UNT Vocabularies Home About

Controlled Vocabularies: Home

Name	Label	Definition
agent-qualifiers	Creator/Contributor Role	Creator/Contributor role indicates the relationship of that person or corporate body to the resource being described. N.B. Except where specified in the "Notes", Creator/Contributor roles and definitions for the roles come from the Library of Congress's MARC Code Lists for Relators, Sources, Description Conventions: http://www.loc.gov/marc/relators/index.html .
agent-type	Creator Type	Agent or creator type categorizes whether the creator name belongs to an individual, an organization, an event, or a software.
citationQualifiers	Citation Qualifiers	Qualifiers for the UNTL Citation metadata field.
collections	Collection	The term collection means that the resource is described as a group; its parts may also be separately described and navigated. Collection name refers to a larger group of resources with a unique collective title to which the resource being described belongs. We added a filed "system" for each collection term with a value of either "pth" for the Portal to Texas History, or "dc" for UNT Digital Collections. The highlights of the PTH Collections can be viewed at: http://texashistory.unt.edu/browse/?browseby=collection. Similarly, the highlights of the UNT Digital Collections can be viewed at: http://www.library.unt.edu/libraries-and-collections/digital-collections .
coverage-eras	Coverage Time Period	Coverage time periods refer to time periods that are covered and/or discussed in the intellectual content of the resource, not the creation (publication) date.
coverage-qualifiers	Coverage Type	Coverage is the extent or scope of the content of the resource. It will typically include spatial location (a place name or geographic coordinates) and a temporal period (a period label, date, or date range).
date-qualifiers	Date	Dates associated with events in the life cycle of the resource.
degree-information	Degree Information	Degree information provides detail information associated with the work as it appears within the work.

UNT Scholarly Works

The Scholarly Works Collection is home to materials from the University of North Texas community's research, creative, and scholarly activities. It serves as UNT's Open Access Repository. This collection brings together articles, papers, artwork, music, research data, reports, presentations, and other scholarly and creative products representing the expertise in our university community.

UNT Scholarly Works aims to:

- Provide easy access to valuable scholarly and creative materials from the UNT community
- Promote discovery through effective search and navigation tools
- Secure long-term access through stewardship and preservation
- Ensure sustainability through continuing system improvements
- Showcase UNT's research and creative achievements to a worldwide audience

College of Music Recordings

About This Collection

The College of Music Recordings include doctoral, ensemble, faculty, guest, and senior recitals from the UNT College of Music. Access to these recordings is restricted to the UNT community.

About the UNT College of Music

One of the nation's largest music schools, the UNT College of Music provides a dynamic learning environment for both future professionals and the broader university community. The College of Music offers instruction in the areas of composition studies; conducting and ensembles; instrumental studies; jazz studies; keyboard studies; music education; music history, theory, and ethnomusicology; and vocal studies. With more than fifty performing ensemble groups, a full schedule of student recitals, and frequent visits by guest artists, the college brings music lovers nearly a thousand concert events each year.
