''(II) does not include any repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan unless the Corporation determines by regulation, resolution, or order to include any such participation within the meaning of such term;

''(III) means any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in subclauses (I) and (IV);

''(IV) means any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I) or (III);

''(V) means a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), or (IV), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a repurchase agreement under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a repurchase agreement under this subclause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (III), or (IV); and

''(VI) means a security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (III), (IV), or (V).

For purposes of this clause, the term 'qualified foreign government security' means a security that is a direct obligation of, or that is fully guaranteed by, the central government of a member of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (as determined by regulation or order adopted by the appropriate Federal banking authority).''.

(f) DEFINITION OF SWAP AGREEMENT.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(iv) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(vi)) is amended to read as follows:

''(vi) SWAP AGREEMENT.—The term 'swap agreement' means—

''(I) any agreement, including the terms and conditions incorporated by reference in any such agreement, which is an interest rate swap, option, future, or forward agreement, including a rate floor, rate cap, rate collar, cross-currency rate swap, and basis swap; a spot, same day-tomorrow, tomorrow-next, forward, or other foreign exchange or precious metals agreement; a currency swap, option, future, or forward agreement; an equity index or equity swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a debt index or debt swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a credit spread or credit swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a commodity index or commodity swap, option, future, or forward agreement;

''(II) any agreement or transaction similar to any other agreement or transaction referred to in this clause that is presently, or in the future becomes, regularly entered into in the swap market (including terms and conditions incorporated by reference in such agreement) and that is a forward, swap, future, or option on 1 or more rates, currencies, commodities, equity securities or other equity instruments, debt securities or other debt instruments, or economic indices or measures of economic risk or value;

''(III) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in this clause;

''(IV) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this clause;

''(V) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement contains an agreement or transaction that is not a swap agreement under this clause, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a swap agreement under this clause only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subclause (I), (II), (III), or (IV); and

''(VI) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreements or transactions referred to in subparagraph (I), (II), (III), or (IV).

Such term is applicable for purposes of this title only and shall not be construed or applied so as to challenge or affect the characterization, definition, or treatment of any swap agreement under any other statute, regulation, or rule, including the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, the Investment Company Act of 1940, the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, the Commodity Exchange Act, and the regulations promulgated by the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.''.

(g) DEFINITION OF TRANSFER.—Section 11(e)(8)(D)(viii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(viii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(viii) TRANSFER.—The term 'transfer' means every mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with property or with an interest in property, including retention of title as a security interest and foreclosure of the depository institutions's equity of redemption.''.

(h) TREATMENT OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''paragraph (10)'' and inserting ''paragraphs (9) and (10)'';

(2) in subparagraph (A)(i), by striking ''to cause the termination or liquidation'' and inserting ''such person has to cause the termination, liquidation, or acceleration'';

(3) by amending subparagraph (A)(ii) to read as follows:

''(ii) any right under any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more qualified financial contracts described in clause (i);''; and

(4) by amending subparagraph (E)(ii) to read as follows:

''(ii) any right under any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more qualified financial contracts described in clause (i);''.

(i) AVOIDANCE OF TRANSFERS.—Section 11(e)(8)(C)(i) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(C)(i)) is amended by inserting ''section 5242 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (12 U.S.C. 91) or any other Federal or State law relating to the avoidance of preferential or fraudulent transfers,'' before ''the Corporation''.

SEC. 1002. AUTHORITY OF THE CORPORATION WITH RESPECT TO FAILED AND FAILING INSTITUTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (E), by striking ''other than paragraph (12) of this subsection, subsection (d)(9)'' and inserting ''other than subsections (d)(9) and (e)(10)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subparagraphs:

''(F) CLARIFICATION.—No provision of law shall be construed as limiting the right or power of the Corporation, or authorizing any court or agency to limit or delay, in any manner, the right or power of the Corporation to transfer any qualified financial contract in accordance with paragraphs (9) and (10) of this subsection or to disaffirm or repudiate any such contract in accordance with subsection (e)(1) of this section.

''(G) WALKAWAY CLAUSES NOT EFFECTIVE.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (E), and sections 403 and 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, no walkaway clause shall be enforceable in a qualified financial contract of an insured depository institution in default.

''(ii) WALKAWAY CLAUSE DEFINED.—For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'walkaway clause' means a provision in a qualified financial contract that, after calculation of a value of a party's position or an amount due to or from 1 of the parties in accordance with its terms upon termination, liquidation, or acceleration of the qualified financial contract, either does not create a payment obligation of a party or extinguishes a payment obligation of a party in whole or in part solely because of such party's status as a nondefaulting party.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 11(e)(12)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(12)(A)) is amended by inserting ''or the exercise of rights or powers'' after ''the appointment''.

SEC. 1003. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO TRANSFERS OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.

(a) TRANSFERS OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS TO FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.—Section 11(e)(9) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(9)) is amended to read as follows:

''(9) TRANSFER OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—In making any transfer of assets or liabilities of a depository institution in default which includes any qualified financial contract, the conservator or receiver for such depository institution shall either—

''(i) transfer to 1 financial institution, other than a financial institution for which a conservator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or other legal custodian has been appointed or which is otherwise the subject of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding—

''(I) all qualified financial contracts between any person or any affiliate of such person and the depository institution in default;

''(II) all claims of such person or any affiliate of such person against such depository institution under any such contract (other than any claim which, under the terms of any such contract, is subordinated to the claims of general unsecured creditors of such institution);

''(III) all claims of such depository institution against such person or any affiliate of such person under any such contract; and

''(IV) all property securing or any other credit enhancement for any contract described in subclause (I) or any claim described in subclause (II) or (III) under any such contract; or

''(ii) transfer none of the qualified financial contracts, claims, property or other credit enhancement referred to in clause (i) (with respect to such person and any affiliate of such person).

''(B) TRANSFER TO FOREIGN BANK, FOREIGN FINANCIAL INSTITUTION, OR BRANCH OR AGENCY OF A FOREIGN BANK OR FINANCIAL INSTITUTION.—In transferring any qualified financial contracts and related claims and property pursuant to subparagraph (A)(i), the conservator or receiver for such depository institution shall not make such transfer to a foreign bank, financial institution organized under the laws of a foreign country, or a branch or agency of a foreign bank or financial institution unless, under the law applicable to such bank, financial institution, branch or agency, to the qualified financial contracts, and to any netting contract, any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more qualified financial contracts, the contractual rights of the parties to such qualified financial contracts, netting contracts, security agreements or arrangements, or other credit enhancements are enforceable substantially to the same extent as permitted under this section.

''(C) TRANSFER OF CONTRACTS SUBJECT TO THE RULES OF A CLEARING ORGANIZATION.—In the event that a conservator or receiver transfers any qualified financial contract and related claims, property and credit enhancements pursuant to subparagraph (A)(i) and such contract is subject to the rules of a clearing organization, the clearing organization shall not be required to accept the transferee as a member by virtue of the transfer.

''(D) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term 'financial institution' means a broker or dealer, a depository institution, a futures commission merchant, or any other institution as determined by the Corporation by regulation to be a financial institution.''.

(b) NOTICE TO QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACT COUNTERPARTIES.—Section 11(e)(10)(A) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(10)(A)) is amended by amending the flush material following clause (ii) to read as follows: ''the conservator or receiver shall notify any person who is a party to any such contract of such transfer by 5:00 p.m. (eastern time) on the business day following the date of the appointment of the receiver, in the case of a receivership, or the business day following such transfer, in the case of a conservatorship.''.

(c) RIGHTS AGAINST RECEIVER AND TREATMENT OF BRIDGE BANKS.—Section 11(e)(10) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(10)) is further amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (D); and

(2) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraphs:

''(B) CERTAIN RIGHTS NOT ENFORCEABLE.—

''(i) RECEIVERSHIP.—A person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with an insured depository institution may not exercise any right such person has to terminate, liquidate, or net such contract under paragraph (8)(A) or section 403 or 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 solely by reason of or incidental to the appointment of a receiver for the depository institution (or the insolvency or financial condition of the depository institution for which the receiver has been appointed)—

''(I) until 5:00 p.m. (eastern time) on the business day following the date of the appointment of the receiver; or

''(II) after the person has received notice that the contract has been transferred pursuant to paragraph (9)(A).

''(ii) CONSERVATORSHIP.—A person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with an insured depository institution may not exercise any right such person has to terminate, liquidate, or net such contract under paragraph (8)(E) or sections 403 or 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991, solely by reason of or incidental to the appointment of a conservator for the depository institution (or the insolvency or financial condition of the depository institution for which the conservator has been appointed).

''(iii) NOTICE.—For purposes of this subsection, the Corporation as receiver or conservator of an insured depository institution shall be deemed to have notified a person who is a party to a qualified financial contract with such depository institution if the Corporation has taken steps reasonably calculated to provide notice to such person by the time specified in subparagraph (A) of this subsection.

''(C) TREATMENT OF BRIDGE BANKS.—The following institutions shall not be considered a financial institution for which a conservator, receiver, trustee in bankruptcy, or other legal custodian has been appointed or which is otherwise the subject of a bankruptcy or insolvency proceeding for purposes of subsection (e)(9)—

''(i) a bridge bank; or

''(ii) a depository institution organized by the Corporation, for which a conservator is appointed either—

''(I) immediately upon the organization of the institution; or

''(II) at the time of a purchase and assumption transaction between such institution and the Corporation as receiver for a depository institution in default.''.

SEC. 1004. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO DISAFFIRMANCE OR REPUDIATION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.

Section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)) is further amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (11) through (15) as paragraphs (12) through (16), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (10) the following new paragraph:

''(11) DISAFFIRMANCE OR REPUDIATION OF QUALIFIED FINANCIAL CONTRACTS.—In exercising the rights of disaffirmance or repudiation of a conservator or receiver with respect to any qualified financial contract to which an insured depository institution is a party, the conservator or receiver for such institution shall either—

''(A) disaffirm or repudiate all qualified financial contracts between—

''(i) any person or any affiliate of such person; and

''(ii) the depository institution in default; or

''(B) disaffirm or repudiate none of the qualified financial contracts referred to in subparagraph (A) (with respect to such person or any affiliate of such person).''.

SEC. 1005. CLARIFYING AMENDMENT RELATING TO MASTER AGREEMENTS.

Section 11(e)(8)(D)(vii) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)(D)(vii)) is amended to read as follows:

''(vii) TREATMENT OF MASTER AGREEMENT AS 1 AGREEMENT.—Any master agreement for any contract or agreement described in any preceding clause of this subparagraph (or any master agreement for such master agreement or agreements), together with all supplements to such master agreement, shall be treated as a single agreement and a single qualified financial contract. If a master agreement contains provisions relating to agreements or transactions that are not themselves qualified financial contracts, the master agreement shall be deemed to be a qualified financial contract only with respect to those transactions that are themselves qualified financial contracts.''.

SEC. 1006. FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1991.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 402 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (12 U.S.C. 4402) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (6)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (C) through (E), respectively;

(B) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following new subparagraph:

''(B) an uninsured national bank or an uninsured State bank that is a member of the Federal Reserve System if the national bank or State member bank is not eligible to make application to become an insured bank under section 5 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act;''; and (C) by amending subparagraph (C) (as redesignated) to read as follows:

''(C) a branch or agency of a foreign bank, a foreign bank and any branch or agency of the foreign bank, or the foreign bank that established the branch or agency, as those terms are defined in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act of 1978;'';

(2) in paragraph (11), by adding before the period ''and any other clearing organization with which such clearing organization has a netting contract'';

(3) by amending paragraph (14)(A)(i) to read as follows:

''(i) means a contract or agreement between 2 or more financial institutions, clearing organizations, or members that provides for netting present or future payment obligations or payment entitlements (including liquidation or closeout values relating to such obligations or entitlements) among the parties to the agreement; and''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

''(15) PAYMENT.—The term 'payment' means a payment of United States dollars, another currency, or a composite currency, and a noncash delivery, including a payment or delivery to liquidate an unmatured obligation.''.

(b) ENFORCEABILITY OF BILATERAL NETTING CONTRACTS.—Section 403 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (12 U.S.C. 4403) is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (a) to read as follows:

''(a) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of State or Federal law (other than paragraphs (8)(E), (8)(F), and (10)(B) of section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act or any order authorized under section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, the covered contractual payment obligations and the covered contractual payment entitlements between any 2 financial institutions shall be netted in accordance with, and subject to the conditions of, the terms of any applicable netting contract (except as provided in section 561(b)(2) of title 11).''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(f) ENFORCEABILITY OF SECURITY AGREEMENTS.—The provisions of any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more netting contracts between any 2 financial institutions shall be enforceable in accordance with their terms (except as provided in section 561(b)(2) of title 11) and shall not be stayed, avoided, or otherwise limited by any State or Federal law (other than paragraphs (8)(E), (8)(F), and (10)(B) of section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970).''.

(c) ENFORCEABILITY OF CLEARING ORGANIZATION NETTING CONTRACTS.—Section 404 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (12 U.S.C. 4404) is amended—

(1) by amending subsection (a) to read as follows:

''(a) GENERAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of State or Federal law (other than paragraphs (8)(E), (8)(F), and (10)(B) of section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and any order authorized under section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, the covered contractual payment obligations and the covered contractual payment entitlements of a member of a clearing organization to and from all other members of a clearing organization shall be netted in accordance with and subject to the conditions of any applicable netting contract (except as provided in section 561(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code).''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(h) ENFORCEABILITY OF SECURITY AGREEMENTS.—The provisions of any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more netting contracts between any 2 members of a clearing organization shall be enforceable in accordance with their terms (except as provided in section 561(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code) and shall not be stayed, avoided, or otherwise limited by any State or Federal law other than paragraphs (8)(E), (8)(F), and (10)(B) of section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act and section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970.''.

(d) ENFORCEABILITY OF CONTRACTS WITH UNINSURED NATIONAL BANKS AND UNINSURED FEDERAL BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (12 U.S.C. 4401 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 407 as section 408; and

(2) by adding after section 406 the following new section:

''SEC. 407. TREATMENT OF CONTRACTS WITH UNINSURED NATIONAL BANKS AND UNINSURED FEDERAL BRANCHES AND AGENCIES.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, paragraphs (8), (9), (10), and (11) of section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act shall apply to an uninsured national bank or uninsured Federal branch or Federal agency except—

''(1) any reference to the 'Corporation as receiver' or 'the receiver or the Corporation' shall refer to the receiver of an uninsured national bank or uninsured Federal branch or Federal agency appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency;

''(2) any reference to the 'Corporation' (other than in section 11(e)(8)(D) of such Act), the 'Corporation, whether acting as such or as conservator or receiver', a 'receiver', or a 'conservator' shall refer to the receiver or conservator of an uninsured national bank or uninsured Federal branch or Federal agency appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency; and

''(3) any reference to an 'insured depository institution' or 'depository institution' shall refer to an uninsured national bank or an uninsured Federal branch or Federal agency.

''(b) LIABILITY.—The liability of a receiver or conservator of an uninsured national bank or uninsured Federal branch or agency shall be determined in the same manner and subject to the same limitations that apply to receivers and conservators of insured depository institutions under section 11(e) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

''(c) REGULATORY AUTHORITY.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—The Comptroller of the Currency, in consultation with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, may promulgate regulations to implement this section.

''(2) SPECIFIC REQUIREMENT.—In promulgating regulations to implement this section, the Comptroller of the Currency shall ensure that the regulations generally are consistent with the regulations and policies of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation adopted pursuant to the Federal Deposit Insurance Act.

''(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section, the terms 'Federal branch', 'Federal agency', and 'foreign bank' have the same meaning as in section 1(b) of the International Banking Act.''.

SEC. 1007. BANKRUPTCY CODE AMENDMENTS.

(a) DEFINITIONS OF FORWARD CONTRACT, REPURCHASE AGREEMENT, SECURITIES CLEARING AGENCY, SWAP AGREEMENT, COMMODITY CONTRACT, AND SECURITIES CONTRACT.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 101—

(A) in paragraph (25)—

(i) by striking ''means a contract'' and inserting ''means—

''(A) a contract'';

(ii) by striking '', or any combination thereof or option thereon;'' and inserting '', or any other similar agreement;''; and

(iii) by adding at the end the following:

''(B) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in subparagraphs (A) and (C);

''(C) any option to enter into an agreement or transaction referred to in subparagraph (A) or (B);

''(D) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), or (C), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether such master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a forward contract under this paragraph, except that such master agreement shall be considered to be a forward contract under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under such master agreement that is referred to in subparagraph (A), (B) or (C); or

''(E) a security agreement or arrangement, or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D), but not to exceed the actual value of such contract, option, agreement, or transaction on the date of the filing of the petition;'';

(B) in paragraph (46), by striking ''on any day during the period beginning 90 days before the date of'' and replacing it with ''at any time before'';

(C) by amending paragraph (47) to read as follows:

''(47) 'repurchase agreement' (which definition also applies to a reverse repurchase agreement) means—

''(i) an agreement, including related terms, which provides for the transfer of 1 or more certificates of deposit, mortgage-related securities (as defined in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934), mortgage loans, interests in mortgage-related securities or mortgage loans, eligible bankers' acceptances, qualified foreign government securities; or securities that are direct obligations of, or that are fully guaranteed by, the United States or any agency of the United States against the transfer of funds by the transferee of such certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptances, securities, loans, or interests; with a simultaneous agreement by such transferee to transfer to the transferor thereof certificates of deposit, eligible bankers' acceptance, securities, loans, or interests of the kind described above, at a date certain not later than 1 year after such transfer or on demand, against the transfer of funds;

''(ii) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in clauses (i) and (iii);

''(iii) an option to enter into an agreement or transaction referred to in clause (i) or (ii);

''(iv) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in clause (i), (ii), or (iii), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether such master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a repurchase agreement under this paragraph, except that such master agreement shall be considered to be a repurchase agreement under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in clause (i), (ii), or (iii); or

''(v) a security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in clause (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv), but not to exceed the actual value of such contract on the date of the filing of the petition; and

''(B) does not include a repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan;

and, for purposes of this paragraph, the term 'qualified foreign government security' means a security that is a direct obligation of, or that is fully guaranteed by, the central government of a member of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development;'';

(D) in paragraph (48) by inserting ''or exempt from such registration under such section pursuant to an order of the Securities and Exchange Commission'' after ''1934''; and

(E) by amending paragraph (53B) to read as follows:

''(53B) 'swap agreement'

''(A) means—

''(i) any agreement, including the terms and conditions incorporated by reference in such agreement, which is an interest rate swap, option, future, or forward agreement, including a rate floor, rate cap, rate collar, cross-currency rate swap, and basis swap; a spot, same day-tomorrow, tomorrow-next, forward, or other foreign exchange or precious metals agreement; a currency swap, option, future, or forward agreement; an equity index or an equity swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a debt index or a debt swap, option, future, or forward agreement; a credit spread or a credit swap, option, future, or forward agreement; or a commodity index or a commodity swap, option, future, or forward agreement;

''(ii) any agreement or transaction similar to any other agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph that—

''(I) is presently, or in the future becomes, regularly entered into in the swap market (including terms and conditions incorporated by reference therein); and

''(II) is a forward, swap, future, or option on 1 or more rates, currencies commodities, equity securities, or other equity instruments, debt securities or other debt instruments, or on an economic index or measure of economic risk or value;

''(iii) any combination of agreements or transactions referred to in this paragraph;

''(iv) any option to enter into an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(v) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in clause (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, and without regard to whether the master agreement contains an agreement or transaction that is not a swap agreement under this paragraph, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a swap agreement under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in clause (i), (ii), (iii), or (iv); or

''(B) any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to any agreements or transactions referred to in subparagraph (A); and

''(C) is applicable for purposes of this title only and shall not be construed or applied so as to challenge or affect the characterization, definition, or treatment of any swap agreement under any other statute, regulation, or rule, including the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, the Investment Company Act of 1940, the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970, the Commodity Exchange Act, and the regulations prescribed by the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.'';

(2) by amending section 741(7) to read as follows:

''(7) 'securities contract'—

''(A) means—

''(i) a contract for the purchase, sale, or loan of a security, a certificate of deposit, a mortgage loan or any interest in a mortgage loan, a group or index of securities, certificates of deposit or mortgage loans or interests therein (including an interest therein or based on the value thereof), or option on any of the foregoing, including an option to purchase or sell any such security certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index or option;

''(ii) any option entered into on a national securities exchange relating to foreign currencies;

''(iii) the guarantee by or to any securities clearing agency of a settlement of cash, securities, certificates of deposit mortgage loans or interests therein, group or index of securities, or mortgage loans or interests therein (including any interest therein or based on the value thereof), or option on any of the foregoing, including an option to purchase or sell any such security certificate of deposit, loan, interest, group or index or option;

''(iv) any margin loan;

''(v) any other agreement or transaction that is similar to an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(vi) any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this paragraph;

''(vii) any option to enter into any agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(viii) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in clause (i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (v), (vi), or (vii), together with all supplements to any such master agreement, without regard to whether the master agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a securities contract under this paragraph, except that such master agreement shall be considered to be a securities contract under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under such master agreement that is referred to in clause (i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (v), (vi), or (vii); or

''(ix) any security agreement or arrangement, or other credit enhancement, related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph, but not to exceed the actual value of such contract on the date of the filing of the petition; and

''(B) does not include any purchase, sale, or repurchase obligation under a participation in a commercial mortgage loan.''; and

(3) in section 761(4)—

(A) by striking ''or'' at the end of subparagraph (D); and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

''(F) any other agreement or transaction that is similar to an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(G) any combination of the agreements or transactions referred to in this paragraph;

''(H) any option to enter into an agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph;

''(I) a master agreement that provides for an agreement or transaction referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (G), or (H), together with all supplements to such master netting agreement, without regard to whether the master netting agreement provides for an agreement or transaction that is not a commodity contract under this paragraph, except that the master agreement shall be considered to be a commodity contract under this paragraph only with respect to each agreement or transaction under the master agreement that is referred to in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), (E), (F), (G), or (H); or

''(J) a security agreement or arrangement, or other credit enhancement related to any agreement or transaction referred to in this paragraph, but not to exceed the actual value of such contract on the date of the filing of the petition;''.

(b) DEFINITIONS OF FINANCIAL INSTITUTION, FINANCIAL PARTICIPANT, AND FORWARD CONTRACT MERCHANT.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending paragraph (22) to read as follows:

''(22) 'financial institution' means—

''(A) a Federal reserve bank, or an entity (domestic or foreign) that is a commercial or savings bank, industrial savings bank, savings and loan association, trust company, or receiver or conservator for such entity and, when any such Federal reserve bank, receiver, conservator or entity is acting as agent or custodian for a customer in connection with a securities contract, as defined in section 741 of this title, such customer; or

''(B) in connection with a securities contract, as defined in section 741 of this title, an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940;'';

(2) by inserting after paragraph (22) the following:

''(22A) 'financial participant' means an entity that, at the time it enters into a securities contract, commodity contract or forward contract, or at the time of the filing of the petition, has 1 or more agreements or transactions that is described in section 561(a)(2) with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) of a total gross dollar value of at least $1,000,000,000 in notional or actual principal amount outstanding on any day during the previous 15-month period, or has gross mark-to-market positions of at least $100,000,000 (aggregated across counterparties) in 1 or more such agreement or transaction with the debtor or any other entity (other than an affiliate) on any day during the previous 15-month period;''; and

(3) by amending paragraph (26) to read as follows:

''(26) 'forward contract merchant' means a Federal reserve bank, or an entity whose business consists in whole or in part of entering into forward contracts as or with merchants or in a commodity, as defined or in section 761 of this title, or any similar good, article, service, right, or interest which is presently or in the future becomes the subject of dealing or in the forward contract trade;''.

(c) DEFINITION OF MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT AND MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT PARTICIPANT.—Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after paragraph (38) the following new paragraphs:

''(38A) 'master netting agreement' means an agreement providing for the exercise of rights, including rights of netting, setoff, liquidation, termination, acceleration, or closeout, under or in connection with 1 or more contracts that are described in any 1 or more of paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a), or any security agreement or arrangement or other credit enhancement related to 1 or more of the foregoing. If a master netting agreement contains provisions relating to agreements or transactions that are not contracts described in paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a), the master netting agreement shall be deemed to be a master netting agreement only with respect to those agreements or transactions that are described in any 1 or more of the paragraphs (1) through (5) of section 561(a);

''(38B) 'master netting agreement participant' means an entity that, at any time before the filing of the petition, is a party to an outstanding master netting agreement with the debtor;''.

(d) SWAP AGREEMENTS, SECURITIES CONTRACTS, COMMODITY CONTRACTS, FORWARD CONTRACTS, REPURCHASE AGREEMENTS, AND MASTER NETTING AGREEMENTS UNDER THE AUTOMATIC-STAY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 118, 132, 136, 142, 203 and 818, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (6), by inserting '', pledged to, and under the control of,'' after ''held by'';

(B) in paragraph (7), by inserting '', pledged to, and under the control of,'' after ''held by'';

(C) by amending paragraph (17) to read as follows:

''(17) under subsection (a), of the setoff by a swap participant of a mutual debt and claim under or in connection with 1 or more swap agreements that constitutes the setoff of a claim against the debtor for any payment or other transfer of property due from the debtor under or in connection with any swap agreement against any payment due to the debtor from the swap participant under or in connection with any swap agreement or against cash, securities, or other property held by, pledged to, and under the control of, or due from such swap participant to margin guarantee, secure, or settle a swap agreement;'';

(D) in paragraph (30) by striking ''or'' at the end;

(E) in paragraph (31) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; or''; and

(F) by inserting after paragraph (31) the following new paragraph:

''(32) under subsection (a), of the setoff by a master netting agreement participant of a mutual debt and claim under or in connection with 1 or more master netting agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements that constitutes the setoff of a claim against the debtor for any payment or other transfer of property due from the debtor under or in connection with such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements against any payment due to the debtor from such master netting agreement participant under or in connection with such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements or against cash, securities, or other property held by, pledged or and under the control of, or due from such master netting agreement participant to margin, guarantee, secure, or settle such agreements or any contract or agreement subject to such agreements, to the extent such participant is eligible to exercise such offset rights under paragraph (6), (7), or (17) for each individual contract covered by the master netting agreement in issue.''.

(2) LIMITATION.—Section 362 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 120, 302, and 412, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(l) LIMITATION.—The exercise of rights not subject to the stay arising under subsection (a) pursuant to paragraph (6), (7), or (17), or (31) of subsection (b) shall not be stayed by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this title.''.

(e) LIMITATION OF AVOIDANCE POWERS UNDER MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT.—Section 546 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 207 and 302, is amended—

(1) in subsection (g) (as added by section 103 of Public Law 101–311)—

(A) by striking ''under a swap agreement'';

(B) by striking ''in connection with a swap agreement'' and inserting ''under or in connection with any swap agreement''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(j) Notwithstanding sections 544, 545, 547, 548(a)(2)(B), and 548(b) of this title, the trustee may not avoid a transfer made by or to a master netting agreement participant under or in connection with any master netting agreement or any individual contract covered thereby that is made before the commencement of the case, except under section 548(a)(1)(A) of this title, and except to the extent the trustee could otherwise avoid such a transfer made under an individual contract covered by such master netting agreement.''.

(f) FRAUDULENT TRANSFERS OF MASTER NETTING AGREEMENTS.—Section 548(d)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (C), by striking ''and'';

(2) in subparagraph (D), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(E) a master netting agreement participant that receives a transfer in connection with a master netting agreement or any individual contract covered thereby takes for value to the extent of such transfer, except, with respect to a transfer under any individual contract covered thereby, to the extent such master netting agreement participant otherwise did not take (or is otherwise not deemed to have taken) such transfer for value.''.

(g) TERMINATION OR ACCELERATION OF SECURITIES CONTRACTS.—Section 555 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 555. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract'';
and

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''liquidation'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration''.

(h) TERMINATION OR ACCELERATION OF COMMODITIES OR FORWARD CONTRACTS.—Section 556 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 556. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a commodities contract or forward contract''; and

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''liquidation'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration''.

(i) TERMINATION OR ACCELERATION OF REPURCHASE AGREEMENTS.—Section 559 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 559. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a repurchase agreement''; and

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''liquidation'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration''.

(j) LIQUIDATION, TERMINATION, OR ACCELERATION OF SWAP AGREEMENTS.—Section 560 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by amending the section heading to read as follows:

''§ 560. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a swap agreement''; and

(2) in the first sentence, by striking ''termination of a swap agreement'' and inserting ''liquidation, termination, or acceleration of 1 or more swap agreements''; and

(3) by striking ''in connection with any swap agreement'' and inserting ''in connection with the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of 1 or more swap agreements''.

(k) LIQUIDATION, TERMINATION, ACCELERATION, OR OFFSET UNDER A MASTER NETTING AGREEMENT AND ACROSS CONTRACTS.—(1) Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 560 the following:

''§ 561. Contractual right to terminate, liquidate, accelerate, or offset under a master netting agreement and across contracts

''(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (b), the exercise of any contractual right, because of a condition of the kind specified in section 365(e)(1), to cause the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of or to offset or net termination values, payment amounts or other transfer obligations arising under or in connection with 1 or more (or the termination, liquidation, or acceleration of 1 or more)—

''(1) securities contracts, as defined in section 741(7);

''(2) commodity contracts, as defined in section 761(4);

''(3) forward contracts;

''(4) repurchase agreements;

''(5) swap agreements; or

''(6) master netting agreements, shall not be stayed, avoided, or otherwise limited by operation of any provision of this title or by any order of a court or administrative agency in any proceeding under this title.

''(b) EXCEPTION.—

''(1) A party may exercise a contractual right described in subsection (a) to terminate, liquidate, or accelerate only to the extent that such party could exercise such a right under section 555, 556, 559, or 560 for each individual contract covered by the master netting agreement in issue.

''(2) If a debtor is a commodity broker subject to subchapter IV of chapter 7 of this title—

''(A) a party may not net or offset an obligation to the debtor arising under, or in connection with, a commodity contract against any claim arising under, or in connection with, other instruments, contracts, or agreements listed in subsection (a) except to the extent the party has positive net equity in the commodity accounts at the debtor, as calculated under subchapter IV; and

''(B) another commodity broker may not net or offset an obligation to the debtor arising under, or in connection with, a commodity contract entered into or held on behalf of a customer of the debtor against any claim arising under, or in connection with, other instruments, contracts, or agreements listed in subsection (a).

''(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this section, the term 'contractual right' includes a right set forth in a rule or bylaw of a national securities exchange, a national securities association, or a securities clearing agency, a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not evidenced in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice.''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections of chapter 9 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 560 the following:

''561. Contractual right to terminate, liquidate, accelerate, or offset under a master netting agreement and across contracts.

(l) ANCILLARY PROCEEDINGS.—Section 304 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 215, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(c) Any provisions of this title relating to securities contracts, commodity contracts, forward contracts, repurchase agreements, swap agreements, or master netting agreements shall apply in a case ancillary to a foreign proceeding under this section or any other section of this title, so that enforcement of contractual provisions of such contracts and agreements in accordance with their terms will not be stayed or otherwise limited by operation of any provision of this title or by order of a court in any case under this title, and to limit avoidance powers to the same extent as in a proceeding under chapter 7 or 11 of this title (such enforcement not to be limited based on the presence or absence of assets of the debtor in the United States).''.

(m) COMMODITY BROKER LIQUIDATIONS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 766 the following:

''§ 767. Commodity broker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants

''Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the exercise of rights by a forward contract merchant, commodity broker, stockbroker, financial institution, securities clearing agency, swap participant, repo participant, or master netting agreement participant under this title shall not affect the priority of any unsecured claim it may have after the exercise of such rights.''.

(n) STOCKBROKER LIQUIDATIONS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 752 the following:

''§ 753. Stockbroker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants

''Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the exercise of rights by a forward contract merchant, commodity broker, stockbroker, financial institution, securities clearing agency, swap participant, repo participant, financial participant, or master netting agreement participant under this title shall not affect the priority of any unsecured claim it may have after the exercise of such rights.''.

(o) SETOFF.—Section 553 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3)(C), by inserting ''(except for a setoff of a kind described in section

362(b)(6), 362(b)(7), 362(b)(17), 362(b)(19), 555, 556, 559, 560 or 561 of this title)'' before the period; and

(2) in subsection (b)(1), by striking ''362(b)(14),'' and inserting ''362(b)(17), 362(b)(19), 555, 556, 559, 560, 561''.

(p) SECURITIES CONTRACTS, COMMODITY CONTRACTS, AND FORWARD CONTRACTS.—Title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in section 362(b)(6), by striking ''financial institutions,'' each place such term appears and inserting ''financial institution, financial participant'';

(2) in section 546(e), by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,'';

(3) in section 548(d)(2)(B), by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,'';

(4) in section 555—

(A) by inserting ''financial participant,'' after ''financial institution,''; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end '', a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice''; and

(5) in section 556, by inserting '', financial participant'' after ''commodity broker''.

(q) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Title 11 of the United States Code is amended—

(1) in the table of sections of chapter 5—

(A) by amending the items relating to sections 555 and 556 to read as follows:

''555. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract.

''556. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a commodities contract or forward contract.''; and (B) by amending the items relating to sections 559 and 560 to read as follows:

''559. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a repurchase agreement.

''560. Contractual right to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a swap agreement.''; and

(2) in the table of sections of chapter 7—

(A) by inserting after the item relating to section 766 the following:

''767. Commodity broker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants.''; and

(B) by inserting after the item relating to section 752 the following:

''753. Stockbroker liquidation and forward contract merchants, commodity brokers, stockbrokers, financial institutions, securities clearing agencies, swap participants, repo participants, and master netting agreement participants.''.

SEC. 1008. RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.

Section 11(e)(8) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1821(e)(8)) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

''(H) RECORDKEEPING REQUIREMENTS.—The Corporation, in consultation with the appropriate Federal banking agencies, may prescribe regulations requiring more detailed recordkeeping with respect to qualified financial contracts (including market valuations) by insured depository institutions.''.

SEC. 1009. EXEMPTIONS FROM CONTEMPORANEOUS EXECUTION —REQUIREMENT.

Section 13(e)(2) of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act (12 U.S.C. 1823(e)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

''(2) EXEMPTIONS FROM CONTEMPORANEOUS EXECUTION REQUIREMENT.—An agreement to provide for the lawful collateralization of—

''(A) deposits of, or other credit extension by, a Federal, State, or local governmental entity, or of any depositor referred to in section 11(a)(2), including an agreement to provide collateral in lieu of a surety bond;

''(B) bankruptcy estate funds pursuant to section 345(b)(2) of title 11, United States Code;

''(C) extensions of credit, including any overdraft, from a Federal reserve bank or Federal home loan bank; or

''(D) 1 or more qualified financial contracts, as defined in section 11(e)(8)(D), shall not be deemed invalid pursuant to paragraph (1)(B) solely because such agreement was not executed contemporaneously with the acquisition of the collateral or because of pledges, delivery, or substitution of the collateral made in accordance with such agreement.''.

SEC. 1010. DAMAGE MEASURE.

(a) Title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 1007, is amended—

(1) by inserting after section 561 the following:

''§ 562. Damage measure in connection with swap agreements, securities contracts, forward contracts, commodity contracts, repurchase agreements, or master netting agreements

''If the trustee rejects a swap agreement, securities contract as defined in section 741 of this title, forward contract, commodity contract (as defined in section 761 of this title) repurchase agreement, or master netting agreement pursuant to section 365(a) of this title, or if a forward contract merchant, stockbroker, financial institution, securities clearing agency, repo participant, financial participant, master netting agreement participant, or swap participant liquidates, terminates, or accelerates such contract or agreement, damages shall be measured as of the earlier of—

''(1) the date of such rejection; or

''(2) the date of such liquidation, termination, or acceleration.''; and

(2) in the table of sections of chapter 5 by inserting after the item relating to section 561 the following:

''562. Damage measure in connection with swap agreements, securities contracts, forward contracts, commodity contracts, repurchase agreements, or master netting agreements.''.

(b) CLAIMS ARISING FROM REJECTION.—Section 502(g) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by designating the existing text as paragraph (1); and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) A claim for damages calculated in accordance with section 561 of this title shall be allowed under subsection (a), (b), or (c), or disallowed under subsection (d) or (e), as if such claim had arisen before the date of the filing of the petition.''.

SEC. 1011. SIPC STAY.

Section 5(b)(2) of the Securities Investor Protection Act of 1970 (15 U.S.C. 78eee(b)(2)) is amended by adding after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraph:

''(C) EXCEPTION FROM STAY.—

''(i) Notwithstanding section 362 of title 11, United States Code, neither the filing of an application under subsection (a)(3) nor any order or decree obtained by Securities Investor Protection Corporation from the court shall operate as a stay of any contractual rights of a creditor to liquidate, terminate, or accelerate a securities contract, commodity contract, forward contract, repurchase agreement, swap agreement, or master netting agreement, each as defined in title 11, to offset or net termination values, payment amounts, or other transfer obligations arising under or in connection with 1 or more of such contracts or agreements, or to foreclose on any cash collateral pledged by the debtor whether or not with respect to 1 or more of such contracts or agreements.

''(ii) Notwithstanding clause (i), such application, order, or decree may operate as a stay of the foreclosure on securities collateral pledged by the debtor, whether or not with respect to 1 or more of such contracts or agreements, securities sold by the debtor under a repurchase agreement or securities lent under a securities lending agreement.

''(iii) As used in this section, the term 'contractual right' includes a right set forth in a rule or bylaw of a national securities exchange, a national securities association, or a securities clearing agency, a right set forth in a bylaw of a clearing organization or contract market or in a resolution of the governing board thereof, and a right, whether or not in writing, arising under common law, under law merchant, or by reason of normal business practice.''.

SEC. 1012. ASSET-BACKED SECURITIZATIONS.

Section 541 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 150, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (5) of subsection (b) as paragraph (6);

(2) by inserting after paragraph (4) of subsection (b) the following new paragraph:

''(5) any eligible asset (or proceeds thereof), to the extent that such eligible asset was transferred by the debtor, before the date of commencement of the case, to an eligible entity in connection with an asset-backed securitization, except to the extent such asset (or proceeds or value thereof) may be recovered by the trustee under section 550 by virtue of avoidance under section 548(a);''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(e) For purposes of this section, the following definitions shall apply:

''(1) the term 'asset-backed securitization' means a transaction in which eligible assets transferred to an eligible entity are used as the source of payment on securities, the most senior of which are rated investment grade by 1 or more nationally recognized securities rating organizations, issued by an issuer;

''(2) the term 'eligible asset' means—

''(A) financial assets (including interests therein and proceeds thereof), either fixed or revolving, including residential and commercial mortgage loans, consumer receivables, trade receivables, and lease receivables, that, by their terms, convert into cash within a finite time period, plus any residual interest in property subject to receivables included in such financial assets plus any rights or other assets designed to assure the servicing or timely distribution of proceeds to security holders;

''(B) cash; and

''(C) securities.

''(3) the term 'eligible entity' means—

''(A) an issuer; or

''(B) a trust, corporation, partnership, or other entity engaged exclusively in the business of acquiring and transferring eligible assets directly or indirectly to an issuer and taking actions ancillary thereto;

''(4) the term 'issuer' means a trust, corporation, partnership, or other entity engaged exclusively in the business of acquiring and holding eligible assets, issuing securities backed by eligible assets, and taking actions ancillary thereto; and

''(5) the term 'transferred' means the debtor, pursuant to a written agreement, represented and warranted that eligible assets were sold, contributed, or otherwise conveyed with the intention of removing them from the estate of the debtor pursuant to subsection (b)(5), irrespective, without limitation of—

''(A) whether the debtor directly or indirectly obtained or held an interest in the issuer or in any securities issued by the issuer;

''(B) whether the debtor had an obligation to repurchase or to service or supervise the servicing of all or any portion of such eligible assets; or

''(C) the characterization of such sale, contribution, or other conveyance for tax, accounting, regulatory reporting, or other purposes.''.

SEC. 1013. FEDERAL RESERVE COLLATERAL REQUIREMENTS.

The 3d sentence of the 3d undesignated paragraph of section 16 of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 412) is amended by striking ''acceptances acquired under the provisions of section 13 of this Act'' and inserting ''acceptances acquired under section 10A, 10B, 13, or 13A of this Act''.

SEC. 1014. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF —— AMENDMENTS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This title shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.—The amendments made by this title shall apply with respect to cases commenced or appointments made under any Federal or State law after the date of enactment of this Act, but shall not apply with respect to cases commenced or appointments made under any Federal or State law before the date of enactment of this Act.

TITLE XI—TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS

SEC. 1101. DEFINITIONS.

Section 101 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 102, 105, 132, 138, 301, 302, 402, 902, and 1007, is amended—

(1) by striking ''In this title—'' and inserting ''In this title:'';

(2) in each paragraph, by inserting ''The term'' after the paragraph designation;

(3) in paragraph (35)(B), by striking ''paragraphs (21B) and (33)(A)'' and inserting ''paragraphs (23) and (35)'';

(4) in each of paragraphs (35A) and (38), by striking ''; and'' at the end and inserting a period;

(5) in paragraph (51B)—

(A) by inserting ''who is not a family farmer'' after ''debtor'' the first place it appears; and

(B) by striking ''thereto having aggregate'' and all that follows through the end of the paragraph;

(6) by amending paragraph (54) to read as follows:

''(54) The term 'transfer' means—

''(A) the creation of a lien;

''(B) the retention of title as a security interest;

''(C) the foreclosure of a debtor's equity of redemption; or

''(D) each mode, direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary, of disposing of or parting with—

''(i) property; or

''(ii) an interest in property;'';

(7) in each of paragraphs (1) through (35), in each of paragraphs (36) and (37), and in each of paragraphs (40) through (55) (including paragraph (54), as amended by paragraph (6) of this section), by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting a period; and

(8) by redesignating paragraphs (4) through (55), including paragraph (54), as amended by paragraph (6) of this section, in entirely numerical sequence.

SEC. 1102. ADJUSTMENT OF DOLLAR AMOUNTS.

Section 104 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''522(f)(3), 707(b)(5),'' after ''522(d),'' each place it appears.

SEC. 1103. EXTENSION OF TIME.

Section 108(c)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''922'' and all that follows through ''or'', and inserting ''922, 1201, or''.

SEC. 1104. TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

Title 11 of the United States Code is amended—

(1) in section 109(b)(2) by striking ''subsection (c) or (d) of''; and

(2) in section 552(b)(1) by striking ''product'' each place it appears and inserting ''products''.

SEC. 1105. PENALTY FOR PERSONS WHO NEGLIGENTLY OR FRAUDULENTLY PREPARE BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS.

Section 110(j)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''attorney's'' and inserting ''attorneys' ''.

SEC. 1106. LIMITATION ON COMPENSATION OF PROFESSIONAL PERSONS.

Section 328(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''on a fixed or percentage fee basis,'' after ''hourly basis,''.

SEC. 1107. SPECIAL TAX PROVISIONS.

Section 346(g)(1)(C) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking '', except'' and all that follows through ''1986''.

SEC. 1108. EFFECT OF CONVERSION.

Section 348(f)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''of the estate'' after ''property'' the first place it appears.

SEC. 1109. ALLOWANCE OF ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.

Section 503(b)(4) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E) of'' before ''paragraph (3)''.

SEC. 1110. PRIORITIES.

Section 507(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 323, is amended in paragraph (4), as so redesignated by section 142, by striking the semicolon at the end and inserting a period.

SEC. 1111. EXEMPTIONS.

Section 522(g)(2) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''subsection (f)(2)'' and inserting ''subsection (f)(1)(B)''.

SEC. 1112. EXCEPTIONS TO DISCHARGE.

Section 523 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 146, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(3), by striking ''or (6)'' each place it appears and inserting ''(6), or (15)'';

(2) as amended by section 304(e) of Public Law 103–394 (108 Stat. 4133), in paragraph (15), by transferring such paragraph so as to insert it after paragraph (14A) of subsection (a);

(3) in subsection (a)(9), by inserting '', watercraft, or aircraft'' after ''motor vehicle'';

(4) in subsection (a)(15), as so redesignated by paragraph (2) of this subsection, by inserting ''to a spouse, former spouse, or child of the debtor and'' after ''(15)''; and

(5) in subsection (e), by striking ''a insured'' and inserting ''an insured''.

SEC. 1113. EFFECT OF DISCHARGE.

Section 524(a)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 523'' and all that follows through ''or that'' and inserting ''section 523, 1228(a)(1), or 1328(a)(1) of this title, or that''.

SEC. 1114. PROTECTION AGAINST DISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT.

Section 525(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by inserting ''student'' before ''grant'' the second place it appears; and

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking ''the program operated under part B, D, or E of'' and inserting ''any program operated under''.

SEC. 1115. PROPERTY OF THE ESTATE.

Section 541(b)(4)(B)(ii) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''365 or'' before ''542''.

SEC. 1116. PREFERENCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 547 of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (b), by striking ''subsection (c)'' and inserting ''subsections (c) and (i)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(i) If the trustee avoids under subsection (b) a transfer made between 90 days and 1 year before the date of the filing of the petition, by the debtor to an entity that is not an insider for the benefit of a creditor that is an insider, such transfer may be avoided under this section only with respect to the creditor that is an insider.''.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any case that is pending or commenced on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1117. POSTPETITION TRANSACTIONS.

Section 549(c) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''an interest in'' after ''transfer of'';

(2) by striking ''such property'' and inserting ''such real property''; and

(3) by striking ''the interest'' and inserting ''such interest''.

SEC. 1118. DISPOSITION OF PROPERTY OF THE ESTATE.

Section 726(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''1009,''.

SEC. 1119. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Section 901(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''1123(d),'' after ''1123(b),''.

SEC. 1120. APPOINTMENT OF ELECTED TRUSTEE.

Section 1104(b) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(b)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2)(A) If an eligible, disinterested trustee is elected at a meeting of creditors under paragraph (1), the United States trustee shall file a report certifying that election. Upon the filing of a report under the preceding sentence—

''(i) the trustee elected under paragraph (1) shall be considered to have been selected and appointed for purposes of this section; and

''(ii) the service of any trustee appointed under subsection (d) shall terminate.

''(B) In the case of any dispute arising out of an election under subparagraph (A), the court shall resolve the dispute.''.

SEC. 1121. ABANDONMENT OF RAILROAD LINE.

Section 1170(e)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 11347'' and inserting ''section 11326(a)''.

SEC. 1122. CONTENTS OF PLAN.

Section 1172(c)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''section 11347'' and inserting ''section 11326(a)''.

SEC. 1123. DISCHARGE UNDER CHAPTER 12.

Subsections (a) and (c) of section 1228 of title 11, United States Code, are amended by striking ''1222(b)(10)'' each place it appears and inserting ''1222(b)(9)''.

SEC. 1124. BANKRUPTCY CASES AND PROCEEDINGS.

Section 1334(d) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''made under this subsection'' and inserting ''made under subsection (c)''; and

(2) by striking ''This subsection'' and inserting ''Subsection (c) and this subsection''.

SEC. 1125. KNOWING DISREGARD OF BANKRUPTCY LAW OR RULE.

Section 156(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the first undesignated paragraph—

(A) by inserting ''(1) the term'' before '' 'bankruptcy''; and

(B) by striking the period at the end and inserting ''; and''; and

(2) in the second undesignated paragraph—

(A) by inserting ''(2) the term'' before '' 'document''; and

(B) by striking ''this title'' and inserting ''title 11''.

SEC. 1126. TRANSFERS MADE BY NONPROFIT CHARITABLE CORPORATIONS.

(a) SALE OF PROPERTY OF ESTATE.—Section 363(d) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking ''only'' and all that follows through the end of the subsection and inserting ''only—

''(1) in accordance with applicable nonbankruptcy law that governs the transfer of property by a corporation or trust that is not a moneyed, business, or commercial corporation or trust; and

''(2) to the extent not inconsistent with any relief granted under subsection (c), (d), (e), or (f) of section 362 of this title.''.

(b) CONFIRMATION OF PLAN FOR REORGANIZATION.—Section 1129(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 140, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(15) All transfers of property of the plan shall be made in accordance with any applicable provisions of nonbankruptcy law that govern the transfer of property by a corporation or trust that is not a moneyed, business, or commercial corporation or trust.''.

(c) TRANSFER OF PROPERTY.—Section 541 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 1102, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(f) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, property that is held by a debtor that is a corporation described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Code may be transferred to an entity that is not such a corporation, but only under the same conditions as would apply if the debtor had not filed a case under this title.''.

(d) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to a case pending under title 11, United States Code, on the date of enactment of this Act, except that the court shall not confirm a plan under chapter 11 of this title without considering whether this section would substantially affect the rights of a party in interest who first acquired rights with respect to the debtor after the date of the petition. The parties who may appear and be heard in a proceeding under this section include the attorney general of the State in which the debtor is incorporated, was formed, or does business.

(e) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be deemed to require the court in which a case under chapter 11 is pending to remand or refer any proceeding, issue, or controversy to any other court or to require the approval of any other court for the transfer of property.

SEC. 1127. PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS FOR FAILURE TO INCUR FINANCE CHARGES.

Section 127 of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN ACTIONS FOR FAILURE TO INCUR FINANCE CHARGES.—A creditor of an account under an open end consumer credit plan may not terminate an account prior to its expiration date solely because the consumer has not incurred finance charges on the account. Nothing in this subsection shall prohibit a creditor from terminating an account for inactivity in 3 or more consecutive months.''.

SEC. 1128. PROTECTION OF VALID PURCHASE MONEY SECURITY INTERESTS.

Section 547(c)(3)(B) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking ''20'' and inserting ''30''.

SEC. 1129. TRUSTEES.

(a) SUSPENSION AND TERMINATION OF PANEL TRUSTEES AND STANDING TRUSTEES.—Section 586(d) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1)'' after ''(d)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(2) A trustee whose appointment under subsection (a)(1) or under subsection (b) is terminated or who ceases to be assigned to cases filed under title 11 of the United States Code may obtain judicial review of the final agency decision by commencing an action in the United States district court for the district for which the panel to which the trustee is appointed under subsection (a)(1), or in the United States district court for the district in which the trustee is appointed under subsection (b) resides, after first exhausting all available administrative remedies, which if the trustee so elects, shall also include an administrative hearing on the record. Unless the trustee elects to have an administrative hearing on the record, the trustee shall be deemed to have exhausted all administrative remedies for purposes of this paragraph if the agency fails to make a final agency decision within 90 days after the trustee requests administrative remedies. The Attorney General shall prescribe procedures to implement this paragraph. The decision of the agency shall be affirmed by the district court unless it is unreasonable and without cause based on the administrative record before the agency.''.

(b) EXPENSES OF STANDING TRUSTEES.—Section 586(e) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(3) After first exhausting all available administrative remedies, an individual appointed under subsection (b) may obtain judicial review of final agency action to deny a claim of actual, necessary expenses under this subsection by commencing an action in the United States district court in the district where the individual resides. The decision of the agency shall be affirmed by the district court unless it is unreasonable and without cause based upon the administrative record before the agency.

''(4) The Attorney General shall prescribe procedures to implement this subsection.''.

TITLE XII—GENERAL EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS

SEC. 1201. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided otherwise in this Act, this Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENTS.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act, the amendments made by this Act shall not apply with respect to cases commenced under title 11 of the United States Code before the effective date of this Act.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. No amendment shall be in order except those printed in House Report 106–126. Each amendment may be. Each amendment may be offered only in the order specified, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone a request for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time for voting on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote, provided that the time for voting on the first question shall be a minimum of 15 minutes.

It is now in order to consider Amendment No. 1 printed in House Report 106–126.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. GEKAS

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment No. 1.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 1 offered by Mr. GEKAS:

In the table of contents of the bill—

(1) in the item relating to section 107, strike ''congress'' and insert ''Congress'', and

(2) in the item relating to section 134, strike ''Giving debtors the ability to keep'' and insert ''Allowing a debtor to retain''.

Page 9, line 1, strike ''applicable'' and insert ''actual''.

Page 9, beginning on line 1, strike ''specifically listed'' and insert ''specified''.

Page 10, line 3, strike ''proceeding brought'' and insert ''motion filed''.

Beginning on page 10, strike line 22 and all that follows through line 5 on page 11.

Page 11, line 6, strike ''(D)'' and insert ''(C)''.

Page 12, beginning on line 11, strike ''in prosecuting the motion''.

Page 16, line 13, insert ''or not'' after ''whether''.

Page 17, after line 16, insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

(d) DEBTOR'S DUTIES.—Section 521(a)(1)(B) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 603, is amended—

(1) in clause (v) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in clause (vi) by adding ''and'' at the end;

(3) by inserting the following after clause (vi):

''(vii) a statement of the debtor's current monthly income, and the calculations which determine whether a presumption arises under section 707(b)(2)(A)(i), showing how each amount is calculated.''.

(e) BANKRUPTCY FORMS.—Section 2075 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding the following at the end of the 1st paragraph:

''The bankruptcy rules promulgated under this section shall prescribe a form for the statement referred to in section 521(a)(1)(B)(vii) of title 11, United States Code, and may provide general rules on the content of such statement.''.

(f) CHAPTER 13.—Section 1325(a) of title 11, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (5) by striking ''and'' at the end;

(2) in paragraph (6) by striking the period and inserting ''; and'';

(3) by inserting the following after paragraph (6):

''(7) the action of the debtor in filing the petition under this chapter was in good faith.''.

Page 19, line 15, strike ''this title'' and insert ''title 11, United States Code''.

Page 22, lines 17 and 20, insert ''case or'' after ''a''.

Page 23, lines 9 and 12, strike ''proceeding'' and insert ''case''.

Page 77, strike line 1, and insert the following:

SEC. 134. ALLOWING THE DEBTOR TO RETAIN LEASED

Beginning on page 114, strike line 1 and all that follows through line 5 on page 115 (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate).

Page 91, line 15, insert ''(a) AMENDMENT.—'' before ''Section''.

Page 92, beginning on line 13, strike ''expressly'' and all that follows through ''this paragraph'', and insert ''provides by statute''.

Page 92, after line 15, insert the following:

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT TO INDIVIDUAL STATES.—(1) Section 522(p) of title 11, United States Code, as added by subsection (a), shall not apply with respect to a State before the end of the first regular session of the State legislature following the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ''State'' has the meaning given such term in section 101 of title 11, United States Code.

Page 115, beginning on line 20, strike ''(excluding'' and all that follows through ''secret)''.

Page 116, line 7, insert ''(excluding executory contracts that transfer a right or interest under a filed or issued patent, copyright, trademark, trade dress, or trade secret)'' after ''contract''.

Page 117, line 15, strike ''365(b)(1)(A)'' and insert ''365(b)(2)''.

Page 174, line 2, insert ''(a) APPEALS.—'' before ''Title''.

Page 175, line 9, strike ''(b)'' and insert ''(5)''.

Page 175, indent lines 9 through 11 2 ems to the right.

Page 175, line 12, strike ''(c)(1)'' and insert ''(b)(1)''.

Page 175, line 17, strike ''(1)-(4)'' and insert ''(1) through (5)''.

Page 175, line 24, strike ''subsection (b)'' and insert ''paragraph (1)''

Page 176, after line 6, insert the following:

(b) PROCEDURAL RULES.—Until rules of practice and procedure are promulgated or amended pursuant to the Rules Enabling Act (28 U.S.C. sections 2071–77) to govern appeals to a bankruptcy appellate panel or to a court of appeals exercising jurisdiction pursuant to section 1293 of title 28, as added by this Act, the following shall apply:

(1) A notice of appeal with respect to an appeal from an order or judgment of a bankruptcy court to a court of appeals or a bankruptcy appellate panel must be filed within the time provided in Rule 8002 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure.

(2) An appeal to a bankruptcy appellate panel shall be taken in the manner provided in Part VIII of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure and local court rules.

(3) An appeal from an order or judgment of a bankruptcy court directly to a court of appeals shall be governed by the rules of practice and procedure that apply to a civil appeal from a judgment of a district court exercising original jurisdiction, as if the bankruptcy court were a district court, except as provided in paragraph (1) regarding the time to appeal or by local court rules.

(4) An appeal to a court of appeals from a decision, judgment, order, or decree entered by a bankruptcy appellate panel exercising appellate jurisdiction shall be taken in the manner provided by Rule 6(b) of the Federal Rules of Appellate Procedure.

(c) REPEALER.—(1) Section 158 of title 28, United States Code, is repealed.

(2) The table of sections of chapter 6 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 158.

Page 208, line 9, insert '', other than a foreign insurance company,'' after ''entity''.

Page 208, after line 20, insert the following:

''(d) The court may not grant relief under this chapter with respect to any deposit, escrow, trust fund, or other security required or permitted under any applicable State insurance law or regulation for the benefit of claim holders in the United States.

Page 231, strike line 13, and insert the following:

''SEC. 902. OTHER AMENDMENTS TO TITLES 11 AND 28 OF THE UNITED STATES CODE.

Page 233, after line 11, insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

(d) OTHER SECTIONS OF TITLE 11.—(1) Section 109(b)(3) of title 11, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

''(3)(A) a foreign insurance company, engaged in such business in the United States; or

''(B) a foreign bank, savings bank, cooperative bank, savings and loan association, building and loan association, or credit union, which has a branch or agency (as defined in section 3101 of title 12, United States Code) in the United States.''.

(2) Section 303(k) of title 11, United States Code, is repealed.

(3)(A) Section 304 of title 11, United States Code, is repealed.

(B) The table of sections of chapter 3 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to section 304.

(C) Section 306 of title 11, United States Code, is amended by striking '', 304,'' each place it appears.

Page 279, beginning on line 1, strike ''that is described in section 561(a)(2)'' and insert ''described in paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of section 561(a)''.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 158, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

□ 1345

In this amendment, which is the manager's amendment, of course, the bulk of it is with technical corrections that have to be made, that almost always appear in a bill that is so mammoth as is ours. But besides that, there are some other revisions in it of which the minority is well aware.

For instance, in the homestead exemption portion, we allow the States who want to opt out to do so, even in advance of the adoption of the bill, because of the legislative schedules in some of those States.

So the technical corrections bill corrects some of the technical misgivings that we have had about the original text.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment. This is a technical amendment, the manager's amendment. It contains 11 changes. We have examined them carefully and have absolutely no objection to them.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the manager's amendment to H.R. 833, bankruptcy reform legislation.

I believe that adoption of this amendment is necessary to preserve state homestead laws. I am pleased that the manager's amendment includes two critically important amendments that I offered yesterday in the House Rules Committee. The adoption of the manager's amendment would ensure that states can decide how much property should be exempted when a consumer files for bankruptcy. This will grant the states latitude to opt out of this intrusive law protecting their prerogative in determining what homestead exemptions are allowed. State's citizens will not be forced to live under this new federal mandate until such time as a state legislature reconvened.

The first Bentsen amendment would change the effective date of the new federal homestead cap of $250,000 until the last day of the next legislative session of any state. The second Bentsen amendment would preserve the right of states to opt out of the cap and allow states to prospectively opt out of the new homestead cap prior to this bill being enacted into law. This would allow the legislatures ample time to pass legislation opting out of this new federal standard.

The bill as reported by the House Judiciary Committee, includes many provisions related to the homestead exemption. First, it would place a monetary cap of $250,000 on the amount of homestead equity individuals can protect from bankruptcy foreclosure proceedings. If a consumer holds more than $250,000 in equity, the consumer would be required to foreclose on the property to repay their non-mortgage debts. Second, it includes a two-year residency requirement before one can qualify. Third, this legislation includes a provision that would prohibit them from transferring assets in their home during this two-year period. This provision could penalize any homeowner or farmer who tried to pay more than what's required on their mortgage payments. Finally, this legislation also would permit states to ''opt out'' of this new federal standard.

My amendment would address the ''opt out'' provision by ensuring that states are not required to choose between convening a special legislative session or forcing their citizens to live under this intrusive federal mandate.

There is no substantive reason to address state homestead laws in this or any other legislation. No evidence of abusive practices has been provided during the debate. When the 105th Congress considered this legislation we successfully prevailed against such a cap. And, while I support much of the underlying bill, I will be unable to support any conference report which includes any restriction on the states' ability to determine exempt property with respect to one's homestead including eliminating and limiting the states' ability to opt out of the new federal standard.

While this legislation is not perfect, I believe that the manager's amendment makes important improvements to this legislation. With these additions, I believe we should support the manager's amendment and would urge colleagues to also support this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. It is now in order to consider amendment number 2 printed in House Report 106–126.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. MORAN OF VIRGINIA

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment made in order by the rule.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. MORAN of Virginia:

Page 34, strike lines 7 through 25 and insert the following:

''(C) the following examples:

''(i) if the average account balance under a creditor's open-end consumer credit plan, taken as an average of the account balances for all consumer accounts under that open-end consumer credit plan, is $1,000 or less, two examples, based on an annual percentage rate and method for determining minimum periodic payments recently in effect for that creditor, and based on outstanding balances of $250 and $500, showing the estimated minimum periodic payments, and the estimated period of time it would take to repay those outstanding balances of $250 and $500, if the consumer paid only the minimum periodic payment on each monthly or periodic statement and obtained no additional extensions of credit; or

''(ii) if the average account balance under a creditor's open-end consumer credit plan, taken as an average of the account balances for all consumer accounts under that open-end consumer credit plan, is more than $1,000, three examples, based on an annual percentage rate and method for determining minimum periodic payments recently in effect for that creditor, and outstanding balances of $1,000, $1,500 and $2,000, showing the estimated minimum periodic payments, and the estimated period of time it would take to repay those outstanding balances of $1,000, $1,500 and $2,000 if the consumer paid only the minimum periodic payment on each monthly or periodic statement and obtained no additional extensions of credit.

''(10) With respect to one billing cycle per calendar year, the creditor shall transmit to each consumer to whom the creditor is required to transmit a statement pursuant to subsection (b) for such billing cycle the following information:

''(A) the following statement: 'The minimum payment amount shown on your billing statement is the smallest payment which you can make in order to keep the account in good standing. This payment option is offered as a convenience and you may make larger payments at any time. Making only the minimum payment each month will increase the amount of interest you pay and the length of time it takes to repay your outstanding balance.';

''(B) if the plan provides that the consumer will be permitted to forgo making a minimum payment during a specified billing cycle, a statement, if applicable, that if the consumer chooses to forgo making the minimum payment, finance charges will continue to accrue;

''(C) an example, based on an annual percentage rate and method for determining minimum periodic payments recently in effect for that creditor, and a $500 outstanding balance, showing the estimated minimum periodic payment, and the estimated period of time it would take to repay the $500 outstanding balance if the consumer paid only the minimum periodic payment on each monthly or periodic statement and obtained no additional extensions of credit; and

''(D) a worksheet prescribed by the Board to assist the consumer in determining the consumer's household income and debt obligations.''.

Page 35, line 12, strike the close quotation marks and the period at the end.

Page 35, after line 12 insert the following:

''(12) the required minimum payment amount represented as a dollar figure.

''(13) the date by which or the period within which the required minimum payment must be made.''.

(c) DISCLOSURES RELATED TO INTRODUCTORY RATES.—Section 127(c)(1)(A)(i) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(c)(1)(A)(i)) is amended by inserting the following at the end of subclause (III):

''(IV) Where the initial rate is temporary and will expire within a period of less than 1 year, and is lower than the rate that will apply after the temporary rate expires—

''(A) the time period during which the initial rate will remain in effect; and

''(B) the annual percentage rate that will apply to the account after the temporary rate expires, or if that rate is a variable rate, the fact that the rate is variable, the rate at the time of mailing, and how the rate is determined.

''(V)(A) Subject to subclauses (C) and (D), where the initial rate may increase upon the occurrence of one or more specific events, the following information:

''(i) the initial rate and the increased rate that may apply;

''(ii) if the increased rate is a variable rate, the fact that the increased rate is variable, the rate at the time of mailing, and how the rate is determined; and

''(iii) the specific event or events that may result in imposing the increased rate.

''(B) At the creditor's option, the creditor may disclose the period for which the increased rate will remain in effect.

''(C) If the increased rate cannot be determined at the time disclosures are given, an explanation of the specific event or events that may result in an increased rate must be disclosed.

''(D) A creditor is not required to disclose an increased rate that is imposed when credit privileges are permanently terminated.''.

(d) INTERNET-BASED CREDIT CARD SOLICITATIONS.—(1)—Section 127(c) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1637(c)) is amended by inserting after paragraph (5) the following:

''(6)(A) Any application to open a credit card account for any person under an open-end consumer credit plan, and any solicitation to open such an account without requiring an application, that is made available through the Internet or an interactive computer service, shall disclose the following:

''(i) the information.—

''(I) described in paragraph (1)(A) in the form required under section 122(c) of this chapter, subject to subsection (e), and

''(II) described in paragraph (1)(B) in a clear and conspicuous form, subject to subsections (e) and (f);

''(ii) a statement, in a conspicuous and prominent location on or with the application or solicitation, that—

''(I) the information is accurate as of the date the application or solicitation was posted;

''(II) the information contained in the application or solicitation is subject to change after such date;

''(III) the applicant should contact the creditor for information on any change in the information presented on or with the application or solicitation since it was posted;

''(iii) a clear and conspicuous disclosure of the date the application or solicitation was posted and how frequently the information described in subclause (i) is updated; and

''(iv) a disclosure, in a conspicuous and prominent location on or with the application or solicitation, of a toll-free telephone number or e-mail address at which the applicant may contact the creditor to obtain any change in the information provided on or with the application or solicitation since it was posted.

''(B) The disclosures required under subparagraph (A) may be contained either:

''(i) on the webpage which contains the application or solicitation; or

''(ii) on a separate webpage which can be directly accessed using a hypertext link which is contained on the webpage which contains the application or solicitation.

''(C) Upon receipt of a request for any of the information referred to in subparagraph (A), the creditor or its agent shall promptly disclose any change in the information required to be disclosed under subparagraph (A).

''(D) For purposes of this paragraph (6)—

''(i) the term 'Internet' means the international computer network of both Federal and non-Federal interoperable packets switched data networks; and

''(ii) the term 'interactive computer service' means any information service system, or access software provider that provides or enables computer access by multiple users to a computer server, including specifically a service or system that provides access to the Internet and such systems operated or services offered by libraries or educational institutions.''.

(2) Section 122(c)(1) of the Truth in Lending Act (15 U.S.C. 1632(c)(1)) is amended by striking ''and (4)(C)(i)(I)'' and inserting '', (4)(C)(i)(I) and (6)(A)(i)(I)''.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 158, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and a Member opposed each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this bill, as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, already does require credit card issuers to tell consumers on every monthly billing statement that making only the minimum payment each month will increase the amount of interest paid and the length of time it takes to repay the balance on the account.

Our amendment, which is cosponsored by the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN), adds four components to the existing consumer protection provisions of H.R. 833. These components have been crafted to respond to specific concerns that have been expressed about whether consumers have adequate information about certain features of their credit card accounts.

First of all, in terms of minimum payments, it enhances the minimum payment disclosure requirements already contained in this bill. Under our amendment credit card issuers would be required to disclose, when the consumer first opens an account, several examples of how long it would take to repay a balance if the consumer makes only minimum payments. The number and type of examples would be tailored to the size of the card issuer's typical account balance.

Secondly, disclosure of late payment penalties and deadlines: Our amendment responds to concerns that have been raised about whether consumers have the information they need in order to avoid the imposition of late fees and penalties. Credit card issuers would have to disclose on each monthly statement the amount of the minimum payment expressed as a dollar amount and the date by which it must be paid. Believe it or not, these requirements are not currently in the Federal code.

The amendment would require applications or solicitations for a credit card to include a clear and conspicuous disclosure of any so-called penalty rate that may apply if the consumer does not pay as agreed. Such penalty rates are higher than the regular interest rate, and this amendment would ensure that consumers were adequately informed in advance about the circumstances under which they would apply.

Thirdly, worldwide web-based credit card solicitations: We modify the Truth in Lending Act to establish for the first time disclosure requirements that specifically apply to credit card applications or solicitations that are posted on the worldwide web. The amendment would require these solicitations to post the same disclosures, usually presented in a table, that currently apply to every other credit card offer made through the traditional mail system.

The amendment would require that the web site include the date the disclosures were posted and a statement that they were accurate as of that date. It would also require a statement that the information disclosed on the web site may change, and a toll free telephone number or e-mail address would have to be provided so the consumer could obtain the most current information.

Lastly, related to teaser rates, our amendment would ensure that consumers receive the information they need in order to make informed decisions regarding credit card introductory rates, sometimes called teaser rates. Specifically, the amendment would amend the Truth in Lending Act to require that an application or solicitation for a credit card that has an introductory rate must include a clear and conspicuous disclosure of when the introductory rate will expire, as well as the rate that will apply after the introductory rate will expire, after the introductory period.

This is the kind of information that consumers desperately need. The fact that those disclosures are not required by statute points up a glaring error, and we think that this significantly improves the bill. It gives balance to this bill by adding these consumer protections, but does not inappropriately load up the lending industry with onerous and expensive new requirements that have nothing to do with the underlying purpose of the bill, which is to provide long overdue reform to the bankruptcy bill.

So I think these are appropriate, if I do say so myself, Mr. Chairman, and we would hope that this body would approve them unanimously.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman for offering the amendment, and to indicate to all parties that we on this side agree to the amendment.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time, and thank the gentleman for his comments.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there any Member in opposition to the amendment?

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I am not rising in opposition to the amendment, I am rising to express my disappointment that the Committee on Rules failed to make an even better amendment in order.

This amendment certainly improves the bill from its current position, and I intend to vote for it, but it still is nowhere as good as the amendment should have been. Because instead of providing borrowers the kind of information they need to really evaluate how much money they will make in payments on their credit cards, we continue to provide hypothetical information to them under this amendment.

It would not have been any more costly or any more burdensome to lenders to provide actual information about the amount of time it takes to pay off a loan if one pays the minimum amount. And, unfortunately, we had an amendment that would have done that, but the Committee on Rules did not see fit to make it in order.

So I will support this amendment because it is better than what is in the bill, but it is still not anywhere close to being as good as it could be and should be for the consumers of America.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I just wanted to spend a second to speak on the amendment that was just adopted, the manager's amendment, to say that I strongly support it; that it includes two important provisions which would correct the opt-out language related to the equity cap for State homestead laws.

Without these opt-outs, I think citizens in my State of Texas and several other States would be unfairly affected by the homestead provisions in this bill, which I believe are unfair and unnecessary.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN).

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment, of which I am a cosponsor, and ask for its approval.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), the ranking member of the subcommittee.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is harmless enough, and may do a little bit of good. I really do not think it is very important one way or the other.

It is somewhat deceptive, however. It is somewhat deceptive. I am not going to urge a vote against it, but I do think we should have a word of caution here. It will lead to some misleading information because it demands that the credit card information tell us, the credit card information, not about our credit card, not about what we are doing, but about what some typical borrower might do if he were borrowing $500 or $300 or $1,000.

Unfortunately, this amendment was made in order by the Committee on Rules in order to avoid making in order the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) which had real consumer protections in it. The amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts, which was voted down on a party line vote in the committee, requires actual disclosure of minimum payments and interest based on the actual debt on our own credit card, rather than have the information just give samples which may bear no relationship to our own situation.

The amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) has disclosure on teaser rates and penalties. They have to tell us that, the disclosure on penalties for having no interest, for paying in full, disclosures regarding prohibiting soliciting kids, and makes other real consumer protections and disclosures.

Unfortunately, the Committee on Rules chose to make this basically irrelevant amendment and somewhat misleading amendment in order, and did not put in order the real amendment by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), which parallels the provisions the Senate put in, sponsored by Senator DURBIN in last year's bill, but which the conference committee took out.

Now, I understand the authors of this bill do not want real consumer protections in this bill. It is supposed to be a one-sided bill. But it is too bad we have these illusory protections and somewhat misleading instead of real protections. Just another ground for voting against the bill.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim the time I yielded back. I did not expect there would be these comments that I understand, while they are supportive, are not necessarily wholehearted endorsements.

I do have speakers that would use what time is remaining, if the Speaker would tell me how much time is remaining, and I would ask unanimous consent if I could reclaim it and use it for speakers on behalf of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) has 6 minutes remaining.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

There was no objection.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY).

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Chairman, I am proud to be a cosponsor of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

I would say that we are dedicated to providing for true consumer protection. This amendment does, I think, take a balanced and responsible approach to ensuring that consumers and those who are incurring debt will have the information they need in order to make informed decisions about their purchases and about the debt that they incur.

The amendment goes a long ways to ensuring that consumers who are faced with credit card applications coming to them in their homes are fully aware of the real rates that they will be facing and ensuring that the teaser rates will be clearly distinguished.

It also ensures that our consumers that unfortunately use credit cards in a manner which is not consistent with their ability to repay will have the information that will be disclosed to them, if they did make that payment of the monthly minimum payment, how long, in fact, it would take them to repay the obligation that they have incurred.

I would say this: That all consumers are going to have to accept the personal responsibility to show their due diligence; to understand when they get a credit card application that nothing comes for nothing; that they have to read the print, they have to understand the obligations that they are incurring when they do make a purchase and they do use this tool, which ensures that many Americans have more affordable and accessible credit.

I think this is a great amendment and I think it will go a long ways towards ensuring consumers have the information to make responsible purchasing decisions.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN), also a cosponsor of this amendment.

□ 1400

Mr. ACKERMAN. Mr. Chairman, we all have been told in so many words that bankruptcies are on the rise, and indeed they are, and that because of that everybody suffers because of increased interest rates and other charges. And we are also told, and rightfully so, that consumers need to take personal responsibility for their obligations. That is true, as well.

As we address bankruptcy reform today, we have a unique opportunity to at least modestly combat part of this rising trend in bankruptcies, and one of the best ways that we can begin to tackle that is to have more information for consumers so that they are better informed and can make smarter decisions about their credit needs.

How do we do this? First, with better and clearer disclosure rules for solicitations and credit applications. Every one of my colleagues here are familiar were the deluge of solicitations that we get in the mail almost on a daily basis advertising a particularly low introductory rate, and the rate is on the envelope and it does not tell us how long that rate is for and the consumer cannot make an objective kind of a decision; and then he borrows at a rate that he thinks he is going to have for a longer period of time and that ends and the interest rates goes up and he is paying more than he did under a previous credit card that he might have had that he switched over from.

This is an opportunity for us to fix part of that problem, and that is why the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY) and myself have introduced this amendment. The amendment requires lenders to provide consumers with the information they need to make informed decisions.

Specifically, they would have to do several things. They would have to indicate the minimum payment and day that the payment is due on every periodic statement that they send. They would have to indicate what the late penalty deadlines are so that consumers have all the information they need in order to make that appropriate decision and meet their responsibilities and in order to avoid the imposition of late fees. And whenever a solicitation includes an introductory rate, it must be clear when that rate expires.

I think these and some of the other small steps make it much better to avoid bankruptcy on the part of many consumers and users of credit.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remaining 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER), co-chairman of the new Democrat Coalition.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, I thank my good friend from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and my good friend from California (Mr. DOOLEY), co-chairs of the new Democrat Coalition, for sponsoring the amendment, along with the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN).

I am a proud cosponsor of this legislation and a strong supporter of this amendment offered by my friends. I think there are two key issues as we debate this bankruptcy reform bill. One is personal responsibilities.

We have seen a 94-percent increase in the filings of bankruptcy since 1990. We need to address this, and I believe this bill does it in a coherent and fair fashion.

The second issue that this amendment gets to is not so much credit card availability but consumer protections. There are two provisions in this amendment that I encourage my colleagues to take a look at and support. One is the minimum payment that we have, that we have better disclosures on how long it would simply take to repay a balance if they pay the minimum amount each month. That is the minimum payments requirement.

Secondly, the so-called teaser rates is that companies need to disclose what that introductory rate is, if it is 9 or 10 percent, and then what it is going to go up to after it teases them with that first 9 or 10 percent, if it is then going to be 11 or 12 or 18 or 19 percent later on. We need consumer disclosure and consumer protections.

So this is a good amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. ACKERMAN). I strongly encourage my colleagues to support it. And, hopefully, that will continue to improve this bill and we will have a sound bill both on personal responsibility and the consumer protections aspects.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. NETHERCUTT). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 106–126.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. MORAN OF VIRGINIA

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. MORAN of Virginia:

Page 101, after line 9, insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

SEC. 154. DISCLOSURES.

(a) DISCLOSURES.—Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 106, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 527. Disclosures

''(a) A debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person shall provide the following notices to the assisted person:

''(1) the written notice required under section 342(b)(1) of this title; and

''(2) to the extent not covered in the written notice described in paragraph (1) of this section and no later than three business days after the first date on which a debt relief agency first offers to provide any bankruptcy assistance services to an assisted person, a clear and conspicuous written notice advising assisted persons of the following—

''(A) all information the assisted person is required to provide with a petition and thereafter during a case under this title must be complete, accurate and truthful;

''(B) all assets and all liabilities must be completely and accurately disclosed in the documents filed to commence the case, and the replacement value of each asset as defined in section 506 of this title must be stated in those documents where requested after reasonable inquiry to establish such value;

''(C) current monthly income, the amounts specified in section 707(b)(2) and, in a chapter 13 case, disposable income (determined in accordance with section 707(b)(2)) must be stated after reasonable inquiry; and

''(D) that information an assisted person provides during their case may be audited pursuant to this title and that failure to provide such information may result in dismissal of the proceeding under this title or other sanction including, in some instances, criminal sanctions.

''(b) A debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person shall provide each assisted person at the same time as the notices required under subsection (a)(1) with the following statement, to the extent applicable, or one substantially similar. The statement shall be clear and conspicuous and shall be in a single document separate from other documents or notices provided to the assisted person:

'''IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT BANKRUPTCY ASSISTANCE SERVICES FROM AN ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER

'''If you decide to seek bankruptcy relief, you can represent yourself, you can hire an attorney to represent you, or you can get help in some localities from a bankruptcy petition preparer who is not an attorney. THE LAW REQUIRES AN ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER TO GIVE YOU A WRITTEN CONTRACT SPECIFYING WHAT THE ATTORNEY OR BANKRUPTCY PETITION PREPARER WILL DO FOR YOU AND HOW MUCH IT WILL COST. Ask to see the contract before you hire anyone.

'''The following information helps you understand what must be done in a routine bankruptcy case to help you evaluate how much service you need. Although bankruptcy can be complex, many cases are routine.

'''Before filing a bankruptcy case, either you or your attorney should analyze your eligibility for different forms of debt relief made available by the Bankruptcy Code and which form of relief is most likely to be beneficial for you. Be sure you understand the relief you can obtain and its limitations. To file a bankruptcy case, documents called a Petition, Schedules and Statement of Financial Affairs, as well as in some cases a Statement of Intention need to be prepared correctly and filed with the bankruptcy court. You will have to pay a filing fee to the bankruptcy court. Once your case starts, you will have to attend the required first meeting of creditors where you may be questioned by a court official called a ''trustee'' and by creditors.

'''If you choose to file a chapter 7 case, you may be asked by a creditor to reaffirm a debt. You may want help deciding whether to do so and a creditor is not permitted to coerce you into reaffirming your debts.

'''If you choose to file a chapter 13 case in which you repay your creditors what you can afford over three to five years, you may also want help with preparing your chapter 13 plan and with the confirmation hearing on your plan which will be before a bankruptcy judge.

'''If you select another type of relief under the Bankruptcy Code other than chapter 7 or chapter 13, you will want to find out what needs to be done from someone familiar with that type of relief.

'''Your bankruptcy case may also involve litigation. You are generally permitted to represent yourself in litigation in bankruptcy court, but only attorneys, not bankruptcy petition preparers, can give you legal advice.'.

''(c) Except to the extent the debt relief agency provides the required information itself after reasonably diligent inquiry of the assisted person or others so as to obtain such information reasonably accurately for inclusion on the petition, schedules or statement of financial affairs, a debt relief agency providing bankruptcy assistance to an assisted person, to the extent permitted by nonbankruptcy law, shall provide each assisted person at the time required for the notice required under subsection (a)(1) reasonably sufficient information (which shall be provided in a clear and conspicuous writing) to the assisted person on how to provide all the information the assisted person is required to provide under this title pursuant to section 521, including—

''(1) how to value assets at replacement value, determine current monthly income, the amounts specified in section 707(b)(2)) and, in a chapter 13 case, how to determine disposable income in accordance with section 707(b)(2) and related calculations;

''(2) how to complete the list of creditors, including how to determine what amount is owed and what address for the creditor should be shown; and

''(3) how to determine what property is exempt and how to value exempt property at replacement value as defined in section 506 of this title.

''(d) A debt relief agency shall maintain a copy of the notices required under subsection (a) of this section for two years after the date on which the notice is given the assisted person.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 106, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 526 the following:

''527. Disclosures.''.

SEC. 155. DEBTOR'S BILL OF RIGHTS.

Subchapter II of chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 106 and 154, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 528. Debtor's bill of rights

''(a) A debt relief agency shall—

''(1) no later than five business days after the first date on which a debt relief agency provides any bankruptcy assistance services to an assisted person, but prior to such assisted person's petition under this title being filed, execute a written contract with the assisted person specifying clearly and conspicuously the services the agency will provide the assisted person and the basis on which fees or charges will be made for such services and the terms of payment, and give the assisted person a copy of the fully executed and completed contract in a form the person can keep;

''(2) disclose in any advertisement of bankruptcy assistance services or of the benefits of bankruptcy directed to the general public (whether in general media, seminars or specific mailings, telephonic or electronic messages or otherwise) that the services or benefits are with respect to proceedings under this title, clearly and conspicuously using the following statement: 'We are a debt relief agency. We help people file Bankruptcy petitions to obtain relief under the Bankruptcy Code.' or a substantially similar statement. An advertisement shall be of bankruptcy assistance services if it describes or offers bankruptcy assistance with a chapter 13 plan, regardless of whether chapter 13 is specifically mentioned, including such statements as 'federally supervised repayment plan' or 'Federal debt restructuring help' or other similar statements which would lead a reasonable consumer to believe that help with debts was being offered when in fact in most cases the help available is bankruptcy assistance with a chapter 13 plan; and

''(3) if an advertisement directed to the general public indicates that the debt relief agency provides assistance with respect to credit defaults, mortgage foreclosures, lease eviction proceedings, excessive debt, debt collection pressure, or inability to pay any consumer debt, disclose conspicuously in that advertisement that the assistance is with respect to or may involve proceedings under this title, using the following statement: 'We are a debt relief agency. We help people file Bankruptcy petitions to obtain relief under the Bankruptcy Code.' or a substantially similar statement.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 5 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by sections 106 and 154, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 527, the following:

''528. Debtor's bill of rights.''.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 158, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and a Member opposed each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer this amendment for the purpose of adding to the consumer protections that are already contained in H.R. 833. We have all seen the advertisements.

''Consolidate your bills into one monthly payment without borrowing'' goes one. ''Stop credit harassment, foreclosures, repossessions, tax levies and garnishments'' is another advertisement. ''Wipe out your debts. Consolidate your bills. How? By using the protection that the Federal Government offers provided by Federal law.''

We have seen these advertisements. They are all opportunities to exploit the consumer, exploit the consumer's ignorance. And they would be addressed by this bill. Because only later does the consumer find out that very often these phrases involve bankruptcy proceedings which can hurt their credit and cost them substantial attorney's fees. They often do not realize that very often these are bankruptcy mills that do not advise consumers on other options that they have, including consumer credit counseling, working out a repayment plan with their creditors, or getting a second mortgage.

This amendment adds to the bill provisions requiring so-called ''debt relief organizations,'' but more appropriately sometimes ''bankruptcy mills,'' to make certain minimal disclosures to consumer debtors and to prevent deceptive and fraudulent advertising practices that were identified by the Federal Trade Commission in their Consumer Alert.

The disclosures are designed to ensure that debtors who retain the services of these organizations understand the nature of the services that are being provided, the cost of the services and, if the service includes placing the debtor into bankruptcy, the consequences of that action.

This requirement was included in the conference report of last year's bankruptcy reform bill, which was overwhelmingly approved by the House of Representatives. The requirement is modeled on legislation enacted by Congress several years ago to address abuses by so-called credit repair organizations.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the amendment of the gentleman. I must tell my colleagues, I was set back a bit when in the full committee this group of debtors' rights, ''debtors' rights'' I repeat, were removed from the bill. Just as the gentleman says, last year's effort resulted in a conference report that had this debtors' bill of rights as part and parcel.

Now we are faced with the prospect of attempting to do, and I will help the gentleman do so, restore this same set of debtors' rights, and I will do everything I can to help the gentleman succeed.

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I greatly appreciate the comments of the chair of the subcommittee.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am saddened to have to rise in opposition to this amendment. This exact language that is proposed in this amendment was in the bill originally and was considered by the Committee on the Judiciary, and an amendment passed in the Committee on the Judiciary to remove this language from the bill.

Now, the chairman of the subcommittee, who has risen to express his support for this amendment to put it back in, voted against that amendment in the committee. So it is not surprising that he would be here saying he likes the Moran amendment. But the majority of the Committee on the Judiciary, including a bipartisan group of individuals, not just Democrats or Republicans, both Democrats and Republicans, voted to remove this language from the bill.

Now, why did they vote to do it? First of all, understand that there continues to be language in the bill which prohibits misrepresentation and misleading of the public by these persons who are assisting folks with bankruptcies. But remember that every attorney who does bankruptcy practice would be covered by this provision; every credit counseling service, consumer credit organization, many of which are governed by or under the city and county governments in our local communities, would be governed by these provisions; and these agencies would be put to the task of giving page after page after page of disclosures in an effort to get at a few bad people who are in this business.

Now, I am not saying that there are not people who are providing credit counseling advice who are bad. There are people in the business who are bad. But 99 percent of the people who are providing advice to bankruptcy applicants or potential bankruptcy applicants are reputable people, attorneys who provide information and services, credit counseling services and the like, that we are simply imposing substantial burdens on if we put this language back in the bill, which the Committee on the Judiciary, I remind my colleagues, has taken out of the bill.

If we start on page 3 of this proposed amendment and we go all the way over to page 5 of this proposed amendment, there are disclosures that would have to be made by anybody who even sat down and talked to somebody about the possibility of filing a bankruptcy. This is not for people who file bankruptcies, because these disclosures have to be given at the first encounter before there is even a decision to file bankruptcy.

Most of the disclosures are, essentially, worthless because what most people will do is print up these disclosures verbatim from the bill and hand them to people when they come into their offices and nobody is going to read this stuff. And Republicans and Democrats alike acknowledge that these kinds of disclosures are simply worthless.

Additionally, for those of us, including the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), who is the sponsor of this bill who say that they want to stop attorneys from soliciting folks to file bankruptcy, there are additional advertisements that must be given which require folks who advertise to say to the public, look, I am in the business of providing bankruptcy advice.

That is exactly the kind of advertising we have been trying to discourage. That is not something that is furthering the public policy that underlies this bill.

So, for those reasons, I want to state strongly that we do not want to impose additional burdens on good reliable business people. We want to, as the bill still does, prohibit false information from being given to potential filers of bankruptcy. But we do not need to burden the people who are the attorneys and credit counseling people who are reputable by forcing them to give page after page after page of useless disclosures.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1415

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I refer for the record to the Consumer Alert issued by the Federal Trade Commission warning consumers of exactly the situation that this amendment addresses, the fraudulent advertising, the kind of advertising that sucks consumers into a situation where they wind up declaring bankruptcy, which was not their original intent, because they were misled by the people that would be covered by this amendment.

This amendment addresses abuses by ''bankruptcy mills'' which advertise themselves as debt counseling organizations or government sanctioned sources of assistance for consumers having difficulty meeting debt repayments. According to the Federal Trade Commission, consumers are frequently using these organizations without understanding that the only relief that these groups offer is to put the debtor into bankruptcy, sometimes when the debtor could have avoided such a drastic step through voluntary repayment arrangements.

The amendment requires debt relief organizations to disclose the nature of the services they offer, explain to consumers the alternatives to filing bankruptcy, disclose the rights and obligations of a debtor who files for bankruptcy and the consequences of a bankruptcy filing. The purpose of the amendment is to educate the consumer about bankruptcy and bankruptcy mills before it is too late; in other words, before the debtor has made an uninformed decision.

Those who feel that the answer to the growth in bankruptcies is increased disclosure about the consequences of incurring credit card or other debt should support the up-front disclosure approach of this amendment and not try to protect these lawyers who are exploiting the ignorance of their clients.

This is an amendment that is entirely appropriate. It is appropriate that it be called the Debtor's Bill of Rights. It is directly addressing a warning that the Federal Trade Commission has made available to consumers. I would hope that the House would pass this unanimously.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION, FOR YOUR INFORMATION, MARCH 26, 1997

Debt-burdened consumers who answer ads that offer to ''consolidate bills'' or ''stop credit harassment'' may be the targets of bankruptcy mills, according to a new publication from the Federal Trade Commission. ''Advertisements Promising Debt Relief May Be Offering Bankruptcy,'' the FTC Consumer Alert warns.

