Austin Fanzine Project: An Overview

Digital Frontiers – Denton, TX – 20 September 2013
Well the show wasn’t happening there when we arrived, nor was it planned. So we called Wacky’s and they said that the show was going to be there. But, when we got there, no one was there and the guy, presumably Wacky himself, said he hadn’t heard from any of the bands since Wednesday. “But,” he said, “we got dollar Shiner Bocks tonight.” So we thought we’d take a break before driving home, and luckily, the bands showed up.

Turned out there were only a few locals there and they were extremely questionable—not punk or rock. The dollar beer soon lubricated the mostly Austin crowd and the show got off to a great start. I already loved watching the Inhalants and now they’ve got Dana ex-Hormone on drums so they’re doublecool. Then the Drags got on stage and kicked ass and this time CJ just threw a 7" at me. Then it all fell apart—no pun needed—and the Fella Fucking went to hell in front of us all. It was insane mad by the end. No one was playing their own instruments or anything and people were getting on the stage and Heath was under a ladder in back of the stage nursing wounds, I suppose and everyone was drunk and CJ was on stage and people were screaming and hitting things and some guy kept falling on me no matter where I moved.

And through it all two little Mexican boys kept trying to sell people roses for 2 bucks each and everytime they did you could see the person think “Hmmm, that’s two beers….nah”

Afterward someone put on that new Johnny Cash record which sounded really weird after what had just happened, but it was better than that fucking Bjork record that I keep fucking hearing everywhere I go even before the show that night. And everybody kinda sat around and looked stunned. And the bar ran out of beer.

Crowdsourced transcription portion of project now happening!

Geek Weekly #1 is fully transcribed & indexed and now, devoted fanzine fans, the time has finally come to put your fingers where your mouth is. Um, what I mean is, it's transcribing time! Geek Weekly #2 (the November Food'n'Fun issue!) just went up over on FromThePage & it's ready for you to transcribe. It's super-easy to do & it's pretty hard to mess up – and if you do break something, it may turn out to be a helpful learning/fixing/improving opportunity for the developer. (Or not.)

Several more issues are scanned & ready to go. I'll put the next one up once y'all knock out GW#2.

Oh, and I almost forgot: Geek Weekly #2 is now freely downloadable. Find it & more news — about AFP conference presentations, interns, etc — over on the Phase Two page...
